Library Air Conditioning Out of Service Until Next Week

Due to preventative maintenance, the air conditioning system in the Henderson Library was turned off on Tuesday and will remain off until repairs are finished next week.

According to Julius Ariail, library director, a problem was found with about 100 water cooling pipes in the system a month ago.

Ariail said officials bid out the repair job and workers began the work this week. "We don't want to repeat what happened last summer when the system broke down while it was warmer," he said.

The LRC shouldn't be affected since it is not too hot yet and fans will be used to cool the file servers, said Ariail. "If things get really hot and we can't control the heat with fans, we may turn off a system or two," he said.

The library will be open regular hours while the system is down and fans will be placed in the more frequently used areas of the building.

Soberfest Bed Race Set for May 9 at Statesboro Mall

Health science education students at GSU will be sponsoring a bed race in conjunction with the annual Soberfest at noon on May 9 in the Statesboro Mall parking lot.

The entry deadline for groups wishing to participate is May 1. An entry fee of $25 per five-person team is required. Each participant will receive a free t-shirt. Prizes include cash for the three top teams and the team with the best theme.

Information on registration and rules for the competition are available from the health sciences office in the temporary building at the rear of the old Hanner Gym.

Pi Sigma Epsilon Attends Convention in Chicago

The local chapter of Pi Sigma Epsilon, the national professional fraternity in marketing, sales and sales management returned Sunday from their annual National Convention in Chicago, Illinois.

The local chapter, Gamma Lambda, was a finalist in four individual award categories: Top Salesperson, Steve Kennedy; Challenger (top member), Patrick Bass; Top Alumni Member, Kevin Hudson; and Top Faculty Advisor, Jim Randall.

In addition, the chapter entered the top regional chapter, special events presentation, and computer marketing games, in which they won first place in the nation.

In computer marketing games, a team of three collegiate members competed against chapters from across the nation in a simulation of the operation of a television sales and manufacturing company.

The groups made decisions concerning sales force salaries and numbers, research and design costs, market research, product pricing—almost every aspect of "real-world" marketing.

Tracy Bottjer, Ladd Usher and ShanAnn Beiling served on this year's winning team. Bottjer, a GSU graduate student, was also chosen to receive the J&B Rare Leadership Scholarship of $1000.

'University' designation may be changed ASC faculty unofficially vote to part from regional university

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Georgia's seniors colleges should be redesignated as universities and Armstrong State College should be allowed to regain control of its graduate program, the Savannah school's faculty said Tuesday.

The Armstrong faculty voted unanimously to seek to end its role as a senior college affiliated with Georgia Southern University.

Georgia Southern became the state's first regional university in 1990, with Armstrong and Savannah State College as its affiliates. The Board of Regents is reviewing its policy on university status as more senior colleges push for the designation.

The non-binding resolution from the Armstrong faculty called for the regents to designate as universities all Georgia's senior colleges, including Armstrong.

In addition, Armstrong wants to regain control of its graduate studies, placed in Georgia Southern's hands as part of the regional university concept.

Armstrong President Bob Burnett said he would pass the faculty's concerns on to university system Chancellor H. Dean Propst and Arthur Gignilliat, Savannah's representative on the Board of Regents.

Propst said Armstrong's effort to separate itself from the regional university idea might be premature.

"The concept has not been given a chance to work," he said. "If we had three universities in that area, then the resources available to us would by no stretch of the imagination allow all three to be fully developed as individual regional universities."

Only a majority of the 15-member Board of Regents could change the regional university system or declare as universities all senior colleges in the state.

In recent months, state colleges in Columbus, Albany, Kennesaw, Augusta, Valdosta and Carrollton have pushed to have "university" included in their names.

The push from those schools prompted Armstrong faculty to call for a statewide university redesignation and elimination of the regional university plan, Burnett said.

Propst said a regents committee is studying the requests for university status, but added that the demands pose a problem.

"Because of the history of public higher education in Georgia, and the meaning that the public generally has attached to the term 'university,' a simple name change would lead to a great deal of expectations that we could not meet," Propst said.

Burnett declined to say how he felt about the faculty proposal, but he conceded the regional university plan has had its share of difficulties.

"Any time you create something new, there are new procedures and new ways of doing things, and that can cause problems," Burnett said. "We're trying to see if we can't do better."

Southern Center plans expansion

By Julie Henderson
Staff Writer

Within the next two months the $15 million expansion of the Southern Center of Continuing Education will be open for bid, according to GSU officials.

"The Center will be expanded six times its present size," says Fred Shroyer, Director of Facilities Planning.

Construction will begin prior to July 1, and the project will be completed within two years, possibly by Fall of 1994.

The Southern Center originally opened in the early 1980s, and currently is 31,000 square feet.

"The Southern Center was originally planned to be expanded," says Shroyer.

The new expansion will give the Center a total size of 185,000 square feet, about six times its original size. The new expansion is badly needed.

"People are actually turned away," Shroyer says, because there is not enough room in the Center. "GSU needs to take care of demand."

Of course, to have a project supported by state funds it must be proposed about eight to ten years in advance. The state's time table has proved to be consistent in the case of the expansion.

The new expansion will be able to alleviate the space problems the present Center has. The main part of the project will be a 1200 seat auditorium.

"It will be the largest auditorium in Southeast Georgia," says Shroyer.

Along with the auditorium, expansion plans include new lecture halls, seminar rooms, and office space. The offices of the Continuing Education Department will be consolidated into the one building, and office space for the Georgia Extension Service will also be included in the building.

Students will be glad to know that 1600 new parking spaces will be added as part of the expansion. Parking will expand on both sides of the building and will extend back towards the Newton Building.

The Southern Center presently welcomes the use of its facilities to groups outside of the University, and when expansion is completed, use of the Center by outside groups will continue to be encouraged.

More temporary buildings to be added to campus

By Julie Henderson
Staff Writer

GSU will have its newest temporary building in place by this fall, and more are in the plans for the immediate future, according to Fred Shroyer, Director of Facilities Planning.

The new building will be for the Health and Professional Studies department, and it will be located by the temporary for the nursing department that is already in place.

It will have 11,000 square feet, the same as the other temporaries in its vicinity.

GSU doesn't necessarily own the temporary buildings it puts on campus. They are leased on a yearly basis, but the leases usually are for a five year period.

"In the lease we have an option to buy the building," says Shroyer.

The money for the buildings comes out of the GSU operating budget, and for a building leased for five years it would cost around $50 per square foot.

Space Master International, out of Atlanta, is the company that will construct the newest building. Each of the temporary buildings have gone out on request proposals, and companies have made bids for their construction.

More temporary buildings are also in the immediate future for GSU. The Present South Building is scheduled to be removed by June of 1993 when its lease terminates. A new South Building will be erected.

"It may be a temporary, but it will be a better facility," says Shroyer.

Possibilities for the new building include a facility with

Student constitution at SCAD sparks debate, bomb

Student constitution at SCAD sparks debate

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — The debate over a new student constitution at the Savannah College of Art and Design has turned ugly, with faculty allegations of suppression and administration allegations of a bombing.

Fire department officials Friday confirmed a very small explosion had occurred near the front door of a school administration building earlier this week.

More than 600 of SCAD's 2,300 students met Thursday night to consider the proposed student constitution, which would include protections of freedom of expression, due process in disciplinary hearings and the right to form a student government. But the discussion turned into more than that.

"SCAD has a dark side," said video professor David Stout. "You can't put your finger on it, but the symptoms are everywhere. Ask the faculty who have been intimidated for speaking out. Ask the students who have signed documents guaranteeing their silence."

Stout complained that SCAD faculty can be fired for speaking to the news media or being seen with students outside school functions. Faculty members are expected to say what the administration wants them to, he said.

"To come before you tonight is to risk my job," he said.

Also up for discussion were reports of a bombing following a Monday night student meeting to revise the constitution.

Louis McClendon, an investigator with the Savannah Fire Department, said he was called to the school by administrators Tuesday morning

Energy/Power workshops accept applications

The GSU Energy/Power Summer Workshop for science teachers, grades 6-12, is accepting applications for a fifth year of providing information on energy and power in order to enhance science in classroom teaching.

The July 13-July 31 workshop will host 24 participants, each on a grant-in-aid that provides tuition, fees, instructional materials, refreshments and field trips. Funding for the program comes from the state Office of Energy Resources, with additional support from Georgia Power Company, the Georgia State Department of Education and GSU.

Also included is a three-day follow-up seminar for even greater effective incorporation of the information in the classroom.

Topics for the three-week concentrated study will include scientific principles utilized in production, conservation, consumption, effects of waste products, and future sources of energy.

The workshop is approved for 10 quarter hours of graduate or undergraduate credit for those who meet GSU's admission requirements.

Science teachers who wish to apply should call Debbie Walker, at 912-681-555 or write Energy/Power Workshop, L.B. 8124.

Child abuse prevention is goal of forum

A statewide strategy for the prevention of child abuse is being sought by advocates meeting in Statesboro April 29.

One of the 10 regional meetings around Georgia, the local forum includes child advocates from 16 area counties.

"The purpose of a statewide child abuse prevention plan is ultimately the prevention of child abuse in all its forms," said Adele Davenport of GSU's Center for Rural Health and Research. "It represents a statewide commitment that is comprehensive and broad-based in its scope and support, and that brings together public and private agencies to pool resources and work together toward providing creative solutions that are responsive to the needs of children and their families."

The Statesboro regional forum is being sponsored by the University's Center for Rural Health and Research, the Bulloch County Council on Children and Parents and the Statesboro Kiwanis Club.

The meeting scheduled for 1-3:30 p.m. at the Kiwanis Ogeechee Fairgrounds Community Building on Highway 67, will host representatives from Bulloch, Evans, Emanuel, Effingham, Chatham, Screven, Jenkins, Montgomery, Candler, Liberty, Bryan, Wheeler, Tattnall, Toombs, Truetlen and Johnson counties.

International Topics colloquium

The Center for International Studies and the African and African-American Studies Program jointly present Professor Rene Lemarchand of the University of Florida in Union Room 280 at 3 p.m. April 23.

Lemarchand will speak on "Neo-Patrimonialism and the Limits of Democratization in Africa: The Case of Zaire." He will discuss the prospects for and limits of democratization in that nation. The event, part of the Colloquium on International Topics, is free and open to the public.

The professor is an internationally renowned specialist on the politics of Central African nations. He has taught in Zaire and other nations and has been called upon as an expert in African politics by national news media, including PBS' "McNei-Lehrer News Hour."

GSU Professor Named to Statewide Council

Charlene M. Hanson, associate professor of nursing and interim director of GSU's Center for Rural Health and Research, has been named to the Health Strategies Council for Georgia.

Hanson was selected to represent nurse practitioners and rural health concerns on the Council, which was created by act of the Georgia General Assembly in 1991.

The Council's mission is to adopt a state health plan to focus on accessibility to health care for all citizens and coordination of health policy development and resources with other state entities. The council serves in an advisory capacity to the State Health Planning Agency.

Spring visitation day approaching

GSU will host its Spring Visitation Day on April 25 for prospective students.

Admissions officials expect about 400 students plus parents and guest to attend for campus tours and to gather information on academic requirements and opportunities, admissions and housing.

A registration session and reception for the visitors will be at 9 a.m. President Henry and Arts and Sciences Dean Warren Jones will address the group from 10-11 a.m.

An academic interaction session is set for 11 a.m. in the Intramural gym of the Hanner Building, with optional campus tours to follow between noon and 1 p.m.

G-A Staff Reports

Student Publications had a birthday party last Tuesday to celebrate its 65th anniversary.

There was a day-long celebration held in the Union with former editors and advisors from the George-Anne and the Southern Reflector present.

Activities included prize giveaways, special delivery of the George-Anne, a musical performance by the GSU jazz combo ensemble, a cake cutting and free cake to all comers.

Dr. Jack Nolen, vice-president of Student Affairs, congratulated the George-Anne for surviving 65 years.

"It's a real miracle that you're even here today to celebrate this event," he said. "It's a tribute to this university that believes in the right to freedom of expression and the importance of student voice."

According to Gary Witte, current editor of the George-Anne, those who won in the prize drawings will be notified and sent their prizes. In one contest, the "Top Ten things to do with the George-Anne," student Laura Morgan won first place.

"The top three lists and winners will be published in subsequent George-Annes" said Witte. "They were hilarious."

Current and former staff members were happy with the overall celebration.

Atlanta pot festival a smoking success

By Marly Hays
Guest Writer

Atlanta's Piedmont Park held this year's Georgia N.O.R.M.L. Festival, also known as the Great Atlanta Pot Festival, on Sat., April 11.

The festivities began at "high" noon and lasted nine hours.

N.O.R.M.L. is an acronym for National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws.

The festival was held for the support of marijuana in hopes of making its benefits known. The festivities included free concerts, food and chances to state opinions on why marijuana should be legalized.

The festival attracted various groups of people ranging from college students who had traveled from all over Georgia to locals who just wanted to see the outcome of such an unusual jubilee.

"My daughter told me about today," said one 40-year-old mother. "I had to see it to believe it."

Flyers informing people of the festival were passed out a week before the event during the Dogwood Festival. The flyers encouraged people to bring banners and to use the city's subway, the MARTA, as transportation to the festival because of an expected crowd of 50,000 people.

The flyers were hyped up with such sayings as: "We are not criminals!"; "Stop the drug wars!"; "Re-legalize marijuana now!"; and "Freedom is NORML!"

Not all those who attended the day-long festivities participated in the act of smoking marijuana.

"I've never even smoked pot," said one attendee. "I just came to see the bands and people-watch."

Banners with positive aspects, facts, opinions and benefits of marijuana decorated the central area of the park where most of the people congregated to see the bands perform.

The aroma of marijuana smoke was present throughout the park, but no one would admit to smoking it that day.

A stage was set up in the most central part of the park and such musical artists as

The Black Crows, The Grapes and Urban Shake Dancers performed throughout the day.

Some of the people attending said that the festival reminded them of Woodstock.

"This is like a miniature Woodstock," said one woman who had been waiting in a line for 20 minutes to use a portable toilet.

Other lines were formed at stands that sold hot dogs and hamburgers. Some vendors sold T-shirts with NORML's logo and some even sold hemp seeds, which are from the marijuana and hashish family and are considered to be a psychoactive drug.

NORML was founded by a young lawyer named Keith Stroup in 1971. The pressure group sought the removal of criminal penalties for the possession and use of marijuana and continues to work for the reform of these laws.

The maximum penalty for the possession of marijuana as a misdemeanor is 12 months in prison and a $1000 fine.

In Statesboro the common penalty is a term of probation, a $200 fine and community service, according to GSU's police chief Ken Brown.

Brown said that marijuana

Singers need to take extra measures to protect their voices

Singers need to know how to sufficiently take care of their voices; it is important to them as individuals, as well as to the sound of the group as a whole.

It is generally accepted that a singer's physical condition and mental attitude have an effect on the singing voice. Therefore, it is essential to continually maintain vocal health.

Bodily fatigue and mental stress can have a detrimental effect on the voice; therefore, adequate rest is important in the prevention of vocal problems.

Exercise helps one to sleep better, can reduce one's blood pressure and is necessary to keep the body "in tune" (Garretson 1988). Exercise is also an effective way to achieve a desired weight.

The stereotypical opera singer has a heavy build, but what does body size have to do with the quality of voice?

Psychologists say that some singers conceal feelings of vulnerability or anxiety behind added weight, subconsciously thinking increased size will produce a larger, more substantial sound and presence (Opera News 1989).

HEALTH AND FITNESS

Donald Jordan

However, there is no medical evidence to support this theory.

Opera News also adds, "apart from an individual's bone structure and the resonance cavities in the head, singing is a physical activity that demands abdominal and back strength to produce and support the projection of sound into a 3,000-seat opera house."

The excessive weight tends to inhibit a singer's ability to move easily about the stage.

Once a singing weight is established, the abdominal muscles become accustomed to functioning a certain way.

Any fluctuation of body weight causes the abdominal muscles to become confused in their function towards the vocal quality. In this respect, if singers desire to lose weight, it should be done gradually, allowing muscles to readjust to the new body composition and still maintain power and control of voice.

It is also important that singers maintain a balanced diet with at least one daily serving from each of the four basic food groups. Fatty foods should be avoided or eaten in moderation because they tend to be high in calories and low in nutrients.

The density of the laryngeal mucous is crucial to singers because if it becomes too thick, congestion will result, and coughing (to clear the throat) will usually follow.

Some foods that cause mucous buildup, which singers should avoid, especially before performance, are milk, ice cream, chocolate, coffee, condiments (such as pepper, mustard, and meat sauces), and highly spiced foods.

On the other hand, drinking water or hot herbal tea with a bit of honey and lemon will usually increase the flow of laryngeal mucous secretions.

Party life has changed on fraternity and sorority row in Georgia

DULUTH, Ga. (AP) — Multimillion-dollar lawsuits over hazing and alcohol abuse and the soaring costs of liability insurance have made life more somber on fraternity row at Georgia colleges.

Now, keg parties aren't paid for from house funds. If you drink, you bring your own.

"We don't serve alcohol. The way people sue now, it would be idiotic. That's not what it's supposed to be about anyway," said Peter Singleton, a member of Sigma Nu at Georgia State University.

Serious parties continue along fraternity row, but are now limited to members and invited guests.

"It's a much more controlled atmosphere than it used to be. A lot of times groups might have some kind of guest list, but most groups give out invitations," said Claudia Shamp, adviser to sororities at the University of Georgia.

Hazing, banned at state colleges, is also against the law in Georgia and 29 other states. The practice is a misdemeanor with a $500 fine and up to a year in jail for a conviction, said King Buttermore, dean of student life at Georgia State.

"My feeling is that the majority of chapters around the Southeast are not hazing," he said. "When there is an incident, it's a symptom of something else, of local officers not willing to face the true purpose of the fraternal system."

The Sigma Nu house at Georgia Southern on fraternity row

The college officials commented in interviews with the Daily News of Duluth.

Fraternities and sororities are the sixth worst insurance risk nationally, according to the Interfraternity Council at the University of Georgia. The highest risks are bars, followed by liquor stores, child care centers, asbestos contractors and hazardous waste disposal companies. Fraternities are considered riskier than sororities.

"(It's) because so many of their activities are social in nature, more so than anybody else," Ms. Shamp said. "And they have a tendency to engage in high-risk behaviors more so than anyone else. That pretty well sums it up right there. They do things that are risky."

Traditional insurers won't issue policies to high-risk groups. They have to buy special risk coverage offered through a handful of companies such as Lloyd's of London.

Premiums can run as much as $100,000 per house and as much as $100 per member, said Ron Binder, adviser to fraternities at Georgia.

Fraternities increasingly pool resources to control insurance rates. There is a Fraternity Insurance Purchasing Group, an umbrella organization offering coverage to 27 of the 59 national fraternities, said Bill Davis, spokesman for the Insurance Salesmen of America. Also, national offices of larger fraternities are offering insurance to individual chapters.

The longtime staple of fraternity life, the keg party, was one of the first traditions eliminated in the risk management plans. Most insurers prohibit fraternities from purchasing alcohol with house funds and limit alcohol to cash-only bars or drinks brought in by individuals.

That moves liability onto the individual, said Bill Barnes, assistant to the vice president for student development at Georgia Tech.

And on many campuses, including the University of Georgia, all alcohol is banned during rush, the initial round of partying and membership soliciting that starts the social year.

"It's not like you just throw a party any more. There's a lot of things you have to deal with. I know on our campus, we have no kegs, period," said Ms. Shamp.

Name changes will not change facts

With the reviewing of a plan to give the title "university" to all four-year colleges in the state of Georgia, the Board of Regents has turned the educational system on its ear.

Armstrong State, ever rebellious, supports this measure and has gone so far as to symbolically vote itself out from under GSU's graduate program. They want the prestige and budget opportunities that come from having the word "university" tacked onto their name.

Both these measures would be like renaming Savannah to solve its crime problem. How is the name change supposed to benefit the state's educational system? Is all this fuss merely because Armstrong feels overshadowed by GSU?

If we change it so that all the four-year colleges are now known as universities, then how about renaming all the high schools to colleges?

Then we can change all the junior highs to high schools. So then anyone who graduates from the eighth grade would have a high school degree, and anyone who graduates from high school would have a college degree.

Statistically, we are sure the state would be able to beat out all the other states with the number of high school and college graduates it would have.

We'd be the best educated state in the nation - on paper.

The fact is, that while this measure might put all the university system on a more equal budget footing, it would do nothing to improve the quality of the education and make generic something that must currently be earned.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Supporting GSU sports

Dear Editor,

I'm a member of a group that call ourselves TRUE BLUE, because when it comes to Southern sports that's what we are. Most of us have been together for three, and some even four years, and our only goal has been the support of GSU athletics.

A few representatives of our group have been to all but two home games, and some have even traveled on the road with the basketball team. The cheerleaders, and hopefully the team, knows that there was a small group of GSU fans at the Mercer game in Macon that was the rowdiest group there. That was us.

The routine that the team does when warming up by shooting free throws in pregame is imitated (and I hope appreciated) by a certain group of fans. That is us.

When a certain prize was awarded to the best group at the Jam the Gym contest, it was accepted graciously with the fact that the winners were there for the support of the team. That was us.

The point of our recognition

A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed.

-Second Amendment to the United States Constitution

When the founders of our country wrote these words, they had just won a great battle for their independence. A battle waged by farmers and shopkeepers in all thirteen colonies who took up arms together in an organized campaign against tyranny.

The authors of this constitutional amendment wanted to be sure that this could again happen in the event of an oppressive foreign or domestic government. This idea eventually lead to organizations like the National Guard.

The key words in the Second Amendment are "well regulated Militia." Webster's Collegiate Dictionary defines militia as 1) a part of the organized armed forces of a country liable to call only in emergency or 2) the whole body of able-bodied male citizens declared by law as being subject to call to military service.

Nowhere in the amendment or the definition is there any mention of an individual or his right to bear arms. Pro-gun groups like the National Rifle Association know that this right isn't explicitly guaranteed by the Constitution. In 1939, the Supreme Court established the right of states to impose restrictions on gun ownership in United States vs. Miller.

So lobbying groups decided to concentrate their efforts at the state and local levels. This has created a confusing, contradictory patchwork of regulations across the country. In some Western states, anyone can carry a loaded gun on the street - as long as it's visible.

In Morton Grove, Illinois, handguns have been banned altogether. But in Kennesaw, Georgia, everyone is required to own a gun.

Of course, these kinds of contradictions play havoc with local regulations. Washington, D.C. has fairly strict laws regarding the sale of guns. The problem is that Virginia and Maryland don't, so it's nearly impossible to check the effectiveness of D.C.'s regulations.

But surely the framers of the Constitution didn't intend to prevent hunters and law-abiding citizens from owning guns, did they? No, probably not. So it's clear that the best path to take is the regulation of who has guns, and what type of guns they have.

Should we allow the importation of automatic "Uzi"-type weapons from the Far East or cheaply made handguns from Mexico? These are the types of guns a hunter or gun enthusiast wouldn't be interested in. However, street thugs and drug dealers often find them quite handy.

Is it unreasonable for a state or local government to require a waiting period and/or a background check on a gun-buyer? The NRA thinks so. Countless such measures have been defeated because of their lobbying power.

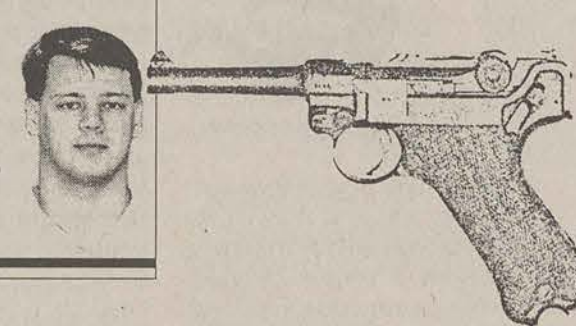

Young people, in particular, seem to have alarmingly easy access to guns. Schools around the country are installing metal detectors in the hopes of keeping them out of the classroom. In Virginia a student recently brought a semi-automatic MAC-10 to school and shot several students and teachers, killing one. In Brooklyn, New York, a fifteen-year-old killed two of his fellow students with an inexpensive pistol.

Over 30,000 people die of gunshots each year in America, and there are over 600,000 handgun-related crimes.

Surely some reasonable gun-control measures are in order in such a situation.

Gun control advocates use myths about issues

In today's society of towering murder rates, people tend to search for simple ways to stop this bewildering problem. One of these simple ways is gun control.

Like many rational people, I'm totally opposed to this retarded solution; never-theless, there are thousands of runny nosed, Commie-Socialist individuals in our country that are in favor of gun control.

Gun control advocates try to present a ravishing picture of why we need this unconstitutional form of control. However, many of these people present myths about the issues surrounding gun control; therefore, I have compiled a list of the top four gun control myths.

1. According to polls, most Americans favor strict new federal gun controls.

As we all know, research polls can be slanted by carefully worded questions to achieve any outcome. It is a fact that most people don't know what laws already exist; consequently, it is aimless to declare that most people favor "strict" laws when they don't even know how "strict" the laws are in the first place.

2. Honest citizens have nothing to fear from gun registration and licensing which will disarm criminals.

Advocates of gun control point to automobile registration and licensing as a model scheme for firearm ownership. Yet driving a car or truck on city or state roads is a privilege, therefore, it can and should be regulated.

Unlike this and other privileges, the individual right to have firearms is constitutionally guaranteed from infringement. Due to the fact that criminals by definition do not obey laws in the first place, registration and licensing can

COUNTERPOINT

have little or no effect on crime.

3. The firearm right guaranteed under the Second Amendment is limited to the arming of a group that can be compared to the National Guard of today.

According to the Second Amendment: "A well-regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed."

The perception that this amendment guarantees the "right of states to form militias" rather than an individual right is an inaccurate invention of the shiftless gun control advocates. Historically, the term "militia" refers to the people at large, armed and ready to defend their homeland.

4. Gun control laws reduce crime rates in England and Japan while our crime rates continue to climb.

It is impossible to draw conclusions without taking into account differences in the culture of countries. In America, for example, if a man steals a Porsche 959 Turbo, robs a bank, glues chickens to the side of a court house, and beats his wife the guy may get two months probation and a small fine.

On the other hand, in many countries people literally get their hands cut off if they steal just one apple. Therefore, it is impossible to compare American gun control laws or most any other American law to those of other countries.

These are my four myths about gun control. If America is to ever solve her crime problems she is first going to have to start punishing criminals and not just slapping them on the wrist.

Taking guns away from honest citizens will never solve the problem of this nation's towering murder rates.

A new club for student-athletes

If you hadn't already noticed, GSU athletics has grown by leaps and bounds since the early eighties.

Under the direction of Dr. David "Bucky" Wagner the Eagle athletic program has taken-off in a flurry of expansion over the past decade—an accomplishment attested to by the GSU's recent step-up into the Southern Conference.

Well, Dr. Wagner is at work again. His latest project for what The Sporting News calls "the most ambitious athletic program in the country," is drumming up support for GSU's newest student organization, the Student Athletic Board (SAB).

This main purpose of this organization is to lend support Athletic department "by the students."

The board is also designed to spark more student interest in Eagle athletics by inviting athletic-minded co-eds to get involved in the workings of the Athletic program.

In the past, student involvement in the athletic programs has been limited to sitting in the bleachers—a limited role which has reflected in relatively limited fan attendance.

Now, with the forming of the SAB students have the opportunity to lend a hand toward the success of the Eagles.

The SAB is a student-run organization that will be instrumental in the running of various athletic events and promotions.

The main objective of the SAB is to encourage student support all of the sports on campus including those lesser-known, non-revenue sports such as cross-country and ladies softball—sports that are in desperate need of support.

These lesser-known sports are truly as deserving of the support of the student body and are very needy of financial support. Members of the SAB will direct their efforts toward the development of both of these ends.

From fund raising to recruiting to planning special events like Homecoming—the SAB is basically a "booster club for students." Instead of donating money, though, SAB members will donate their time, talents and commitment. These things generally tend to return greater rewards than monetary contributions do.

The members of the SAB will have a part in the development of the ever-growing GSU athletic tradition—a tradition which could be greatly enriched and enlivened by its student fans.

Aside from its service function to the athletic department, the board will serve as a social outlet for its members. The SAB is kind of like a fraternity or sorority with its members bound together by love for sports for the sole purpose of promoting GSU athletics.

The Board is open to all GSU students who are interested in getting involved with sports.

Being a part of this group students is a golden opportunity to work along side one of the up-and-coming college athletic programs in the nation while continuing to pursue their interest in athletics.

So, if you are a washed-up high school athlete, an arm-chair quarterback or you just want to hang around a bunch of sweaty people, the SAB is the group for you.

The next meeting for the Student Athletic Board is scheduled for April 23 at 7:30 in the University Union.

Eagles split two-game series with UGA

By John Munford
Staff Writer

The GSU Eagle baseball team demolished the Georgia Bulldogs at Foley Field in Athens, 10-5 on Wednesday afternoon.

The Eagles scored four runs in the second as Bobby Slater and Mike Darnell led off with singles and Brian Wiggins drew a base-on-balls to load the bases.

Second baseman Doug Eder hit a fly ball to short right field that was dropped by Georgia second baseman Terry Weaver, scoring all three baserunners.

The Eagles added another three runs in the third when Mark Dean leadoff with a triple and scored on Slater's single to left. Darnell reached on Weaver's second error of the game and Wiggins' single to left combined with a throwing error by left fielder Ingrams scored Slater and Darnell.

Georgia came back with three runs of their own in the second off eagle starter Clint Fair (2-1), the only run s he allowed in five innings of work.

After Fair left, Jake Greene came on to work two innings, walking DH Reggie Ingram, who later scored on Ray Suplee's double.

Chris Petersen leadoff the sixth with a single to left and scored on Kevin Hallman's single up the middle, which also scored Todd Greene, who advances on an errant throw by Suplee.

The Eagles added another run in the ninth, but were not out of the woods yet. With Tim Roth on to pitch, Suplee took him deep with nobody on to bring the 'Dawgs within five runs of the Eagles.

Roth was relieved by Ron Buffington with two outs in the ninth and finally got Jim polo to pop out to left to end the game.

In Tuesday's game, the Eagles took advantage of two throwing errors by Georgia Starter Kendall Rhine.

Petersen led the game off with a single, and advanced on Rhine's errant throw. He scored on Eder's single to left and another throwing error by the Bulldog defense.

Eder took second on the throw, went to third on a wild pitch, and crossed the plate following a single by DH Wilando Ficklin.

Darnell had a RBI single in the second to score Dean and give the Eagles a three-run lead over the 'Dawgs.

Pitcher Tim Roth

Georgia tallied a run against Eagle starter Jim Carragher in the third, off a home run by first baseman John Sylvenia, but the Eagles widened the lead with a three-run fourth inning as Wiggins' double scored Dean and first baseman Craig Cassidy.

The 6-1 GSU lead lasted until the home half of the eighth as Ingram took reliever Ronald Stanford deep to left to give the Bulldogs a 6-5 win over the Eagles.

Carragher lasted six innings, allowing only one earned run on ten hits and five walks while striking out two Georgia batters.

Stanford and Roth each pitched an inning, allowing only one hit, both on solo home runs and Buffington took the loss for the Eagles.

The Eagles' overall record is now 23-22 and they are currently 11-4 in the Southern Conference, two games behind conference leading Western Carolina.

The Eagles will play a doubleheader against Southern Conference rival Furman tonight at 6 p.m. The series with Furman will be the last Southern Conference game the Eagles will play this year.

Tracy Ham returns to GSU

GSU News Service

Tracy Ham, quarterback of the CFL's Edmonton Eskimos and former GSU Eagle, will be celebrity host of the first Spring Sports Festival April 30-May 2.

Ham will be hosting each event during the four-day festival. He will conclude his visit at the annual Blue-White spring football game.

The only player in GSU football history to have his jersey retired, Ham led the Eagles to national titles in 1985 and 1986.

His senior year he was named Player of the Year by the Atlanta Touchdown Club, the Georgia Sports Hall of Fame, the Georgia Sportswriters Association and Football News.

In his final 30 games as an Eagle, Ham's record was 24-6. He was the only I-AA finalist for the prestigious Davey O'Brien Award.

GSU never lost a playoff game with Ham at quarterback.

Drafted in 1987 as a running back by the Los Angeles Rams, Ham opted to sign with the Eskimos of the Canadian Football League where he was named the Most Valuable Player.

The Sports Festival will feature team and individual competitions in basketball, volleyball, golf, aerobic, softball and running.

Participation is open to anyone interested.

Registration forms are available from event sponsors Burger King, South Georgia Fitness and Aerobics, and GSU's departments of Athletics, Recreation and Leisure Services, Sports Management and Campus Recreation and Intramurals.

Tracy Ham will serve as celebrity host at the Spring Sports Festival.

Eagles sign second Florida soccer standout

G-A Staff Reports

Michael Sherman, a 6-0, 180-pound striker from Valrico, Fla. has signed a national letter-of-intent to play soccer at GSU, according to Eagle Head Soccer Coach Tom Norton.

Sherman was a first team selection on the Florida All-State squad his senior season after leading Bloomingdale High School to a 20-2-1 record. He also earned first team honors on the Tampa Tribune All-Area and all-county teams.

As Bloomingdale's MVP, Sherman recorded a team-high 25 goals and added 18 assists. He finished his prep career with 60 goals and 36 assists.

The all-conference striker was also a four-year member (1988-91) of the Florida Olympic Development Team. Sherman was invited to the U.S. National Team tryouts last November after a three-year stint with the USYSA Region III Olympic Development squad.

Sherman has also enjoyed an outstanding club career—playing with the Clearwater Chargers team which advanced to the McGuire Cup National Championship Finals in 1990 and 1991.

Sherman is GSU's second signee of the year.

There will also be temporaries erected for use by the Southern Center during its expansion.

"Continuing Education will have to move out of the Conference Center into semi-permanent structures during construction," says Shroyer.

Many students share a common concern that the temporary buildings we have are becoming permanent fixtures

"I help put up the blue building twenty-six years ago," says Shroyer.

It will be a relief to some to know that the blue building, which seems to be a permanent part of campus, will also be coming down soon. It sits on the planned site for a future library expansion, and it will eventually come down for construction to begin on that project.

The regional university plan received its strongest opposition two years ago among alumni of Savannah State, who attempted unsuccessfully to have the plan stopped in court. The alumni argued that Savannah State would be needlessly harmed if it lost and found burn marks on the sidewalk and BBs and a fuse nearby. A small piece of metal was imbedded in the wooden door of the building.

"I'd say from my investigation it was relatively small, probably less than one inch in diameter," McClendon said of the explosion.

Earlier in the week, SCAD Executive Vice President Nancy Weber, had sent a letter to a half-dozen students, saying "an explosive device was detonated at the Charlton Administration Building" after Monday's meeting.

In her letter, she said, "You need to make certain that your statements and activities do not contribute to alienation, mistrust or irrational acts of violence."

Student Ellen Campbell, who received one of the letters, complained it was an attempt at intimidation.

"I'm scared to death," she said. "I don't have the right to be intimidated or threatened."

Calls to Ms. Weber seeking comment went unanswered.

Students say they first were encouraged by administration officials to draft a constitution, but then the administration began to oppose the effort. Rick Fisher, a graduate student helping lead the effort, said he was told by Dean of Students Jim Day that SCAD will never have one.

"They're fighting this constitution hard, and all I can say is, 'Why? What do they have to hide?'" Fisher said.

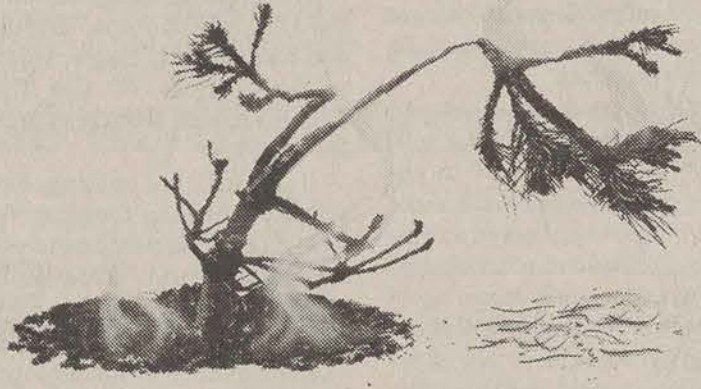

Another activist, former student Robert Steedman, said he became interested in pressing for a student government after the U.S. Department of Education expressed concerns last fall about a school funding deficit of $3.5 million.

The department ultimately decided to delay student-aid payments each quarter, but the action had no effect on student aid at SCAD.

School officials have declined to discuss the flap over the student constitution.
