SGA election violated privacy of voters; election should be held again

As students of GSU, we demand another election. By their conduct in the April 23 election, the Student Government Association has violated one of the most sacred rights accorded voters in America. The right to a secret ballot.

While this is not a Constitutionally guaranteed right, it is one regulated by the states and is nationally recognized as one of the most important aspects of the American democratic system. So much so that poll workers undertake special training and are forbidden to touch ballots. The voters must put their vote in the ballot box themselves.

Current SGA President Chris Clark has been quoted as saying that several votes that had been turned in early had been filled out incorrectly, and this is why he ordered election officials to examine the ballots.

It does not matter if voters had scribbled "Yankee Doodle Dandy" on their votes. When a ballot is incorrectly filled out — or mangled — in a regular election, the vote is discounted.

Period.

Incorrectly filled-out ballots should not be handed back to the voters. They should be thrown out later and not examined in front of the voters. The very pressure of watching an SGA official scrutinize ballots as they are being handed in puts unnecessary pressure on the voters. This could influence students to change their votes — or not vote at all.

If the complexity of the ballots is a problem then they need simpler ballots, not someone looking over voter's shoulders. By mangling the election process, SGA has set itself up for accusations of foul play and tarnished each winner's victory.

There must be another election.

Common sense dictates it, and justice demands it.

Conveniently enough, the SGA constitution doesn't seem to.

According to Dr. Jack Nolen, vice-president of student affairs, all it would take is one candidate who ran in last week's election to come forward and contest the election. The election would then be reviewed by an impartial committee.

This must be done.

This screw-up in the election process should be no reflection on the winners or losers of last week's election.

They did their duty by running for the offices. And they should now show their true leadership in joining in a call for another election. All of the candidates, winners and losers, have as much at stake here as anybody — if not more.

Courage must not take a back seat to self-interest.

We must have another election.

Alpha Kappa Alpha suspended

Status temporary pending outcome of hazing investigation

By Stacy Graham
Staff Writer

Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority has been temporarily suspended from campus pending a review and investigation for allegations of hazing, according to Assistant Dean of Students James Orr.

"We are in the process of reviewing the situation," said Orr. The National Chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha sent a letter to Orr instructing him to temporarily suspend the operations of Alpha Kappa Alpha until the investigation is complete. The investigation began about three weeks ago.

The alleged allegations of hazing were found out by the advisors, who in return, contacted the National Chapter, said Orr.

"There has been no official action to suspend, or not to suspend them," Orr said.

No one from the National Chapter would comment on the matter and Vertell Middleton, the Southeastern Regional Director could not be reached for comment either.

The suspension prohibits the sorority from doing anything as an organization until the investigation is complete. "This does not mean they are guilty of anything, necessarily, it simply means that until the investigation is completed, everything is on hold," Orr said.

James Orr, assistant dean of students

If hazing did occur, disciplinary action will be taken against the chapter if the whole chapter is responsible, or against the individuals if they can be identified.

Tamiko Braswell, President of the sorority, said she was not aware of the allegations. "I have not been notified of allegations by anyone," she said. "We have not hazed, and don't condone hazing," Braswell said she heard students on campus talking about the allegations, but she was not formally notified by anyone.

Alpha Kappa Alpha has been on this campus since 1976, and currently has 11 active members. "Alpha Kappa Alpha has been a good group here, this is the first episode of this nature for the sorority," said Orr.

If the allegations of hazing prove true, the sorority would be suspended for as long as the sorority members attend GSU.

Orr said it is very difficult classifying what exactly constitutes hazing. There are certain things that are easier identified than others, he said. Some of these are physical abuse, personal servitude, or anything that is publicly or potentially embarrassing.

Other things, such as carrying a pledge book, have different opinions from each sorority or fraternity.

"Hazing is not something we are prepared to tolerate," Orr said.

This allegation comes just one month after the fraternity Omega Psi Phi was suspended for hazing practices also.

ACLU speaks out on SCAD sanctions

ATLANTA (AP) — A least eight students trying to form a student government at the nation's biggest art college have been barred from registering for the fall term pending an investigation of a bomb blast at a campus building.

Administrators at Savannah College of Art and Design have refused to say why suspicion has fallen on those eight students.

But the American Civil Liberties Union suggested the college is retaliating against the students for trying to form a government, an idea the school opposes. Academic leaders and others have also condemned the college.

"This action by the administration has a chilling effect on the free-speech and free-association rights of the students," said Teresa Nelson, Georgia director of the ACLU.

The federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms is investigating a small bomb blast the night of April 6 or early the next morning. Student leaders had held an organizational meeting that night at another building.

After a non-binding referendum for a student constitution won overwhelming support, student leaders received memos last week that said their registration is being held up pending completion of the investigation of the vandalism.

The students have denied involvement in the bombing, which caused minor damage and no injuries. And ATF agent Joe Gordon said of the school's action, "It's in no way based on any input, counsel or advice from this bureau."

School officials have refused to discuss the barred students' cases. The husband-and-wife team that founded the 2,500-student school, President Richard Rowan and Provost Paula Rowan, has not responded to requests for interviews.

"People are generally understood to be innocent until proven guilty," said Don Wagner, executive director of the Georgia conference of the American Association of University Professors. "To keep somebody from finishing their degree pending completion of an investigation isn't what most institutions do."

The college catalog says the school "reserves the right to withdraw the privilege of enrollment from any student whose conduct is detrimental to the academic environment."

"That's pretty broad," said Alan Levine, associate professor of law at Hofstra University of Hempstead, N.Y., and an authority on student rights. "No reputable institution in the public eye — any of the major leading academic institutions — would invoke that kind of provision and get away with it."

Levine said students' rights are generally less clear at private institutions than at state schools, where protections under the U.S. Constitution apply.

Administrators at Savannah College of Art and Design oppose a student government, saying grievance procedures already available can take care of any problems students are having.

School officials will consider the proposed constitution when the student handbook is revised for next year, school spokeswoman Pamela Afifi said Monday.

Fire damages restaurant

By Misty McPherson
News Editor

No one was injured in a fire Tuesday afternoon at the Chinese Kitchen, 456 South Main St., although heavy damage occurred in the attic of the restaurant, according to fireman Herman Akins.

The fire started behind the cookers and traveled into the attic. Minor damage was also reported in the restaurant area Akins said.

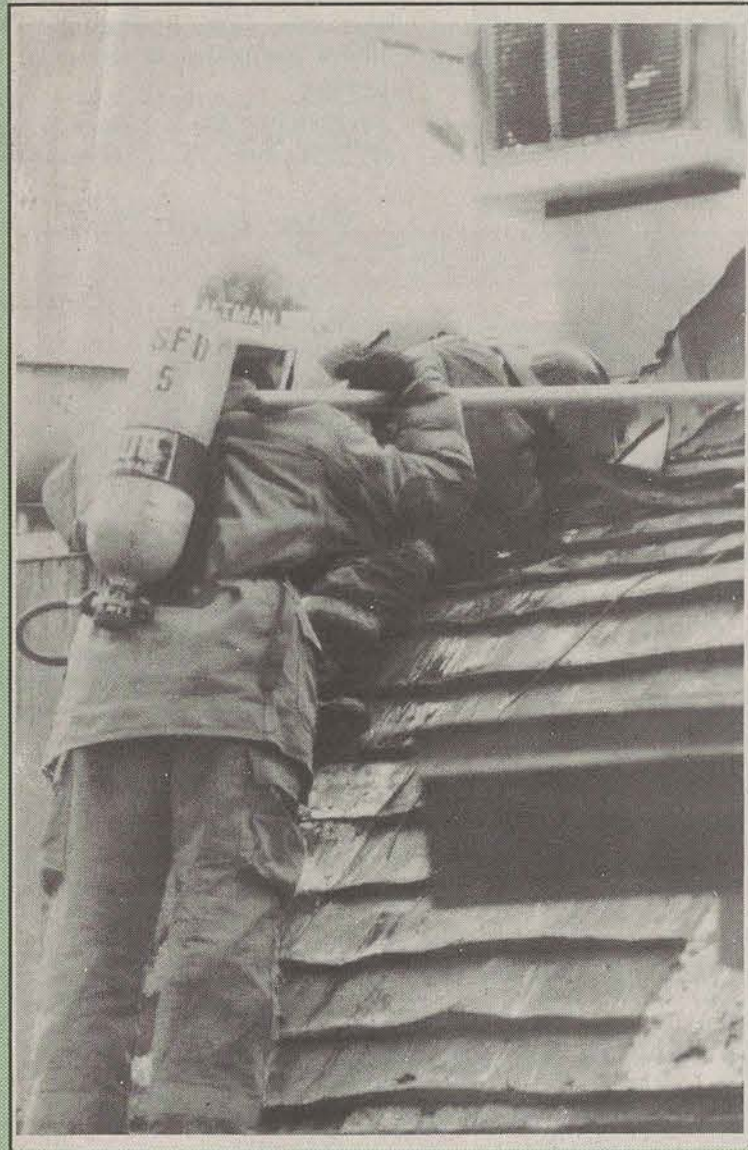

"The only thing that we can find is that over a period of time the area just heated up and the wood behind the cookers caught fire," Akins said.

Employee Jennifer Clark first became aware of the fire when she smelled wires burning and saw black smoke. "It [black smoke] was coming out of everywhere."

"I never thought anything like that would happen," said owner Paul Tom.

Firemen arrived at the scene at 3:52 p.m. and had the fire extinguished by 4 p.m. Akins said.

"It must be the wiring or something," Tom said at the time of the fire. "It didn't start from my cooking, it looked like it started from the attic." He could not be reached for comment after the reported cause of the fire was determined.

Ross Perot supporters organize

By Brent Parrott
Assistant News Editor

A meeting for supporters of Presidential hopeful Ross Perot held at Statesboro Regional Library, attracted a crowd of 50 people, including several GSU students.

At the meeting, supporters watched a video of Ross Perot being interviewed by David Frost and learned more about the petition process. Literature about Perot along with bumper stickers were also available.

To get Perot on the ballot in Georgia, 29,000 signatures must be obtained, but organizers of the drive hope to have twice as many.

According to Doyice Cotten, coordinator of the petition drive in Bulloch, "Perot is on the ballot in Tennessee and is looking good nationwide."

In attendance at the meeting were several interested students.

Heather Fiske, a senior majoring in recreation at GSU, echoed the sentiments of many. When asked why she was interested in Perot, she responded, "A change, I'm tired of the same old routine back and forth between Republicans and Democrats."

Another student, Mary Bennett, expressed similar sentiments. "(He's) a different walk. He's not in it for the power and he can shake up Congress."

Jackie Indek, sophomore majoring in secondary education, came to find out more about the candidate. "Just came to find out what he's about, but I agree there needs to be a change," she said.

'Habitat' holds fund-raising dinner

By Dennis Smith
Staff Writer

A group of students and faculty attended a fund-raiser for Habitat for Humanity at Pizza Inn on Monday night and recognized the first recipients of a Habitat home in Bulloch County.

Habitat for Humanity is a volunteer organization that helps families in need by donating time to help build houses.

John Hunter was the featured speaker. His family is living in a Habitat home that was constructed last year.

"Some folks associate families who are living on a limited income with low self esteem. This is a false perception,"

Hunter said.

"There are numerous families that are in humble circumstances who take pride in how they live," he said. "These are the kinds of families that Habitat is targeting."

GSU chapter president Mary Beth Johnson echoed Hunter's sentiments. She said

Top Girls takes the stage

By Teresa Roach
Features Editor

According to critic Michael Billington, "This is the best British play ever from a woman dramatist." Meaning, you've got to see it!

What is it? Theater South's production of Top Girls, a play written by renowned playwright Caryl Churchill.

The play is set in the early 1980s, and its main character, Marlene (played by Allison Lind), is a modern girl who has worked her way to a top position in an employment agency. After receiving her promotion, she celebrates it with a dinner, where several women from the past come to visit her and tell her of their life experiences.

These historical women "represent trials and tribulations that they've had to overcome.... A lot of the women became great individuals and were very triumphant. Their personal stories unravel Marlene's story," says Lind, Marlene's character.

This is a play which "provokes questions without giving the answers," says Heather Hart, who plays Winn and Lady Nijo.

Churchill is a "very non-traditional writer who pushes the boundaries," says Dando Kluever, the play's director. "Most of her plays focus on exploitation.... She provides a critique of modern feminism."

Lind and Hart are both seniors on the verge of graduation. Lind is a Communication Arts/English major, who started her work in theater with Performance Works. Some of her major works include Slab Boys, A Midsummer Night's Dream, Echoes of Silence, and Top Girls. Following graduation, she intends to continue her education and eventually teach at the college level, and she aims to remain involved with theater.

Hart is a Communication Arts Broadcasting major. She debuted in theater with The Prom Party. Among her other major works are The Odd Couple, A Midsummer Night's Dream, The Three Penny Opera, and a dramatic video entitled Deadline at Dawn. She will complete her summer internship, then graduate. She will then pursue a career in broadcasting, and she hopes to remain involved in theater.

"Being involved in theater has helped these girls tremendously," says Kluever. "It teaches poise, presence, self-confidence, responsibility, knowing a deadline, among other things...."

The time spent preparing for plays is almost overwhelming. Preparation usually begins 6 weeks in advance, but the preparation for Top Girls was especially intense because the cast and crew had only a month to get ready.

Lind and Hart spend from 6 to 7 hours per day in the theater rehearsing, and an additional 2 to 3 hours at home learning lines. This adds up to a lot of time and effort on the part of quite a few people.

Top Girls will run tonight and tomorrow night, May 1 and 2, and then again on May 6 through 9, starting at 8 p.m. in McCroan Auditorium. Don't miss it!

Revision hosts talk show on birth control

GSU News Service

Revision held its first major event by presenting a "Talk Show" entitled, "Birth Control: Whose Responsibility Is It?" on Tuesday, April 28 in the Union.

The objective of the show was to open communication about birth control between males and females. The show was hosted by Lesa Allen, a GSU junior. The panel included four GSU students: Gilbert Worthy, Wes Bonner, Latwain Butler, Michelle Cordeiro; and two professionals, Audrey Campbell, a GSU counselor, and Brenda Carper, a GSU nurse practitioner.

Each panelist addressed the important issue of responsibility for birth control. Because not everyone agreed about whose responsibility birth control was, a lively debate ensued.

The talk show was presented in a television talk show format. Panelists gave their stand on the issue and addressed questions and comments from the audience. During the show a video survey was played to show diversity of ideas from other GSU students. Audrey Campbell and Brenda Carper offered their professional opinions about the issue, thus enlivening the debate.

Revision is an organization designed to discuss gender issues and to open communication between men and women.

All-condom store opens to big crowds

BOSTON (AP) — The city's newest specialty shop, Condom World, celebrated its grand opening Saturday by handing out samples wrapped in gold foil and imprinted with the motto: "Protect and Serve."

Dozens of browsers crowded into the basement storefront on fashionable Newbury Street, perusing the shop's 150 varieties of condoms and related items.

Owner David Cohen of Philadelphia said he founded the boutique for the simplest of business reasons: product demand.

"It's something people really need," he said, sipping a celebratory glass of champagne as customers checked out Stealth Condoms, "Safe Sex to Go" and the slightly out-of-date Gorby Reds.

Concert news

Special to the G-A

The evening air will sizzle when Coca-Cola Lakewood Amphitheater opens its doors for its fourth high-powered season. The venue boasts the most diverse and exciting concert schedule around with featured artists such as Jimmy Buffett, Paula Abdul, and others. Lakewood kicks off the 1992 season with a no-holds-barred performance by hard-rockin' Tesla and Firehouse on Sunday, May 17 at 8 p.m.

Next Thursday, May 7 at 7:30 p.m. Widespread Panic will be playing with New Potato Caboose and special guest Dreams So Real in Hanner Field House. Tickets are $12 for non-students on the day of the show.

Americans have become more interested in using condoms in the wake of revelations that top athletes and entertainers have contracted the deadly AIDS virus, Cohen said.

The new store features a wall of boxed condoms priced at $2 and up. The most expensive item: a box of 12 natural lambskin condoms retailing for $36.

While Cohen considers AIDS prevention a serious public health issue, he's also trying to promote the product with a sense of humor.

The Knight Light, which sells for $3.50, glows in the dark. For $9.50, sports fans can buy Safe Sox, athletic socks with a condom pocket on the side.

Women can conceal condoms in earrings, pins and string ties priced from about $7.50 to $12.50.

"These are very popular," Cohen said, displaying Lifesavers, six colorful condoms packaged in a familiar candy-striped tube.

There are special birthday condoms, comic-book condoms, cupid condoms, condom key-chains and condom caps.

For the extra-cautious, there's a full-body condom for $12.95.

Customer Steve Shuman of Boston, who was looking for party favors for an upcoming banquet, said he likes the new store.

"It's a very '90s kind of packaging," he said. "There's nothing embarrassing about it."

SGA and G-A: are we doing our jobs?

The controversy surrounding the recent SGA elections has brought to light the question of roles and responsibilities.

A newspaper has a responsibility to effectively inform its readership. In our case, that readership is the student body - including SGA.

SGA has a role and a responsibility as well. That is to act as a liaison between the students and the administration.

Both organizations, in theory, represent the students of GSU, but in different ways. The newspaper does this by monitoring various organizations, events and occurrences. We then inform the public (the student body in this case), so that they may take that information and make responsible decisions about those people, organizations and events that shape their world. We are not here to play cheerleader to SGA, or any other campus organization.

Outgoing SGA president Chris Clark has implied that we are not doing our job and haven't been for some time, at least when it comes to SGA.

Given that the recent SGA administration, or more directly Clark and publicity coordinator Jeff Barker, seem to be unable to effectively publicize an important election and couldn't or wouldn't conduct the election properly, the old cliché about people living in glass houses has never been more appropriate.

Barker even went so far as to recommend that SGA not use The George-Anne, the official campus newspaper, to publicize the election. This is after a classified ad announcing the election appeared in the Statesboro Herald.

With 6,500 copies of The George-Anne distributed around campus, as opposed to the Statesboro Herald, which is infrequently read by students, one has to wonder who is doing their job and who isn't? SGA officers act like petulant children who get caught doing something wrong - they try to blame it on someone else. This time we are the target.

They ask us to do our job, then when we do, they cry and complain.

If SGA and its officers, who were elected by a whopping eight percent of students in this election and 15 percent in last year's election, want to represent students effectively try this: stop crying about your inability to run elections and trying to find a scapegoat; put that energy to use and get your act together - and represent the students.

If you can do that, then we won't need to waste time on an improper and possibly illegal election. It will give us time to cover other things on campus - and represent the students.

LIFE IN HELL

The symbolic significance of Gilligan's Island

COUNTERPOINT

Kennedy Ward

Gilligan's Island ...

I've always liked the one where they almost get off the island.

Then again, you can't forget the one where they almost get off the island.

Actually, it's not true that every episode of the show is about how the seven castaways almost get off the little uncharted island.

Gilligan's Island is layered with meanings addressing key social issues. In my opinion, the island symbolizes a little world: each castaway represents a different personality in our society. For example, the Professor represents the intellectuals, Mary Ann symbolizes all that is pure and innocent and the Skipper is a representation of the blue-collar workers of society.

This show is worthy of watching because it demonstrates that different types of people can learn to live together. The show seems to be a comedy on top and an allegory underneath.

If we, as a society, applied the lessons learned on Gilligan's Island, the world would be a more honest, safe and happy place to live.

One of the major problems facing GSU is that we are growing further and further apart. Often, when faced with a big problem like parking, instead of uniting and protesting for change we just complain and do nothing to solve the problem.

We should pay close attention to the message that is presented in each episode of Gilligan's Island. That message is crystal clear: when faced with a common dilemma, society's different characters (poor, smart, innocent, etc.) can work together to solve their problems.

When head-hunters attack the castaways, for instance, they don't sit around complaining and waiting for someone else to solve their problem. They overlook personal differences and join together and banish these sinister individuals.

So, the next time you watch an episode of Gilligan's Island, look for the message. There is much to be learned from Gilligan, the Skipper, the Howells, Ginger, the Professor and Mary Ann.

Or perhaps after watching this silly show all these years, I've lost touch with reality.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Students should be careful in choosing ring company

Dear Editor,

As a recent GSU graduate, I would like to share my misfortune with all students who are considering buying a class ring. In February I went to the Student Union to look at class rings. After carefully looking, I chose Herff Jones above the other companies represented.

The young lady who took my order made everything so easy that all I had to do was to show her the ring of my choice and give her my ring size. She took care of all the rest and said it would be here in six to eight weeks.

On April 10, I was notified that my class ring had arrived. This was the beginning of the bad things that were soon to follow. After work, my girlfriend and I went to their office to pick up my ring.

They did hand me a ring alright, but unfortunately it was COMPLETELY opposite from what I had ordered.

Ms. Debbie Roderick came out to resolve the problem, but what she did was to create more problems. The mistakes with the ring were so drastic that it completely changed the ring and, to be totally honest, was unacceptable to me.

Ms. Roderick offered three choices. They were for me to (1) take the ring they made; (2) not take the ring; (3) re-order one and wait another six weeks. These choices were given in a very rude manner.

When we questioned how such an error could happen, she replied that they only made the ring that was described on the sales ticket. This brings me to another point, the salesperson's ability to fill out the work order. When we asked about the salesperson we were once again rudely told that her salesperson has taken hundreds of orders and needs no additional training.

Once again we were offered her three choices. Maybe the reason for this was that it was 5:20 p.m. and they close at 5:30. I do not know for sure. WHAT EVER HAPPENED TO CUSTOMER SERVICE??? The only positive thing she said was that there would be no additional deposit required if I decided to re-order. Thanks, that takes care of the problem - NOT!!!

Herff Jones never admitted fault since the job ticket was not filled out the way I requested it to be. Maybe they should hire me to fill out the job tickets!

I guess the whole reason for writing this is to inform everyone interested in buying a class ring to PLEASE, PLEASE double check everything is written down.

If you are looking for customer service, reliability, and prompt service, think twice about using Herff Jones.

Michael Dunn

LETTER AND SUBMISSION POLICY

The George-Anne welcomes letters to the editor, story submissions and guest columns from people both inside and outside the Georgia Southern University Community. NFL draft highlights and lowlights

By Mike Kern

Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Highlights, lowlights, side-lights ... or, trying to sort out the first day of the NFL draft:

THE BIGGEST WINNERS:

1. Dallas. The Cowboys still are making out big-time from the 1989 Herschel Walker trade with Minnesota. This time, they probably got two immediate starters in the first round -- Texas A & M defensive back Kevin Smith (with the No. 17 pick that once belonged to the Eagles) and East Carolina linebacker Robert Jones -- among their nine overall selections, two more than any other team.

2. Atlanta. The Falcons moved up to get Stanford All-America offensive tackle Bob Whitfield at No. 8, and came right back to grab versatile Southern Mississippi running back Tony Smith at No. 19. Both ingredients are needed to solidify the Red Gun attack.

3. Indianapolis. OK, so only the Sixers could have screwed up this one. But the Colts, a club desperately in need of everything, did do the right thing with the first two picks and came away with the two top prospects on the board -- Washington defensive tackle Steve Emtman and Texas A & M linebacker Quentin Coryatt. They also deserve credit for: (A) picking up highly rated Mississippi Valley State cornerback Ashley Ambrose with the first pick in the second round and (B) unloading problem running back Eric Dickerson to the Los Angeles Raiders, even if only for fourth- and eighth-round picks.

4. Miami. Though they probably lucked into it because of the Bengals' unexpected selection of Houston quarterback David Klingler at No. 6, the Dolphins picked at No. 7 and wound up with one of the two best cover men in the draft --

Wisconsin cornerback Troy Vincent, of Pennsbury High. Five places later, they filled another hole by drafting Georgia Tech linebacker Marco Coleman. They might have stretched their luck a bit, though, in the second round, taking Auburn defensive tackle Eddie Blake, who reportedly tested positive for cocaine at the scouting combines.

5. Cincinnati. By trading down two spots to get Klingler, the Bengals also ended up with Miami safety Darryl Williams. And Tennessee wide receiver Carl Pickens, at No. 31, was grand larceny.

STILL SEARCHING:

1. Eagles. Unless Antone Davis turns out to be the next Bob Brown, or Siran Stacy turns out to be the next Amp Lee (would you settle for Tom "Silky" Sullivan?), it seems as if the majority of the NFC East just got a whole lot stronger while the Birds were reduced to spectators.

2. Phoenix. Even if the Cards had held on to their first-round pick (it would have been No. 7), recent history suggests they would have found a way to mess it up.

3. Minnesota. Because of the Walker deal, Dallas got to pick four times before the Vikings made their first selection, Southern defensive end Robert Harris, from the 39th position. And they had to work out a deal with Seattle just to move up that high.

4. Tampa Bay. The Bucs once traded this year's No. 1 for quarterback Chris Chandler, who is no longer with the team. They also could have had the second pick. Instead, they had to settle for No. 44 and Michigan State wide receiver Courtney Hawkins.

BEST GAMBLE:

The Raiders picking up Dickerson for two middleround picks. He could turn out to be another Al Davis retread story in the making. And if not, what did the Raiders really lose?

BEST MOVE:

The Redskins traded the No. 6 and No. 28 choices to the Bengals for the fourth pick and used it to take Michigan wide-out-kick returner Desmond Howard, who Green Bay was ready to grab at No. 5. So, in effect, the Super Bowl champions were able to obtain the Heisman Trophy winner for the 28th pick.

BEST CONSOLATION PRIZE:

Though Green Bay missed out on Howard, it still wound up with highly regarded Florida State cornerback Terrell Buckley, who should be a fixture in the secondary for quite some time.

I'M FALLING AND I CAN'T GET UP:

1. Tony Brooks, running back, Notre Dame. A projected second-rounder, he still was there for the Eagles in the fourth.

2. Chuck Smith, defensive end, Tennessee. He went to Atlanta with the 51st pick, at least 20 spots later than anticipated.

3. Greg Skrepenak, offensive tackle, Michigan. This one-time Top 10 guy went No. 32 to the Raiders. And some people thought even that was too high.

4. Carl Pickens, wide receiver, Tennessee. See above.

5. Vaughn Dunbar, running back, Indiana. This guy was supposed to be the first running back taken. He turned out to be the third, but he lasted until New Orleans took him at No. 21. That's what he gets for showing up at draft central in New York wearing a tuxedo.

6. Derrick Moore, Northeastern Oklahoma. Considered the eighth-best running back, his name has yet to be called.

INTERESTING, VERY INTERESTING:

1. UCLA quarterback Tommy Maddox going to Denver at No. 25.

2. Arizona offensive tackle John Fina, who had middle rounds written all over him, going to Buffalo two picks later.

3. San Francisco not trading quarterback Steve Young again.

IN CASE YOU'RE COUNTING

Nine underclassmen were taken in the first round, three out of the first five picks ... Fourteen trades were made ... Six defensive linemen and five offensive linemen were taken in the first round and all weighed more than 280 pounds.

COMPARATIVELY SPEAKING:

With the 14th pick, the Giants took Notre Dame tight end Derek Brown. With the next pick, the Jets chose Nebraska tight end Johnny Mitchell. Can't you see those update boxes blown up all over the back page of the New York Post?

BUT CAN HE MOONWALK?:

Chiefs coach Marty Schottenheimer, asked to compare his No. 2 pick, quarterback Matt Blundin, to Bernie Kosar, who played for him at Cleveland: "With all due respect to Bernie, this young man is a better athlete. Bernie's a great football player and a great competitor, but I can't see him playing ACC basketball (as the former Ridley (Pa.) High School standout did at Virginia)."

Norton to kick for Bills

Former Eagle punter Don Norton

GSU News Service

Former Eagle punter Don Norton was given a tryout with the Buffalo Bills Tuesday and is expected to sign a contract later this week.

The contract is necessary, so Norton can participate in the Bills mini-camp, which runs through next week.

Bill Ferguson, the Buffalo Bills' director of player personnel, contacted Norton on Monday afternoon offering him a tryout with the defending American Football Conference Champions.

Norton travelled to Buffalo on Monday evening.

Norton earned the starting job with the Eagles last season. He kicked 73 times for an average of 40.8 yards, with a long of 63 yards against Central Florida.

Norton is a native of Coral Springs, Fla. He attended Coral Springs High where he lettered in soccer and football.

GSU Basketball signs Washington

Kevin Washington, a 6-4, 180 lb guard from Odessa College in Texas, has signed a national letter-of-intent to attend and play basketball at GSU, according to Head Coach Frank Kerns.

Washington is the Eagle's fourth signee of the spring signing period, joining junior Tim Heath, a 6-2 guard, junior Wallace Johnson, a 6-3 guard and freshman Brian Wallace, a forward.

Washington averaged 9.4 points, 2.5 rebounds and 3.1 assists per game last season at Odessa. He helped the Wranglers to a 23-8 record and a Region V playoff appearance in 1991-92. He shot 85.2 percent from the line, 48 percent from the floor, including 33 percent from three-point range.

A native of St. Louis, Mo., Washington is a 1990 graduate of Soldan High School.

The Eagles were 25-6 last season and earned their third appearance in the NCAA Tournament. Three starters return next fall when GSU opens play in the Southern Conference after 12 seasons in the Trans America Athletic Conference.

Netters place third in Southern Conference Tournament

The GSU men's tennis team finished third in its first ever Southern Conference Tennis Tournament last weekend.

The Eagles totaled 55 points, which put them 11 points behind tournament champion East Tennessee State.

Sophomore Roger Mills finished second in No. 1 singles losing to ETSU's Yaser Zaatini 6-4, 6-1.

Scott Allen took third place in No. 2 singles after a Sunday victory over Western Carolina's James Gasparni 6-4, 6-2.

At third singles, sophomore Chuck Olinger placed second after losing to ETSU's Craig Lupton-Smith 6-1, 6-2.

The rest of the results are as follows: Hector Porcella (No. 4 singles), fourth place; Derek Robertson (No. 5 singles), fourth place; Kevin Green (No. 6 singles), third place; Mills and Olinger (No. 1 doubles), third place; Green and Robertson (No. 2 doubles), third place; Allen and Porcella (No. 3 doubles), second place.

they do not give away homes. "Every cent that is put into the house has to be paid back," Johnson said.

The families that will live in the home must also help with construction.

David Ross, faculty advisor to Habitat, said the purpose of the event was to make faculty members aware that there is a student chapter seeking active membership.

Ross said there are plans to start on another home in August.

"We are also planning a trip to Savannah to help work on a house with their chapter," she added.

There are currently 30 student members. "We are still in the building mode trying to get more students involved," Ross said.
