Students react to King verdict, violence

By Kim St. Hilaire
Staff Writer

When four white police officers were acquitted last Wednesday for the beating of Rodney King, outrage quickly spread from Los Angeles all across the country.

According to a USA Today poll, blacks were much quicker to blame racism for the verdict than whites were, yet nearly all blacks and 86 percent of whites polled believed the verdict was wrong.

Dr. Michael Reese, a lawyer and assistant professor of political science and criminal justice at GSU explained that "As a lawyer, I know a whole lot more goes on than just that one piece of evidence (the video), but looking at it, I thought it looked very much like excessive force. I was surprised by the verdict."

According to published reports, almost 100 people were arrested and a dozen injured in Atlanta as a result of the acquittal. There have been no incidents of violence reported at GSU.

The majority of students at GSU, irregardless of race, who have followed the King case at all feel that the verdict was wrong. Many also believe the violence that has resulted as a consequence is only going to make the situation worse.

"I'm kind of pissed off at the way the verdict came out," said Cindy Mott, a student. "But all this rioting and stuff is senseless, very very senseless. I don't know why people are destroying their homes - there are other ways to express anger than by destroying property."

Derrick Harris, a sophomore computer science major, said that "Justice was not served." He also went on to explain that "The violence shouldn't be there though. They deserve to be upset because the decision was unjust, and unfair, and unreal, but they need to go about it another way."

The videotape was the first time the public was exposed to such a graphic piece of evidence.

"The media picked up the Rodney King case because it was the first time anyone had caught police brutality on tape," said Dr. Beverly Merrick, assistant professor of journalism. "I think Bush and Mayor Bradley of L.A. listen too much to media before they even act and that's what happened in this situation; they waited to see the riot when what they needed to do was go in and take protective measures."

The media's impact is illustrated by a comment made by John Kirkland, an educa-

Students at Atlanta colleges protest decision

By Sonya Ross
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) - Police and black college students traded volleys of bricks and tear gas during a six-hour confrontation Friday, but Police Chief Eldrin Bell declared at 10 p.m. that order had been restored.

At least 22 people were taken to hospitals and 67 were arrested earlier in the day as waves of students, sometimes numbering in the hundreds, flowed near police who maneu-tion major.

"I don't see how they (the jurors) could have doubted what they saw with their own eyes," he said. "As for the violence, I can see why they're doing it, but I think it's hurting their case more than helping it because that's going to give people the idea that maybe Rodney King did deserve vered to keep them on several adjacent campuses west of downtown Atlanta.

The unrest was confined to the campuses of Morehouse College and Clark Atlanta University and a few nearby stores, some of which were looted. The rest of the city remained calm, without reports of Thursday's vandalism and attacks on whites by groups of young blacks.

The violence was spawned by the verdict in the Los Angeles police brutality case.

what he got."

Eric Jones, a sophomore education major, expressed a similar view.

"My feeling is that it's a bad decision," he said. "They had a tape, and the officers didn't get a fine or anything, so how can that be justified? I think the violence is a bad way to retaliate, there are other ways

Bell said tear gas and strong shows of force finally put down the unrest. He said he pulled officers back Friday evening after school administrators asked for a chance to restore calm.

"That didn't work, so we moved in and took complete control... and that's the way we plan for it to stay," Bell said. "It's going to be a no-nonsense approach."

NEWS BRIEFS

GSU student arrested for drug trafficking

Charlie King, Head of Narcotics with the Bulloch County Sheriff's Department, confirmed rumors that a GSU student had been arrested for drug trafficking.

King would not comment further, but according to an article previously published in the Statesboro Herald, David Anthony Babb, 26, of Sussex Apartments, was arrested Tuesday, April 14, on South Carolina warrants alleging cocaine and marijuana trafficking.

The article also stated that prior to Babb's arrest, officials searched his apartment and found $10,966, a 20-gauge shotgun and ammunition, as well as a small quantity of a substance believed to be marijuana.

When Babb was later arrested, investigators found another $500 on him. Babb is now being held without bond at the Bulloch County Jail.

UGA students gather to remember slain coed

ATLANTA (AP) - About 400 people attended a memorial service Wednesday in Athens for Jennifer Stone, a 22-year-old University of Georgia senior found dead in her off-campus home April 23.

She "stood up for you when you couldn't stand up for yourself," said Sandi Turner, like Ms. Stone, a member of the Kappa Delta sorority.

"Jenny's father wanted her to be remembered for her sometimes impish smile, which generated results," she said in a report in The Atlanta Journal-Constitution.

Among the five friends eulogizing Ms. Stone during the memorial service was Randy Brooks, who read a poem about love and loss before saying, "Jenny would not want us to be afraid. She wasn't afraid of anything. She would want us to be smart and careful, but she would not want us to be afraid."

Ms. Stone was sexually assaulted and strangled.

In her memory, a benefit was to be held on May 4 at the Colorbox, a downtown music club, with proceeds going to Safe Campuses Now, an Athens-based organization trying to inform students about safety.

The University Union Rotunda was spiced with the exotic flavor and sounds of African-American arts and crafts as students experienced a taste of black culture while they browsed through the wares of the many merchants set up there on Thursday afternoon.

The third annual Black Expo was sponsored by the NAACP and Union Productions. Not only were Savannah area merchants on hand, but a few of GSU's greek organizations were also displaying some of their paraphernalia.

"[We were out to] show the people at Southern that we exist and that we want them to see who we are," said Pamela Carter, Vice President of the Epsilon Xi Chapter of Zeta Phi Beta.

Renee Stewart, this year's coordinator, said, "The response was pretty good considering that it [the Expo] wasn't planned at the most feasible time for the students, being that it was the day before payday."

Ted Williams, president of the local chapter of the NAACP, agreed that the turnout was good.

Students were able to have their nails done by a professional manicurist, and watch Joan Reid, a GSU minority student advisor, who is of Jamaican heritage, perform a traditional Jamaican dance.

Everything from hand-crafted jewelry to African-style clothing to American prints and music were for sale.

"We were getting together and we were out doing something positive," Stewart said.

Changes announced for MFP

By Francine Amaker
Staff Writer

Auxiliary Service has decided to remove the Maximum Flexibility Plan (MFP), from the registration process due to problems it created for financial aid recipients and other students.

"In the past, students who received financial aid would purchase MFP accounts and their awards would not be accessed until later during the quarter," said Tom Palfy, food service director. "This prevented students from eating at the beginning of the quarter since they actually had no money in the account."

Since financial aid recipients cannot access awards until various times during the quarter, they should consider purchasing a meal contract, said Palfy. Students who purchase a meal contract can use it the first residence halls open.

"When a student receives his or her financial aid award, the meal contract can be converted into a MFP account for the remaining value left on the meal contract," Palfy said.

Auxiliary Services hopes to have the new MFP process in effect by fall quarter.

There will be no acceptance of MFP money at preregistration.

Students wishing to create or add to an MFP account for the summer or fall quarter can do so by going to the I.D.

Center in Landrum.

Auxiliary Services will also have MFP stations set up at late registrations, which will speed up the process.

"With the new system, once a student opens up an MFP account, the can use it immediately," Palfy said. "In the past, students had to wait one or two days, due to other parts of the registration process."

New receipt points will also be established on campus.

Beginning fall quarter, any student can go to the Lakeside Cafe, the University Bookstore, or Books Plus to deposit money into their MFP accounts.

Students who have questions about the new process can go to the I.D. Center in Landrum.

Carter wins SGA run-off election

By Julie Henderson
Staff Writer

Jerald Carter was the winner of the run-off election for vice-president of Academic Affairs last Thursday.

He defeated Mike Bowden by winning 58 percent of the votes with Bowden receiving the other 42 percent.

The run-off was held because none of the candidates from the original election received a majority vote.

Bowden and Carter were the top two candidates from the original election with 39 percent and 26 percent respectively.

Carter said he believes his campaign tactics helped him to defeat Bowden in the run-off, even though he didn't have a higher percentage of votes in the first election.

"I campaigned hard and was personal with the student body," Carter said. "I talked with people one-on-one. Being personal and letting people know what you stand for is more important than just having your name plastered all over campus."

"I want to thank Mike, though, for being a good competitor. He made me work hard," he added.

Bowden wasn't as satisfied with the run-off election.

"I was told on Thursday (after the first election) that I had won the election and that it had been approved by Dr. Baynes," Bowden said. "Then late Sunday evening I was notified about the run-off. Dr. Nolen said that I didn't have a majority."

According to the SGA Constitution, a person must win an election by a majority. Bowden didn't feel that "majority" was defined very well in the Constitution.

In the first election he had about 150 more votes than Carter. In the run-off Carter defeated him by only a little more than 80 votes.

"I feel that it's not fair," Bowden said. "I don't feel a run-off was necessary. But I'm not going to contest the election."

Carter will officially take office on May 12 with the rest of the newly elected officers. First on his agenda will be working towards the elimination of Saturday finals.

Museum project receives federal funding

The GSU museum's project SENSE, Science Education Network received $186,241 in federal funding to extend special science and mathematics learning programs to area school systems.

Project SENSE's program to bring math and science resources to 30 area rural school systems has been funded for $89,335. A special arrangement with the Glynn County schools, "Glynn Initiative in Mathematics and Science (GIMC)," has also been funded for $96,906. During the past three years some 34 teachers in Glynn County have been among 200 participants in SENSE programs. Now the county intends to implement the program for all students in grades K-8.

While the funding was allocated via two different agencies - the Georgia Department of Education and the Higher Education Program at the University of Georgia - the programs were made possible by the Dwight D. Eisenhower Mathematics and Science Education Act.

"This is our fourth year and we're really proud of the program," said Museum Director Delma Presley. "Our summer workshop staff includes outstanding faculty from the schools of Education, Technology and Arts and Sciences, and scientist who work in business and industry."

During the school year, he explained, "our regular projects staff prepares and delivers hands-on classroom science kits as well as two fantastic portable planetariums. As a result of the recent funding, the museum-based project will now reach into over 400 classrooms in southern and middle Georgia, sharing with thousands of school children the true joy of learning."

Gooding elected president of SBAA

Carl Gooding, dean of the GSU Business School, has been elected the 1992 President of the Southern Business Administration Association (SBAA).

SBAA is a regional affiliate of the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB) with over 250 member institutions. Serving on the board since 1987, Gooding has held positions as secretary/treasurer and vice-president.

Gooding was the 1991 recipient of the Southeast Distinguished Service Award and is of the 12 deans from across the nation appointed to AACSB's Initial Accreditation Committee.

He is vice-president for the Decision Sciences Institute, representing the Southeastern United States. In addition, he is a council member of the Southeast Decision Sciences Institute, and the chairperson of the University System of Georgia Academic Committee on Business Administration, Management and Economics.

SOAR team captures top regional award

GSU's Orientation, Advisement and Registration (SOAR) Team took top honors at the 18th Annual Southern Regional Orientation Workshop at Georgia Tech recently.

The 20-member SOAR team was awarded first place in the overall competition for spirit, participation in conference vents and competitions, support of other institutions, overall appearance and visibility and friendliness.

The team also captured a first place in the spirit competition, judged on the basis of camaraderie and good sportsmanship, a second place in skit competition, and a fifth place in song competition.

Some 765 students participated from 65 different institutions, making the 1992 workshop the largest foundation in the history of the National Orientation Directors Association.

GSU's team has been attending the workshop for four year's. This marks the first time the team has received top honors.

The SOAR team consists of students who assist with the orientation of incoming University students. The members of the 1992 team are: Lori Anderson, Jerald Carter, Clent Chatham, Charisse Chisholm, Curtis Combs, Barbara Frankart, Karen Goodale, Brad Griffith, Chris Hackett and Robbe Hedstrom.

Also, Kareem Hill, Keith Jordan, Lynn Kirkland, Kelly Lewis, Mary Beth Martin, Tamara Smith, Tami McKendree, Amy Richardson, Serena Spears and Janna Whitley.

New campus to open along Georgia-Tennessee line

NEW CAMPUS TO OPEN ALONG GEORGIA-TENNESSEE LINE

EPWORTH, Ga. (AP) — A new campus will open its doors next fall to serve students from three north Georgia counties and Tennessee's Polk County.

The college, a regional campus of the Cleveland, Ga.-based Truett McConnell College, has been planned for two years by officials in Georgia's Fannin, Gilmer and Union counties and Polk County.

A council representing the four counties will lease, for $1 a year for 50 years, an elementary school in Epworth that is being closed as part of a Fannin County school consolidation.

The council was formed to raise $300,000 to equip the building, which has 18 classrooms and a 500-seat auditorium.

Truett McConnell, a private, Baptist-sponsored, two-year liberal arts college, will staff it with an administrator, assistant administrator and secretary. Instructors will be part time.

"We find so many counties in this area with what are referred to as non-traditional students, ages 25 to 45," Claude Smith, Truett McConnell's dean of off-campus education, said Friday. "They want to go to college, but can't afford to quit their jobs."

In the past, young people from the Copper Basin area, in the central part of the north Georgia mountains, had to drive to Cleveland Tenn., Cleveland, Ga., or Young Harris, Ga., to attend college.

"Most of them, when they complete their two-year degree, are on fire and want to go on to a bachelor's degree," Smith said.

War games gain popularity

By Teresa Roach
Features Editor

Men and women wield guns and lay in wait in the heavily wooded area for their predators. A rustle is heard in the brush, and suddenly a camouflage-clad man jumps up and fires at the intruder. His aim is accurate; the wounded man is left behind while the successful man continues his hunt.

So what is it? Vietnam? A hinting expedition turned vindictive? No, it's a game of "capture the flag," one of the many games played with paintball.

"Capture the flag" is played with at least ten people. Each team has a flag, and members of a team attempt to covertly capture the opposite team's flag, bring it back to their territory, and rehang it. Getting shot means wearing the mark of death, a bright splotch of paint, on one's clothing. And when you're dead, you're out.

Paintball, some say, is a good way to release one's aggressions, while others claim to like it just for the excitement and adrenaline rush.

If you are a newcomer to the game, the "best way to get the total essence of the game is to go out and see the action," says Andy Lowe, co-owner of Eagle Adventure Games. "I played it once and I was hooked," says his partner, Steve Smith.

The two opened up their company, the only paintball field in Statesboro, just a month ago. Savannah and Hilton Head also have paintball fields.

The field at Eagle Adventure Games is approximately ten acres, with an additional area for speedball, a fast-paced paintball game.

The speedball field is approximately 40 yards by 20 yards and full of barrels and tires for cover. Teams start on opposite sides of the field and try to shoot members of the opposite team until everyone is eliminated. This game lasts about five minutes.

When playing paintball, says Lowe, "You learn not to trust anyone about anything, because when you do, you're dead."

And does getting shot hurt? "That depends," says Smith, "on the range you are shot at, and also on what you're doing when you get hit. Sometimes you're concentrating on the game so much and you're adrenaline's going so much that you don't even feel it. Other times, though..." he says as he shows a purplish bruise on his stomach.

Lowe and Smith stress safety rules to anyone participating in paintball. "We always start our games with a safety lecture and discuss the rules and boundaries," Smith says. Wearing goggles for protection is an important safety factor.

Eagle Adventure Games is located off of Old Register Road, about five minutes from campus. The cost of playing on a weekend if you come out alone is approximately $15. The necessary materials are a pistol, goggles, CO2, and paint. These materials are available at the field. The cost of playing on a weekday is $2 per hour plus the cost of paint, which is $1 per tube.

Music can be more than just entertainment

Although music therapy is a young profession (beginning in the 1930's), it remains to be an effective and inexpensive means of increasing alertness and physical vitality while decreasing the isolation experienced by many elderly patients.

To get the best responses, however, the music must have meaning and significance to the individual patient. With this in mind, music therapists carefully choose their music, usually through discussion with family members. "In fact, the only contraindication of music therapy," says Derek Prinsley, MD, "is the possible emotional upsets of patients

HEALTH AND FITNESS

who have listened to music that elicits very unpleasant memories for them."

Music therapists consider the patient's ethnic background, and that an individual's "music memory" tends to be fixed during the ages of 15 to 25 years.

Music therapy has the immediate and positive effect of helping hospital patients, especially the elderly in geriatric hospitals, to cope with various disabilities. A session of music therapy can be designed to increase range of motion, renew motor skills, and ease pain. Many patients say that it does not feel like physical therapy when it's done to their favorite music.

Many of the geriatric patients have hypertension, or uncontrolled diabetes. Some have had strokes or limbs amputated. Nevertheless, patients display some sense of rhythmic movement with reference to the tunes — this is very beneficial physically and emotionally.

"Our goals are to reinforce the occupational therapy and physical therapy," says the University of Texas branch's Mary Rudenberg, RMT/BC (registered music therapists/board certified). "We get them to reminisce, and talk about when they went to dances, and when they heard these [musical] groups. It gets them to socialize more with one another, to share, to draw on their long term memories. It gives them a means of

1991 Professor of the Year still a hit with students

By Cathy Powell
Guest Writer

A sunny spring morning begins with dew still clinging to each blade of grass. The location is Sweetheart Circle and the occasion is Honor's Day 1991. At this ceremony, attended by administration, faculty, staff, students and parents, the Gamma Beta Phi Honor and Service Society presents the Professor of the Year Award.

The announcement is made. This year's recipient, known to most students as "Yo, Dave," graciously accepts the award. He wears a blue and black Banana Republic geometric shirt and black pants. Too casual for some, but perfectly natural for Dr. Dave Moskowitz.

Born and raised in Stony Brook, NY, he said he doesn't actually like crowds. "I don't like making speeches in front of people. When I'm talking to students during a lecture, I have notes. But making a speech is talking about something I'm not used to [talking about]," explained Moskowitz, who credits his success to his parents.

Believing that students realize that he cares about them, Moskowitz attributes his receiving the award to the large lecture class he was teaching the quarter the voting occurred.

According to Michele Meade, a sophomore math major from Douglasville, "Dave is the kind of teacher that really takes an interest in his students. When students had questions, he was always willing to help them. Dave even taught us how to study for courses with heavy reading assignments."

Despite the fact that his father was a teacher, Dave had never considered a teaching career for himself.

"When I was an undergraduate at Stony Brook, I was a music major," Dave explained with a laugh.

"I became interested in political science once I took a course from Milton Lodge, my political science instructor. I realized that I enjoyed studying why people do the things they do," said Moskowitz.

From Lodge, now in San Diego, he heard about a job opening at a school called Georgia Southern College in Statesboro. He applied and was soon called for an interview. Before long, many people on campus knew "Yo Dave."

Moskowitz, whose hobby is photography, would one day like to travel across America taking photographs.

"I like to take photos at the basketball games here at GSU. I guess my best one was a shot of a player making a dunk. I was able to him in mid-air at the rim," said Moskowitz.

Once again, faculty, staff, administration, students and parents will gather in Sweetheart Circle on a sunny spring morning this

The crime of being black

Why is it such a crime to be black in America? We didn't ask to come to this country so why are we being beaten for it?

Rodney King is living proof of this crime. In other words, King was beaten for the color of his skin and not for the content of his character. Over 20 years ago, Martin Luther King, Jr. gave his life for equality. So why are blacks still living in slavery?

Those police officers were acquitted because King was black! It does not matter that they were guilty of acts of racism. To the jurors, King was just a nigger out of control. So he was beaten by the overseers of the plantation. I can't believe that the judge agreed with the verdict because it could have been overturned.

Now those men will go free because they can't be tried twice for the same crime. Oops, I forgot, acts of racism in this country is not a crime but being black is!

Don't get me wrong. This case will be investigated. So those men aren't totally off the hook, but this case shouldn't have gotten this far because whole country knows that they were guilty on every count that they were charged.

How could King resist arrest with four men intensively beating him in the skull? Some people, especially whites, fail to realize that the video was enough evidence to convict those men to life in prison.

They committed aggravated assault on a human being as if he were an animal. I can only imagine how many more blacks have received the same type of abuse.

Whether King was guilty or not, he didn't deserve what he got. Would he have received the same treatment if he was white?

I seriously doubt it.

My biggest question is, why was the trial moved to an all white neighborhood? And why were the jurors practically all white?

As a black person in this country, I fail to see the purpose of the transfer of the trial. Did the whites fear for those policemen lives? If so, why? They didn't think about King's life while they were beating him.

The people in the urban community are seeking justice.

MAXI'S WORLD

Maxine Reeder

They want things to go their way for once in their lives. Everyday they live the same story of police brutality. Justifying the Justifiable.

That's the attitude of every black person who have been abused by the police and the justice system.

They are angry, as I am about the justice system in this country. Obviously, this country is still racially biased despite laws to protect against such hideous crimes.

The justice system has created a way to blame blacks for every crime committed in this country. For instance, black men have been labeled by society and the media as rapists, drug dealers, druggies, and murderers.

There are some black men who commit these crimes, but compared to society as a whole, I'm sure the number is very low. In other words, not all black men are criminals.

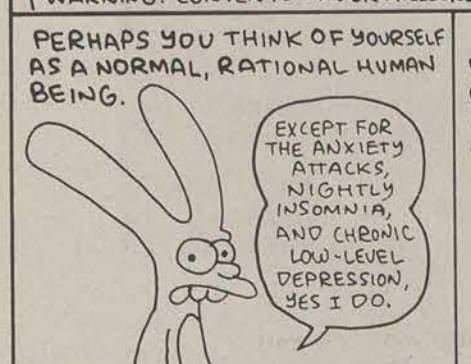

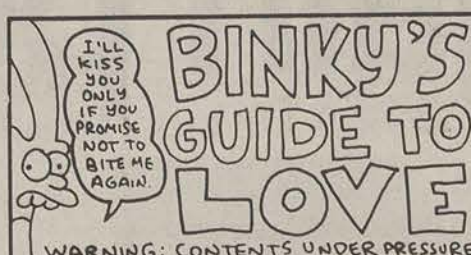

If that person hadn't taped King's beatings, I honestly believe that he would have been beaten and put in jail for a long time. That's the trend for most black men. Jail!

Even though King had most of the country on his side, he was guilty because he was black. He lives in a predominantly lower-class black urban neighborhood so it was OK to beat him. He's just another murderer, drug dealer, druggie, and rapist. What does it matter?

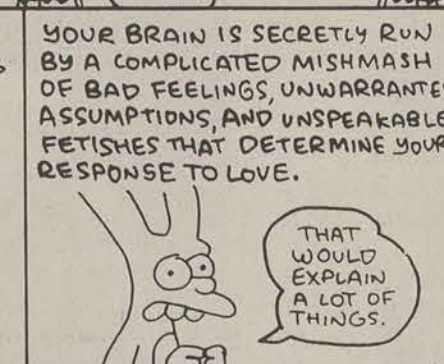

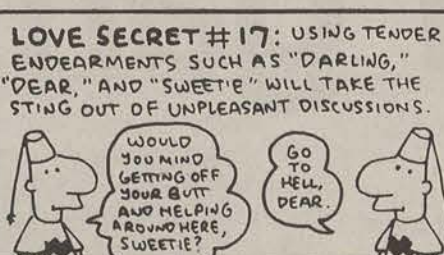

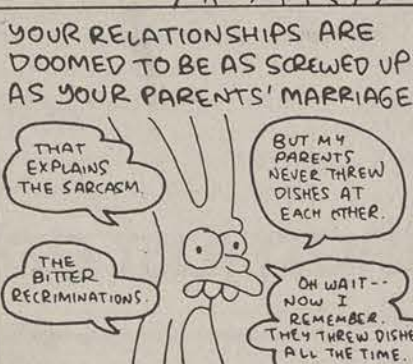

It matters a lot. That's why the black community is protesting against this blatant racism. They're waking up this racist country. Maybe it's time for a change. People are so used to covering up their true feelings. Why hide the prejudiced attitudes?

Despite what most white and blacks think, this country is still segregated. Equality is only a dream in this country.

Rodney King is a martyr for all Americans because his case demonstrates that racism still exists in this country.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

SGA election should not be declared null and void

Dear Editor,

By the time this letter is printed, I will have less than one week left in office, about this departure I have varied feelings. SGA has consumed my life for the past two and a half years, and I can honestly say that little to nothing has been done for myself.

The job of president draws little praise and great criticism, it is not a job for the thin-skinned, and even my last week is embroiled in controversy. But before I address those issues I would like to remind the students, faculty and the editorial staff of what SGA has accomplished over the last year.

We have continued to have the largest institutional voter registration drive in the state, we have raised over $3,500 for the United Way in two fund drives, we have financially helped over 75 organizations and helped several more establish themselves on campus.

We have founded the beginnings of the county's first philanthropic file system and taken strides toward a teacher's critique system. When students complained about traffic congestion SGA persisted until a traffic officer was assigned to direct vehicles trying to leave the Landrum lot.

We have cosponsored programs with PAWS, Triangle, the Health Center, the International Club and numerous other organizations. And we have passed legislation that will bring GSU the first student funded, student run, Student Recreation Center. (Just to name a few.)

Despite the work of the officers, staff and senators, the George-Anne (not an SGA candidate) has, from some lofty state, decided that April 23's election should be null and void. While I could spend your money aggravating this situation with continued mudslinging, I will not stoop to the level of those that criticize.

I will admit in hindsight other measures should have been taken in handling the ballots, but I stand by my instructions to those at the polling place. We are not trying to blame anyone for analyzing, we do our job as best we can. If members of the editorial staff feel they can do better I encourage them to run. (If anyone has any suggestions for handling elections better, please stop by and tell us Tuesday nights at 5:30 in room 242.)

Let it be known, however; that I do not believe the elections should be contested. If we do so, we will be forced to spend more of your money, take up more of your time and by stripping away the offices already rightfully earned by those thirty men and women we will cost them more money and further psychological abuse. You the students have elected a wonderful SGA balanced sexually and racially, something that was needed. (Note: the editorial staff of the G-A is entirely white.)

On a more personal note students have asked me if I am angry at being called "childish" or being "slammed" by the editors, my answer is a resounding yes! As I told Mr. Witte I encourage criticism but libel is another story. My professionalism has been questioned, but I would like to return blows on this issue. Last quarter I wrote Mr. Witte concerning the price of ad space after several campus organizations (you) complained to SGA.

Mr. Witte responded last week saying that if he had felt it was important enough he would have responded the day after the letter. Who is he to judge importance; if the students of GSU have a problem they receive my full attention, Mr. Witte the students fund 40 percent of their paper they deserve your full attention at all times.

I am a firm believer that bad press is better than no press, if it were not for the George-Anne's editorial staff backing candidates opposing me in the past I may never have won: thank you. I do hope however that future editors and future SGAs have a better relationship than the past, it is all behind us, and I pray that we can all work together to build a better GSU.

In our small part of the world the George-Anne has chosen to be the student watchdog (I'm sure we would rather read news stories instead of racial editorials or stories about talking swans), but I would like to remind each of you that both SGA and the George-Anne are funded by you, speak up and come to our meetings or write to the editor, he promised me that you would be heard, unedited in full.

I thank each student for giving me the unique opportunity to serve you.

Chris Clark
SGA President 1991-92

Violence only breeds more violence, no solutions

Dear Editor,

What is happening to our country? We have babies being dumped into trash cans by teenage mothers. We have babies born addicted to crack and abandoned in hospitals. And, as if these problems are not bad enough, we have riots and the murders of innocent people as a reaction to the decision of a trial court.

In Los Angeles alone, not including Atlanta and other cities, there were 29 people killed and more than 1200 others injured as a result of rioting in protest of the jury's decision to acquit three of the officers and convict only one in the Rodney King trial.

The outraged protesters took to the streets of their own community chanting "no justice, no peace," and then proceeded to break the windows of local businesses, loot those businesses, burn the buildings, and commit numerous violent acts including pulling people out of their cars and beating them and attacking fire-fighters who tried to extinguish the burning buildings. What can these actions possibly accomplish?

The only results of such violent actions are more violence, more economic loss in the community itself due to loss businesses, and an affirmation to the people who favor the verdict and the bigots who see the destructive, senseless actions perpetrated by this particular community. Why do these angered citizens not try to work within the system, or at least let the system work?

The recent trial was only the beginning of the fight. In the future there will be a civil suit against the officers by Mr. King, a disciplinary hearing within the L.A.P.D., and possibly a civil rights suit brought against the officers by the Federal Government.

So please people, let the system work! I am just as appalled by the decision of the jury as anyone, but I did not see all of the evidence presented at the trial, just as most of the nation did not see it. Therefore, until the entire story unfolds, let the professionals handle it.

The bottom line here, and what literally sucks the life out of a young man trying to "do the right thing," is that the average person does not have the intelligence or the common sense to his anger and frustrations in a positive, controlled manner that will bring about some positive changes.

Without these characteristics, people react in a destructive manner that will ultimately bring about nothing more than the destruction of our country.

One day in the not so distant past, a Russian leader stated that Communism would destroy America from within. The way things are turning out, with Communism on the decline, it looks like we will do the job ourselves.

Extreme views: Finding the heart of America's racial problems

By the time you read this, there will have already been hundreds of thousands of articles concerning the Rodney King verdict and the resulting riots — with more to come.

If we are to pull anything good out of the past week's events, we must start putting a hell of a lot more effort into healing the rifts between all races and insuring that people are not treated differently because of their race.

Easier said than done? Maybe.

The general impressions I had before the Rodney King verdict was that most whites believed that equality was well on its way to being achieved — particularly since they did not see themselves as being racists.

On the other hand, most blacks believed that racism was not only alive and well, but being institutionalized — exemplified by the rise of President George Bush on the wave of Willie Horton ads.

I believe that the Rodney King verdict has clearly shown that we indeed have a problem, and if we don't work to solve it, our generation has a lot more than just riots to look forward to.

Consider these different

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK...

Gary A. Witte

happenings at GSU this week:

- I overheard one white student in my class say "I don't care what anyone says, blacks cause most of the crime."

- I was told about a black student waving a newspaper with the "Verdict: Not Guilty" headline in white student's faces and asking "Why are you beating us?"

- Students across GSU spent entire periods having actual class discussions on the verdict. Not lectures mind you, but actual discussions between professors and students.

Now, which of these do you think actually was a constructive move toward solving the problem?

Take a minute if you want. I'll wait.

The first two are obviously extreme views, because it is obvious that most blacks are not criminally-bent trouble-makers just as most whites are not institutionally-inclined racists.

But the extreme views are at the heart of the problem. Each plays off the other in a deadly game of one-upmanship, like two children calling each other names in the playground — harmless until one hits the other.

But now that the blows have been struck it is time to ignore the Rev. Al Sharptons and the David Dukes, and stop thinking in terms of "us" and "them" — but start thinking in terms of "we."

The playground is big enough to accommodate all of us.

which had been stationed near the campuses were leaving the area and some officers were boarding buses. Students could be seen moving on the Morehouse campus, but most seemed to be staying in their dormitories.

During the afternoon violence, students overturned two cars and set one on fire; later they overturned a police car and looted a campus bookstore. Students threw glass and rocks from third- and fourth-floor windows of a dormitory. Two police buses full of protesters were driven from the campus.

Later, about 150 looters rampaged through liquor stores and supermarkets near the campus; students said the shops were owned by whites and Asians. Students carted away cartons of cigarettes and bottles of liquor, beer and other drinks.

A Morehouse student said the anger was directed at whites and Asians.

"They have raped our community," said 20-year-old Nicholas Fuller of St. Louis, a student at Morehouse. "This is our best way of paying them back. They one of her classes part of a videotape about the King case.

"One student said kill the white person. Still another, after viewing some of the rioting in L.A. clapped; she liked to see them burn and loot," Merrick said.

The acquittal of the officers has prompted the Justice Department to look into the possibilities of a suit based on a violation of King's civil rights. King could also file a civil lawsuit against the officers and the Los Angeles po-come here and rape and pilfer us for all our money. This ain't gonna hurt them one bit."

Approximately 500 students milled around a two-block area of the campuses throughout the afternoon. Some chanted at police to leave.

The close proximity of officers became a sore point.

"Is this 1992 or 1960? I never thought I'd see this - not this type of police force. We have no weapons; they have sticks and guns," said Clark Atlanta student Jeff Borders, 21, of St. Louis.

The standoff followed peaceful demonstrations on the campuses as black student leaders grappled with their outrage over the Los Angeles verdict and their desire to set an example of nonviolence.

"They're angry, they're restless. It's a peculiar age," said Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, who was at the campus. "I not only understand their anger, I appreciate it. But what frightens me is if we aren't careful ... they may have to learn the wrong way."

lice department, which could be for several million dollars.

Dr. Reese added, "This violence, personal injury, death, and property damage, just makes the gap between folks wider and the possibility of understanding people slimmer and basically makes things worse. I'm not saying that we don't have problems on this campus. I don't know the depth of all the problems. I hope that we could work those things out without resorting to violence."
