Black leaders, students come together in Atlanta

ATLANTA (AP) — Black students and old-line civil rights leaders are together enough to realize they still have some philosophical differences nearly two weeks after the May 1 racial violence at the Atlanta University Center.

Members of Students for African American Empowerment met with Southern Christian Leadership Conference President Joseph Lowery, U.S. Rep. John Lewis, D-Ga. and members of the Concerned Black Clergy on Monday at Paschal's Restaurant.

They prayed together, joked with one another and echoed amens.

"Three D's come to my mind: demons, destruction and division," Lowery said. "Whom the demons must destroy, they must first divide. But we must turn to each other, and not on one another."

A week earlier, many students claimed the traditional civil rights leaders were out of touch with today's youth.

The student protest was in response to the acquittal of Los Angeles police officers accused of beating a black motorist. It turned into a violent conflict with police and some whites.

Governor opposes storing plutonium at Savannah site

ATLANTA (AP) — Gov. Zell Miller said Tuesday that Georgia opposes an Energy Department proposal to use the Savannah River Site in South Carolina to store plutonium extracted from dismantled nuclear weapons.

Miller said in a letter to Energy Department officials he wasn't satisfied with studies showing the storage would have no significant environmental impact.

All of the potential risks, including possible accidents during transport, haven't been evaluated, he said.

The governor released the letter during an afternoon news conference.

"I think we've got to have more information. That's what we're saying," he told reporters.

The Energy Department, trying to decide what to do with highly radioactive plutonium triggers removed from nuclear weapons, is considering stockpiling them at the Savannah River Site on the Georgia border.

Among other objections, Miller said the plant is a nuclear materials production facility, not a weapons complex. Fonda is no-show at Citadel graduation ceremony

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Jane Fonda avoided a protest Saturday at The Citadel by deciding against accompanying husband and media mogul Ted Turner to the military college's graduation.

Turner gave the commencement address at the school, where his three sons graduated.

"This is not just a college. This is The Citadel," Turner said.

Eight people showed up outside the school to protest Fonda, carrying signs saying, "Jane Call Home... 1-800-Call-Hanoi."

A group calling themselves "Veterans Against Fonda" wanted the actress to stay off the college's campus because of her visit to Hanoi during the Vietnam War.

Students discuss racism at vigil George-Anne accused of inconsistent coverage of blacks, whites

By Francine Amaker
Staff Writer

Students gathered in Hanner Fieldhouse at 8 p.m. Wednesday, in a candlelight vigil to discuss the issues of racism and unity among the African-American race.

The theme of the vigil, "Diversity and Unity" stressed how everyone, particularly African-Americans, must come together, combat racism and deal with the black agenda. The vigil was a peaceful demonstration as opposed to the violent reactions of the Rodney King verdict.

Members of the administration, including Dr. Nicholas Henry, GSU president and Dr. Jack Nolen, vice president for student affairs, were on hand to voice their opinions to the audience.

"We need to recognize our differences, we need to acknowledge our differences, and we need to discuss our differences," said Dr. Nolen.

GSU African-American students were also on hand to present their interpretations and insights on racism. They were Philana Griffin, Patrick Harrison, president of the NAACP, Nicole Henderson, an SGA senator elect, Keith "Preacher" Brown, a GSU graduate student, and Charisse Chisholm, an SGA senator and executive VP elect.

Griffin expressed her concerns about the association between the GSU golf team and the Forest Heights country club. Griffin brought out her feelings about the faculty members who belong to the country club.

"Faculty members should rescind their membership at the country club," said Griffin.

Harrison voiced his opinions on how the African-American race should unite to combat the racism that exists in America.

"We need to come together and deal with the black agenda," she said, "Without black America, white America can't exist."

Both Griffin and Harrison conveyed their feelings about how African-American students are treated by the George-Anne. Griffin said the paper should report more of the positive accomplishments of African-American students and should be more consistent in how they treat white and black students.

Griffin cited the difference between the treatment of GSU football player Eugene Scott's drug arrest and the treatment of another white student's arrest for trafficking marijuana.

Harrison said the George-Anne was a racist paper and wondered how such a paper could be allowed on campus.

Brown expressed his views on being an African-American in a rousing speech that received a standing ovation. Brown summed up many of his views in one powerful statement.

"Being black is an asset, not a liability," said Brown.

Chisholm concluded by presenting a challenge:

"It's up to you sitting in the audience to make a change," said Chisholm. "I challenge you to know your purpose, to know what you stand for. It's time for us to wake up and make a commitment."

The vigil ended with the audience converging on the floor with lighted candles and singing the National Negro Anthem, "Lift Every Voice and Sing." The vigil was sponsored by the Black Student Alliance and SGA.

Survey: majority of students do not agree with verdict

G-A Staff Reports

A recent non-scientific survey of GSU students and faculty members shows both agreement and disagreement between blacks and whites on the Rodney King trial and resulting aftermath.

Most of those surveyed, regardless of race, agree that King did not deserve the beating he received by the Los Angeles Police Department.

When asked who should be accountable for the acquittal of the police officers, the judicial system and jury received most of the blame from both blacks and whites.

Twice as many blacks than whites felt the decision to drop the charges against the police was racially motivated. Also, almost all blacks, as opposed to 66 percent of whites, felt that the King issue and aftermath were racial issues.

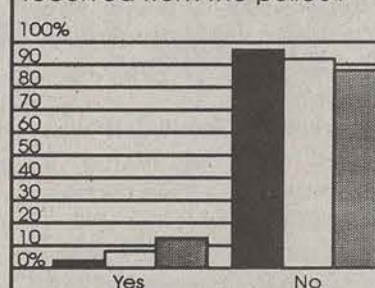

Nearly three-fourths of blacks said they think harassment and unjust use of force will increase due to the verdict; but only 19 percent of whites agreed.

One percent of whites and 36 percent of blacks felt the violent outbreak was justified.

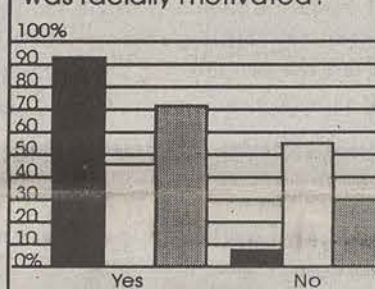

Two-thirds of whites and all blacks surveyed said Kings should be granted a retrial.

The results were compiled by GSU students Michael Martin and Jeffery A. Rogers, who surveyed 192 students and faculty members in the study.

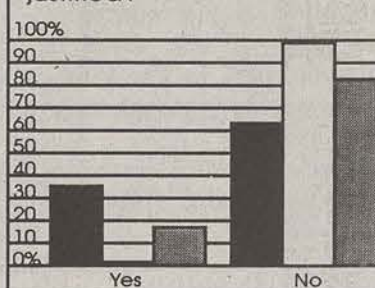

Do you believe Rodney King deserved the beating he received from the police?

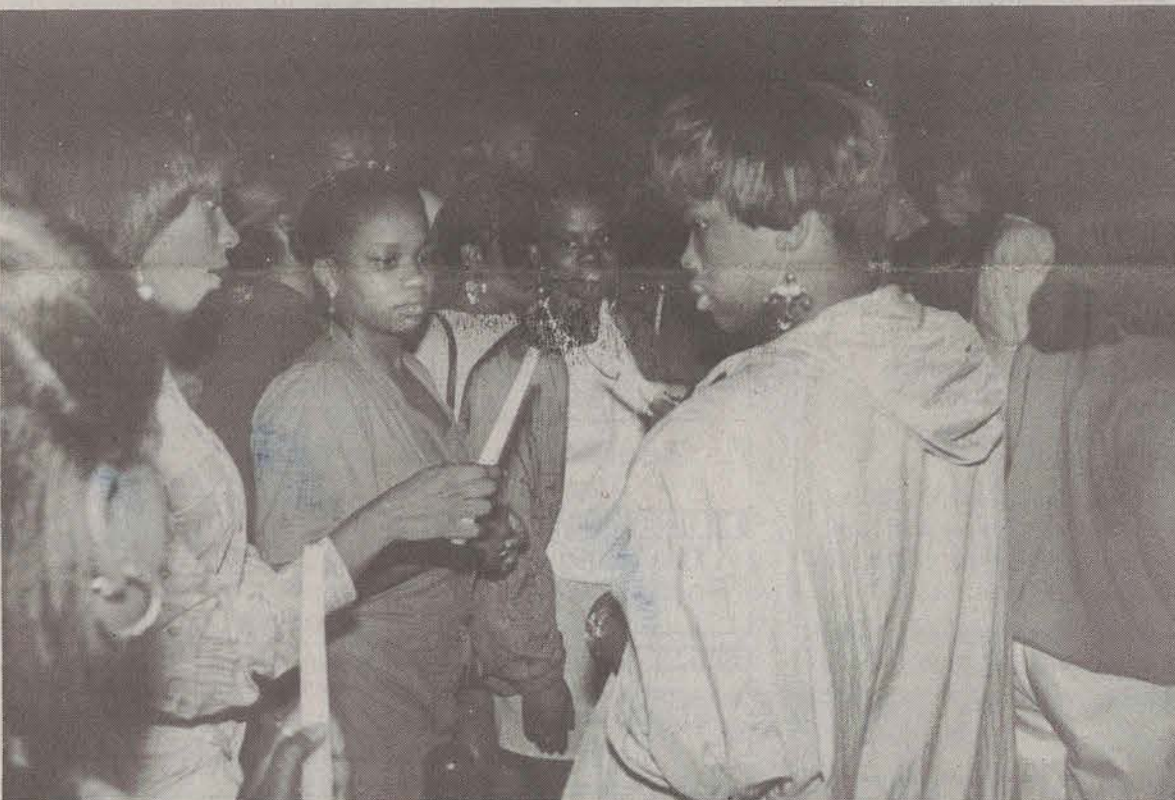

Do you believe the decision to release the charges from the police was racially motivated?

Do you think the looting and violence outbreak is justified?

Legend: Black (dark bar), White (light bar), Other (grey bar). Survey compiled by Michael Martin and Jeffery A. Rogers.

At the end of the evening, students gathered in the center of the Hanner Gym as they lit their candles in a show of unity. The candle-lighting was followed by the singing of the National Negro Anthem, "Lift Every Voice and Sing." (Photo by Randy Trujillo)

Four arrested in connection with armed robbery in Union parking lot

By Dennis Smith
Staff Writer

GSU Police have arrested four suspects in connection with the Jan. 15 armed robbery of a GSU student in the Union parking lot.

Bonny Williams, 17, of Sylvania, and Chad Moore, 20, of Statesboro, were arrested and charged with armed robbery, according to GSU police.

Earlick Henry of Pulaski and Tyrone Atkinson of Metter, both 18, were charged with being a party to the crime of armed robbery.

On Jan. 15, a female student was approached by two men at approximately 7:30 p.m. in the University Union commuter parking lot. She alleged one of the men pulled a sawed-off shotgun and demanded money.

Police said the suspects reportedly took a green bookbag containing a textbook and a wallet with $17 and a number of credit cards.

University Police Sgt. Guy Sharp said that use of the victim's ATM card led to the arrests.

According to Sharp, Williams and Moore were arrested in Screven County. Henry and Atkinson were arrested at Statesboro High School, where they are students.

"We arrested one subject and once he began talking, we realized the others were involved," Sharp said.

Sharp said none of the stolen property was recovered.

Williams and Moore are being held in the Bulloch County jail.

The case will go before the Bulloch County grand jury on May 22.

Study shows brighter job outlook in Georgia

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — There are more jobs for Georgia's high school and college graduates than three years ago, but the number is still not enough, a University of Georgia study shows.

"This is the first crop of college and high school grads walking into a recovery, rather than a recession," Jeffrey M. Humphreys, director of the school's economic forecasting project, said Monday. "It's not going to be easy, but they're not going to have to wait quite as long."

There should be 5,000 new jobs in Georgia this year, compared with a loss of 49,000 jobs last year, he said.

Three years ago, the nation's economy was headed into a recession.

In Georgia, the rate of job creation slowed to 2.2 percent in 1989, to 1.7 percent in 1990 and to zero last year as the state lost 1.7 percent of its jobs.

Humphreys said he expects the national economy to expand this year at 1 percent to 2 percent.

The Atlanta labor market is rebounding a bit more quickly than the rest of the state, he said.

"The source of this strength is both the manufacturing sector and local government and fewer job losses in construction," said Humphreys.

He also said he expects the economy to speed up by 1993 with businesses creating 46,000 new jobs. Until then, although the unemployment rate should begin to fall slowly late in 1992, it will still be tough to find jobs for many people now out of work, he said.

Georgene Bess named Professor of the Year

By Kimberly R. Hill
Staff Writer

Georgene Bess, a GSU English professor, has been named the 1992 Professor of the Year by GSU students.

The announcement was made at the annual Honors Day program held May 6. Bess received roughly 1,000 votes by students and won the close race by merely one vote.

"We think it's wonderful," said Jim Nichols, head of the Department of English and Philosophy. "She is a popular instructor who works very hard and is committed to teaching."

The event, sponsored by Gamma Beta Phi, an honor fraternity, gives students the opportunity to recognize their professors. Students cast their votes during spring quarter registration.

Many students and faculty feel that Bess is an influence both inside and outside of the classroom.

"Although I've never had her as a teacher, she has always been willing to help others," said Lynwood Holmes, music director of the African-American Choir. She is a true African-American scholar who captivates students of all races with her knowledge and cultural awareness. In the words of Dr. Maya Angelou, she is a true phenomenal woman."

Professor of the Year has been a tradition which students have actively participated in for over 20 years at GSU.

Bess was very surprised, yet honored to be selected as professor of the year. She enjoys teaching and feels that her relationship with her students makes her job more interesting. She demands class participation and encourages her students to

Teens will help pick party's nominee

ATLANTA (AP) — Before two Georgia teen-agers even get a chance to vote in their first presidential election this November, they will be casting ballots in July at the Democratic National Convention.

Marc Glenn and Kenny Blake are the state's two youngest delegates to the convention. Both are pledged to support Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton.

Blake, who works at a fast-food restaurant after school and turned 18 in time to vote for Clinton in Georgia's March 3 primary, will represent the 6th Congressional District at the convention.

"I lay awake at night looking forward to it," the Jonesboro youth said.

Glenn, of Sandy Springs, turned 18 two weeks after the presidential primary. "I love politics," he said. "Politics and baseball are basically my passions."

He decided to run for a seat representing the 4th District almost on a whim after he saw a mass-mailing flier sent to his parents, Jimmy and Dale Glenn.

Winning it, he said, is "still quite a shocker." The victory came the morning after prom night for the senior at Fulton County's Riverwood High School.

"That was the most exciting time — next to the Braves winning the pennant," he said.

New horseback riding class popular

By Teresa Roach

With a soft southern drawl and a gentle manner, Dale Deal leads her horse, Jet, out of the stables and into the pen. The horse, a well-groomed gelding, responds without protest. "We carefully selected our horses to make sure they were easy to work with," says Deal.

Mrs. Deal and her husband Johnny are the instructors of horseback riding, a new and unique course at GSU.

The course began this quarter and has already received a great response. "We were so excited when we learned that the first three classes filled up on the first day," says Mrs. Deal.

This quarter there are six different classes which meet once weekly for an hour and forty minutes. Class size is limited to five students per class so that plenty of individual attention can be given to students.

The Deals own eleven horses all together; six of them are used for riding during the classes. All are registered quarter horses and were purchased with the intention of having beginners learn to ride on them. "We've never had any trouble with these horses," says Mrs. Deal, "Not even one incident."

Most of the students have had little experience with horses. This quarter all of the classes are learning Western style riding, and the Deals start with the basics and build from there.

The first thing taught is how to catch the horse and halter and saddle him. Grooming, feeding, washing, hoof care, and conformation, or how the horse is built, are also taught. The three gaits taught in Western riding are the walk, jog, and lope.

The Deals videotaped the students on horseback to allow them to see their stance and bearing in relation to the horse. This proved to be a successful technique, says Mrs. Deal.

The Deals hope to teach hunt seat, or English riding, and also trail riding in upcoming quarters. Hunt seat will not have a prerequisite, but trail riding students must have previously taken either Western or hunt seat. If approved, the trail riding class will feature rides in areas near the Deals' house. "There are plenty of places to ride around here," says Mr. Deal.

The Deals have had plenty of experience with horses. Mrs. Deal got her first horse when she was twelve years old, and has been involved with them ever since. The couple's four daughters all had horses while growing up, and several years ago the Deals began to show horses.

The Western class will be offered summer quarter, although it was not included in the registration schedule. The course is called PEA 117. The cost of the course is $200, and the students seem to think that the cost is well worth it. "I love it," says freshman Molly Slocumb. "Compared to other places, this is not expensive. You end up saving about $700."

Symptoms of lactose intolerance can be mitigated with help

Lactose (milk sugar) intolerance is a common cause of diarrhea among adults. Although the intestines of babies produce the enzyme lactase, which digests lactose, this enzyme often disappears around the time of weaning, when it is no longer necessary.

In northern European populations, only about 5% of the people are lactose intolerant. In Africa and Asia, over 90% of the population are unable to digest lactose.

When a lactose intolerant individual consumes milk or a milk-containing food, lactose is not broken down by the intestinal secretions. Instead, bacteria living in the intestines use the lactose for food. These bacteria produce hydrogen gas as they digest the lactose, which results in intestinal gas.

HEALTH AND FITNESS

Donald Jordan

The most accepted remedy for lactose intolerant individuals is to avoid foods containing lactose. An alternative is to use the fairly new product called 'Lactaid' which was developed to give a person the lactase enzyme in an effort to reduce the symptoms of lactose intolerance. Because many people rely on milk for their supply of vitamin D, 'Lactaid' is an excellent supplement to reduce any intestinal distress.

Newspaper is not racist

I hate repeating myself. Yet once again I find myself defending the George-Anne, which is seen by some to be the chief malefactor of the racial problems that exist on this campus.

Stay with me now, this is the interesting part.

We are seen by some as that "racist paper" that blows up news stories and pictures because they have to do with African-Americans, and then doesn't give equally negative coverage to other ethnic groups.

We are seen by others as that "destructive paper" because we kicked up such a fuss about the SGA elections, and have historically been the critic of the Student Government's performances.

We are seen by even more as that "liberal paper" because of some of this year's institutional editorials and the opinions of a number of our columnists (including myself) appear to be somewhat - gasp - liberal.

Patrick Harrison, president of the campus NAACP, said in a speech this week that he wondered why such a racist paper was allowed to exist on this campus. Philana Griffin, a former columnist for the George-Anne, basically stated that our advisor should "oversee" everything that goes in - regardless of what student editors want.

It was told how we published Eugene Scott's photo on the front page when he was arrested, yet failed to do the same when GSU football player Pat Parr was arrested for a similar drug offense - despite the fact we did run both the pictures, with both stories on the front page.

Please feel free to compare the July 9, 1991 issue to the April 7 issue of this year.

Of course, most of the flak lately has been over the racist letter in the May 8 edition. Some believe I should not have published it at all, and that it merely adds fuel to interracial hatred. Others believe that it should have been run with the racist comments edited out.

God help us, we even had a few calls that not only approved of the letter, but liked it.

So much for America.

But I had a reason for publishing the letter. I wanted to show the depth of prejudice that still exists on this campus and in America (the George-Anne aside for the moment). However much you personally know about racism, the fact remains there are few who would acknowledge that it exists in people they know - much less discuss it.

In addition, the letter writer clearly shows what it is like to be ignorant, narrow-minded, and poorly informed - not to mention being a self-admitted racist. The letter clearly deserves only ridicule, even from those few who agreed with the King verdict.

But this type of attitude is out there, and we must confront it, not sweep it under the rug. One cannot defeat racism by ignoring it or by taking away its freedom of speech. This is a war of ideas, and we must show that racism is not just politically incorrect, but intellectual suicide - if not the suicide of the human in all of us.

We must use the truth in our arguments to show the lies of racism. If I had not run the letter, none of this could have been dealt with by you, the reader, or the huge numbers of people who wrote in response.

One letter in this issue compares the running of the racist letter to yelling "Fire" in a crowded theater, which is where freedom of speech stops. Yet I have never heard it said that yelling "Fire" when there was indeed a fire, was wrong or illegal.

Which brings us back to the George-Anne. I cannot convince any of you by words alone, what I know to be the truth.

I can only tell you that I have never had any agenda to promote negative stories because they had to do with blacks. The George-Anne staff does not have that sort of agenda.

Period.

Of course, you only have my word for this, and I daresay

Letter was stereotyping; should have been censored

Dear Editor,

We are dismayed at the content and tone of the anonymous letter printed in the May 8 issue of the George-Anne in the Op-Ed section entitled "King verdict was the correct one; rioting is dumb." Regardless of one's opinion on the King verdict, it is surely unnecessary to insult an entire segment of the population.

The sentiment expressed in this letter is unfounded racist stereotyping, the author's disclaimer notwithstanding. The statements presented as facts are erroneous and founded on hate, fear, and frustration.

They hurt people. They breed even more hate, fear, and frustration in others. That they are expressed by someone who should know better as a result of a college education is especially tragic.

Moreover, we question the editorial judgement of the George-Anne in printing such inflammatory material. You have the right and responsibility to reject patently inappropriate letters and other submissions. Printing this material is the equivalent of crying "Fire" in a crowded theatre.

We as behavioral scientists and faculty members feel compelled to state our strong objections to such sentiments and to the ignorance on which they are based.

Violence is a symptom

Dear Editor,

As concerned faculty at GSU we are disgusted and repulsed by the letter entitled "King verdict was the right one; rioting is dumb." The letter merely reinforces the growing feeling among a number of concerned people that racism is on the rise in this country as socioeconomic problems increase.

This seems to be taking place at the same time that the public appears willing to trade civil liberties for law and order. The combination is deadly.

While none of us condones the violence that took place in South Central Los Angeles, as educators we are obliged to consider why such rioting takes place.

Riots, whether they take place in downtown L.A., Johannesburg, South Africa or Seoul, South Korea, are often symptomatic of the alienation of groups in these countries - alienation caused by years and sometimes centuries of indifference, abuse and plain neglect.

Collective violence is a way of demanding that systems that have perpetuated such alienation remedy unjust socioeconomic and political conditions. We have seen this happen in the U.S. in the 1960's when similar acts drew the attention and the response of the Kennedy and Johnson administrations.

However, the last decade has been characterized by a noticeable lack of such interest on the part of the leadership and the result is - South Central L.A.

It is in our collective interest to examine this message being sent by the poor and the disenfranchised.

It is not in our interest to engage in the kind of comments printed earlier in this paper.

It seems to us that the author's facile comments about the verdict and the rioting that followed were merely a smoke-screen for venting racist views. One gets the impression that as far as the author is concerned the facts don't matter and he/she will use his/her racism to color and confirm his/her racial hatred.

We hope that there are few people on this campus who support such prejudiced and potentially dangerous opinions.

Letter writer is a coward

Dear Editor,

This is addressed to the racist coward who thinks the Rodney King verdict was just, and that rioting blacks were regressing the way of the jungle." [George-Anne, May 8] If you really feel this way, why don't you have the courage to stand up for your beliefs and reveal your name.

The Rodney King verdict made a mockery of the American "justice" system. Anyone with a conscience can see that. As for your comments, they are not worthy of discussion. The words of a coward are worth nothing. The words of a racist coward are worth even less.

Do not resent all whites

Dear Editor,

If possible I would like to respond to the letter submitted in Friday's George-Anne. ["King verdict the correct one; rioting is dumb, May 8] The things that this person wrote exemplifies why most black people resent white people. It's a shame that there are still white supremacists out there but I guess there will always prejudice in the world.

When I read that letter Friday with my co-worker, who is a good friend and black, I found myself having to defend myself as a white person and other white people.

I don't agree with how my ancestors treated the black race or how people have been prejudiced towards the blacks through the many decades and even today. I don't feel that I should be stereotyped because I'm white or feel responsible for other people's prejudices.

I accept people for who they are and not their color. I guess I see now how some black people feel they are stereotyped because of their color and I feel it's not fair.

If I could I would take "prejudice" out of societies vocabulary, but unfortunately it will always be there. It's even in my own family.

Hopefully all of the black students who read Friday's letter will not resent other white students. I don't understand why we can't all treat each other equally and love each other.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Letter provoked only pity instead of anger; writer suffers from ignorance

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to the person who believed that the Rodney King verdict was just and rioting is dumb.

I think the reaction you wanted to provoke by writing your article was anger but you have instead provoked pity from those of us who were taught better. Why? Because, Mr. Doe, you are suffering from a social disease that is, by far, more detrimental to our society than any crime you claim us primitive blacks could commit.

It is called ignorance and the only cure is to educate yourself. Since the school system has obviously failed you, why don't we start right here...

You stated that blacks used the Rodney King verdict as an excuse to go out and steal because that is all us blacks wanted to do in the first place.

I, along with many others, watched the L.A. riots extensively, and I too was disgusted. But unless you are color-blind (which you obviously are not) you had to have noticed that it was not just blacks that were looting.

There were many Hispanics, Chinese, and yes, whites who were also participating in the looting.

How is it that you failed to see this, or is it like the video tape of Rodney King where we are not seeing what we think we are seeing?

You also stated that it was about time blacks got off of welfare and stood on their own. Obviously you are not aware, Mr. Doe, that there are more whites on welfare than blacks.

Are you a college student? If you are then you are part of the welfare system.

The Board of Regents pays three-fourths of the matriculation fee for every student who attends this school.

That means that even if you do not receive a Pell grant or student loan, you still receive $3,600 from the "welfare" system each academic year. This is much more than families on welfare receive yearly to pay for their essential needs.

Only one percent of the taxes we pay actually goes to families totally dependent on welfare, but since you feel so strongly against the welfare system then I am sure that you are ready to correct this injustice by paying the Board of Regents back the money they have given you.

Most people, black or white, do not condone the violence in L.A., but most of us do at least understand the anger behind it.

Contrary to popular belief, this is not the land of equal opportunity for both blacks and whites.

The reason more black males are in jail than in college is not because blacks commit more crimes, it is because their innocence or guilt is decided by the same judicial system that allowed a black man to be savagely beaten and yet his perpetrators were set free.

In your article you made a reference to blacks regressing to the ways of the jungle.

It is sad to admit, but many blacks feel like animals in a jungle.

When you were describing the Rodney King incident, you made it sound like Mr. King was some wild animal being tagged on "Wild Kingdom."

We blacks are human beings just like our white counterparts. And yes, society does owe us something.

It owes us the chance to be an attributable part of this society, not because we are black, but because this is our right as American citizens.

If we are denied this, not only do we pay, but society pays also, because another generation of great minds, talent and ideas will be wasted.

I am glad you have written this article because it gives whites the chance to see why blacks sometimes act so hostile.

I don't think that your article represents how the majority of whites really feel, just like the rioters or the looters do not represent how all blacks really are.

Educate yourself, Mr. Doe, and then you will look back and see how ignorant you really sound.

Keep writing articles to let those whites who say that racism does not exist know that, by denying there is a problem, people like you will be the end result.

Can you comprehend a black person writing a letter that doesn't condemn violence and advocates the races working together?

Nah, I guess not, since it's an ignorance thing.

Michele K. Lattimore

Writer's lack of intelligence shown

Dear Editor,

In response to the article titled "King verdict was the correct one; rioting is dumb." [May 8] I don't condone violence, but I also don't condone ignorance either. You are supposed to be a college student who's understanding of major issues are more diverse. Not!

You are an ignorant racist asshole. How can you say the verdict was the correct one? The man was treated as if he were an animal. Shocked with 50,000 volts, handcuffed and beaten, false statements on official police documents and reliable testimonies from other officers. How can you say the verdict was correct?

I sympathize with you, because the educational system has failed you. Since the beginning of time, history has been altered to show only one point of view, my brother. Yes, you are my brother because Eve was African and God created us both from her. (Don't get mad!)

You need to stop watching Archie Bunker and take your behind to the library and read some books, broaden your intelligence on cultures other than your own.

"Primitive." That was such an ugly word. I guess slavery wasn't primitive? The Caucasian slave owners, raped, beat, tortured and killed African-Americans. This treatment was primitive. I guess those were the good old days. Not!

Remember the term that you learned in American history, indentured servant? They also received the same treatment as slaves, and they were from the Caucasian race. Throughout history many Caucasian-Americans have cheated, stolen, and killed innocent people. But this is not considered a primitive act?

Aren't you being selfish? You brought us over here in chains on a boat, [and] now you want us to swim back. Nah, I guess it's a white thing, we wouldn't understand. Please open your eyes my brother, the negative relationship between the races don't stem from the majority, it's the minority like yourself who are the problem.

To all my brothers and sisters, no matter what race that you are, who are reading this article and the many others. We are all God's children, the violence was wrong, but the voices were heard.

Don't allow stupid racist articles like the one I'm responding to make you angry. Dig deep within your souls and allow your positive actions to speak for you. Because we should not judge people by the color of their skin, we should judge them by what is within.

Writer was racist; not proud white

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to that B.S. which I read in the last issue of the George-Anne about how the verdict was right, and how blacks were so horrible. ["King verdict was the right one; rioting is dumb," May 8] You, my friend, have a serious problem, and you need to wake up and smell the shit that you're spreading.

If those "pigs" had chased Rodney King from L.A. to Statesboro he still shouldn't have received that much brutality. It was definitely uncalled for, and the only reason it took place was because the police didn't want some "nigger" running from them, and making them look like fools. What the hell kind of police force does crap like that? I guess you only get hit 10 times for a busted headlight.

Although it shouldn't matter, unless you're a racist ass, I am a white guy, and I believe - as does everyone - in saying you deserve what you work for. You have stepped over the very fine line of being a racist and being a proud white person (I assume you're white.)

You've said some very disturbing things, and I'm not so sure that your heart was in them. Neither am I sure that you will fight for what your believe.

You alluded to African-American people being lazy and living on welfare. I believe the chief reason African-American people can't get jobs is because the "big wheels" have the same racist views as you do.

Americans have found a way to hide their racism from everyone else, and this has finally come into focus. You need to re-evaluate your life and make some changes before you get shot trying to loot from someone.

Oh, another thing, I don't think that I would get much enjoyment from looting, shooting others, burning down buildings, and beating the hell out of total strangers; so I would appreciate it if you wouldn't put words in my mouth. I think the word "honky" came into existence so we could describe people like you.

It seemed to work for that guy, so here it goes. I know that the George-Anne doesn't like to print stuff like this but I'm not afraid to rock the delicate balance.

You said that the verdict only gives African-American people a reason to riot, but it seems that it has also given you a chance to criticize the African-American race.

As a solution to your problem, "I coming to your house with a black man, a Jewish man, and a family of Vietnamese, we're going to sit down, and we're going to watch 'Do the Right Thing' until we get it right. And guess who's making the popcorn. You!" (Comedian Dennis Leary)

Alan Johnson

Columnist was guilty of reverse racism; verdict should unite all races

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to the article, "The crime of being black" in the May 5 issue of the George-Anne. There are several statements that I feel need to be addressed.

First of all, I don't think anyone is capable of ASKING to be born into a country. That is like asking to be born white or born rich, it is completely an absurd statement and is not even the issue!

Secondly, Maxine Reeder spent half her time pointing the finger at every single white person. Comments like, "some people, especially whites fail to see that the video was not enough evidence..." What gives her the right to express the opinions of other people? Can she read minds?

And I have a little surprise for Reeder: this country is not only racially biased against blacks. What about the white truck driver that was brutally beaten by blacks. Why can't we express our outrage not at the color of King's skin, but at the brutality of the crime committed?

This unfortunate incident should unite whites and blacks, as well as ALL AMERICANS, instead of putting us against each other. People like Reeder who are so quick to put the blame on other people only intensify this problem!

And by the way, in case Reeder hasn't noticed, the black community isn't the only one protesting this brutal crime. When Reeder asks, "Why hide these prejudiced attitudes?" She certainly failed to hide her blatant anti-white prejudice. Believe me, it is not the fault of EVERY SINGLE WHITE PERSON in this country. WAKE UP!

This constant person finger pointing, labeling, and scape-goating that is in this article will do nothing but intensify this problem. I don't believe it is a crime to be black, white, or whatever color; however, it should be a crime to be as ignorant as Reeder's [ideas are]!

King did not deserve beating; a freedom and equality thing is at stake

Dear Editor,

In response to the letter in George-Anne, ["King verdict was the correct one; rioting is dumb, May 8] I am totally outraged with this person. There are several reasons why, but since I am paying for my college tuition; I can't afford to write a book.

First of all, I don't care how fast King was driving, nor how many volts the police delivered to King's body. No man or woman deserves to be literally beaten by policemen. Yes, King resisted arrest, and yes, the policemen beat the h--- [sic] out of him.

It's one thing to have one policeman to beat a person to protect himself, but it's another thing to have several policemen beat a person who has ceased to fight back. They had guns ready to shoot the man for God's sake!

Whoever wrote that article clearly needs to rethink his/her position on violence and protection. There is a fine line between protecting oneself from bodily harm and brutally beating a man - the video tape showed that. King was laying down on the ground balled up in a fetal position, and the police officers were beating him with clubs. Is that not brutality?

Let me ask the writer of the article a question. Did you know that the police commissioner falsified the police records? Oh, you didn't know that. Isn't that illegal?

Now let's get down to the point. You said in the article, and I quote, (I don't want to plagiarize because African-Americans are uneducated), that "all this rioting proves is that how primitive African Americans really are." Did you know this beautiful country was founded on a violent revolution? Oh, you didn't know that either. So that means you are calling OUR [emphasis mine] founding fathers primitive because they rioted to get freedom and equality. Don't get me wrong, I neither condone, nor do I condemn the rioting. It is wrong.

Also you said, in the article, that the riots "must be a black thing." My response is, "Nah, It's not a black thing; it's a freedom and equality thing." Another thing you said was, "I think it [is] about time blacks got off welfare and stood on their own." That's two-fold. It's about time other people get off welfare too - including Caucasians. Oh, it's not just African-Americans on welfare; it's also Caucasians, Hispanics, etc. Oh, I forgot, you didn't know that.

Finally, you said, "The U.S. government has been carrying the [African-Americans] on welfare for four and five generations out of guilt." Let's reflect back on history and remember when welfare first started. It started in the 1930's during the Great Depression, and who do you expect got the money? It wasn't African-Americans because we were still working for the "White Man." So, now the government has been carrying the white people even longer. Oh, I forgot, you didn't know that either.

As for your derogatory remark about African-Americans are too lazy, I have one thing to say, "You are wrong." What about other people - aren't they lazy? Caucasians people are lazy because lazy can be defined as a person or a group of people who don't want to do something. Caucasians fail to get their a-- [sic] in gear to help, not just the African-Americans, but Caucasians and Hispanics etc. They are too worried about helping fund the United States and other countries. I'm not racist, but I am concerned on what this country is turning into.

I'm a African-American who wants to help the world. I don't know about you, but I'm paying for my college tuition. Mommy and Daddy aren't paying a "red hot cent" of my tuition. I have busted my a-- [sic] off to get here, and you are going to tell me that African-Americans are lazy! You sonof-a-bitch [sic] Next week my sister is going to graduate from college with a Bachelors Degree. Is that being lazy? H--- [sic] No!

This is the final remark. I mean it; you said in the article that there are more African-Americans in prison than in college. That was once true, but now it's changing. Matter a fact, the white male prisoners are increasing and black males are decreasing! Oh, I forgot again, you didn't know that.

Cleveland Indians
on the warpath
to respectability

The Cleveland Indians have long been the laughingstock of Major League baseball. They lost 106 games last year and were expected to do better only due to the fact that no team could lose that many games two seasons in a row.

But, Cleveland manager Mike Hargrove has them moving in the right direction, a direction of youth.

Catching is more that solid, with Sandy Alomar Jr. behind the plate. First baseman Paul Sorrento is a brilliant power hitting prospect who is finally getting his chance to play.

Shortstop Mark Lewis is hitting .315 with two homers and ten RBI, on the verge of becoming one of the best offensive shortstops in the American League.

The Indians also have a fast, young outfield in Alex Cole, Kenny Lofton and the best outfield arm in the AL in Mark Whiten. And although DH Albert Belle is very temperamental, he already has four homers and 22 RBI.

Even the pitching is coming together for the Tribe. The rotation is solid with Charles Nagy and Dennis Cook, but it still lacks a dependable number one starter.

The bullpen is okay, only for the fact that they have a dependable closer in submariner Steve Olin. But the shake-up will not be over until they get some reliable set-up men.

Speaking of bullpens, the Braves sure could use some help. Atlanta relievers have a combined 2-8 record, second worst in the NL, only to the Montreal Expos' pen, who are 1-6 with four saves and five blown saves.

Alejandro Pena and Juan Berenguer have both been ineffective. Pena is 0-3 with three saves, but also has two blown saves. Berenguer is 0-1 with a blown save and no saves.

Bobby Cox wants to tinker with using Marvin Freeman as a closer, but if he can't handle it, the Braves could call somebody up from Richmond.

Although Mark Wohlers is having problems with his slider, Pete Smith could be converted into a very effective closer.

Smith has not been near outstanding as a starter in the minors or in Atlanta. A 19-40 career mark should explain why he should be moved to the pen. He is considered by many NL players and managers to have "great stuff", but just can't find a way to win.

He also recently threw a seven-inning perfect game for Richmond, the seventh in International League history. He throws three pitches: a fastball, curve and change-up, and could use all three when coming into a tight game with a one-run lead.

Two-Timers

The Braves have their two-sport star in Atlanta Falcon cornerback Deion Sanders. But now, the St. Louis Cardinals have another Falcon in the outfield in safety Brian Jordan.

Jordan is currently leading the Cardinals offensively with three homers and 13 RBI. He fits the prototypical Cardinal outfielder mold in that he has great speed and has the potential to hit about .280.

He wants to play baseball full time, and is in the last year of a three-year deal with the Falcons, making only

'92 had some bright spots for Eagles

By John Munford
Staff Writer

Although the season was a long one for Jack Stallings' baseball Eagles, it was not all for naught.

After seeing the first few practices, one would have to wonder who was going to make contributions and where.

They began the season with outfielder Mike Miller at first base, a second baseman who barely hit .200 last season and a possible Olympic outfielder in Todd Greene.

Sure, one would have expected the great defense that they got. A .963 fielding percentage made other teams jealous while the double play combination of Chris Petersen and Eder turned 68 double plays in 58 games.

The speed was expected too and Petersen contributed 17 to lead the team followed by Willando Ficklin and Todd Greene with eight a piece. But there were many things that happened that weren't as obvious at the beginning of the season.

In the first half of the season, starter Jim Carragher emerged as the ace of the staff, winning five of his first six decisions.

Carragher slumped in the second half, but Ron Buffington picked up where he left off, winning his last six decisions in a row.

Both Greene and Miller had injuries early in the year which slowed them and the team down.

Greene had another stellar season, batting .356 with 17 homers and 51 RBI, to take the school lead in homers with 67, and Miller contributed 12 long balls and 43 RBI.

However, there were two bigger stories.

One, reserve running back Wilando Ficklin began the season as a pinch runner, but hit his way into the everyday lineup, ending at .401, which led the Southern Conference.

Also, Statesboro native Bryan Wiggins played his way into the lineup and was the hero in a few ballgames with some clutch hitting, including a grand slam to start a 11-0 drubbing of Charleston Southern.

Wiggins had been used as a pinch-hitter and defensive replacement prior to starting and ended the season as the regular first baseman.

There are many problems that Stallings will have to deal work out for next year. They must find replacements for graduating seniors Miller and Eder.

In addition to that, Greene, Petersen and third baseman Kevin Hallman could choose to forego their last year of eligibility if they are chosen in this year's June draft.

Greene is the most likely to go and attracted the eyes of many major league scouts but coach Stallings has a few things going his way.

He will retain Ficklin, Craig Cassidy and Mark Dean along with catchers Mike Darnell and Buddy Holder. Another benefit of the season was that he got youngsters Scott Mandy and Shad Renick some valuable playing time.

A final record of 31-27 should be a consolation to the team even after coming within one run of the Southern Conference championship. All that experience against nationally ranked teams such as Clemson, Georgia and Georgia Tech will only help the ball club be that much stronger next year and make the Eagles much more of a fierce competitor.

Glassman sees promising future for women's tennis team

By Aaron Solomon

Staff Writer

The GSU's women's tennis team finished up their season this past week. The lady netters finished the season at 4-10, sixth in the Southern Conference.

In a season that did not look so well, there many positives. Lydya Darreurt was named freshman of the year in the Southern Conference, and she will be an important leader in the following season.

Head coach Garry Glassman said, "near the end of the season we started to gel, but we just ran out of time."

The team was also plagued with several injuries and lost a player to ineligibility.

Although the team ended the season with a sub-500 record, Glassman is positive about the next season.

"We are a young team," he said. "And I am looking forward to working with our new recruits."

The Lady Eagles are working hard to prove that they are a force in the Southern Conference.

They have many positives in their favor for next, but they are going to have some stiff competition, according to Glassman.

But with players like Darreurt and some new young players Glassman is encouraged about the prospects for next year.

Johnson named top rookie

DENVER (AP) — Dikembe Mutombo emerged as a star in his rookie season with the Denver Nuggets, but it was the Charlotte Hornets' Larry Johnson who took home the NBA's rookie-of-the-year honor on Tuesday.

Johnson received all but a handful of first-place votes in balloting among media who regularly cover the 27 NBA teams.

Mutombo finished a strong second, with Golden State's Billy Owens third.

Mutombo started the season on fire, winning the league's rookie-of-the-month award in November and January and becoming the only rookie to be named to either All-Star team.

But Johnson, after missing the preseason in a contract holdout and starting slowly, came on to win the monthly award in December, February and March.

Johnson finished the season with averages of 19.2 points, 11 rebounds and 49 percent accuracy from the field.

Mutombo scored an average of 16.6 points, averaged 12.3 rebounds and connected on 49.3 percent of his field-goal attempts.

Johnson played in all 82 Hornets games, averaging 37.2 minutes on the floor of the available 48.

Mutombo played in 71 games, missing the last 11 following surgery on his thumb. He averaged 38.3 minutes per game.

"I think Johnson had a very consistent year," said Denver general manager Bernie Bickerstaff.

"He (Mutombo) sort of hit the wall early, before the All-Star break," Bickerstaff said. "I thought it was unfortunate that when we felt Mutombo was on his way back, he came up with the injury."

Early in the season Mutombo, the fourth choice in last year's NBA draft, said he was the only candidate for rookie of the year.

But as the season went on and Johnson, the No. 1 pick, improved steadily, the 7-foot-2-inch center from Zaire softened his rhetoric, saying selection to the All-Star team was what really mattered to him.

of fun before games, which is surprising.

"Usually you've got guys concentrating on their playbooks. With Glanville, we're dancing, just having a lot of fun and cracking jokes just before the game."

With Bo Jackson out of the picture, Sanders and Jordan are the only two-sport professional athletes. Sanders is having a bigger year, but then he's been at this a little longer.

Sanders was seventh in the league with a .333 average and had a league-leading seven triples to go with two home runs and nine stolen bases. His playing time has been limited since Otis Nixon came off a suspension for drugs and Friday was his first appearance in the leadoff slot in four games.

"Shoot, I don't have any damn numbers now," Sanders said, downplaying his fast start. "But we've been facing lefties and Otis Nixon is a fabulous player. We've got the best leadoff hitters in the league, I think."

If he's not impressed, Jordan is.

"With the talent he has he can be a great player, a superstar," said Jordan, who struck out as a pinch hitter Friday. "He's relaxed and he knows what it takes to be a good player. I'll be where he is soon."

Jordan is not nearly as flamboyant as Sanders, whose nickname is "Neon Deion," but then again he said Sanders is largely misunderstood by the media.

"If you know him he's a pretty quiet, low-key guy," Jordan said. "He got a bad rap in college."

On the other hand, Jordan noted that a reputation isn't all bad.

"The more he talks, the more endorsement money he makes," he said.

Jordan's has played in the NFL for three seasons and was a Pro Bowl alternate last season. As a baseball rookie he's been up and down. In his first game he had two hits and four RBIs but his average dipped under .200 for a time before manager Joe Torre sat him down for two games.

That did the trick. Jordan hit three home runs in four starts in a recent stretch and was hitting .231 with 11 RBIs, tied for second on the team.

He's been so impressive that the Cardinals have made him an offer that they hope will persuade him to devote all of his time to baseball. Jordan wasn't sure where that offer stood.

"I'm not sure and I'm not even going to worry about it right now," Jordan said. "The Cardinals and the Falcons, they have to worry about it. Right now I'm trying to block everything out and focus on baseball."

"We were fortunate to be able to play at the professional level."

Committee officials say they can't single out the youngest convention delegate because the national party tracks delegates by race and gender, not by age.

And some states, including Georgia, haven't finished selecting delegates.

Only about 1 percent of the delegates at the 1988 convention in Atlanta were younger than 23, a Democratic National Committee spokeswoman said.

is not an unreasonable request, and we will continue - as we always have - to try and improve in this area.

But if you are looking for acts of media racism, then you have the wrong target.

The Cardinals have made what is believed to be a four-year contract laced with incentive clauses to Jordan, but Jordan admits that they are far apart in terms of salaries.

Sanders has already made the commitment to play with the Braves for a full season, and if Jordan follows suit, you can be sure that Falcons coach Jerry Glanville will not be a happy man with his two defensive stars missing practices and the first few games of the season.
