Business Education professor Sharon Abbott dead at 45

Dr. Sharon Abbott, 45, of #3 Clayton Lane, died this week of undetermined causes, according to Bulloch County Coroner Bird Hodges.

Abbott was a GSU associate professor of business education.

No foul play is suspected, and the cause of death is being determined by the state crime lab in Atlanta, said Hodges.

According to a spokesperson for the department of student development programs, Abbott was hired by GSU in September of 1991.

No funeral arrangements have been announced at this time.

SCAD students protest firing of 12 professors

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Students at the Savannah College of Art and Design will get a chance to speak out on the firing of at least 12 professors.

The students will vote Wednesday on whether the professors should keep their jobs. College President Richard Rowan approved the non-binding referendum during a meeting Monday with 30 students.

Rowan was unavailable for comment.

The professors at the nation's largest art school say their contracts were not renewed because they supported a student constitution, started a faculty senate this month or have been critical of the administration.

Several professors plan to ask the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools to revoke SCAD's accreditation and charge that Rowan runs the private college through fear and intimidation.

SCAD first attracted headlines when Rowan opposed an effort to start a student government and then blocked leaders of the effort from registering for classes.

Women's college to offer free fifth year

DECATUR, Ga. (AP) — A private women's college is trying to boost recruitment by offering its graduates a fifth year of school — free.

"Scott-Free Year Five," has attracted 32 members of the 124-member class of 1992 to remain at Agnes Scott College for another year.

"The market is so bad, it's just the smartest thing for some people to do," said Jennifer Bruce of Acworth. "I think it's going to be great. It really fills up a year that otherwise wouldn't have been too worthwhile."

College Dean Patricia White said the fifth-year-free program was approved as a part of the school's strategic planning to boost recruitment. It would allow students to take more classes to supplement their major or minor, or take some job-specific classes to improve their status in the job market, she said.

It's a major attraction where tuition, room and board run $15,000 a year.

The Spring 1992 final exam schedule and the campus activities announcements for the rest of the quarter are published in page 2 of today's George-Anne.

Miller opens Governor's Conference

By Julie Henderson
Staff Writer

GSU will receive $60 million dollars over the next two years as part of "Georgia Rebound," a major legislative and budgetary package passed by the General Assembly during the recent legislative session, according to Governor Zell Miller.

Miller gave the opening address of Georgia's first annual Governor's Economic Development Conference held at GSU May 27-29. Businessmen and government officials from all over the state were in attendance.

$17.9 million set for new GSU academic complex

By Dennis Smith
Staff Writer

The state set funding for a new academic complex that will house the Schools of Business and Technology at $17.9 million.

The new building will be constructed in the vicinity of the Newton building and the gravel parking lot on the south end of campus according to Dr. Richard Armstrong, vice president for business and finance.

"The precise footprint of the building will be determined at a later date," Armstrong said.

An attempt by GSU to get the funding level at $31.5 million was unsuccessful.

"The lower figure is the one that was first identified as the funding level," Armstrong said. "It was an attempt on our part to increase it."

He added GSU officials hope the complex will be complete by Fall of 1995. He said the completion date will possibly be later but no sooner.

The South Building will also be replaced by another temporary building next year.

Armstrong said the lease on the South Building expires June 30, 1993 and a new building must be in place by that time.

Several professors from the foreign languages and history (both located in the South Building) had expressed concerns as to why their departments were not located in the new complex.

However, Dr. George Shriver of the history dept. said most of the professors are happy knowing that they won't have to stay in the South Building.

"There's not as much anger now that we know we have a time frame," Shriver said. "All of us are disappointed that the state only gave $17 million instead of what was asked for."

It would've been nice if liberal arts could have been in the new academic complex he added.

"We're caught just like the students are in this budget crunch," Shriver said.

Amethyst Project supports local AIDS victims, families

Jennifer Booth
Staff Writer

Amethyst Project is an AIDS support group in Statesboro that meets each Thursday with AIDS patients and their families and friends.

After trying to organize for two years, they held their first meeting last October. Although the primarily volunteer Amethyst staff sets up topics for the meetings, the AIDS patients actually conduct their own sessions.

Before an AIDS patient can become a member of Amethyst Project, they must first go through Pineland, the community mental health center.

Jane Hill, director of clinical services at Pineland and an Amethyst volunteer, said, "It's taken off more than we'd hoped it would. We haven't really had time to get set up."

Megan Strickland, secretary for Amethyst, said that although they are a general support group now, they hope to eventually be able to help patients with food, housing and medication.

tory, providing essential facilities on our university and college campuses, at technical institutes and over ninety local school systems," said Miller.

Georgia Rebound has four main components: education, economic development, environmental protection and public safety. According to the Governor, these four components are all interrelated for have growth and prosperity.

Two main goals of Georgia Rebound are to have a skilled and educated workforce and to bridge the gap between metropolitan areas and rural communities. The rural communities are sometimes the hardest hit by recession and can be the slowest to recover, according to Miller. An immediate impact by the package will be the creation of 29,000 new jobs across the state over the next eighteen months.

"It is no accident that this conference is taking place in South Georgia rather than up in Atlanta. CNN said today that we will send a message by having it here. CNN is right," said Miller.

In addition to allotting more money to colleges and universities, such as GSU, Georgia Rebound will also have programs ranging from pilot pre-kindergarten programs for four year olds to expanded literacy programs for adults to the Georgia Research Alliance.

"Many of them [the programs] are designed to help communities work together in taking ownership of their schools and achieving excellence. An important part of developing job readiness in our workforce today is for industry to get involved in education, and begin to help students get a better sense of how the workplace functions, and of the skills they will need to succeed in the workplace," said Miller.

Governor Miller also mentioned several parts of Georgia Rebound that are aimed at developing Georgia in the economic sector and bridging the gap between metropolitan and rural Georgia.

An extensive highway network including Corridor Z, the Appalachian Highway, the Fall Line Freeway running from Augusta to Macon to Columbus, and a four-lane U.S. Highway 27 to run from Florida to Tennessee, will contribute to bridging the metropolitan gap. Along with the highways, an $88 million expansion of Georgia port facilities will encourage Georgia businesses to expand and become involved in international trade.

Governor Miller also has hopes that high-tech, telecommunications networks will help in bridging the metro-rural gap. One of the networks is called Distance Learning. It will enable students in one part of the state to take part in a class in foreign language, science, or math in another part of the state. Otherwise the student might never get the educational opportunity.

Landlord admits racism

By Kevin Hudson
Managing Editor

A white GSU student who recently applied to rent an apartment in Statesboro says she was turned down because her boyfriend is black.

Misty Shelton said she called Willie Sparks, who had listed an efficiency apartment on GSU's vacant rental property list. She said she was asked if she was white and said "yes;" and added that she was dating a black male.

Sparks, 86, then said he couldn't rent to her according to Shelton, who said she told him she was sorry he felt that way, and couldn't do business with him either.

The apartment is owned by Sparks, and is located at 107 West Jones Ave. in Statesboro.

Sparks did not deny the allegations, but reiterated his feelings this week.

"Whatever I feel like is right is what I do," said Sparks. "I don't owe anybody anything, and I don't intend to let anyone run over me."

Sparks said he already has blacks living near his property. "I've had so much trouble... their loud music, the police coming over there, and so on," he said.

"If I had an apartment out of this lot, it would be different," he said. "I just do not want blacks living in the same lot I live in."

"I don't rent to nobody unless I meet and see them," he said.

Gloria Joyner, assistant director of special programs at GSU, said the decision as to whether to remove Sparks from the list would be up to Director Jane Thompson, who was unavailable for comment.

Concerning the housing list, Sparks said "They always send me somebody we can't use."

Students who have complaints of any kind about facilities on the list may submit a letter to the Office of Special Programs, said Joyner. The matter is then considered by Thompson and a decision on whether to remove the listing is made.

In order to get on the vacant housing list, landlords must sign a form that "... all persons are eligible as tenants regardless of ethnic origin, race, religion, physical handicap, age, or other personal characteristics."

The list is updated about every two weeks. Sparks' location was added to the list on May 4.

University considering changing to plus/minus student grading system

By Jennifer Booth
Staff Writer

The GSU Faculty Senate has endorsed a proposal that could allow the university to convert to a plus/minus grading system.

In a close vote, the Administrative Committee on Academic Affairs, a body made up of representatives of all the schools in the University System, voted against the proposal at their quarterly meeting.

Dr. Harry Carter, vice-president of Academic Affairs, said the representatives decided to return to their schools to get feedback for the next meeting. Carter believes there will be another vote on the proposal at this summer's meeting.

Carter feels there is a 50/50 chance of the new grading scale passing. However, if the proposal is passed, schools within the university system will still have the option to adopt the system.

The committee must pass the proposal for it to be recommended to the Board of Regents.

"The good thing about the proposal is it was permissive," said Carter. "It didn't require institutions to go to the plus/minus system. It allowed those institutions that wanted to go to it."

Carter said he doesn't see any significant disadvantages in the proposal, and believes it would be an improvement over our present system.

"When you have a student with a 72 average and one with a 78 or a 79, you'd like to have a way of differentiating that different level of performance. But under the present system they're all C's," said Carter.

The rationale of the proposal initiated by Georgia State was to increase flexibility in the assessment of students' achievements, reduce grade inflation and provide a more equitable grading system.

Many professors at GSU liked the idea of a more accurate grading procedure.

"I would like to recommend it very strongly," said Fred Richter, a senator from Arts and Sciences. "I would very much like the opportunity to give my students a more precise grade."

Saseen appointed to Governor's Council

GSU News Service

Patricia Saseen is one of 21 appointees to Governor Zell Miller's International Advisory Council which represents Georgia's major industries and organizations involved with international trade businesses.

Saseen is coordinator of the Savannah-based Foreign Language and Culture Center affiliated with GSU, Brunswick College, East Georgia College, Armstrong State College and Savannah State College.

The Center's purpose is to aid economic development through awareness of export opportunities.

It is funded by the Chancellor's Special Funding Initiative of the University System of Georgia.

The Council will have three main duties:

• To provide input from a private sector perspective on the formulation of an effective trade development plan.

• To identify actions that can be taken to capitalize on the 1996 Olympics

• To advise the governor on other actions needed for Georgia to become one of the world's international business centers.

"Back in November, I promised to create a council that would examine what Georgia needs to do in order to become one of the international business centers of the world," Miller said. "The recommendations of this Council, along with the future expansion of our ports, will ensure that Georgia will continue to prosper in promoting its products outside the United States."

An executive order signed by the Governor states, in part, that, "export plays a vital role in the economic conditions and future economic development of Georgia and ... it is in the public interest to create a council to advise the Governor, the State's executive departments and the General Assembly on issues affecting technology-based industries and to help coordinate export and trade policies."

Fraternity implements mentor program

By Stacy Jordan
Staff Writer

Phi Kappa Phi, a national scholastic honorary fraternity, is planning to implement a new student mentor program for incoming freshmen this fall.

The honorary fraternity, which emphasizes scholarship and learning, is presided over by Dean of the School of Arts and Sciences Warren Jones. Membership consists of faculty and student members who are either juniors, seniors or graduate students.

In addition, requirements for induction include being invited to join the fraternity and possessing a GPA of either a 3.8 for juniors or 3.5 for seniors.

The group recently inducted eighteen juniors, ninety-four seniors and fifty-eight graduate students.

"This service project would pair senior student members and use them as resource people for GSU 120 students," said Jan Weisenborn, public relations officer for the fraternity. "The students will try to be the freshmen's big brother or big sister and guide them in the right direction," Weisenborn said.

In addition, these students would share personal experiences as well as academic information with the class through presentation and speeches.

Second Stage presents first full three act play run by students

Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead is produced, directed, designed, and performed by students

This a man who is devoted to his work. As we begin to talk, he thoughtfully describes the play and continues to remove the seams from a costume. He is very involved in both his words and his work.

Who is he? He is Clint Horne, student and director of the Second Stage's upcoming production of Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead.

This play has all the same characters as in Hamlet, yet it focuses on Rosencrantz and Guildenstern's reaction to the action in the play. Many of the lines in the play are directly from Hamlet.

"It's almost as if you're backstage at Hamlet because there is no other reality than that," says Horne. "The play asks the question: did they intentionally betray Hamlet or were they just duped into it?"

Horne has been planning the production since the end of winter quarter, and the cast has been rehearsing since the beginning of April. The cast, comprised of 20 members, "ranges from theater majors to computer systems majors to a student who has graduated and now teaches at Statesboro High," says Horne. "They are a very good cast....They have put a lot of time and energy into experimental theater, which takes dedication.

They're all very committed to doing their best for the show."

Second Stage, a division of Theater South, began this academic year. The group is completely student-run, but has faculty advisors to assist with the productions. Funds for the productions come from the members themselves or from fund-raisers.

Thus far Second Stage has produced Of Tragic Misconceptions and The Eating of Myself, both of which were written by student Barbara Donnelly, as well as Private Wars and A Christmas Carol.

Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead is the first full three-act play to be produced, directed, designed and performed by students.

Opening night for the play will feature jugglers and concessions and a "Renaissance fair atmosphere."

Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead will run June 3-6 at 8 p.m. in McCroan Auditorium.

'University News': a reel life experience

GSU News Service

Imagine the pressure of thousands of television viewers in three states critiquing your homework.

That's the feeling a news team of eight GSU students and news crews from three other universities face each week as they co-produce and compete for story spots on "University News," a 30-minute program featuring stories from college campuses in Georgia, Tennessee and North Carolina.

The fact that the students work for a grade, not money, doesn't detract from their professional attitude, said Jeff Rogers, a senior from Glenville.

"It's a professional show. What we say actually goes out over the air," he says. "We're not just students anymore. It's like we left college last quarter. We are responsible for everything we do and say."

The program is a cooperative effort of senior broadcasting students from GSU, the University of Georgia, the University of North Carolina at Asheville, and the University of Tennessee at Knoxville. Each campus is a news bureau covering its region of the state. GSU's beat takes in a dozen colleges across Georgia.

"University News" features five news blocks ranging from campus trends to sports.

The four news bureaus compete with each other for air time for stories during the show, making for a competitive environment in which only the strong survive, according to Dave Burns, instructor of communication arts and GSU's "University News" advisor.

"My policy is to throw the students in the water right off the bat. They seem to pay a bit more attention to the swimming lessons that way," says Burns.

The GSU students agree that the TV news business is competitive and demanding, but they enjoy the opportunity to prove their reporting abilities.

"I feel that I can compete on the same level as others. I love competition. I try to do my best, and the better the competition, the better I do," said Stephanie Wilson, a senior from Alamo, Georgia.

Although "University News" requires more time than any other broadcasting class, students say the experience gained by producing real news packages under deadline is worth the long hours put into the class.

"It's a good experience," says Kevin Crockett, from Marietta. "I think it's real close to the real world experience. If your story is good enough, timely enough or newsworthy enough, then it should get on."

Packages that the GSU news bureau has produced range from a story on the wetlands issue to a sports story on a blind cross country runner to GSU's Distance Learning project.

During the eight weeks the show is produced, the students' responsibilities of news production. One week they may be the assignment editor and the next a camera operator. Since there is no lives will revolve around television news. Each week they rotate the many different funding for "University News," students absorb many of the costs themselves. Covering 12 different schools in south Georgia may cost the students in transportation fees, but they believe that the opportunity of having their work viewed by thousands of viewers, some potential employers, outweighs the costs.

"University News" can be seen on Prime Cable in Atlanta, WNGM-TV in Athens, WGBN-TV in LeGrange and Northland Cable in Statesboro. More stations are expected to join the "University News" family in coming months.

Survey: Southerners still like their drawl

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—"Y'all come back now, heah?" is still music to the Southern ear.

But some Southerners worry their drawl may work against them.

A telephone poll conducted by researchers at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill showed that 82 percent of people in the South say they like the Southern accent.

That compares with a 68 percent favorable response to a George Gallup Poll conducted 35 years ago, said John Shelton Reed, UNC sociologist and director of the new Southern Focus Poll.

In 1957, 14 percent of those contacted in the region said they disliked the accent and 18 percent said they had no opinion. This March and April, 11 percent found the accent objectionable and 7 percent were unsure, Reed said.

"Of course, the South has changed, too," he said. "It may be that what a Southern accent brings to mind these days is more positive than it used to be, for Southerners, anyway."

In 1992, the Southern accent was most popular among whites, those who identified themselves as Southerners, lifelong residents of the region, those with a high school education and residents of rural areas.

Despite the general acceptance of the accent among Southerners, many respondents to the 1992 survey said the accent might be a handicap.

Thirty percent of those asked agreed with the statement, "These days, speaking with a Southern accent is often a drawback." Fifty-nine percent disagreed, 8 percent said it would depend on the circumstances and 2 percent had no opinion.

Those most likely to consider the accent a handicap were nonwhites, women, the college-educated, people under age 45, migrants to the South and residents of metropolitan counties, Reed said.

The Southern Focus Poll was based on telephone interviews with 819 adults in 13 Southern states. The earlier Gallup Poll, with about 1,600 respondents, included 402 Southerners.

The poll's margin of error was plus or minus 3.5 percent.

Politicians, Realtors & other bloodsuckers

This is it, my last column as editor of the George-Anne. (I'll pause while you wipe the tears from your eyes.)

That's O.K., you'll have Doug Gross for your editor next year, and then you'll forget about me. (Sniff) I'll just be used and tossed aside like some rag doll — forgotten and useless.

But enough of this self-pitying bullshit, let's get down to some opinions. I won't weigh you down with a in-joke ridden last will and testament, 'cause I have no plans to die in the near or distant future.

I also won't spend the entire time reminiscing about how much the campus has changed, even though I remember Sarah's before it was replaced by something that — quite honestly — looks like a mall food court reject.

But I digress.

I can't ever really understand those who whine about not having anything interesting to write about, or never have an opinion on a subject.

I have so many that I wanted to briefly express some that I haven't had time to hit upon this year. This, of course, is no one's fault but my own, but I feel the need to expunge these demons — metaphorically speaking.

Class attendance shouldn't be mandatory for students

As I understand it, most major universities don't seem to bother taking attendance in their classes.

Maybe it has something to do with the number of students in these classes, or maybe it has something to do with treating the students like adults. Go figure.

I agree students should attend class, but why make it mandatory? The students (or their parents) are paying for it, so shouldn't it be up to them whether they want to go to the class?

Those who miss enough of the classes are probably going to be hurt just as badly by missing the lecture and notes as anything else. The penalty will make itself known without teachers dictating how many times students can cut the class.

Worse yet, there are teachers on this campus who don't even take a death in the family as an excuse. One girl I knew had her father die the night before a test.

When she got back the professor told her that she couldn't take the test, it would count as her one "drop grade." In other words, if she did poorly on one of her future tests, tough.

Since when is ANY class more important than a person's family or friends? Yet some professors seem to think they alone are handing students the keys to the universe.

The arrogance of students can pale by comparison.

But back to my original point, students are here — in part — to learn self-discipline, not to have discipline thumped over their head. Some may need that, but I don't think the majority do. And those students who do need that kind of discipline may simply not need to be here.

If professors are that insecure about keeping a set num-

Anti-abortionists fail to see the big picture

Dear Editor,

The Catholic Church near here has a sign on the front of the front sign reading "God is Pro-Life".

I immediately thought, "And Catholicism is responsible for much miserable human overpopulation, yet I agree with the sign." I feel confident that God, Nature, All (however you see it) is Pro-Life. But on a grand scale, one on which the human life-form is but a variable among many.

Our survival depends upon our ability to read the big signs that point to the big picture.

In roughly 500 years, the human population has grown from one billion (it had never been greater than this) to over five billion. By 2000, roughly one-fifth of the pre-industrial life forms on this planet will be extinct.

One-fifth of Earth dead.

Despite the statistical probability of other life in the universe, Earth-life is absolutely the only life we know of. This myriad treasure of life is laid up in one store.

We are like a handful of people stranded on an island; the death of each one should strike the hearts of survivors with the terror of isolation and extinction.

When viewed in this light, it is horrifically clear that our Earth-mates, our companions and care-givers, are dying, and that our species, like an uncontrolled cancerous growth, is responsible.

We alive today have inherited a real mess. Modern religious, economic and social institutions have homo sapiens so far removed from their natural state that they are, on the whole, miserable — like crowded, impounded dogs living in their own excrement.

Humans evolved in reasonably sized tribes; in our heart of hearts, cities aren't to our taste. To this day, most people maintain the same number of relationships (family, friends) that they would have had in a prehistoric village: between one and two hundred.

Packed together, we lose perspective of our selves, each other, nature and even how to be happy.

There are territory crises; we fight for resources, taking all manner of life in our desperation. We are tortured by the poverty, suffering, irreverence and destruction we find in the modern world, yet most of it is caused by human overpopulation.

And our continued exponential growth will make matters worse. Much worse.

Population control is essential if we are to cure many modern ills. If growth goes unchecked, other efforts toward a tolerable survival will ultimately end in failure.

So are you "Pro-Lifers" Pro-Life, or Pro-Human? God, of the Bible, is clearly "Pro-Life," and the Noah story paints a big picture for us. Humans ignored their responsibilities, and were wantonly irreverent of anything but themselves and their narrowly conceived endeavors.

Very Pro-Human.

God smacked them out like roaches, preserving the family of an environmentalist, if you will, and a mated pair of every other one of his beloved life-forms.

It occurs to me now that Old Testament Abraham was reportedly willing to murder his own child to please God. I have chosen not to have one, for similar reasons. I have, so far, been blessed with the freedom (and availability of nonoxynol-9) to put into practice this religious belief. I am Pro-Life on the grand scale.

Human conception prevention is the all-around most healthy, sensible course for us to take to control our population.

When it fails, the choice is then between the destruction of an embryo or the presentation of another eating, breathing human to a crying, starving, dying planet.

And that choice damn well better remain mine.

And the majority, in poll after poll, agrees with me. If it is taken from us, we will revolt. Rest assured; in the big picture, it's high time for a revolution anyway.

An ending and beginning

This is the final issue of the George-Anne for this school year. Some will mourn, others will rejoice, but all will watch for its return in the summer and fall.

Letters to the editor that are sent concerning this issue will appear during the summer issues. All letters must be hand signed to be considered for publication.

Finally, we would like to wish the graduating class of '92 good luck — particularly since much of our editorial staff will be graduating with them.

To quote a corny phrase, the future — and the power to change it — is literally in your hands. Take chances, fight for what you believe, and listen to others.

Maybe you can make things better.

Wording of column was poor, fuels homophobia

Dear Editor,

Wake up Straightsboro! Welcome to the real world, Mr. Ward. As a member of S.L.A.G. (Straights for Lesbians and Gays), I cannot allow your article to go to homophobic minds all over campus without supporting these human beings you seemed to crush.

I hate to open your eyes, Mr. Nice Guy, but in all fairness the diction in your article was poorly chosen. Such phrases as "barbaric sex," "deviant," "foolishness," "nauseating," and "irritating," do not help solve a problem — they can only add to it.

Such negativity is the reason these people are in the bathrooms and in the closets all over America (not just at GSU).

You tell homosexuals to take their sexual activities home. To whom should they take it home ... to mom and dad only to be disowned or to their dorm roommates who use "faggot" in every other sentence to describe the jerk next door?

Maybe the bathroom is not the proper place for these individuals to meet others, but will someone explain to me where the proper place is in this society.

Ah...there's a key term, "society." Let's describe it with your key term, "barbaric." To me society is "barbaric."

To socially disallow a lesbian or gay couple to walk down the street holding hands or even exchange an affectionate kiss is "foolishness." "Deviant" behavior such as gay bashing (verbal or physical) is "barbaric." I find it

"nauseating" that society shuns homosexuality to closed doors and public bathrooms.

It's embarrassing to me that the straight community asks lesbians and gay males to live two lives, to hide a part of themselves in their private homes.

It makes me sad when there are no positive homosexual role models in the media. There are so few high schools that have groups for lesbians and gay adolescents. Gay and lesbian sex is taboo among peers in many households.

So, who can one turn to if parents and friends are not options? Bathroom walls? Too bad society is too scared to mention it as an option is sex education.

Thank God that there are some options in all this chaos.

Realtors ignore renters, rob students

Dear Editor,

Are college students being "robbed"? Yes, report students. Realtors such as Southern Realty, Blount Ansley, and Hendley charge too much for what they are offering.

"I wouldn't mind paying the rent each month if my realtor would keep the apartment in living conditions," said Martha Cox, a resident near campus.

"I had a hole in my front door for the entire year that I rented from Blount Ansley," reports another student.

It seems to me that students complain time and time again about the conditions of their apartment, and their Realtors don't do anything about it.

Many students report the repairs that are needed, but the Realtor never fixes the problem.

"I have to get my parents to call Southern Realty if I really want to see some action, because I'm a student and they know that they can take advantage of me," states Shelly Maurie.

A lot of students won't call their Realtors because they are afraid it wouldn't do any good.

"What's the use?" says Brenda Hester who now has lived in four different apartments under four different Realtors. "It's been the same everywhere I've moved. I don't even feel safe to sit on my car-

Another student, who rents from Hendley, says, "I had rats in my apartment for a week before my Realtor did anything about it."

Students are living in unclean, unsafe, and unsanitary conditions. The Realtors know this, but refuse, forget, or wait for parents to call before they will take any necessary action.

Do the Realtors who rent to college students think that this is an acceptable way of living? Do they live like this? I don't think so. I think they just want to make a buck any way they can.

GSU campus police does a thorough job

This is my last column of the year and I know many of you are probably glad to hear this, especially after I stirred things up with my now notorious "In the Men's Room" editorial.

But, you know what they say . . . "There isn't much to life or vegetable stew unless you stir it up once in a while."

Along with numerous complaints about the sexual escapades occurring in the men's room, I've also heard criticism about GSU's University Police this quarter.

University Police officers are often accused of being, ridiculously inconsiderate, deceitful, twisted and lazy when in fact, most are hard working men and women.

These people are just trying to do their job. And we, as students, should be glad they're around. I mean really, where would this campus be without them?

According to GSU's Captain Mike Russell, "If anyone needs GSU's University Police, just call. We're not here to aggravate people. Everyone should look at us as an agency that is here to help, rather than an agency that is here to hinder."

COUNTERPOINT

Thanks to Captain Russell and other outstanding officers, GSU's University Police Department has greatly improved over the past few years.

They now offer many service type programs; for instance, officers are available each night to escort fearful students from risky locations to areas of safety. This outstanding service, in my opinion, has aided in making GSU one of the few campuses in America not plagued with large numbers of sinister campus robberies, muggings or rapes.

University police officers have also aided in alleviating the congested traffic during class changes behind Landrum. In the past, it took approximately 15 minutes to get through this jammed area, now it only takes around 14 minutes.

I think students are begging to understand the value of the University Police; however, many do criticize officers for randomly stopping individuals at night for no apparent reason.

Nevertheless, in my opinion, this is just good police work.

If you are not doing anything wrong, then you have nothing to fear. In fact, students should feel safer knowing that GSU's gallant officers are out lurking in the night searching for suspicious activity.

Police powers should be checked

Wake the neighbors and call your friends!

This is it — the last column of my college career. Barring some freak of nature or a screwed-up file in the Registrars Office, I'll graduate two weeks from tomorrow.

First, let me respond briefly to Chief Gates' — uh, Kennedy Ward's thoughts on the Campus Police, then I want to move on to other issues.

Now don't get me wrong — for the most part, the Campus Police do a fine job, and my criticism is directed more toward law enforcement officers in general.

Campus Police have fallen into the same dangerous patterns that most police forces around the country have.

The public's demand for protection from increased crime has given police officers the idea that they have a free hand to do just about anything they want.

It's not okay to beat a man senseless because he drove very fast and wouldn't stop immediately. And no, it's not okay to stop a driver for no reason. If we haven't done anything wrong, it's a violation of our privacy.

POINTS TO PONDER...

Would it be alright to have our apartments randomly searched? If we're not doing anything wrong, it's okay. Right? Check the Fourth Amendment to the United States Constitution for the answer.

Now, let's move on. The GSU Health Center offers free AIDS testing now. That's good news for anyone in a high-risk category (college students, for example). Get up the nerve and go get tested.

By the way, for the record, I'm in favor of bathroom sex... and kitchen sex... and swimming pool sex, just as long as it takes place on private property and is between consenting adults. It's a shame that anyone — gay or straight — would be forced to resort to public restrooms to find a partner.

In case you've missed my columns of the past few years, I'm in favor of choice, condom-use, socialized medicine, good blues music, Mom and apple pie.

I'm opposed to nuclear power, gulf wars, Republican presidents, racism, sexism, ageism, heightism — damn, I'm politically correct — the death penalty, movies starring Vanilla Ice, bad haircuts and tainted grapes.

Let me take this opportunity to thank my current editor, Gary, for all he's done. Without his fascist views and annoying manner, I wouldn't have been angry enough to write most of my columns.

Also, I want to wish next year's editor, Doug, good luck. I hope he can find another liberal columnist with as much insight and eloquence as myself (stop snickering). Hell, I just hope he can find another liberal columnist.

So, as I gather my memories and lick my wounds, I bid Georgia Southern a fond farewell.

ber of warm bodies in class, then maybe they should examine their teaching style.

I'm not saying they have to be entertainers, but speaking as a (soon to be former) student, it's really hard to learn anything from a drop-dead boring lecture.

Which would you rather have, fifteen students who are interested, or thirty bored-beyond-belief zombies who really don't want to be there?

Self-discipline does not come from being dictated to and treated like children. We supposedly left that when we graduated from High School.

Statesboro government is biased against students

So I state the obvious. What do you plan to do about the situation?

Equally obvious is the fact that nothing about the city council or county commission will ever change until (1) The elections begin to be held when GSU is still in session and (2) GSU Students actually start registering as citizens of Statesboro and vote for change.

GSU and it's students are constantly being legislated by these two bodies, and being used as scapegoats and excuses to pass new laws. Essentially, you have two governing bodies with no true representation of a majority of citizens. This is no one's fault but the students.

In order to register to vote, all you have to have is identification with a local address. If you live within the Statesboro boundaries, you can register to vote in both the city and the county. If not, then you can only register in for the county and only vote in county elections.

Nevertheless, that's where the election of the Bulloch County Sheriff comes from. This, for those of you who have to have movies explained to you, is a HINT. As a matter of fact, the county primary is coming up on July 21.

There are two candidates running for the office, one of them being Sheriff Akins. Whichever candidate wins this primary essentially wins the office of sheriff for the next four years.

To register to vote, just go up to room 306 at the top floor of the county courthouse. The latest you can register to vote for this primary is June 22.

And if you aren't going to be here for the primary, get an absentee ballot.

Do you really enjoy not being represented by someone who is passing laws concerning you?

Don't make excuses. If you don't vote, then don't even think about complaining, because it's your own damn fault.

Realtors: the vampires of GSU

I must be honest. Aside from living in a privately-owned house that was handled through a Realtor, I have little personal experience to judge these people with.

However, I do listen to other students, and I have observed the local Realtors practically falling over each other to try and screw the students out of a needed dorm.

God forbid students should have a wide variety of choices as to where to live.

Judging from this type of behavior, and the firsthand stories I have been told, you had better keep one eye on your wallet when you shake a Realtor's hand.

GSU publishes a list of Realtors and landlords that have property to rent, and you can get a copy of this list from the Special Programs office. They evidently don't intend it as an indorsement of the Realtors and landlords listed, but if student's complaints can be verified, they might just take them off the list.

As imperfect as this list may be, it certainly could be helped considerably by students bringing their complaints to the Special Programs office. A minor victory, but effective.

Better yet, use word of mouth to let other students know how you were treated by a certain Realtor or landlord.

If you are thinking about moving into an apartment, then talk to people who currently live there. How is the security? Do they respond to student complaints? What does the fine print on the contract mean?

The best way you can fight a terrible Realtor or landlord is by taking your wallet somewhere else — and encouraging others to do the same.

Look out world, here I come!

That's that, and I've got lots of opinions to spare, but I see I'm quickly running out of room and putting you to sleep at the same time.

I'm leaving with these loonies we call a graduating class in a couple of weeks, and I am more than happy to be leaving Statesboro. After all, I have a world full of windmills to take on.

My final salute to GSU: good-bye, good riddance, and good luck.

I think we're all going to need it.

Is this a perfect square?

ANSWER: Come by Statesboro's Wendy's and find out!

Wendy's® wants you to know that you can now get a McDonald's® Cheeseburger Deluxe for 99 cents. We think that this is interesting because we've always sold our Wendy's® Cheeseburger Deluxe for 99 cents. It makes us happy to see other fast food restaurants following our lead! Of course, there are still some differences. For example: McDonald's® Cheeseburger Deluxe has 1.6 ounces of beef, while Wendy's® has 2 full ounces of fresh (never frozen) beef. And don't forget, while the McDonald's® Cheeseburger offers top-pings of their choice, Wendy's® continues to offer you the choice of toppings you want. So congratulations, McDonald's® on picking up a great idea... we've got a few more, if you ever need them!

or is it?

MOTHER GOOSE & GRIMM

By MIKE PETERS

Triangle is definitely full of super individuals, and Dr. Fred Richter provides positive insight to all students.

The counseling center has helped a number of students deal with themselves and society. As a member of S.L.A.G., I hope to show students that it's okay to be themselves, and that it doesn't have to be the bathrooms.

And to all those suffering from homophobia, it is time to kick the habit by giving your peers social and moral support.

The bathroom incident is only the symptom. A homophobic society is the problem.
