Three ASC Students Honored

Three Armstrong State College history and political science majors have been honored for their outstanding academic performance with opportunities for advanced study this summer and the upcoming academic year.

Barbara Ross, a senior history major and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. K. Johnson of 2807 Mechanics Avenue in Thunderbolt, has received a $3,100 full fellowship to the University of Kentucky where she will pursue her masters degree in history.

Ms. Ross, who has been named to the Den's List for academic achievement each quarter she has attended Armstrong, is a member of Phi Alpha Theta national history honorary society and serves as secretary for that organization.

Susan Fain, a senior political science major and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Fain of Bethesda, Md., has received a fellowship to Georgetown University in Washington, D.C. In addition to the full tuition grant, she will receive a $3,000 stipend during the upcoming academic year as she pursues her masters degree in government.

Ms. Fain, a Dean's List student at ASC, previously attended Montgomery College in Rockville, Md.

Mrs. Cynthia Freeman, a history major who resides with her husband, Darrell, and two daughters at 608 Plantation Drive in Savannah, has been accepted for the Victorian Society in America Summer School Program which will be held for 20 days this summer at Bedford College of the University of London.

Mrs. Freeman is among 28

persons in America accepted for this program, which is designed to provide in-depth study of the Victorian Era.

Mrs. Freeman, a Dean's List student at Armstrong, and member of Phi Alpha Theta history honorary, also is a member of various community and national organizations, including Historic Savannah, Inc., Telfair Academy of Arts and Sciences, Georgia Historical Society, the Victorian Society of Savannah and the U.S., the National Trust for Historic Preservation, and the Metropolitan Opera Guild.

Stocker To Participate In Summer Seminar

Eric Franz Stocker, Director of Development and Assistant to the President for Armstrong State College, has been selected to participate in a National Endowment for the Humanities Summer Seminar at Duke University this summer.

Stocker, who also instructs in the ASC Department of History, will study "The Social and Economic History of Rome" under the direction of Dr. John Oates of the Duke University Department of Classics.

The prestigious seminars are designed to give faculty members the opportunity for concentrated study and research in an area pertaining to their academic specialization.

Stocker, who will be on leave of absence from Armstrong for the two-month program which runs from June 19 through August 11, will attend seminars at Duke, prepare three seminar papers and one major research paper.

He also was invited to participate in another NEH seminar to be held at the American Academy in Rome.

Stocker, 31, earned his bachelor and masters degrees in history from Ohio State University and has been with Armstrong since July, 1976.

He, his wife, Rose, and their two children reside at 112 Greenbriar Drive in Savannah.

Professors Receive Promotions

The University System of Georgia Board of Regents Wednesday (April 12) approved promotions for 12 Armstrong State College faculty members.

Elevated to the rank of full professor were Dr. Ross L. Clark, Jr., 55, who has served as an associate professor of political science at Armstrong for the past seven years, and Dr. John S. Hinkel, 40, who has served as an associate professor of mathematics and computer science at Armstrong for the past nine years.

Clark, who has been a member of the Armstrong faculty for 11 years and previously served at West Georgia College, received his B.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Tulane University. In 1977, he received the Armstrong Alumni Association Outstanding Faculty Member Award. He also has been honored by the Savannah Jaycees for his work as a judge for the Quiz Bowl, is an active member of and lay reader for St. Thomas Episcopal Church, a member of the executive committee of the Chatham County Democratic Party, and is a member of Pi Sigma Alpha, a national honorary political science association, and the American Political Science Association.

Hinkel, who also has been a member of the Armstrong faculty for 11 years, previously worked as an engineer for Minneapolis-Honeywell. He served as acting chairman of the Armstrong Mathematics Department and as acting director of the computer services. Currently he is involved with administrative computer programming for Armstrong. Dr. Hinkel is a member of the Mathematics Association of America and the Armstrong chapter of the Data Processing Management Association. Hinkel received his M.S. degree in mathematics from the University of Florida and his Ph.D. in functional analysis from the University of South Carolina.

Elevated to the rank of associate professor were Dr. Hugh R. Brown, 50, who has served as an assistant professor of English at Armstrong for the past nine years, and Dr. Laurent J. Guillou, Jr., 40, who has served as an assistant professor of biology for the past eight years at Armstrong.

Dr. Guillou received his M.S. and Ph.D. degrees from Louisiana State University. Previously, he has worked in the research laboratory of Kaiser Chemical. He is a member of the board of directors for the Armstrong Big A Club, is a member of the Savannah Gold Club, is a member of Sigma Xi, an honorary research society, and is a member of the board of directors for the Armstrong Research Institute.

Dr. Brown earned his M.S. degree from St. Michael's College in Vermont, and his Ph.D. from the University of South Carolina. Prior to coming to Armstrong, he taught for four years in an adult education program affiliated with the University of East Africa. He also has worked as an editorial assistant of the Linguistic Atlas of the South and Middle Atlantic States which is to be published by the University of South Carolina and the University of Chicago to survey dialects in the Southeastern states.

Promoted from the rank of instructor to assistant professor were the following Armstrong faculty members: Mrs. Marilyn Buck, M.S.N., Department of Nursing; Ms. Teresa A. Coursey, B.S., Department of Dental Hygiene; Mrs. Carole M. Massey, M.S.N., Department of Nursing; Mrs. Jane A. Patchak, M.S., Department of Psychology and Sociology; Dan H. Radabaugh, M.M., Department of Fine Arts; Ms. Joan M. Sullivan, N.S.N., Department of Nursing; Mrs. Barbara G. Tanenbaum, B.S., Department of Dental Hygiene; and Ms. Emma A. Thomson, B.S., Department of Dental Hygiene.

ASC To Host Program

Chatham County Jailers will participate in the first comprehensive training program open to the entire staff on April 24-28 when consultants with the Federal Bureau of Prisons and National Institute of Corrections conduct an intensive operations seminar at Armstrong State College.

The training program was arranged by Dr. William Megathlin, head of the Armstrong Department of Criminal Justice, upon the request of Chatham County Sheriff Carl Griffin.

The seminar, Megathlin said, was designed to prepare jail staff to work in the new Chatham County Jail which is scheduled to open this summer. The program will provide staff with updated information on jail operations, supervision and communication techniques.

Although Chatham Jail personnel have participated in other training programs, the four-day program at Armstrong is unique because the entire staff will be able to participate in one intensive session without having to travel to training centers outside the state, Megathlin said.

About 40 Chatham jail staff members will participate in the program.

Instructors and discussion leaders for the program will include Jack Wise, a consultant with the National Institute of Corrections and former warden and corrections director; Dr. Jack Blackman, human relations consultant for the Federal Bureau of Prisons and professor of counseling services at Georgia State University; and Dr. Jim Repella, dean of the school of professional studies at Armstrong.

Topics covered in the seminars will include custody, security, control, legal problems, normal and abnormal behavior, dangerous drugs, discipline, written reports and interpersonal communication skills.

As I See It

by Richard Chambless

I wasn't going to write an article for this issue because I was really having a hard time getting motivated so that I could write an honest viewpoint. WELL, with the understanding and concern from friends, I feel I can now write this and keep it in the frame which I hope you will understand.

In my articles, I have tried to write about things as I feel they are or as they happened. Following a personal experience last quarter, I have discussed at great lengths and in precise detail with many fellow students the consequences of grading, especially in major field courses where subjective answers are required for essay and short-answer questions. The consensus is that the student should feel that his answers, expressing his feelings and viewpoints, should be graded according to their merit and should not be graded according to their merit and should not be subject to personal whims or "party-line" views of the professor. The student should always feel that his views are being given fair consideration. If the professor cannot put aside his personal opinions and accept divergent views, he should be very careful about giving subjective type exams.

The average student has been brought up believing that teachers are on something of a pedestal. When one consistently treats students unfairly or even makes them feel they are being treated unfairly, the pedestal degenerates with each occurrence. The major calamity is not the grade for a particular course or quarter, but that the consequences can extend far beyond the quarter even to the point of turning the student against the course, the major, the college and higher education generally.

I am not even suggesting that all students in major courses should get a "C" or better grade.

Grades should be earned. But the point is that the whole academic process is to encourage creative thinking and expression. The failure to accept the students creative efforts is to erode the fundamental precept of individual thinking. If the student finds his view being totally disregarded because they fail to follow the "academic solution," then the student very quickly begins to wonder what the use is of it all.

An unfairly-graded "D" in a major course can often destroy opportunities that have been carefully nurtured for months and even years. Successful job interviews can be completely negated and acceptance to graduate-schools nullified. If a student feels that the grade has been given fairly, he can accept the consequences. If he feels he has been treated unfairly, the psychological effect can be devastating. A student, realizing the necessity for doing well in his major courses, is going to exert maximum effort for these courses. The professor should realize this and do everything possible to encourage exceptional effort and creative responses in the students chosen career field. This may mean individual counseling to explain to the student why his answers are not meeting the criteria for the course. There should be no surprises in final grades.

These are not only my personal opinions, but those of a great number of students with whom I have discussed this matter. Not all students have received what they would consider unfair grades, but nearly all know of someone who has. Most students feel that when a large number of complaints have been aimed at a particular professor, an investigation of the allegations should be in order. The student evaluation should be the vehicle for identifying these professors, and the department heads

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

The Inkwell has always had plenty of readers around who would tell the editor what was wrong with the paper, it seems. There is nothing wrong with that. I have read the paper for four years, and recently there have been some changes worthy of praise. Praises for these improvements seems to be lagging behind the pace set of criticism.

While, in many ways, the paper looks much like it always has, there has been a change in the tone of the writing and the topics chosen for publication. The Inkwell has become more representative of the Armstrong Ambience rather than the moods of a disgruntled few, and one-or-two followers of fashionable radicalism.

The flare for rhetoric which once was a prominent characteristics of the Inkwell is not so apparent these days. The writing reflects a more balanced view of events, now. Students seem to enjoy picking up a copy and reading the articles. I can remember when you only glanced at it to see who was being attacked in that issue.

The news and editorial writing may not agree with everyone's point of view - it certainly could not do that - however, it usually represents opinions which Armstrong students should consider before taking a side on an issue. Further, for students who can't talk with their student government representatives every week, the Inkwell may be the only insight into campus decision-making processes. These decisions effect everyone to the tune of $12.50 a quarter.

Another feature of recent days worthy of comment are the entertainment reviews written by Debbie Holloway. Her work shows both enthusiasm for the entertainment business and an objective eye for talent. The reviews are meaningful and stimulate interest in the performers she discusses. I recommend them to anyone who wants a fair and informed opinion on performances.

I am sure there are other changes I could mention and I invite other students to comment on the paper - even if they disagree. To me, however, I feel there have been changes for the better and they deserve mentioning.

Sincerely,
Greg Gresham

Dear Editor,

Congratulations, Bob. With your clumsy and half-hearted attempt to ridicule my letter to the editor you have succeeded in allowing everyone to sound the shallow depths of your own mind.

First off, I knowingly included in my letter no criticism whatsoever for "those who are working for the improvement" of Armstrong. The capitalization of the word "doers" was for sarcastic emphasis. At least in your case, Bob, I suppose that I was wrong to assume that anyone could figure out that little thing for themselves. Oh well. EXPRESSLY for your benefit, Bob, let me reiterate that the DOERS to which I referred in my letter were those who mouthed stale platitudes concerning the merger in an attempt to hide their true reasons for opposing it, who had the audacity to ridicule the idea of a black person as president of the combined institutions, and who lacked enough taste to know when their humor had none. However, if among these people are those whom you claim are working for Armstrong's improvement then they're as misguided as you are. How Armstrong could possibly be improved by prating bigots with no taste is beyond me.

I say, the very fact that any criticism is made denotes constructive impulses of varying degrees. Those who are not directly involved in politics have every right to contribute their feelings on pertinent subjects. Supposedly, this concept lies at the very heart of democratic politics. Since it is impracticable for everyone to participate in politics, those who hold office should welcome input of every kind. If one can't withstand the pressures brought about by the multi-faceted nature of our society then one never should have ventured into politics to begin with.

During an election, for example, the only constructive act that the common man has in his power to commit is essentially an act of criticizing. Obviously, a vote for one alternative is simultaneously an act which negates all others. Perhaps you'd like to tell us all, Bob, precisely where the line should be drawn to separate approving criticism from constructive rejection.

Incidentally, you also seem to have missed the point of my designating WHERE the "hoopla" was located. I couldn't care less WHY it was on the front page of the Inkwell. I did care whether people were able to figure out which article I was referring to. To merely designate was my intent. I was cutting down the content, not the location.

The fact that Savannah State will accept even those whom Armstrong turns away and the fact that State is willing to give them a chance at higher education serves only to show up the ludicrous elitist nature of Armstrong's policy.

I can't believe that the problem is really so much the preoccupation with high or low standards, as much as it is simply that predominantly white Armstrong does not wish to merge with predominantly black Savannah State. Standards can be worked out. The actual merger involves much more, involves the personal level which must surface in all human opinions. Here, on the personal level, is where the real impasse lies. It is the refusal to admit to this obvious fact that is truly asinine, Bob.

It's true that the president of the combined institutions should be chosen on the basis of ability and not of race. I agree. But you must also agree that, since Armstrong has never boasted of a black president to date, it is highly unlikely that the situation should change course on the eve of the merger. The problem is that in such cases "good sense" hardly ever prevails because people rarely do that which they "should" if there's enough at stake and a fair chance of getting away with it. You'll never convince me that a black could not be found who would admirably fill the position of Armstrong's President.

When you really have something to say, Bob, I'll be around. Until then, remember this: Never leap upon your high horse without first checking for saddle-rot.

Dear Editor,

I would like to clarify a subject I dealt with last issue. I want to thank Dr. Keith Douglass (Psychology) for the information concerning student evaluations. He gave me materials and thoughts that aren't known by the evaluating students. Here are some of them: the evaluation phase is new and in a trial-period, the student evaluation is one of three evaluations on each professor, and when a bad professor is let go, rarely do the students know. The evaluations that the students write DO MAKE A DIFFERENCE. It is going to take some time for any

Manuel X: The Manifesto Was Never Like This

by Rodger Brown
Feature Editor

Faithful to the currently popular genre of sophisticated pornography, Producer Mike Heel (Erasmus of San Francisco, In the Out Exit) has become the consummate politico - pornographer with his latest release Manuel X.

An aware and sensitive floorwalker in a Publishers clearing house, Manuel X (Geraldo Rivera) is straightening up in a storeroom when a stack of Adam Smiths Wealth of Nations falls over and knocks him unconscious. Waking, he finds himself locked in and begins a 2 hour harangue on the distressing plight of migrant farm workers. Manuel's ramblings range from reactionary revisionism to revolutionary rantings.

Unlike "Alice in Wonderland", whose political message was painfully obvious to the point of distracting attention from the skin, the statement of Manuel X is subtly couched in the delicate interplay of light and flesh.

Instead of being kicked in the teeth by violent political propagandists, the viewer is titillated until his rising political consciousness explodes into a new awareness of modern society.

Rivera's magnificent performance is delivered with gusto and verve and Marilyn Chambers has a delightful cameo as Betty the Book.

Stop The World - I Wanna Get Off

by Terry Malphrus

Are you easily irritated? Do things sometimes get on your nerves? Have you ever yelled "This is where I get off! I can't take it anymore!" If so, this article is written just for you. In the next few paragraphs, you will read of people, places, conditions, habits, and signs that really annoy me -- and may have annoyed you at times, too.

...A professor who gives dreadfully boring and inadequate notes and then assaults the class with a test that would stump Socrates himself.

...A student who dominates the class with his or her supposedly learned opinions and rhetorical questions.

...Students who use the library as a "student center," or place to talk and laugh, while other students are trying to study or read. One can wear oneself out directing dirty looks at the culprits, but it usually does no good.

...People who pop, smack, slurp, slish, and squish chewing gum. It is especially annoying in the library, where it is occasionally quiet enough that the piggish noises can be heard from one end of the library to the other.

...The sign concerning overdue fines which is located just in front of the exit turnstile in the library. I think the sign should say "Reserve Books and Materials - $1.00 per day" instead of the present "Reserve Materials - $1.00 per day." To me, a book is a book and materials are films, records, tapes, slides, etc.

...The temperature in Gamble Hall, which is often so chilly that we students and professors who spend our entire day there must wear extra clothes in order to be fairly comfortable.

...Tables in the "new student center" that barely manage to stand tipsily on three legs.

Music Scene

by Debbie Holloway

While staying in St. Augustine, Fla. a short time ago, the people I was staying with had been receiving new albums from several different record companies every couple of months. I just happened to be hanging around when the mailman came by that day to drop off a shipment. My friends said they were accustomed to most of the records not being the types of music that they enjoyed and for me to look through and pick anything I might want. Well, I flipped through hoping to get lucky and came upon an album titled "The Hometown Band, Fear of Flying." As luck would have it, I came to be an ardent fan of this group from Canada. Since then they have come out with two more albums, but not many people know who they are... yet. Hark! I introduce to you The Hometown Band.

This groups' sound is definitely different or maybe just surprising; sort of smooth, a little rocky sometimes, jazzy and tinged with a bit of blues every now and then. They are difficult to categorize but very easy to enjoy. The title song "Fear of Flying" from the album of the same name is a song that will send chills up your spine. The Hometown Band is currently not very well known but my instincts tell me that fame is not far away. (On A&M Records.)

Whelan's Wide World of Intramurals

by Mary Ellen Whelan

The Intramural world at Armstrong State College has been a busy one so far this spring quarter.

In softball only 3 of the 19 softball teams remain undefeated after two days of play. The currently undefeated Whipping Sticks won twice in a double-header beating the Scalywags 25-5 in the first game and later defeating the Bad News Bears 13-4 in a second game. Holding an 0-3 record, the Bears have yet to win a game. The Stars also took 2 wins stomping the Hackers 18-1 in the first game. The second win remained to be another one-sided victory for the Stars as they crushed the Bears 17-2. Pi Kappa Phi and Theta each took a win in a double header 19-9 in the first game and 26-14 favor Theta in the second. Pike, also undefeated in softball, defeated Bam twice in a doubleheader. Pike had no trouble in the first game 17-2, however Willie Tuten hit a home run to win the second 12-11 in the last inning of a close game. The Tigers add two wins to their record defeating the Hackers 20-5 and the Blue Ribbons 9-4 in a doubleheader. In women's softball Phi Mu defeated the P.E. Club 10-6. Alpha Gam was victorious over Theta Little Sisters 19-10. Pi Kappa Phi Little Sisters remain to be the only undefeated women's softball team. They took a win from Dental Hygiene with a score of 23-10. Pike Little Sisters took one on the nose losing to the Little Tigers 19-16.

Only two games have been played in men's water polo. In the first game Theta forfeited to Pi Kappa Phi. Pike defeated the P.E. Club 11-9 in a second game. In co-ed intertube water polo the Dolphins won over the P.E. Club 16-14 in a very exciting game. The Dolphins promise to be a very outstanding team.

In women's volleyball the Tiger Tails defeated Little Sisters of Pike, Theta Little Sisters lost to the P.E. Club, and BSV forfeited to the Little Tigers. In other games Dental Hygiene defeated Phi Mu and Alpha Gam lost to Theta's Little Sisters.

In men's volleyball the faculty claims a 3-0 record and undefeated in men's volleyball. In the Faculty's last defeat, they were victorious over the High Hammers. Also undefeated in volleyball, the Colts won over Pi Kappa Phi in an exciting game. Pi Kappa Phi captured a win in a second game winning to BSV. Pike No. 1 was defeated by the undefeated Colts. Pike No. 2 lost 2 games losing to Theta in the first game and the High Hammers in a second game.

Intramural Tennis matches begin April 21st at the ASC tennis courts. Please check the schedule posted in the gym.

Pirates Continue Streak

by Karen Arnold,
Sports Editor

FRIDAY, April 7 - Pirates fell to Columbus College, 8-7. The Pirates rallied with two-run busters in the sixth and ninth innings, but failed to gain victory. The Pirates opened their offensive attack with a three-run home run by Mike Stone in the first inning. Stone had three hits, including the three-run homer for Armstrong. Eddie Aenchbacher took the loss and his record fell to 3-3.

FRIDAY, April 14 - West

Georgia, ranked Second among the nation's small colleges, humbled ASC 20-1. Roy Griffin, the starting Pirate pitcher, was replaced after the second inning by Steve Wheeler. Kenny Morris replaced Wheeler in the fourth and ASC ended the game with Keith Ochs finishing on the mound. West Georgia was aided by a pair of two-run home runs by Gary Nare and another two-run wallop by Rodney Vining.

SATURDAY, April 15 - West Georgia swept a double header from Armstrong 7-6 and 6-2. In the first game Eddie Aenchbacher went the distance for the Pirates. In the eighth inning the Pirates got four runs but failed to squeeze past West Georgia. The Pirates played a good game, but West Georgia's Jimmy Blalock got a grand slam homer in the bottom of the ninth to decide the game. In the second game, Ted Kinder went the distance for the ASC loss. The Pirates got single runs in the second and third innings, but that was it. Mike Durkin got five hits in the two games with eight times at bat. Buddy Padgett added three hits.

MONDAY, April 17 - The ASC Pirates battled Savannah State College, but the game was called a tie, 3-3. Coach Tom Kinder took the Pirates from the field in the bottom of the eighth inning, prematurely ending the game. According to the home plate umpire (?), ASC gave up fifteen walks to Savannah State. The Pirates took a 3-0 lead in the first inning and held the Savannah State Tigers to one run until the eighth inning. For some unknown reason the SS umpire told Coach Tom Kinder that he was not going to call any strikes for ASC's pitching staff. Kinder used one half of his pitching staff and told them to throw "straight fastballs", no curves. The walks kept coming. One Savannah State run was earned, the others were given to them. After the tying runner was walked in, Armstrong made the final walk off the field.

The Pirates are now 8-17 on the season and 0-9 in the South Atlantic Conference.

Yes, ASC, There Is A Women's Tennis Team

by Linda Broussard

The Armstrong Women's tennis team began their second year of intercollegiate competition March 30 against Florida Jr. College. Returnees from last years 7-8 squad include: Sandy Eichholz (jr.) playing no. 3 singles and no. 1 doubles; Barbara Downing (jr.) playing no. 4 singles and no. 3 doubles; Amy George (jr.) playing no. 5 singles and no. 2 doubles, and Sheryl McIver

(soph.) undefeated in no. 2 singles and no. 1 doubles along with Eichholz. New faces on the squad this year include Stephanie McCarty, a very talented freshman, playing no. 1 singles and no. 2 doubles along with Amy George; Suzanne Lips, a very promising freshman playing no. 6 singles; Cheri Strickland, diligent and dedicated sophomore playing no. 3 doubles along with Barbara Downing and Lynda Broussard

(fresh.) who maintains a dual role as player and manager.

The Lady Netters' record as of now is a disappointing 1-6. However, they have lost three close, heartbreaking matches by the score of 5-4 (which the team intimately refers to as the "5-4 syndrome"). Their lone victory came against Augusta College in the Mercer Invitational, in which the Lady Netters finished third. Despite their frustrating start the women's team has not cost their competitive spirit as Coach Clayton relates.

"This year's team is more skilled than last year's. We lost our first few matches by very narrow margins which did tend to be frustrating. We're playing a tougher schedule this year, yet we're not being out-classed. If we can turn around the tie-breakers and develop the winning edge, we should finish the season very strong. I anticipate that several members of the team will do well in the state tournament in Atlanta, (May 4-7). This year's team works quite hard. They are in great shape, and this will be to our advantage during state tournament time."

So, come on out and support the women's tennis team. Their next home matches will be April 25, against Ga. College (3 p.m.), and April 27, against Augusta College (2 p.m.). Hope to see you there!!!

Sheryl McIver, Suzanne Lipe, Amy George, Stephanie McCarty, Barbara Downing, Sandi Eichholz, and Cheri Strickland.

"I'll get that backhand if it's the last thing I do!"

"Hey... What can I say?"

Amy and Stephanie put it together at the net.

The Graduates Never Forget A Friend

by Katie Daly

On April 13th, The Graduates appeared at Armstrong's Fine Arts Auditorium. All the words printed could not do justice to the fine routine this comedy trio put on. Jim Fisher, Tino Insana and Jim Staahl put on an outstanding performance for those who attended.

Calling themselves "conceptional comics" the trio got its start in Second City in Chicago. There they worked with such notables as the Saturday Night Crew who went east while they, after winning a local emmy in Chicago, decided to head west.

Now based in West Hollywood the comics travel all over the country doing their act. They write their own material with help from their audiences. The audiences provide the gestures and improvisations that the acts use. According to Jim Fisher as of right now their drunks routine is their favorite. For those who caught the show you'll all agree that the drunks along with the construction workers routine were outstanding examples of this trio's show.

Jim Fisher is the serious one in this group. He is the man behind the scenes (and in front) who watches over the other two and keeps (or tries to) Tino and Jim in line.

Tino Insana is the one who can never get his name spelled or pronounced right. While Jim Staahl is a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. Once he gets loose Jim Staahl is gone and Mr. Par-dee takes his place.

When talking with Jim Fisher he stated that they are the only comedy trio at work today. They must overcome more obstacles than a duo or a single. They must make democratic decisions as well as divide the money three ways. It ain't easy. He also said "that the more successful they become the more relaxed" which enables them to enjoy their work more.

On May 23rd The Graduates will appear on NBC's Just for Laughs. For those of you who missed their show at ASC don't make the same mistake twice. Watch your listings for the time.

And remember folks. . .An elephant never forgets a friend!

Mountaineering #1.

FUNDAMENTALS OF MOUNTAINEERING

What is mountaineering all about? Funny you should ask. Because we just happen to have an answer. (Ah-h, life's little coincidences.) Mountaineering is a skill, a science and an art. Yet anyone with a thirst for excellence and normally developed motor skills can master it. Simply study these fundamentals and follow them faithfully

1. Step one, appropriately enough, starts by selecting the correct site. To do so, pick up a bottle of Busch®. This is commonly called heading for the mountains.

2. Okay, here's where the fun begins. Hold the mountain firmly in your left hand, grasp the mountain top with your right hand and twist the little fella off. There you go.

3. Now for the tricky part. Neophytes, listen up: the proper pour is straight down the center of the glass. Only in this way will the cold, invigorating taste of the mountain come to a head.

4. Once poured, pacing becomes paramount. As any seasoned mountaineer will tell you, the only way to down a mountain is slowly, smoothly and steadily – savoring every swallow of the brew that is Busch. If you're a bit awkward at first, don't be discouraged. Perfection takes practice. Soon enough, having emptied your glass and filled your soul, you too will be a mountaineer.
