Celebrating 65 years as Georgia Southern's Official Student Newspaper

Georgia Southern University • Statesboro, GA 30460

NEWS BRIEFS

REGENTS APPROVE REQUEST FOR $230 MILLION BUILDING PROGRAM

ATLANTA (AP) — The Board of Regents is requesting money in next year's budget for almost $230 million worth of construction at Georgia's public colleges and universities.

That request, adopted Wednesday, is in addition to the $248.8 million in additional state money the board is seeking in next year's spending plan for college and university operations.

Part of the operations money would finance a 7.5 percent pay raise for university system faculty and employees.

The average faculty member in Georgia is paid a little more than $40,000 annually.

The requests now go to Gov. Zell Miller for consideration in the overall state budget recommendations he will make to the Legislature next year.

The proposed building program consists of 22 projects, ranked in order of priority. Leading the list, for $31.1 million, is a livestock and poultry center for the University of Georgia.

Under the recommendation, spending for university system operations next year would total $1.194 billion, not counting the building program.

The total would boost spending by $248.8 million, or 26.3 percent, over current levels.

The increase includes $62.8 million for the proposed pay raise; $53 million to offset budget cuts imposed on the system over the past 18 months; $25.2 million for repairs and renovations; and $35.8 million to hire extra staff to meet enrollment growth.

LAW FORCES SCHOOLS TO MAKE CAMPUS CRIME STATS AVAILABLE TO STUDENTS

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina colleges already publish many of the crime statistics required by a new federal law.

Several colleges say they have been publishing crime figures in handbooks or student newspapers in the interest of campus safety.

The Campus Security Act, which took effect last week, requires schools receiving federal money to keep track of crimes in nine categories, including murder, rape, aggravated assault, burglary and car theft.

The reports don't give details about the crimes. But they do give students a raw number to consider before deciding on a college.

The Campus Security Act was enacted after pressure from campus safety groups who complained about a lack of access to crime statistics at some schools.

"With the competition for students as it is across the country there may be some institutions that are not reporting what they should," said Dennis Pruitt, student affairs vice president at the University of South Carolina's Columbia campus.

At USC, the student newspaper publishes police incident reports almost every week.

And the school, with about 26,000 students in the heart of Columbia, has included the crime statistics in the student handbook.

Pedestrium construction continues on campus

By Eric Weisenmiller
Managing Editor

This fall quarter, the students of GSU will walk to class amid the bustle of a construction site.

Construction of Phase II of a central pedestrian stretching from the Henderson Library to the Foy Building will continue throughout the month September approaching its mid to late October completion date.

The construction, however, should cause only a minor inconvenience for pedestrian traffic according to Facilities Planning Director, Phillip Hodge, who is overseeing the $440,000 project.

"We hope to have one stretch of the walkway completed by the first week of classes," said Hodge.

"This will enable us to divert traffic to one side of the project (closer to the lake) while we work on the other side (closer to the library)."

Completion of the project has been postponed from the original completion date of October 1 due to heavy amounts of August rainfall.

When complete the pedestrian will be ornamented with elaborate landscaping and will feature a small pond containing a floating fountain located between the Blue Building and the Williams Center.

"When complete," said Hodge, "the pedestrian should add an air of permanence to the campus."

Workers on the project will lay over one and a half acres of brick by completion. Construction of pedestrian will continue into October. (Photo by Shannon Henderson)

Birds of prey sanctuary to be built near Sweetheart Circle

By Doug Gross
Editor

GSU officials announced plans this summer to begin construction on a sanctuary for bald eagles and other birds of prey native to Georgia.

The Georgia Southern University Eagle Sanctuary and The Lamar Q. Ball Jr. Raptor Center will be located on four acres off of Sweetheart Circle and is scheduled to open in about a year, creating, in addition to an educational tool for the region's students, a site for refuge and eventually breeding of rescued birds of prey.

GSU president Nicholas Henry, who announced the project, said the center will be comparable to the most sophisticated facilities of similar nature in the country.

"This is literally the best in the world; we know because we visited most of them," he said of the sanctuary, which in addition to two bald eagles, will house owls, hawks, and other species of raptors. "Georgia Southern University has become increasingly adept at doing things very well, in fact better than anyone else in the world.

"We have a number of world class collections and programs here at GSU already. This will not necessarily be the finishing touch, but it comes awful close to that," Henry said.

Also on hand for the announcement were First District congressman Lindsay Thomas, who served on the committee which first drafted legislation for the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation, and television personality Jim Fowler of Mutual of Omaha's Wild Kingdom, who is serving as honorary chairman of the project to construct the sanctuary.

"Of all the good things that have come [to GSU] ... the national championships, I don't think anything is more important or is going to be more visible and give us more credibility here than is this center," Thomas said.

Fowler, who is now a regular guest on the Today Show, said projects such as this are important in raising public awareness about environmental and ecological issues.

"I believe very much in using live animals ... to get people's attention so we can talk about the really important things that face humans," he said.

The center is expected to draw approximately 50,000 students and other visitors in its first year of completion.

Among the features of the complex will be an elevated decked walkway through the park, a two-story timber and net structure for housing the eagles, an education building with display galleries and a multi-media orientation program and a butterfly garden and wetland bog.

Steve Hein, a noted wildlife artist and falconer, will serve as director of the center. He holds both state and federal permits for the rehabilitation of birds of prey. His artwork has appeared on magazine covers and conservation stamps and has been displayed in the Georgia Governor's Mansion.

On-campus parking more precious than ever this year

By Kim St. Hilaire
News Editor

The cost of parking permits has risen to $45 this year, while 96 parking spaces have been lost to construction.

As part of GSU's master plan, which was adopted in 1990, 3,700 parking spaces will be needed over the next two years to support new construction.

This includes the Southern Center for Continuing Education, an intramural sports complex, new residence halls and academic buildings.

Each parking space costs approximately $650 to build. The total will be over $2400.

If a multi-level parking deck is ever needed, the costs would be even higher.

According to Larry Davis, Director of Auxiliary Services, "It would cost $6,000 to $7,000 per space for a parking deck."

Because GSU parking is a self supported function, it operates on user fees. Money for building parking lots and maintaining them comes from parking permits and fines.

According to Bob Chambers, Director of Parking and Transportation, "Since the user fee has been implemented, the university has netted about $700."

"So far, about 90 percent of these funds have been used for parking improvements."

Davis said, "It will take at least five years to get parking at least reasonable. It is a plan [GSU's master plan], but it's a plan that's developing slowly."

The department of parking and transportation is looking at solutions to some of the parking problems.

Possible solutions could include a transportation system within the next few years.

"If we don't have any parking spaces, we're going to make space somewhere for student parking," said Davis. "We're trying to poke every possible space we can get in there."

Arrival of Olympic flag prompts celebration in Savannah

By: Brent Parrott
Assistant News Editor

As helicopters hovered overhead, the Olympic flag sailed into Savannah with cannons firing and a crowd of thousands looking on.

The flag was greeted by Governor Zell Miller, Lt. Governor Pierre Howard, Speaker of the House Tom Murphy, and Mayor Susan Weiner.

The flag arrived at Rousakis Plaza on board the U. S. Coast Guard Barque Eagle. Marvin Arrington, President of the Atlanta City Council, brought the flag to shore. Mayor Maynard Jackson, of Atlanta, would have brought the flag to shore, but he is currently recovering from open heart surgery.

Even though there was a steady downpour of rain, the crowd's spirits were not dampened. "The weather did not help, but in spite of it, the people enjoyed it," said Doug Gross, a senior in journalism at GSU, who attended the Flag Fest.

Also on hand to greet the flag were Oscar De La Hoya, a gold medal winner in boxing, Trent Dumas, a gold medal winner in gymnastics, Mark Lenzi, a gold medalist in diving, and Rodney Smith, a bronze medalist in Greco-Roman wrestling. All the Olympians won their medals at the 1992 Summer Olympics in Barcelona.

The athletes received heroes welcomes from the crowds. "It was neat to see the Olympians and I look forward to seeing the Olympics in 1996," said Gross.

Whatizit, the Olympic mascot, made an appearance and was not booed, but did not receive much applause.

After the flag reception, there was a parade in which the GSU marching band participated in.

The day before the arrival of the flag, school children were allowed to tour an Olympic Tent Museum.

The Museum houses

photographs, posters, and programs from past Olympics. A program from the 1896 Olympics held in Greece is on display. The most popular item on display was an autographed Michael Jordan basketball jersey.

Children had the chance to talk to and get autographs from past Olympic athletes. Among some of the athletes signing autographs were Lew Whiting, who represented the United States in the Pentathlon in 1972, Martha Pennyman, who won the gold medal in the relay for the U.S. in 1960, Shirley Meadows who represented the U.S. in 1960, and Bengt Lager who represented Sweden in the Modern Pentathlon in 1976, 1980, 1984, and 1988.

"Over two thousand kids" went through the tent on the first day according to an Olympic volunteer.

Billy Payne, who started Atlanta's Olympic dream, toured the exhibit and signed

'A Day for Southern' drive begins

GSU News Service

Today will start with a bang for volunteer fund raisers of the Georgia Southern Foundation and Southern boosters Inc.

With the rap of a gavel, some 160 campaign workers will hit the streets in the 19th annual "A Day For Southern" drive.

They will visit some 800 businesses, industries and individuals to thank them for their multi-year commitments to the University Campaign for Excellence and will seek renewals of one-year pledges.

The volunteers are also asking the support of new businesses in Statesboro and Bulloch County.

"Local businesses can expect to benefit from another record enrollment at the university," said Southern Boosters President Billy Griffiths, co-chairman of the fund drive with Foundation President Bill Hatcher.

"They are not the only ones, though. The money that students - not to mention faculty and staff - spend in Bulloch County contributes significantly to local tax collections. Those taxes help pay for public services that help all residents.

"It is important that local residents focus on the impending boom that is sure to be generated when another 14,000 students arrive at Georgia Southern," said Hatcher.

"Every business in Bulloch county - every person, in fact - receives an economic boost from their presence."

Both men stressed the need for unrestricted funds to provide for scholarships and "a margin of excellence" beyond the basics of state funding.

An 8 a.m. breakfast send-off starts the day for the volunteers. A luncheon buffet from noon to 2 p.m. will give the workers a chance to report their mid-day totals, while a final report-in is set for 5 p.m. The "Victory Celebration" begins at 6:30 at the Lupton Building, with dinner served at 7 p.m. and the announcement of a grand total at 8 p.m.

Georgia Southern and its students, faculty and staff created an economic impact of about $320 million last year, with that figure projected to rise to $390 million in the 1992-93 academic year. Students alone will spend $52 million in the area for food, housing, gas and various services.

The annual On-Campus A Day For Southern, which asks for renewed support from the Georgia Southern faculty and staff, is set for October 5-8.

New dorm won't cure the housing shortage

By Kim St. Hilaire
News Editor

A 246 bed co-ed residence hall, now under construction beside Johnson Hall, will not provide enough housing to support GSU's growing population.

According to Patricia Burkett, Director of Housing, this building is not expected to be completed until winter quarter 1994 at the earliest.

Though many universities require all freshman to live on campus, GSU does not.

Burkett said freshmen and sophomores used to be required to live on campus, when GSU's population included only 6,000 students.

Now, if the residence halls were mandated to house only the freshmen, no rooms would be available for upperclassmen.

"It is possible that the freshman requirement will be reinstated in the future," said Burkett, "But personally I don't see that happening."

Another future plan to aid the housing problem is the construction of a 450 bed apartment complex on campus.

The hope is that this building will be completed by fall of 1995.

Even if the construction goes as scheduled, GSU will still face a shortage of on-campus housing facilities.

This year there are an estimated 3,000 new freshmen. By the fall of 1993 Burkett expects 2,976 beds will be available on campus.

Even in 1994, with the completion of the new, 246 bed residence hall, there will still be only 3,220 beds.

The addition of an apartment complex by 1995 will help raise the total to 3,544 beds.

The current goal of the university is to be able to provide housing for one-third of the student population.

EagleExpress will replace MFP accounts

By Stacy Jordan
Staff Writer

Auxiliary Services has changed a key service in time for fall quarter - MFP is now called the EagleExpress account.

Like MFP, the new plan can be used to pay housing damages, parking fees, vending and fees for health services.

The difference is that the EagleExpress account is not included on the registration invoice.

According to Larry Davis, Director of Auxiliary Services, "This was done because the main offices which deal with student registration and financial aid are not on the same system, so we [auxiliary services] could not obtain 100 percent accuracy."

To help individuals who are deterred from opening an account because it is not a part of registration, auxiliary services will open Sarah's dining room [downstairs in the Williams Center] Monday through Friday on the first week of school.

Help will be available to individuals who wish to open or add to their accounts.

Where will also be a tent set up with giveaways, prizes and free samples from the Coca-Cola Company.

Davis said, "As an added incentive to opening an account,

Thanks to sanctuary donors

The Georgia Southern Eagle Sanctuary now underway on Sweetheart Circle, by all accounts, should prove to be a world class facility.

The center for birds of prey not suitable to be returned to the wild will serve not only as an institution of great ecological importance but as a means of education for students of GSU and the region's elementary and high schools.

Perhaps one of the most pleasing aspects of the center's construction for students is the fact that it will be funded entirely by private donations. The center will host an estimated 50,000 visitors a year, but students would be highly unlikely to have approved of another tuition hike to cover the costs.

Local citizens who donated to the construction of the proposed sanctuary and raptor center should be highly commended.

In a town where football boosters abound and educational excellence often seems an afterthought, it's good to see area residents dig down deep to fund a project that will contribute to the campus' standing in the community and ability to serve as an educational tool for the region.

Recognition is also due to First District Congressman Lindsay Thomas, who oversaw the project from it's initial stages, and television personality Jim Fowler, a noted animal expert who has agreed to serve as the project's spokesperson.

From the students of GSU, especially those who pay their own bills, thanks.

Perkins' AIDS death was not an isolated incident

This week actor Anthony Perkins, who starred as Norman Bates in the Hitchcock thriller "Psycho," died of complications arising from the AIDS virus.

As most everyone knows, Perkins, who is survived by a wife and two sons, was not the first celebrity to die of the disease. Actor Rock Hudson, pianist Liberace and rock star Freddy Mercury all died of AIDS. Sports stars Magic Johnson and Arthur Ashe have tested positive for the HIV virus that causes AIDS.

By anyone's standards, AIDS is a public epidemic that is far from being exclusive, as once thought, to homosexuals and intravenous drug users.

Many students, especially freshmen, will be encountering more opportunities for sexual encounters than ever before during this school year. These opportunities, coupled with ready access to alcohol, may lead some to make foolish, potentially life-threatening decisions.

While the closest thing to a sure-fire method for preventing the disease is abstinence, there are steps to take to greatly decrease chances of coming in contact with AIDS.

Wearing a condom has proven to be the most effective method of blocking the spread of the virus. The few moments of inconvenience caused by putting on a condom are a small price to pay compared to the possible consequences of not doing so.

Secondly, it doesn't hurt to take the time to get to know your partner.

The joys of the quick score and the one night stand have become increasingly dangerous in recent years. It now pays physically, not to mention emotionally, to reserve sexual intimacy to a partner with whom you feel comfortable enough to ask about such touchy subjects as AIDS testing.

By doing so, students may very well be saving their own lives.

Campaign '92? George Bush vs. Old Yeller

I had always heard the term "yellow dog Democrat," but I never had it defined for me until this summer.

For those readers unfamiliar with the phrase, a yellow dog Democrat is a voter, often found in southern states such as Georgia, who would rather vote for a yellow dog than a Republican.

While I like to consider myself fairly independent politically, the truth is I find the Republican philosophy pretty offensive and may very possibly fall into the yellow dog category. To find out, I decided to test myself by creating a fictitious presidential race and decide how I would vote.

Picking a Republican was easy. George Bush has served a president for four years and vice-president for eight, making him a perfect representative for the G.O.P.

Now all I needed was a yellow dog.

Some south Georgia hunters may have an advantage over me here, but the only yellow dog who came to mind was Old Yeller, star of the Disney movie of the same name.

While an ex-movie star may not make a very good president, he would have to do.

Having chosen my candidates, I decided to go against the trend of most political races and actually focus on some issues. While it may have been more fun to try to dig up some good sleaze on the two (Exactly what were you and Lassie doing on that garbage truck, Mr. Yeller?) I felt I should keep it clean.

Issue one: Loyalty

If I remember correctly, Old Yeller once fought off a bear or some other such nasty beast to protect his owner, risking his life in the process. Pretty loyal.

Bush, on the other hand, swore he wouldn't raise taxes, a promise he knew he couldn't keep, then blamed Congress when he did.

Old Yeller - 1 Bush - 0

Issue two: Domestic policy

President Bush, it seems, has a little bit of a problem relating to the common man. He grew up wealthy and attended an Ivy league school where he joined a secret fraternity that digs up famous dead people's bones and puts them on display.

Yeller was the pet of a poor farming family, and while he may have gnawed on a bone or two in his time, he certainly never displayed any of them for his fraternity brothers. His background should make him strong on such issues as agriculture and dealing with poverty. Definitely the working man's candidate.

Old Yeller - 2 Bush - 0

Issue three: Foreign policy

With his twelve years of experience in the White House, Bush is counting on this to be one of his strong points.

All I can say is that Old Yeller survived for years on table scraps and could almost certainly digest anything served to him by the Japanese prime minister without vomiting it back into the man's lap.

Old Yeller - 3 Bush - 0

Issue four: Crime

Bush declared a "war on drugs," which obviously involves cracking down on the kids on the street while the drug kingpins importing the stuff sit on their yachts and pop the cork on another bottle of Dom Perignon. From the looks of things in America's cities, it's not working.

Yeller would not only be able pass drug legislation, he would be able to enforce it by person-nature. The only creature that comes close is the male South Pacific Groping Beetle, which sometimes, just before mating, will slap on a little Aqua Velva. But we think this resulted from atomic testing.

So we have to conclude that Mother Nature never intended us to shave. On the other hand, Mother Nature is not exactly a rocket scientist. Of all the places on the human body where she could grow hair, for some reason she selected the armpit. This makes no sense. An armpit is the LAST place that needs to be kept warm. You hardly ever hear anybody say: "Boy! My armpits are COLD!" In fact, armpits are such an abundant natural source of warmth that leading ecology-conscious fast-food restaurants are now using them to heat specialty sandwiches. ("Yo Tony! Stick two more Cordon Bleu Burgers under there!")

But getting back to Sue Ann's questions:

Men started shaving in prehistoric times. What happened was, some men were sitting around, watching a prehistoric, pre-ball version of baseball, which consisted of nine men standing on a field and scratching themselves. During a break in the action, humanity's first, commercial occurred when a man named "Gillette" got up and showed the other men that if they scraped a sharpened stone across their beards, they could tear out chunks of hair and flesh. This seemed pretty masculine to everybody, so all the men purchased sharpened stones, which immediately became obsolete when Gillette introduced a startling new shaving advance: two sharpened stones.

Since then there have been thousands of startling shaving advances for men. One day soon the Gillette company will announce the development of a razor that, thanks to a computer microchip, can actually travel ahead in time and shave beard hairs that don't even exist yet. Men will buy this razor. Men can get into shaving, because it reminds them of what stud hombres they are, having to tame their manliness on a regular basis. "I have to shave!" men will announce, semiproudly, in public.

Women, on the other hand, tend to shave in secret. I was in college before I found out that women could even GROW leg hair. This is because the shaving and pantyhose industries have spent millions of dollars convincing American society that female body hair is somehow unnatural, so that a REAL woman has smooth, silky legs and armpits, with the ultimate example of vibrant womanhood being: Barbie. (Years ago, Mattel did come out with a "Stubble Barbie" model, but it was a big bust.) (Of course ALL Barbies have big busts, but that is not my point.) (As far as I know.)

So basically women shave for the same reason that they wear makeup and walk around in shoes designed by Nazi medical researchers. They've been brainwashed into believing that if they don't shave, other women will snicker at them, and the only males who will be attracted to them will be members of the gorilla and tarantula families. This is nonsense. There are many cultures in which women do not shave their legs OR their armpits, and, speaking as a man, let me say that I find many of these women to be exceedingly attractive, under certain lighting conditions.

The point, Sue Ann, is that you don't HAVE to shave. And neither do you men out there. There are many examples of successful, respected men with beards, such as Abraham Lincoln, Kenny Rogers, God, and Richard Nixon after about 10:30 a.m. A person's value has nothing to do with that person's bodily hair. That is the wonderful thing about this great sport we call tennis.

ally sniffing out offenders. Ever heard of a drug dog? He would also be able to use his status as a dog to inspire McGruff to new levels of greatness.

Old Yeller - 4 Bush - 0
Issue five: The debate

Bush is known for his public speaking ability, but I feel Old Yeller would win an open debate hands down (or paws down as the case may be). If Bush tried to introduce some pretty sounding but factually bankrupt line like "a thousand points of light" into the debate, Yeller could simply scramble over the podium and bite the president on the leg.

After a few of these attacks Bush would likely be too intimidated to say anything.

It's not a pretty tactic, but hey, it's a dog eat dog world.

Old Yeller - 5 Bush - 0

The results of this mock election are pretty clear. Old Yeller, in the mind of this highly analytical writer, would make a far better executive officer than George Bush. The only step left is for him to choose a running mate.

I wonder what Flipper is doing these days.

Stratford Hall to be re-opened

By Selena E. McKinnon
Staff Writer

Fall quarter of 1992 will mark the reopening of Stratford Hall. The dorm has been under renovation as the result of a fire in 1989 caused by a candle burning in a student's room.

The reason the dorm was not renovated sooner is due to complications with the insurance money.

According to Patricia Burkett, Director of Housing, "We were waiting to get the insurance situation cleared up."

The renovation costs totaled $1.2 million.

Before renovation, Stratford Hall provided housing for 140 women, and had a communal bathroom on each floor.

Upon reopening in September, the dorm will house 66 men and 64 women, and will have two bathrooms on each floor. The men and women will live on different sides of the building.

Each room will remain its original size, but will contain new equipment.

Students were given the opportunity to apply for dorm space by registration number during Fall quarter pre-registration.

"Stratford hall filled within two hours with returning students," says Burkett who attributes this to the fact that a lot of students wanted to move back on campus.

Even with Stratford reopening in the fall, a lot of students are on waiting lists for on campus housing.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The stories on this page are updated from the files of The George-Anne's editions published during summer quarter.

Burkett says, "Five hundred students are on a waiting list right now."

Of the 500 students on waiting lists, 423 of them are new students. The 77 returning students have been on a waiting list since April.

"I think this is partly due to the rapid growth at GSU," says Burkett.

Currently two other new dorms are under development, and are expected to be completed in 1994.

911 coming in December

By Kimi Hall

Guest Writer

The residents of Bulloch County will receive an extra Christmas present this December from their commissioners and their telephone company. This present will be an Emergency 911 (E911) system.

The E911 system will open a new avenue for obtaining fast emergency service. When a call is placed to 911, the operator will be qualified to dispatch any emergency unit needed by the caller.

Students at GSU will also have the 911 service available to them.

"The system will allow a quicker response for the campus," said Ted Wynn, E911 Director. "There is a greater need on campus for the service due to the high concentration of people in one area."

When a call is placed to 911, the street address, the phone number and the geographical location of the caller will immediately be displayed on the 911 operator's computer screen. There will also be a map displayed on the screen to enable the operator to give accurate directions to the emergency units that are dispatched.

For students living on the GSU campus, the name of the residence hall and the room number will appear on the operator's computer screen.

Since the location of the caller will appear on a screen when 911 is dialed, this will enable young children to place an emergency call. If a child is able to dial 9-1-1, emergency help will be on its way.

The 911 system will be operational Sept. 1, 1992, but will not take any calls until Dec. 1, 1992. This three month time lapse will be used to train the operators on the 911 system.

When a call is placed to 911, the call will go through even if the caller hangs up before the operator answers. The operator will call the number displayed on the screen; if no one answers, a policeman is immediately dispatched to the location of the call.

Anyone who decides to "prank" the 911 operators will be in for a big surprise when a policeman shows up at their door within 3 to 4 minutes.

Former Eagle football star Berry cleared of charges

From Staff Reports

Former GSU football standout Michael Berry breathed a sigh of relief on Tuesday, June 30, when drug trafficking charges pending against him were dismissed in Chatham County Records Court.

Berry was arrested along with four other men on June 9 at Savannah's DeSoto Hilton by the Savannah Police Department's Tactical Reaction and Prevention (TRAP) unit.

Anthony Wilkins, William Farley III, and Arthur Weaver, all of Atlanta, and James

Moore of Statesboro were each taken into custody along with Berry after a raid by police at the hotel rendered one kilo of cocaine and $12,040 in cash.

Charges against Wilkins, Farley and Weaver were also dismissed Tuesday.

Berry was reported to have been on his way to Charleston, South Carolina to visit his girlfriend after obtaining a ride to Savannah with Moore, his cousin.

While in Savannah, Berry was arrested with the other three men in a park near the hotel after police had arrested

Moore inside the hotel where they found him in a room with the cash and illegal drugs.

Berry subsequently spent eight days in the Chatham County Jail.

The charges originally brought against him were dropped after prosecutors determined that there was insufficient evidence to pursue any further legal action against Berry and the three other men.

In light of his role model status in the community of Statesboro, Berry expressed concern with what his ordeal may have implied to the members of the community especially the youth.

"He was very happy to have his name cleared. There was a period when everything was hanging in limbo where people may have assumed the worst, now he is very enthusiastically looking forward to returning to school in the fall," said McIntyre.

As a result of the dismissal of charges, Berry's suspension from the university was lifted.

He plans to return to GSU to resume work toward a degree in Industrial Management.

Fill this seat now. Fill this one later.

Stay in school. Learn all you can in such specialties as Engineering, Accounting, Geology, Marketing, Management, Computer Science or Business Administration.

Lollapalooza '92: Alternative rockers land at Lakewood

By Doug Gross
EditorLollapalooza '92
Lakewood Amphitheater
August 20, 1992

The 1992 edition of Lollapalooza, brainchild of Jane's Addiction front man Perry Farrell, rolled into Atlanta's Lakewood Amphitheater August 20, featuring seven bands, a circus sideshow and a bevy of other attractions for an estimated crowd of 19,000.

Concert-goers who could pry themselves away from information booths set up by such groups as PETA, the NRA, pro-choice and pro-life organizations and various communes were treated to the alternative sounds of Lush, Pearl Jam, Jesus and Mary Chain, Soundgarden, Ice Cube, Ministry and the Red Hot Chili Peppers.

Lush, pioneers in the recent onslaught of British drone-rock, took the stage in the unenviable opening slot and, from the look of amphitheater seating, more Lollapaloozers were interested in the two guys bashing televisions in the midway's "Crush Cage" than the day's opening act. Their set did sound a bit like one long song, so these folks may have had the right idea.

Picking up the pace and drawing the crowd to their seats were Pearl Jam, who played MTV hits "Alive" and "Jeremy" as well as a loose cover of The Who's "Baba O'Reilly" in an energetic set highlighted by lead singer Eddie Vedder's sprint to the back wall of the amphitheater and dive into the arms of a luckily supportive audience.

Vedder was also responsible for the first of the concert's many political statements.

"It's good to see you all one last time ...," he said. "Because if the Republicans win I'm leaving the country and I'm never coming back."

Notably less political, and entertaining, were Jesus and Mary Chain. Once billed as the next Sex Pistols, the British post-punk outfit lacked the energy and spontaneity of most of the day's acts. Highlights of the set were "Blues From a Gun" and "Head On," which was recently covered by Boston act the Pixies, but neither made up for the eardrum-annihilating feedback produced by their set-ending noise act.

Next was the sonic boom of Soundgarden, perhaps the most successful of the grunge acts until Nirvana conquered the world last year.

Lead singer Chris Cornell, the unofficial sex god of the Seattle noise pack, led the group through a set which included a middle-finger-in-the-air cover of the controversial Ice-T/Body Count song "Cop Killer."

Well, he did it again. Deion Sanders has lit the hearts of many a Falcons fan with a rather rapid return of a kickoff for a cool 99 yards.

Yes, Deion has polished off every facet of his game, including the Hammer-esque touchdown celebration after such a long, winding run.

He is the exemplification of the athlete-showman. He tackles, he runs with the speed of a cheetah on the bases and on the gridiron, hits home runs and most importantly, puts fannies in the seats. Can you imagine his resume? It would go on and on much like the Energizer Bunny.

However, in the middle of his contract problems with the Falcons, he just could not handle the heat of the media. At one point, he refused interviews, leaving an answer sheet to reporters of: No, No, Yes, etc....

When you think about it, flashy Deion has put this all upon himself. Between the gold chains, the raucous touchdown jubiliations, and the commercials, he has not only created a sideshow for the media, but a full-blown three ring circus.

Don't get me wrong, I enjoy watching Deion play both sports, but his refusal to talk to reporters will not help him one bit.

I have an incredible amount of respect for a man who can play both sports to the high degree that he does. No one is more exciting when they're on the field.

In fact, I can remember last year when Deion had trouble hitting his weight in batting average with the Braves. Now he's hitting around .310 which shows how hard he worked in the off-season.

Even his defense has improved, especially in the mental department. I have not seen him miss a cut-off man all year, and his speed going back on balls in center has killed more than a few opposing team's rallies.

But now that the Braves have Lonnie Smith emerging yet again from six feet under, the Braves can afford to lose him until they begin post-season play.

They cannot afford to lose him to injury, however. Football is a high-risk sport whether you're a referee, or a punter.

No matter how much padding you've got on, it won't stop the pain of running on AstroTurf or heal torn muscles.

When you get right down to it, Deion's human. So when he gets hurt, gets the flu, or just has a bad game, you'll understand, right?

No matter what happens, you can be sure we'll be seeing more of Deion in the weeks, months, and years to come.

Deion's main two-sport competition, Bo Jackson, still hasn't given up his comeback bid to at least play baseball after receiving a new artificial hip after receiving a bone-crushing hit taken as a Raider running back.

Maybe Deion will think about this the next ball he tries to catch, or defender he seeks to stop. He can't afford to, because in the millisecond it takes for the thought to go through his head, it could mean the end of his career.

Let's hope not. After all, who would Nike put in their commercials, the failed decathlete Dan O'Brien? Maybe we won't have to find out.

GSU Football team beats Valdosta State 24-13

By Eric Weisenmiller
Managing Editor

After experiencing the disappointment of a 28-17 opening day defeat at the hands of the Florida A&M Rattlers a week earlier, Coach Tim Stowers' Eagles were determined to return to the winning ways of past seasons as they readied themselves to square off against Valdosta State in their second home game of the season.

In front of a crowd of more than 12,500 at Paulson Stadium last Saturday the Eagles ran their record to 1-1 by downing the Blazers 24-13 on the strength of three Charles Bostick touchdowns.

Bostick's performance fended off some fan dissention which favored Joe Dupree, a transfer from the University of Georgia, for the starting spot at QB.

The decision to start Bostick was left up in the air until game time when number seven trotted onto the field.

Dupree also saw some action relieving Bostick with 5:36 remaining in the first half. He picked-up a total of 51 yards rushing on the day.

Bostick rushed for 106 yards on the afternoon and also found some success in the air completing four of five pass attempts for 75 yards including a 39 yard strike to junior split end Darren Willis which set up GSU's final touchdown.

The drive which was capped off by a two-yard run by Bostick half way through the fourth quarter. This score sealed the victory for the Eagles.

"I was very pleased with Charles' performance today," said Stowers. "I felt the criticism of his performance against Florida A&M was unjustified."

After clinging to a slim 10-7 halftime lead, a 53-yard Bostick scoring scamper which came in the second minute of the fourth quarter put the Eagles ahead 17-7.

"Charles made the big play when we needed it," said Stowers.

Valdosta got on the board first by taking the opening kickoff 80 yards in less than four minutes of the first quarter by chipping away at the Eagle defense using the short passing game of VSC's quarterback Chris Hatcher.

The drive culminated with a 39-yard scoring strike from Hatcher to Calvin Walker.

Hatcher attempted a grand total of 44 passes completing 34 of them for 284 yards and two touchdowns.

Despite good field position throughout the game, GSU was plagued by penalties and a somewhat sluggish offensive unit which failed to capitalize on numerous opportunities.

"I was disappointed that we couldn't take advantage of our good field position," said Stowers.

GSU racked-up 114 of the 212 yards of penalties assessed in the game, some of which came at crucial moments.

"Personal fouls will not be tolerated as long as I am coach here. It is unacceptable - the sign of an undisciplined team," said Stowers.

The GSU defensive performance was highlighted by cornerback Marco Bradham's first career interception which helped to stifle a Valdosta State comeback attempt.

The Eagles now face an off week as they prepare to meet the Paladins of Furman University in two weeks in Greenville, SC.

The Savannah State game which was originally scheduled for this Saturday has been rescheduled for Saturday, October 3 at Paulson Stadium.

Bostick delivers in clutch to give Eagles first victory

By Aaron Solomon
Staff Writer

Last Saturday the Georgia Southern Eagles marched on to the gridiron to do battle with the Rattlers of Florida A&M University.

The Eagles wanted to prove that they had a team that is ready for play-off contention. The Eagles ended up losing 28-17 to the Rattlers. The one highlight was quarterback Joe Dupree scrambling for a 44-yard touchdown run.

After the game the fans reaction was that Dupree should be the starting quarterback, but head coach Tim Stowers stuck with Charles Bostick. Bostick, who was coming off of a shaky start against FAMU, was to start against the Blazers of Valdosta State College in front of a crowd that was looking for Dupree to start for the Eagles.

The Eagles needed a win, and they needed a quarterback to lead the offense. Bostick had a lot to prove and he did it in a big way. Whether it was breaking a tackles on one of his several rushes, or connecting with a pass, Bostick delivered. The Eagles defeated Valdosta State College 24-13.

What does this victory do for the Eagles? "Coming out Saturday and playing good football against a team like Valdosta State really helped us," said Bostick on Saturday's game against Valdosta State, "we got some young guys in and had a good game."

Bostick had a good game against VSC, a performance that included 3 rushing touchdowns, but Furman lies ahead. "They have a real good program and every time we play them its a good game its a good game," said Bostick.

Of course there is still the decision on who is going to start at quarterback. Both Dupree and Bostick are good quarterbacks, but according to Bostick, "It's whomever is going to help the team win."

By John Munford
Sports Editor

The BIG question for Saturday's football game, on the minds of GSU fans everywhere was which quarterback head coach Tim Stowers would use to open the game against Valdosta State.

The BIG answer was Charles Bostick, who responded to Stowers' confidence with a great performance.

Bostick orchestrated a quick seven play drive that eclipsed with his two-yard run for Southern's first touchdown of the game.

He also had a 33-yard touchdown run that gave GSU a 17-7 lead, finishing with a 1-yard run to put the Eagles up to 24-7 and never looking back.

Joe Dupree, Bostick's main competition, spelled him with Georgia Southern Quarterback Charles Bostick.

6:39 to go in the second quarter, a drive that ended with a field goal by kicker Reed

Haley.

Stowers feels that all criticism of Bostick's performance against FAMU was unfair: "It's unfair to compare Bostick and Dupree... Bostick made a good play when we needed it."

Stowers also mentioned that he might continue with his two-quarterback system: "It makes the opposition have to prepare for two quarterbacks and not just one."

"Charles is also much quicker without his knee brace on," Stowers reasons as to Bostick's greatly improved running performance against Valdosta State.

Senior split end Terrence Sorrell feels confident in both Dupree and Bostick: "Whoever takes this team can lead this team to victory."

Soccer team improves mark to 2-1

By Chris Sherwood
Staff Writer

The Georgia Southern men's Soccer team won its opening game of the season against Mercer.

It was a tough game for GSU because Mercer returned 10 of their 11 starters from the previous year. GSU took the lead 1-0 only to be tied up shortly after. Midway through the second half, they took the lead for good. Although GSU did win the game, they did have a few chances to score.

On September 8th, our soccer team left for a three day trip in which they faced Georgia State and Clemson.

The team left mid-morning to arrive for the game in Atlanta, but because of some difficulties with the vans, did not arrive until 3:15.

The game was slated to start at 3:30, so the team had no time to warm up. Even though Georgia State would not give Georgia Southern time to warm up, we still beat them 4-2.

Southern was down 2-1, but then our guys started to loosen up and put the game away with three straight scores.

The other game on this abrupt two game trip was against 6th ranked Clemson. The Tigers were undefeated and playing in front of a pumped up crowd. GSU came into the game undefeated and believing that they could beat the Tigers.

Clemson capitalized on a few mistakes by GSU and took a 3-0 lead at half. GSU played much tighter and better in the second half. GSU had a few chances to score in the game, but just could not get them to materialize.

The final score was Clemson 5, GSU 0. GSU returned to Statesboro with an overall record of 2-1. The next game for GSU is against North Florida.

Owners pressure Vincent into resignation because of the best interests of baseball

By Bob Rubin
Knight-Ridder News papers

MIAMI — For those interested in becoming the next commissioner of baseball (if there is one), here are the qualifications:

Must come when called, heel, roll over and play dead. Those with spines need not apply. Look under "L" for Lackey in the classifieds.

In the smear campaign that preceded their 18-9-1 vote of no confidence, baseball owners and their representatives accused Fay

Vincent of being arrogant, stubborn and dictatorial. They must have been looking in the mirror.

What the owners were really saying was Vincent refused to do their bidding. The fool actually believed he had a higher calling, that his job was to represent all segments of the game, players and fans — especially fans — as well as owners.

Talk about naivete, Vincent thought his broad power to act "in the best interests of baseball" actually meant something. Talk about gall, the man concluded that baseball's best interests were not always synonymous with the owners' best interests.

This was intolerable to the owners, who think because they own teams, they own baseball.

They are wrong. There were owners before them and there will be owners after them. But baseball goes on.

Vincent was forced to resign for one reason: He was too independent.

The perfect example was realignment. Anyone with a fourth-grade knowledge of geography could see the switches Vincent ordered were correct and necessary. An overwhelming majority of owners agreed but were powerless to act in the face of a Cubs' veto, which was based solely on selfish monetary considerations.

But when Vincent took the responsibility to move, the Cubs took him to court and the owners ripped him for overstepping his bounds.

Where Vincent really crossed the line with the barons was his involvement in bottom-line affairs. He made enemies with his allocation of expansion funds. He made enemies back in 1990 when he intervened in collective bargaining talks between the players and owners, preventing a lockout by owners. He angered owners when he refused their demand he stay out of future negotiations.

That would throw a monkey wrench into their not-so-secret thoughts of reopening the collective bargaining agreement in December, locking out the players in the spring and keeping them out until they break the union — their goal all along.

Baseball faces a daunting array of serious, complex problems.

Salaries are soaring and revenues, notably those from television, are shrinking. Attendance is down in many cities, and the income gap between big- and small-market franchises grows ever greater. The current TV contract runs out at the end of this season; the collective bargaining agreement after '93.

All these issues must be addressed. To deal with them successfully will require unprecedented vision, cooperation and, yes, sacrifice from both owners and players. History doesn't give much hope it will happen. Both sides traditionally have cared only about their own interests rather than the best interests of the game.

The man who tried to act in baseball's best interests was forced to resign. His office will likely be abolished or weakened to figurehead status, and there will be no one to stand up to either the owners or players if and when they betray their trust as stewards of our national game.

Fay Vincent wasn't perfect, but he was a man of integrity who truly loved baseball and took seriously his mandate to preserve and protect it. His departure, and all it portends, is ominous, indeed, for all who cherish the game.

Tough decision for student athletes to choose

By Aaron Solomon
Staff Writer

GSU football has had a history of good recruiting. A history that includes four NCAA I-AA national Championships. But no matter how good the recruiter is the final decision rests in the hands of the player.

Every year several talented athletes are chosen to play football, some athletes accept the offer and some decide on other schools that are in Division I-A. But what makes a athlete decide on a Division I-AA school over a I-A school?

Redshirt freshman linebacker Stephen Leblanc was faced with this decision. When asked what persuaded him to come GSU, he said,

"there was something about those schools they did not make me feel right, but after coming here I knew that Georgia Southern was the place."

Leblanc is enthusiastic about working with the coaching staff and is looking forward to playing for the Eagles in the future.

Leblanc and several other athletes were faced with the decision of were to play football. Whether it is southern hospitality, academics, or a good football program, some athletes feel GSU is the place to be.

Lady Eagles volley for victory

By John Munford
Sports Editor

The GSU Lady Eagle volleyball team ran their season record to 3-0 Sunday with a three games to none victory over visiting Florida A&M University.

FAMU put up a fight in the first two matches, losing by a score of 15-11 in both games. They lost what little momentum they had, relenting to a sound 15-7 defeat in the third game.

The three match sweep of FAMU gave the Lady Eagles a record of nine straight match victories over one away game, one home game and one neutral site.

Alexis Dankulic leads the team with 27 kills in 61 total attempts. Jennifer McNally has become a reliable setter for the Lady Eagles with 50 successful sets. Julie Ciezkowski leads the team with 10 service aces.

Their next home game will be against Armstrong State in Hanner Fieldhouse tomorrow.

Roomies run amok: thieves, leeches, slobs

By T.J. Howard
Chicago Tribune

If thoughts of stuffy classrooms, all-night cram sessions and cafeteria mystery meat don't instill a healthy degree of trepidation in the hearts of returning boarding school or college students, try this one on: Roommate Surprise.

While Jennifer Jason Leigh's sociopathic character in "Single White Female" provides Bridget Fonda with the best Roommate from Hell story of all time, some of the tales we've heard from students past and present are just as horrifying — because they're real.

But you be the judge. Here are our favorites — with some tips from Chicago-area resident advisers:

"During finals, my roommate stole my textbooks and sold them back to the bookstore, using the proceeds to buy a plane ticket to visit her boyfriend in another city," says Tina, a '91 grad of Michigan State University in East Lansing, Mich. "I had to both borrow books from friends and buy new ones to study for finals. Not only was I out money, but I also lost all the highlighting from my previous reading and was convinced I didn't do as well on tests because of it. When I confronted my roommate later, she confessed, but rationalized her behavior by saying I had more money."

Advice: "The fact you had more money than your roommate was no excuse (for her actions)," says Michael Metzger, resident adviser at Northwestern University. "She probably has more money than other people, but that doesn't give them the right to steal from her. You might try pointing that out." Metzger advises seeking reimbursement for the books and reporting the situation to authorities. "If you don't want to get her in trouble with campus officials or the police, try talking to her parents," says Metzger. "You're not doing her any favors by letting her off the hook. It's sending a bad message. Also, you need to learn to defend your own property."

"One of my roommates attached herself to me and wanted to be best friends. She wouldn't go anywhere or do anything unless I went with her," recalls Sara a junior at Luther College in Decorah, Iowa. "I make friends easily and wanted to spend time with other people. She resented it and we often had fights; she complained that I didn't spend enough time with her." Semester break came and went. And when Sara returned to school, she found her roommate's bunk empty. "She had dropped out of school, leaving a letter behind for our other roommate that blamed me (for her dropping out). She charged me with mental cruelty and said I had ruined her life."

Advice: Tim Armour, resident hall secretary at De Paul University, says, sit down and talk with her. Suggest other opportunities, such as joining organizations that appeal to her and also give her a chance to meet other people. Be open and honest. Remember, you are not a baby-sitter, but at the same time, it might be helpful if you can put yourself in her place and recall a time when you felt lonely.

"During my junior year, I had a roommate who had a bad habit of taking things without permission," recalls Cathleen, a '91 graduate of St. Mary's College in Notre Dame, Ind. "We were the same size, so she would raid my closet at least once a week without asking. Once she 'borrowed' a brand new outfit I had never even worn and took it to Florida over spring break. After looking for it for weeks, I finally searched her closet and found it at the bottom of her laundry bag." Not only had the white short outfit been worn, it now bore a red Kool-Aid stain, says Cathleen. "When I confronted her with the evidence, she got mad at me for getting into her closet."

Advice: Sheeba Eipe, a resident adviser at the University of Illinois at Chicago, says: I would sit the roommates down together in a room and have them discuss the issue. At our school, students fill out "Roommate Agreements" at the beginning of every semester where they write down their feelings about sleeping habits, dorm-room guests and sharing possessions. Possible solutions here: Reimbursing the roommate for the outfit; rewriting the Roommate Agreement making closets officially off-limits to each other; or changing roommates. The latter is usually the last alternative. Living together is an educational experience. We want students to confront and learn from their roommate problems, not avoid the issue.

Matt, a junior at the University of Chicago who lives in off-campus housing, says: I room with a girl. The problem is her boyfriend is the biggest pig I've ever met. Most recently, my roommate was out of town, but her boyfriend dropped over to "hang out." He has keys and let himself in while I was gone, made dinner and trashed both the kitchen and the bathroom. Every time I say something to my roommate, she says she'll talk to her boyfriend and it will never happen again. Then it happens again.

Advice: Metzger at Northwestern University, says: Direct communication is always the best answer. Try talking to the boyfriend instead of going through your roommate. People often (mistakenly) take one trait and generalize it. For example, if the boyfriend is a slob, then you might also assume he is unreasonable, which is not necessarily true.

"I almost transferred to another school because of this roommate," recalls Therese, an '88 Boston College grad. "I could never get in my room because my roommate would lock the door while she was inside entertaining her boyfriend. It happened at night, during the middle of the day. I probably spent five nights out of the week sleeping in someone else's room."

Advice: Sam and Sue Armato, resident heads at the University of Chicago, say they would try to preserve both roommates' rights to the room. The student with the boyfriend has a right to have him visit, they say, but her freedom ends when she begins to infringe on her roommate. If the roommate and her boyfriend are going to engage in romantic activities, either take it to a hotel, another room (the boyfriend's), or pick an evening when the roommate plans to be out, suggest the Armatos.

25. Get in the family car with a friend and pretend to go for a drive.
26. Pull off a scab.
27. Take the labels off all the canned goods in your cupboards and roll the cans on the floor.
28. Build a fort out of furniture in the basement. Defend it from your parents with a whiffle-ball bat.
29. Play some 33 rpm records at 45 rpm.
30. Jump off the garage.
31. Set small controlled fires in the basement.
32. Ring a neighbor's doorbell and run away.
33. Walk around the house backwards.
34. Pull the heads off all your dolls. Put the wrong heads on the wrong bodies.
35. Turn on all the lights and electrical appliances in the house.
36. Blow bubbles with your own saliva.
37. Disassemble a pen.
38. Repeat everything somebody says until you get slugged.
39. Suck your thumb.
40. Chew a piece of gum. Take it out of your mouth. Stretch it, smoosh it, roll it into a ball, and stick it to the underside of a piece of furniture.
41. Pour Elmer's glue on your hand. Wait for it to dry, then peel off the dried glue as if it were your skin.
42. Make prank phone calls to people with funny names in the phone book. (Sample call: "Is this Mr. Hamburger? It is? Then you should go back to McDonald's.")
43. Start a rubber band fight.
44. Delete some files from Mom or Dad's home computer.
45. Go through family photo albums and cut up some photos to make your own composite pictures.
46. Blow air into a plastic bag. Sneak up behind an unsuspecting victim and pop the bag.
47. See how many crackers you can jam into your mouth.
48. Spin around in circles until you can no longer stand up. Lie flat on the floor and feel the room spin.
49. Look up dirty words in the dictionary.
50. Go through trash bins. Take home whatever you find.

BINKY'S GUIDE TO LOVE

THOUGHT WE HAD AN UNSPOKEN
AGREEMENT.

CHAPTER XX:
QUESTIONABLE
LINES

LOVE SECRET #23: YOUR PARTNER'S
ATTEMPTS TO BE NICE CAN BE DEFEATED
EFFORTLESSLY JUST BY REPEATING THE TEN MAGIC WORDS.

YOU'RE JUST SAYING WHAT YOU THINK
I WANT TO HEAR.

DON'T GET ME WRONG, BUT WOULD YOU CARE TO DO THE HOKEY POKEY?	I INSIST YOU COME TO MY POETRY READING.	I CAN TELL YOU HATE GETTING OLD AND WRINKLED AS MUCH AS I DO.	PLEASE PARDON THE SMELL OF INSECTICIDE, BUT YOU WOULDN'T BELIEVE THE DAY I HAD.
I DON'T MEAN TO SOUND IMMODEST, BUT I AM GODS GIFT TO WOMEN.	IS THERE SOMEONE FOLLOWING ME?	DO YOU BELIEVE IN OBSSIVE LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT?	MY CAR BATTERY IS DEAD. YOU GOT ANY SPARE JUMPER CABLES? BY THE WAY, YOU'RE BEAUTIFUL.
DO YOU KNOW HOW MANY CONTAMINANTS THE FDA ALLOWS IN THAT SNACK YOU'RE EATING?	I HAVE EVERY EPISODE OF "STAR TREK" ON TAPE. YOU BUSY SATURDAY?	ARE YOU A LOST SOUL TOO?	YOU MAY RECOGNIZE ME FROM MY INFOMERCIALS.
CAN I TELL YOU A SHOCKING PERSONAL SECRET?	SOMEONE'S GOT A RUN IN HER PANTYHOSE	LET ME GIVE YOU MY PHILOSOPHY IN A NUTSHELL.	HI, MY NAME IS BINKY, BUT YOU CAN CALL ME BY MY NICKNAME: SAFE-SEX CHARLIE.

GRIMMY... WHAT WAS THE MAILMAN YELLING ABOUT?	OH... ABOUT TWENTY-FIVE MINUTES.

I'M ALWAYS SO DEPRESSED...
EVERY MORNING I
WAKE UP IN THE DOG HOUSE!

GRIMMY, ATTILA, I CAN'T FINISH MY STEAK... WOULD YOU LIKE TO HAVE IT?	WE ARE NOT WORTHY! WE ARE NOT WORTHY!

IRONICALLY, THE TIME TO START
SAVING FOR RETIREMENT IS WHEN IT LOOKS LIKE YOU CAN LEAST AFFORD IT.

Can't afford to save for retirement?
The truth is, you can't afford not to.
Not when you realize that your retirement can last 20 to 30 years or more. You'll want to live at least as comfortably then as you do now. And that takes planning.

By starting to save now, you can take advantage of tax-deferral and give your money time to compound and grow.
Consider this: set aside just $100 each month beginning at age 30 and you can accumulate over $192,539* by the time you reach age 65. But wait ten years and you'll have to budget $227 each month to reach the same goal.

Even if you're not counting the years to retirement, you can count on TIAA-CREF to help you build the future you deserve—with flexible retirement and tax-deferred annuity plans, a diverse portfolio of investment choices, and a record of personal service that spans 75 years.

Over a million people in education and research put TIAA-CREF at the top of their list for retirement planning. Why not join them?

Call today and learn how simple it is to build a secure tomorrow when you have time and TIAA-CREF working on your side.

Start planning your future. Call our Enrollment Hotline 1 800 842-2888.

Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™
