Is ASC Nursing In Danger?

by David R. Dorondo

As is now known to almost everyone in Savannah, the final decision of the Board of Regents as regards Armstrong State and Savannah State will involve the sending of Armstrong's Business Department to S.S.C. and the transfer of Savannah States Teacher Education Program to A.S.C. Granted, the ruling was not very popular for either institution but there was, realistically, very little either school could do in order to prevent the departmental swap.

Just as the initial furor over that issue has died down somewhat, however, another has appeared on the horizon which has the potential of causing even further fundamental damage to

Armstrong as a viable four-year unit of the University of Georgia System. The new bone of contention involves the possible establishment of an undergraduate nursing program at Georgia Southern College in Statesboro.

As far as Armstrong is concerned, the fact has already been recognized far and wide that the nursing program possessed by this college is of the highest calibre. Many people who are in the position to know feel that the establishment of a similar program at Georgia Southern would severely hamstring Armstrong's program insofar as both the number of graduates and the range of courses are concerned.

If it is true, however, that there exists a large waiting list of individuals from places other than Savannah who desire to enter a nursing program in this area of Georgia, would severe damage be done to Armstrong's nursing program as some would have us believe if Georgia Southern establishes a similar degree offering. It would seem not to be the case.

Granted, this view is rather coldhearted from the standpoint of school spirit. But we must remember not to confuse school spirit with the development of what one student called a "siege mentality." Please to remember that the establishment of Georgia Southern's nursing program rests on a number of ifs -- the biggest one of which is if the Board of Regents approve. It would seem not very likely that the Regents would approve Southern's request without at least reviewing and considering the needs of Armstrong's program first.

Of course, there can be no guarantee that the regents would give Armstrong's needs a fair hearing. One can only hope that parties who have vested interest in the preservation of Armstrong's degree offerings would do their utmost to see that no foul play occurs.

Star Trek's "Scotti" To Appear Tonight

James Doohan, better known as "Scotti" from Star Trek, will appear tonight, November 29, in the Fine Arts Auditorium.

The show will include some blooper films from the original

Star Trek television series. Admission is $3 for non-students and $2 for students with validated I.D.s. Advance tickets are on sale in the Student Activities Office.

Savannah State College has not made the most of one of its most valuable assets, the NROTC Unit. The unit was established in the early 70's under an agreement with the Navy that Savannah State would commission 17 or more midshipmen a year. This unit has never come close to graduating 17 Midshipmen and the reason lies in the lack of participation by the SSC and ASC students.

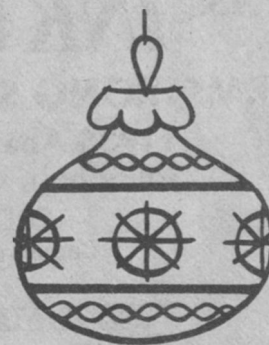

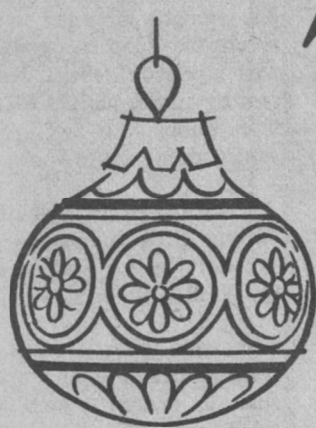

Reaching the goal of 17 middies may require the mandatory enrollment, by all freshmen entering college, in the Naval Program for their first two years. Then, those who do not wish to continue in the Naval Program may elect to drop out. Possibly, Armstrong State should have a series of Naval Science courses taught on its campus. One thing for sure is that with the swapping of the Teacher Educating program and the Business program between ASC and SSC, more Armstrong students will be on the SSC campus, and maybe an increased enrollment in the unit will be seen.

The irony and unfairness of the whole situation is that some campuses with 50,000 or more students need only commission a minimum of 17 Midshipmen in order to keep their program. SSC only has an enrollment of around 3,000 students; yet, as mentioned before, Savannah State must commission 17 Midshipmen. And out of close to 55 NROTC units in the United States, only 4 are located on black campuses. Savannah State could be in danger of losing the NROTC unit.

The class of 1980 at SSC could be the last college class to have Midshipmen commissioned as officers in the United States Navy and it would be a shame for the City of Savannah to lose one of the few established NROTC units in the nation.

Put the "X" Back In X-Mas

by Joe Adams

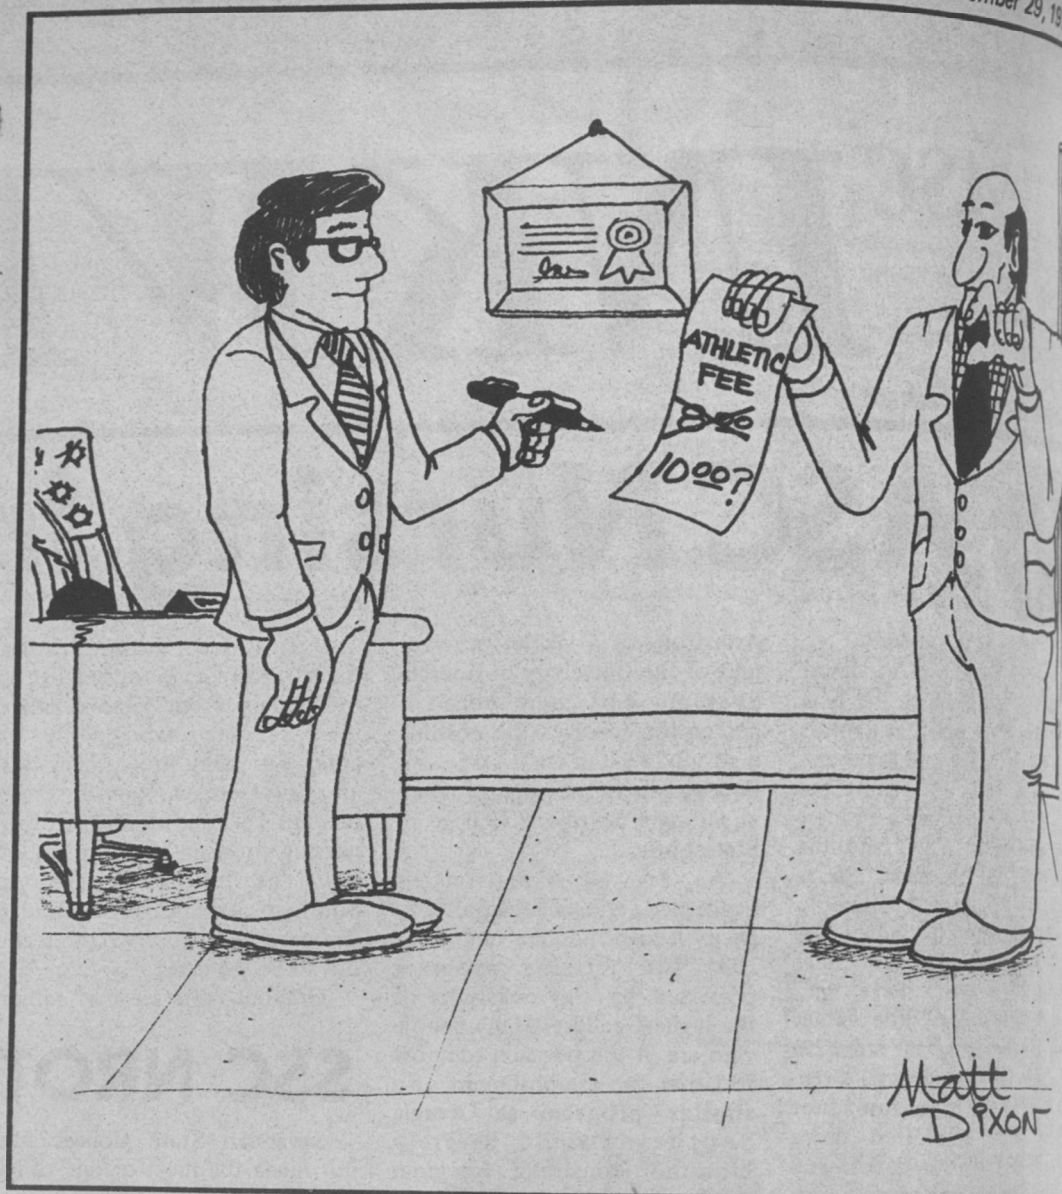

Oh... come on, ya can't fool me. I know! X-Mas is a commercial plot for high cash promotions. It's a crash program to bolster the buck against the yen and it's run by a big eastern syndicate. And it all evolved from some religious thing and a kid named je- something.

This is the attitude that the majority of the public seems to take. Last weekend was the first big rush for retailers. The "human zoo" was opened and the shopping "animals" were out in full force. Walking through the Mall, I got an extreme case of salmonitis (the feeling that one is swimming up stream).

Everywhere one looks, blank faces walk over each other with a lack of concern that is personally disturbing. Shopping becomes like Russian Roulette. You never know if the next salesperson will explode at you. And everywhere, customers -- snapping at clerks, barking at customers, snapping at clerks...

In Japan, Christmas is the biggest holiday of the year and the majority of the Japanese public is not Christian. For them it is a time to express love for one's fellow man and a concern for peace and happiness -- and they don't even have a Santa! I don't want to preach but I had to take a break from the stunning humor that you're accustomed to hearing from me and write on something that concerns me. This Christmas season, take the time out from the mad rush and think of someone else, even if it is just a face in the crowd.

So the next time a grizzled old saleslady drops the blender you asked her to get for you on your foot, don't slap her dentures out of her face. Tell her it's o.k., the wound will clot, and wish her a Merry Christmas... it may make Christmas a little more bearable for all of us. (Incidentally, X is the Greek letter Chi, the ancient Christian symbol for Christ).

Don't Read This While Eating

by T. Fri

Have you ever been sitting at a table in the school cafeteria, eating your lunch, when someone comes in and sits down with you and starts talking about something absolutely gross? Yes?

Let's say that you are right in the middle of a big plate of spaghetti, replete with onions, peppers, sauce, meat, and big, fat noodles (with a couple of rolls, a salad, and iced tea to round out the meal), and this creep comes up, sits down, and looks at your plate with horrified eyes, yelling "Eeeyyyuuucch!!" at the top of his or her lungs. You quickly give the person a dirty look as you place another forkful of noodles in your mouth. As you finish chewing, you say "I hate, no I absolutely detest for somebody to say 'Eeeyyyuuucch!!' at my food while I'm eating it!"

The person looks wisely at you and begins to tell you, "Well, if you had thrown up last night like I did, you wouldn't be eating spaghetti. You see, I had spaghetti for supper last night, you know, and about 9:00, I started feeling kind of nauseous. Well, about 9:15, I got up and ran-ran-ran to the bathroom, but I didn't make it! I threw up right in the middle of the dining room almost in the middle of our hand-crocheted oval-shaped rug. Well, that spaghetti was only half-digested -- you should have seen those big, fat noodles!"

By this time, Gregg has come up to the table asking if you're finished with your plate. You nod, weakly replying "Yes! Yes!" and lay your head down on the table and cry.

Without any further ado, let me announce that this article is about gross, disgusting stuff that people sometimes talk about. The brief preview above is merely to give you a taste of what the article is going to be like. All of my disgusting discussions are going to be about nauseating things that can happen while you're trying to eat. O.K.? Hold onto your stomach, come along for the ride, and forgive this disgustingly crummy article which is so inferior to the wonderful, informative, and provocative articles that I normally write. You know how it is to be a bigtime journalist -- sometimes your brain gets tired, especially at the end of the quarter; and, besides, my car was out of gas and the traffic was terrible.

The next situation can occur at any meal, as long as the culprit has recently traveled on any road or highway. You're sitting there concentrating on your food when someone comes up, sits down, opens a book and pretends to study for a few minutes. He or she suddenly plunks the textbook down on the table and says, "Wow! You should've seen this dog that I saw on the way to school today. Or, I guess I should say what was left of this dog that I saw on the way to school today! I mean, I looked all over the road and all I could find was... ooops, I forgot you were eating."

The next example can occur when you're eating a meal at the home of the doting parents of a darling, bouncing baby at a certain stage of development. Right in the middle of the meal, one or the other of the parents squeals out enthusiastically, "Oh, you'll never guess what our darling little Bubba did today!"

You sneak a sidelong glance at darling little Bubba who's sitting there in his high chair with unidentified green stuff on his face, mumbling curse words that his loving uncles and aunts have taught him, and trying to reach the food on your plate with strained rutabagas under his grubby little nails. "What did little Bubba do today?" you ask, simply dying not to know.

"That little sweetheart, darling little Bubba-poo did a doo-doo in his widdle potty today, didn't ooh, Bub-ba?"

I can think of lots more horrible things to tell you about, such as reading a book at the table and the story suddenly becomes violent and bloody right in the middle of your TV dinner, or watching the 6:30 news as you eat and it turns out to be the day that a lot of gory events hit the headlines, or enjoying a nice, gooey sweet snack and someone with terminal post-nasal drip decides to expectorate with a huge hock-too, or you bit into a big chunk of meat with an even bigger chunk of fat in the middle, or...

Oh, boy, I've got to stop right here. And if you're feeling sick, don't tell me I didn't warn you!

Homecoming Needs You

Every year the students at Armstrong get together and cheer on their team at Homecoming. Well this year will be the biggest yet. Homecoming week will begin on January 8th and the game will be held on Saturday the 13th. During the week we plan to have something different each day. Free hair cuts and sidewalk art will help to promote the big game. All campus organizations are asked to contact Danny Brown or Al

Harris to offer help on this busy week. On Jan. 13, at the game, we will have money prizes for the best banner and a Sony color T.V. for the best float.

We will also be having a Homecoming king and queen this year so the names of the contestants must be turned in by Jan. 8th at 12:00 Noon. The floats for homecoming can be 4 ft. by 8 ft. with wheels and light enough to be carried by hand. We ask that the wheels be rubber covered so as not to hurt the basketball court floors. As of right now we are not sure where the dance and the game are going to be held, but will know within the next 2 weeks.

A spirit prize will be given to the organization that shows the most interest and spirit in our school. For more information, please contact Danny Brown or Al Harris in the Student Activities Office.

The Kentucky Derby Is Coming

The Special Events Committee of the Union Board is proud to announce the Kentucky Derby to the Armstrong students. We are sorry to say that the ski trip had to be cancelled due to the lack of interest. The Kentucky Derby will be held on May 5th 1979. The trip will cost each student $70.00 and will be limited to 40 students per bus. The bus will leave Armstrong's campus on Friday the 4th and arrive there that night. The students will have a choice to either sleep in a barn or camp outside of the barn. The next morning we have a brief breakfast and then head to the tracks for a full day at the races. Saturday night will be full of parties and fun and again sleeping in or around the barn. Sunday morning will again bring another short breakfast then load up and back to Savannah.

This trip may sound too exciting and fun filled for the average student and it probably is. The trip will also give us a chance to meet students from other schools. The trip promises to be educational and very entertaining as well as giving us a chance to blow our savings at the race tracks. The deadline for the trip will be April 2nd at 12:00 noon. The first 40 people to sign up will go. Those who don't go will only be able to hear about what they missed.

If you are interested in signing up or want more information go to the Student Activities Office.

YOUR ADVICE AND OUR NAVAL COLLEGE PROGRAM COULD HELP A STUDENT THROUGH COLLEGE

Not all of today's qualified students can afford college. You can give helpful advice to many of them, by suggesting the Naval ROTC College Program.

Naval ROTC College Program is available at Savannah State College for Savannah State and Armstrong State College Students. It not only provides uniforms but books and $100 a month living expenses the last two years of college and also gives students an exciting and responsible career after graduation. A career as a Navy or Marine Corps Officer.

To qualify for the College Program, students have to be strong academically, particularly in science and math. Extra-curricular activities help too.

You can play an important role by letting young people know about Naval ROTC College Program. Tell them that they can get complete information from the NROTC Unit, Savannah State College.

Whelan's Wide World of Intramurals

by Mary Ellen Whelan

Take two rival fraternities and pair them together for a Sunday night contest. Match two Little Sisters groups. Add two competitive sororities on the same night to heighten the effect. Throw in the two hottest independent rivals on campus to complete the evening of competition. Keep in mind that the results will effect play-off berths as well as team pride. The preceeding events set the agenda for one of the most exciting nights in the annals of intramural flag football.

Box scores cannot adequately or completely describe the intense competition. Hats off to Coaches Bedwell and Lariscy for maintaining order and sanity.

When the dust cleared from Eisenhower field, Pike claimed a 14-2 victory over Pi Kappa Phi, with Jay Stanley scoring 2 T.D.'s for the winning Pike team. Pi Kappa Phi's explosive offense led by Cindy Hughes, shutout the Theta Little Sisters 27-0. Phi Mu defeated Alpha Gamma 20-13. Phi Mu's Harriet Loyd carried the ball for two touchdowns. In the nightcap, the Colts pulled out a hard fought 6-0 win over the Tigers. Keith Ochs caught a forty yard pass to win the controversial game.

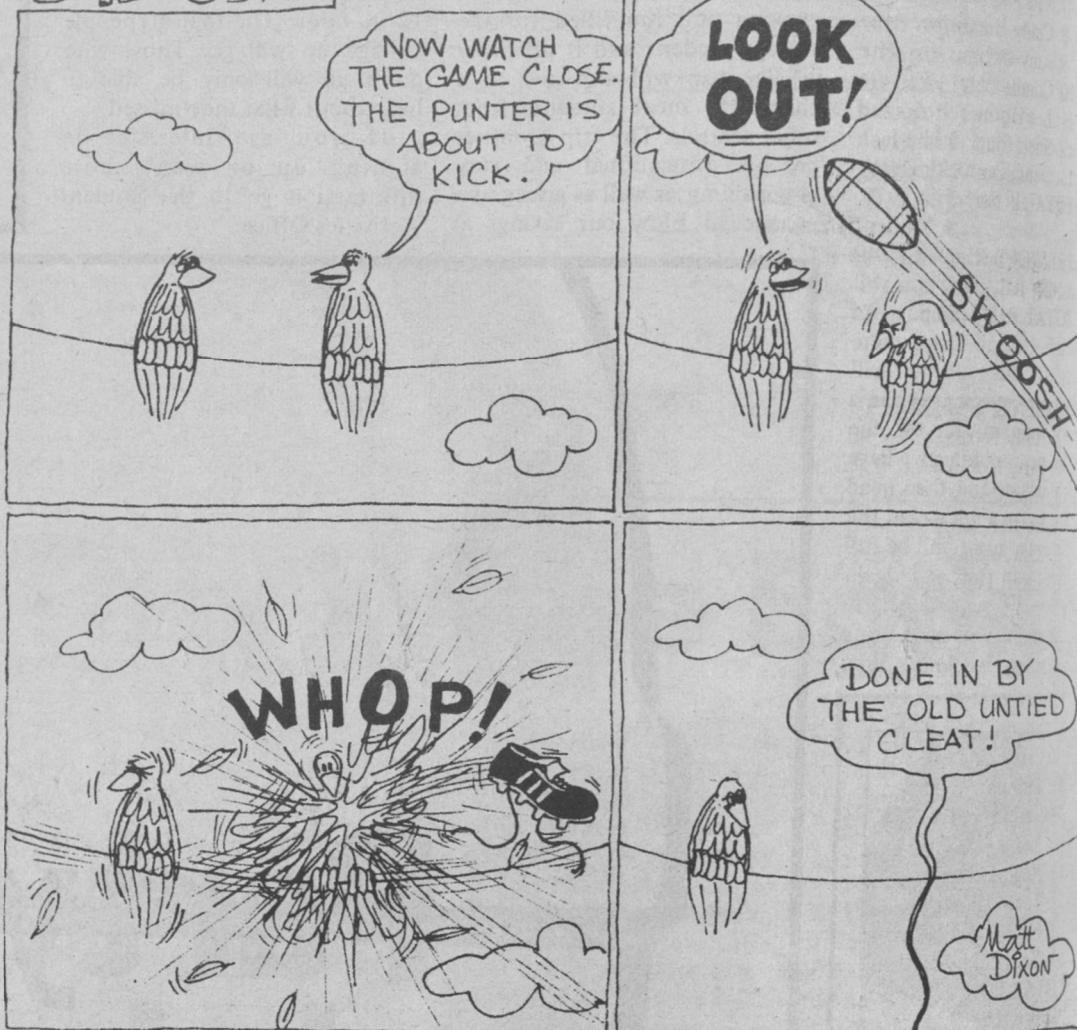

In earlier action on the ASC fields two winless teams battled in an exciting match. The Little Tigers overcame the Theta offense defeating Theta 20-13. The Tiger's Tammy Stevens led her team with 19 points. Donna Lowther scored 12 points for Theta. The Dental Hygiene defense held the undefeated P.E. Club to end that game in a scoreless tie. Pi Kappa Phi won over Alpha Gam 12-0. Phi Mu was outscored by the Pike Little Sisters in an important 28-25 match. Linda Siedl intercepted two passes to score twice for the Pike team. Sigma Nu lost to Phi Kappa Theta 6-0.

1978-79 ASC Lady Pirates

by Lynda Broussard

The 1978-79 Armstrong State Lady Pirates are back for their third year of competition. Much improved and more skillful are the Lady Pirates as seen from the first game on November 18th against Spartanburg. The Lady Pirates victory over Spartanburg shows the beginning of a successful season. The Lady Pirates have three returning lettermen and eight top recruits.

The three returning are Marie Dotson, Cindy Hambrick, and Tammy Todd. Marie, the high point leader, and senior co-captain is expected to achieve her 13 point average. Marie missed the all-state squad by only one vote last year. Cindy is a senior co-captain, a forward, and probably the most consistent player of the team.

COACH BETTY FORD

Her leadership will benefit the team extremely. Tammy is a high point player who should greatly benefit the Lady Pirates.

Among the recruits are: Cindy Pound who was an all-state player last year in Augusta and participated in the high school all-star game. She is a great rebounder, which was a weak spot for the Lady Pirates last year. Vicki Abbot, a junior transfer from Augusta College, will carry the quarterback load for the team. Debra David is a local freshman from Beach High School. She is a fine shooter and has great jumping ability. Sherri Clark should aid the team in post play and rebounding with the necessary collegiate experience. Lee Harmer is a natural handler and will benefit from her ability to handle the ball. Connie Clayton should provide ample help for Vicki Abbot and the point guard position. And two more local recruits are Claudia McNeill of Windsor Forest and Yvonne McIver of Savannah High School should establish themselves necessary experience. Other very essential members of Coach Ford's Lady Pirates are Asst.

Coach, Patty Rountree, Trainer, Pat Leslie, Manager, Sandi Eichholz and Statistician, Michelle Oglesby.

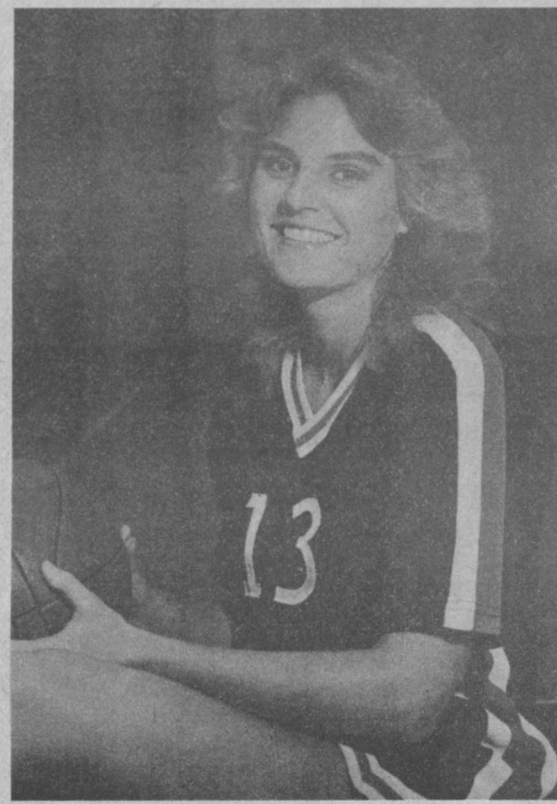

The Lady Pirates should have a strong, winning season this year. Come and see for yourself! The next home game will be December 9th, at 7:00 p.m. against U.S.C. - Aiken College. Eat'em up Lady Pirates.

EDUCATIONAL TESTING SERVICE

College teachers maintain essential roles in educating students even when computers are used in classroom instruction, studies by Educational Testing Service (ETS) have found.

Two evaluations conducted by ETS at the community college level also demonstrated that while computer systems designed to teach students have not reached the stature often claimed for them, the potential remains for their continued development and application.

Both evaluations were sponsored by the National Science Foundation.

One of the computer-assisted instruction systems examined, TICCIT (Time-Shared, Interactive, Computer-Controlled Information Television), was devised to provide a complete and independent alternative to entire college courses in selected subjects, allowing students to exercise control over the pace and sequence of their lessons.

The PLATO (Programmed Logic for Automatic Teaching Operations) system was created to fit into a regular teacher-managed study program and supplement college course work. In the demonstration of PLATO evaluated, the system accounted for less than one-third of total class instruction.

In an evaluation directed by Donald L. Alderman of ETS, TICCIT was found to have had a positive impact on student achievement. Students able to complete a course using TICCIT generally attained higher post-test scores, particularly in mathematics, than those reached by similar students using common teaching practices. Higher achievement in courses given on the TICCIT system was especially evident among students with a strong initial grasp of the subject.

The study also found that TICCIT had a negative effect on the likelihood that a student would complete all requirements for course credit during a single academic term. For example, in mathematics courses at one of the colleges only 16 of every 100 pupils enrolled received a grade with credit during an academic term, compared to an average of 50 percent for lecture classes.

When the subject matter lent itself to active teacher participation, such as in reviewing essays or discussing themes, the gap in completion rates between TICCIT and lecture classes closed.

Student attitudes toward TICCIT were more often less favorable than toward conventional teaching methods, but when English classes taught on the TICCIT system were supplemented by small group discussion with an instructor, attitudes improved over those expressed for lecture - discussion classes.

ETS's Richard T. Murphy, who directed the PLATO evaluation, and Lola Rhea Appel found no consistent positive or negative effects on student achievement or attrition -- the drop-out rate -- that could be linked to PLATO's use. The study determined, however, that PLATO provided a medium of instruction with broad appeal to both students and teachers. In fact, PLATO students showed more favorable attitudes toward computers and computer-assisted instruction than non-PLATO students.

About half the students thought that course material presented by PLATO helped them learn better than course material presented in class lectures. Large majorities (70 percent to 90 percent) said they continued their instruction on PLATO beyond the end of class, felt PLATO made good use of examples and illustrations, believed they could make mistakes without embarrassment and could take part in their instruction at each step in the lessons, and expressed a desire to take other PLATO courses.

Observers found that students were attentive to their work, relaxed and enthusiastic, neither confused nor frustrated, and able to use PLATO terminals easily.

More than 80 percent of the teachers surveyed said PLATO had a positive effect on student attitudes and achievement, and better than three in five believed PLATO was beneficial to student-student and student-instructor interactions.

A critical factor that accounted for PLATO's high acceptance and usage was the control the teachers had over the system. Each instructor determined how much his students would use it and for what lessons it would be available.

PLATO is a large educational computing network developed at the Computer-based Educational Research Laboratory in Urbana, Ill. The display screen for a PLATO terminal is a panel that can provide simple repetitive skills to give students practice in basic concepts, or relay graphics to illustrate principles in the physical sciences and simulate laboratory experiments. Input is channeled through a typewriter-like keyboard.

Developed by the MITRE Corporation, TICCIT combines minicomputers and television receivers in its instructional system. The terminal is a color television set modified to accept digital computer signals and translate them into display frames. Students use an electronic keyboard that accompanies the television receivers to communicate with the computer system.

In the PLATO evaluation, lessons were computerized and integrated into some accounting, biology, chemistry, English and mathematics courses at five Illinois community colleges. More than 8,000 students

CARE HOLIDAY GIFT CARD PLAN HELPS NEEDIEST FAMILIES OVERSEAS

"This holiday season special greetings to friends, relatives and business associates in this country can help impoverished families in developing countries," Frank L. Goffio, Executive Director of CARE, said today. He was announcing the international aid and development agency's seasonal holiday gift card plan.

"Your gift to CARE provides food for hungry children, helps build schools and water systems, assists farmers in increasing their produce through agricultural expansion projects and sends teams of medical personnel to teach better health care in the poorest parts of Africa, Asia, Latin America and the Middle East," Mr. Goffio said.

For example, he pointed out, "Only $5 serves 100 children a daily bowl of nourishing porridge for a week, $10 builds space for a child in a school classroom in a village that never had a school before, $15 brings water to a family via a village water system, the same amount trains a student nurse for one week through CARE/MEDICO and $25 instructs a village leader to teach other farmers how to grow more food."

Describing the gift card plan, Mr. Goffio explained that "simple, but attractive holiday greeting cards let each person on your list know you have given in his or her name. The season gift provides help throughout the year for destitute families, helping them not simply to survive but to work their way out of poverty." CARE has a wide range of feeding, nutrition education, agricultural expansion and other self-help development programs in more than 35 developing countries designed to aid the poorest of the poor in shaping better futures for themselves and their children.

To allow time for mailing, order promptly. Send the name and addresses on your gift list, with a contribution for each card, to CARE, 2581 Piedmont Rd., N.E., Room 23-A, Atlanta, Ga. 30324. CARE will send the cards to you, or, if you want them mailed directly to the person being honored, indicate how the cards should be signed.
