MOODY'S APPEAL IN MAIL-BOMBINGS REJECTED

ATLANTA (AP) - A Georgia man convicted in the December 1989 mail-bomb deaths of a judge and a civil rights attorney received a fair trial, a federal appeals court has ruled.

Walter Leroy Moody Jr., 58, of Rex is serving a sentence of seven life terms plus 400 years for sending homemade package bombs to the Savannah law office of Robert Robinson and to the home of 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Robert Vance in Mountain Brook, Ala.

The bombs detonated when the men opened the packages.

Moody appealed on various grounds, including errors by his attorneys and the judge. OCMULGEE MONUMENT RECEIVES LAND GRANT

MACON, Ga. (AP) - The Ocmulgee National Monument, site of an ancient Indian civilization, has received a donation of 300 acres of adjoining land, which will increase the park's size by nearly half.

It is the second piece of good news involving the monument in recent weeks. The state Department of Transportation has decided to reroute the Fall Line Freeway so that it will not skirt the national monument.

An earlier route would have put the highway within sight of the 1,000-year-old Great Temple Mound.

Patrons hid under tables and scantily clad dancers squealed as police swept into the Ponytail Lounge.

The club came under city scrutiny Jan. 2 when dancer Rebecca June Greene, struck and killed a teenage pedestrian in Marietta as she was driving home from work. Ms. Greene was charged with drunken driving and vehicular homicide.

Charges against the club include selling alcohol to minors, failure to supervise and monitor conduct of employees and patrons, and failure of some employees to get work permits. JUDGE CONTINUES BAN ON

DEER KILL ON SKIDAWAY SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) - A

Chatham County court has continued a ban on a deer kill on Skidaway Island, but Judge Eugene Gadsden urged residents to attempt an out-of-court settlement in the controversy.

Two couples living in The Landings, a Skidaway subdivision, filed suit last month to halt a population-reducing hunt by The Landings Association, The Landings Club, the Branigar Organization and the state Department of Natural Resources.

The residents' lawyer, Julian Toporek, argued that the defendants were planning illegal methods to kill the animals based on what they perceived to be a deer problem.

After hearing evidence and legal arguments Friday in Superior Court, Gadsden said he wanted to leave the ban in place while he studied the issue.

The Landings Association proposed in August that the amount of deer in the area be reduced by hunting the ani-

Georgia universities consider plus/minus grading system

By Enoch Autry Staff Writer

In an effort to distinguish between higher grade performance and lower grade performance, a consideration is being made to institute a new plus/minus (+/-) grading system.

Vice President of Academic Affairs Harrison Carter said that Georgia State University faculty has come forward with a better proposal to evaluate students' classroom performance.

"They wanted the pluses and visors group which Carter is a minuses to allow a finer evaluation and more levels of evaluation than the present grading system," Carter added.

Jones crowned Homecoming

By Michelle Patrick Staff Writer

On Saturday, Nov. 7, Kalisa Jones was crowned 1992 GSU Homecoming Queen by President Nicholas Henry and 1991 Homecoming Queen Philana Griffin.

Jones, escorted by her father, was presented with her crown, a trophy and flowers by Griffin. Dr. Henry also presented her with flowers.

Jones is a senior majoring in communication arts with an emphasis in public relations. She will be interning in Atlanta winter quarter.

Jones is treasurer of Public Relations Student Society of America, a member of Gamma Beta Phi with a grade point average of 3.1, and previously participated in the Top Step Tutor program in which she tutored local fifth graders. Jones has also been a member of Kappa Delta sorority for two

PARKING "BOOT" AMNESTY

Do You have any unpaid parking tickets? If so, the office of Parking and Transportation is giving you a chance to take care of them without penalty.

Parking has recently purchased an electronic ticketing system that allows officers to enter in license plate numbers on-site to check for outstanding tickets. Anyone with three or more unpaid tickets will have their car booted (immobilized).

You can avoid having this happen to you. Parking is granting amnesty to all students, faculty, and staff with unpaid parking tickets by extending a grace period until November 20. During that time you are strongly encouraged to come into the Parking Office and pay your parking tickets. After November 20, officers will be identifying and booting vehicles with three or more unpaid tickets.

If you have any questions about whether you have any unpaid parking tickets, please call 681-0702. Take advantage of this amnesty and avoid getting the boot!

Gallery 303 showcases visiting artists' work

The mediums range from oil paintings to sculpture; the art addresses various social issues

Gallery 303 presents "New Directions." The show will include works ranging from mixed media sculpture of Meg Cambell to the oil paintings of Harry Ally. These artists along with Jed Jackson, Mary Caro and Don Vanderbeck will present their new work. These artists take traditional art and add a new twist to their work.

Meg Cambell's shack sculptures are made from clay and found objects. Environmental concerns weave their way into her work. Cambell adds, "I address certain concerns for mental disorders like schizophrenia and depression through my sculptures."

Mary Caro's fabric wall hangings consist of hand dved fabric and silkscreened images. A traditional concept of quilts as decorative bed coverings takes on a new direction. One of her pieces relays the issue of AIDS education. The entertwining of fabric and social issues is Caro's style.

Harry Ally is from Valdosta. One of Ally's paintings shows a man walking. "This painting symbolizes faith, reality, and courage," says Ally.

Mary Caro's "Summer of '89" is on exhibit in the visiting artists show "New Directions." Caro's fabric wall hangings are composed using hand dyed fabric and silkscreened images. Also on display are oil paintings, clay and found object sculptures, and illustrations. (Special photo.)

The realistic portraits by Jed Jackson show his ability to paint in oil. Jackson uses society and the dilemmas that have surfaced. A grim look at society today is Jed Jackson's background for his paintings.

In the small gallery, Don Vanderbeck will be showing his recent illustrations from Thurs., Nov. 5. Gallery 303 is "Stormalong," narrated by Foy Fine Arts building.

consumption of fluids while working out is essential

All individuals who exercise should be aware of the importance of fluid replacement before, during, and after exercise. This article compares the consumption of plain water and sport drinks.

Your body needs fluid -- and lots of it. You can easily lose a quart of water from sweat in a single hour of running. When this happens, your heart and circulatory systems have to work harder to provide oxygen and nutrient to your working muscles. (Runner's World, July 1992). Furthermore, your

You can maintain your body's supply by drinking about 25 grams of carbohydrate every half hour as you

Most 8-ounce sport drinks provide about 15 grams of carbohydrate, so drinking a cup and a half every 30 minutes should be sufficient.

Plain water, which contains no carbohydrates, is fine for shorter runs and far better for exercise, says Liz Applegate, your body and performance

However, scientists have shown that the body absorbs more fluid from a sport drink that contains electrolytes (minerals such as sodium and potassium that are found in body fluids and that also improve fluid absorption in the body and encourage you to continue drinking) than from plain water (Runner's World, July 1992).

For this reason, it is more beneficial to consume a sport drink during shorter workouts, especially if you tend to sweat

Tseng's: a thumbs-up

By Carlton Dickerson

Once again, while sitting at home, the eternal question crossed my mind: "Where should I go tonight?" Finally, a divine thought crossed my mind-Chinese.

I went to a Chinese restaurant called Tseng's (pronounced zings like pings). Tseng's is located on Highway 301 across from Archibald's.

The setting is tasteful and quite relaxed. After pondering over the menu for some time, I was ready to order. The order was placed and within minutes I received my meal. I decided to order the Crispy Aromatic Shrimp, Lo Mein and Buddha's

The Crispy Aromatic Shrimp is composed of crisp shrimp with sweet peppers, mushrooms and broccoli in the Chef's special spicy aromatic sauce. Lo Mein is served with choice of beef, prawns or vegetables. Buddha's Tight is water chestnuts, lack mushrooms, bamboo shoots, snow pea pods, gingko nuts, broccoli, lotus roots and tofu in a light soy sauce.

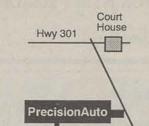

The crispy shrimp was just incredible; it had a wonderful balance of meat and vegetables. If you like your food spicy but not firing hot, this is the dish for you. The lo mein wasn't bad either.

Buddha's Delight would have been delightful if I were a vegeterian nut lover. Overall, I truly enjoyed Tseng's. Try it.

The anatomy of a political extremist was received before the Nov. 3 general election, but because of space restraints was not run ment by intimidation. Using a until now. Despite the lack of timeliness, many students may be well-served to take note of opponents on the defensive. the points made. Dear Editor,

Because the political rhetoric has gotten out of hand among Democrats. Republicans and Independents, please consider printing the following points, many of them abstracted from Laird Wilcox's essay "What Is 'Political Extremism'?" (It should be required reading for all political science majors.)

Wilcox says that "extremism is more an issue of style than of content."

He's right. Note, for example, how often political extremists use subjective language rather than facts. (For example, rather than saying "Mr. X tends to vote for the freedoms of all people in the country, even those with whom he disagrees," an extremist might say, "Mr. X constantly votes to support the unholy so-called 'rights' of God-hating, flagburning, family-destroying lesbians.")

Wilcox lists the following as "traits" of extremism. Do you, gentle reader, see yourself among these qualities?

1. Character assassination. Extremism often attacks the character of an opponent rather than dealing with the facts or issues raised.

2. Name calling and labelling. Epithets such as "racist" or "commie" or "un-American" don't have to be effective or even true; they merely have to be repeated frequently.

3. Irresponsible sweeping generalizations. Extremists have a tendency to confuse similarity with sameness and to use analogies sloppily.

4. Inadequate proof for assertions. Extremists tend to be very fuzzy about what constitutes proof; they do a lot of wishful and/or fearful think-

5. Advocacy of double standards. Extremists generally tend to judge themselves or their group by a different standard than they force others to adhere to.

6. Tendency to view their opponents and critics as essentially evil. To extremists, people who believe differently from them are evil, not merely mistaken.

7. Manichaean worldview. "Those who are not with me are against me." The world is absolutely good or evil.

8. Advocacy of some degree of censorship or repression of their opponents and critics. Extremists would prefer that you listen only to them.

9. Tendency to identify themselves in terms of who their enemies are. And oddly,

Editor's Note: This letter people who are extreme opposites tend to look a lot alike.

> 10. Tendency toward argushrill, harsh rhetorical style allows extremists to keep their

11. Use of slogans, buzzwords and thought-stopping cliches. Extremists tend to behave in ways that reinforce their own prejudices so that they can feel even more selfconfident and therefore self-

12. Assumption of moral or other superiority over others. Extremists can show great indignation when anyone challenges them -- after all, extremists see themselves as the elite, the only "right" ones.

13. Doomsday thinking. For extremists, any setback or defeat is the beginning of the end of the world.

14. Belief that it's okay to do bad things in the service of a "good" cause. With extremists, the end justifies the

15. Emphasis on emotional responses and less importance attached to reasoning and logical analysis. Extremists tend to think in symbols and to therefore use much propaganda with the goal in mind of creating a particular emotional response in the public.

16. Hypersensitivity and vigilance. Extremists see subversion and hostility to their cause in even the most innocent or casual comment.

17. Use of supernatural rationale for beliefs or actions. Extremists tend to believe that God (or whomever they believe in) is on their side -- and theirs

18. Problems tolerating ambiguity and uncertainty. Extremists don't deal well with the "devil we don't know." They prefer the devil that we do know instead.

19. Inclination toward "groupthink." Illusions of righteousness and superior morality remain intact when others are around to reinforce them.

20. Tendency to personalize hostility. Extremists often wish for harm to come to their enemies and celebrate when it

I know this is long to be just a "Letter to the Editor." But this is the campus of a university, and when I read letters to the editor in which students accuse each other (in extremist terms) of writing "distortions and smokescreens" -- and then turn around and do the same thing themselves -- I know it's because they just don't know the difference.

An open letter to President Bush

Dear Mr. President,

01992 BY MAT

GROENING

Well, it's all over now, and in a couple of months we'll have a new guy in the Oval Office.

I can't honestly say I'm sorry to see you go. Nothing personal, sir, it's just that you and I don't see eye to eye on many of the issues facing this country right now.

I will say this, though; I was glad to see your speech last week when you conceded the presidency to Mr. Clinton and offered to help him in any way

That was a real first-class act, and it's too bad you couldn't have helped Dan out a little with his speech. (Of course, you're probably used to having to cover for Dan every now and then; at least you won't have to worry about that anymore.)

It was also a good thing you did when you apologized to the young people who may have been disillusioned by the ugliness a political campaign can create.

The race did get pretty nasty this time around, what with the name-calling and patriotism-questioning and all, and it seems like the American people showed they really FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK don't care for that kind of and that they give Mr. Clinton thing a whole lot.

Who knows, maybe politicians in the future will look to this race and decide they want to stick to the issues and not sling around quite as much mud. I sort of doubt it, but as weird as things got this time around, anything can happen.

"I haven't really agreed with much you've done during your term, but I do appreciate your efforts.'

There are a lot of folks down here who are pretty upset you didn't win, Mr. President. I don't agree with most of them, but during the course of the campaign I've found out that a few of them are actually pretty decent people.

I hope they listened to what you said last Tuesday night, a chance to work things out before they start attacking everything he does.

If they do, I think they might be pleasantly surprised. It's obvious that the Governor isn't the liberal some of your handlers tried to make him out to be, and, as you well know, he's got a tough job ahead of him.

Maybe if we quit listening to the extremists on both sides and try working together for a change, we can start moving toward solving some of the problems we have here in America.

It looks like you'll have a lot more spare time on your hands these days. I know you'll spend some of that time out on the golf course, and some of it using that new fishing reel you bought on Election Day.

Hopefully, though, you'll spend part of that time continuing some of the projects you began as President.

Ex-President Jimmy Carter has stayed active since 1980 with projects like Habitat for Humanity and other servicetype organizations. Maybe you could do the same.

With the political season over, I can admit now that you actually had a couple of good ideas. I especially think the Points of Light Foundation is something you should continue supporting. We manuful and

Like Mr. Clinton says, we don't have a person to waste, and if you could keep on inspiring folks to volunteer to make things a little better, everyone would benefit.

I suppose I should close

Like I said before, I haven't really agreed with much you've done during your term, but I do appreciate your efforts. I've heard from several people that in person you are a kind and generous man, and I really do believe you wanted to do what is right.

Maybe you just didn't understand what things are like out here.

Anyway, good luck to you, and give Barbara my best.

Men and housework, women and jock itch

Today I want to talk to you husbands about housework, and the importance of helping your wives with ...

HOLD IT RIGHT THERE. MEN. I see you trying to sneak out of this article. Get back in here and listen up:

The International Labor Organization, an agency of the United Nations, recently did a survey asking women around the world how much help we men give them with the housework. According to the results, most women think we're doing a splendid job.

I'm joking of course. The women basically said that, in terms of sharing the housework burden, having a man around is like having a 197pound lint ball permanently bonded to the sofa, operating the TV remote control and periodically generating dirty underwear.

This kind of criticism is nothing new. Somebody is always surveying women about men, and men ALWAYS come out looking bad. Just once I'd like to see a survey with questions that would tend to put men in a more positive light,

"Which gender, on the average, is more likely to demonstrate the patience and perseverance necessary to teach a small child how to spit?"

"In the event of a family emergency, which gender is most likely to be able to remember - coolly, calmly and without panic - what position Clarence 'Choo Choo' Coleman played?" But surveys never ask this type of question. They always ask about female-oriented qualities such as maturity, sensitivity, communication, commitment, ability to remember the names of all the children, etc. - as if those were the only issues that mattered; as if men did not have unique needs and problems of their own; as if there were NO SUCH THING as jock itch.

Just recently my wife and I were in South Miami Beach, sitting at an outdoor cafe with a lovely view of palm trees and the beach, and directly in front of us, about 25 yards away, was a man clearly experiencing a life-threatening need to scratch himself.

Unfortunately he was in a wide-open area, wearing nothing except a bathing suit about the size of a lady's wristwatch. Trying hard to look casual, he lay down sideways, pretending to be a guy relaxing in the sun. He glanced around to see if anybody was watching and then GROPE, he made a lightingfast move to ease his discomfort, and then he glanced around again, and then GROPE, and then another glance, and then GROPE and then a glance and then GROPEGROPEGROPE he lost control of himself and plunged in frantically with both hands, too absorbed in his task to realize that he had now surpassed the Atlantic Ocean as a local tourist attraction, with a large crowd watching him and small banner-towing airplanes making U-turns to come back for a second look.

I know you men are thinking: "Whoa, I can definitely feel for that guy, so to speak." On the other hand, my wife, a member of the so-called "sensitive" gender, was LAUGHING. But does the International Labor Organization do a survey about this sensitive issue? No, it picks housework, which happens to be a weak point with us men. This is not our fault. We spent millions of years functioning as the food providers in the family, and thus we are temperamentally and biologically more suited to aggressively physical, strenuous, hunter-gatherer types of activities, such as golf.

Plus, on those rare occasions when a man does attempt to help out with some household responsibility, such as getting the kids dressed for school, he often discovers that

Magic-of love, life, and basketball

Earvin "Magic" Johnson has grabbed the headlines of papers all over the world...again!

After revealing to the world that he had tested positive for HIV, a carrier of the AIDS virus, he announced his retirement from basketball. Fans, in utter shock, sobbed as they realized that their idol, who could execute the no-look pass to perfection, would no longer be able to play the game that he so loves.

A love for the game

Magic's love for the game was evident in every game he played. It did not matter how far out of reach the game might have been, he would always find something to smile

And he was exciting as well. To see him charging down the middle of the lane, extending toward the rim in mid-air, arms outstreched as the ball rolls off of his fingertips is to truly understand how he got his nickname.

His attitude toward the game is marvelous. Hardly ever does he lose his temper. which is an admirable quality in today's athletes. When he did, it was usually for a valid reason. You can't expect for every athlete to be perfect on and off the court, but to the casual fan, he was.

Off-court problems

Magic was the epitome of the role-model athlete in his public life, but his private life left a little bit to be desired.

His current wife, Cookie, had been seeing him seriously for over 14 years before they actually got married. In between that time, Magic made mistakes that would affect himself and his future family for the rest of their

He went on The Oprah Winfrey Show the other day to talk about their problems with Cookie by his side, telling the story of a man that could not make a committment to the woman he loved.

In the 14 years prior to their marriage, he traveled on the road from city to city, with a group of women-a harem if you will-waiting for him at every stop. Magic said that he knew all the women, and that he did not stray from having sexual encounters with anyone outside that group. However, he had one such 'group' in every city.

He told Oprah that he said to each and every one of his women that he was still in love with Cookie and that she would be the one that he would marry someday and that nothing could change that. But he still had these encounters and they have become one of the biggest mistakes of his entire life.

This promiscuity continued on for many years until Magic finally realized that not only was he destroying himself, but also the one he loves, Cookie. But the story doesn't end

there. Lessons in Life

However, in Magic's here-tofore invisible problems in his personal life, there is a valuable lesson to be learned, a lesson that transcends the world of basketball and the world of sports as a whole.

He has proven through example that just because a person's outside persona seems perfect, it isn't really always so on the inside. Everyone has made mistakes that they would change if they could. But you can't change your past, you can only control your

Eagles scalp Choctaws in 30-0 victory

By Aaron Solomon Staff Writer

It was Homecoming 1992, as the Eagles took on Division II football powerhouse, the Mississippi College Choctaws.

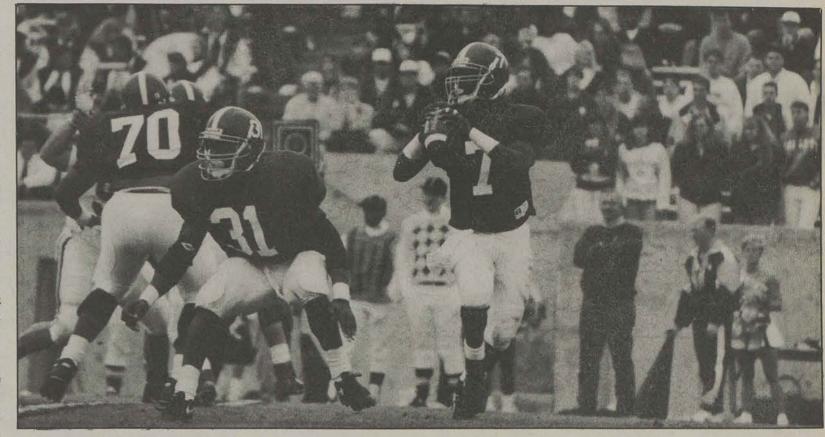

The Eagles improved their record to 7-2, by sending the Choctaws home with a 30-0 de-

Quarterback Charles Bostick started for the Eagles, and this week he went to the pass. The passing attack had limited success, even though the Choctaw secondary was giving the GSU receivers plenty of opportunities. According to Bostick, "I just had to settle down and work on taking advantage of the opportunities."

Unfortunately, the first quarter only brought the Eagles injuries. Right guard Franklin Stephens suffered a sprained ankle, and split end Terrence Sorrell suffered a partial tear of a ligament in his knee. It is questionable to how long Sorrell will be out of commission, but fortunately Stephens was able to return to play.

Running back James Williams and Bostick were able to run the ball into Choctaw territory. They were not able to get into the end zone because of the impressive defensive play of Choctaw linebacker Syrone McBeath and defensive tackle Roderick Upshaw. It was up to place kicker Reed Haley to put the Eagles on the board. He did just that with a 39-yard field goal, putting the Eagles ahead the ball off of his up back and the ball sailed out of bounds. This gave the Eagles good field position at the Choctaw's 18yard line.

The Eagles took advantage of the situation, and Williams scored on a pitch from Bostick. With the PAT by Haley, the Eagles led 10-0.

The defense, behind linebacker Paul Carroll and defensive ends Ronald Johnson and Alex Mash, was able to keep the Choctaws offense quiet during the first

On the Choctaws next drive they were able to penetrate into Eagle's territory, but they were held short by a good defensive showing. On fourth down and 11, Choctaws head coach Terry McMillan told the offense to go for it, but their attempt was halted by linebacker Darius Dawson.

The Eagles once again managed to drive into Choctaw territory, but once again they were held short. Haley came in and kicked a 27-yard field goal. The Eagles led 16-0.

In the fourth quarter the Eagles managed to complete their first touchdown pass by a quarterback this season. It was a 33-yard pass from Bostick to Ficklin. Haley kicked the PAT, and the Eagles now led 30-0.

The Choctaws sent in quarterback Brad Stohm to try and get a score. Their attempts were thwarted off by an overwhelming defensive performance. The Eagles did manage to score one final time, winning the game 30-0.

This was the Choctaw's first shutout in 54 games and the third time the Eagles managed to shut out their opponent this season. This breaks the season record for the Eagles in the modern era. The all time record is 5 shutouts, which was set by the Blue Tide back

The defense over all played well as left end Ronald Johnson led the charge with six sacks.

"They like to try trick plays and so we had to be careful of that," said Johnson, "We just had to hammer it in there, and not give them any holes."

Bostick had an excellent day, coming away with a career high 194 yards passing. "They left us a lot of holes in the backfield", he noted.

year's team. "I know that the new members will be looking for leadership from me, and I just hope that I can provide them with it and be a positive influence", Stacy commented.

Farmer is looking to the youth of the team for support this season. "We have a lot of young, new swimmers on the team this year and they should take some of the pressure off of Stacey.", he said. With the combination of the raw talent of the newcomers and the craftiness of the returning veterans, the Eagles will be flying high in 1992.

Soccer team falls to VMI 5-3 in shootout after double overtime

By Tammy Scroggins

GSU's men's soccer finished off its season this past Friday with a heartbreaking loss to Virginia Military Institute at the Southern Conference Tournament held in Greensboro, North Carolina. In double over-time play, the shootout resulted in a 5-3 score with shots decided by penalty kicks. The Eagles entered the conference with a

Jeff Heidt, with a little help from teammates Andrew Hansen and Steen Larsen, netted one at 13:20 to put the Eagles on the board. VMI's Bill Kaushagen managed to even the score on a corner kick at 80:00.

The score remained tied throughout regulation, as well as two 15-minute overtime periods.

GSU and VMI had four opportunities a piece to score on penalty kicks. The Keydets made good on all four shots. Eagles Heidt and Todd Shaw found the goal, while Hansen and Noel Kierans both missed chances. VMI's Russell Tilgner scored the winning penalty kick against GSU.

Final stats included shots and corner kicks, eleven and five for GSU and nineteen and six for VMI, respectively. Goalie Tim Boarman is credited with six goalie saves and VMI's Josh Strickler had five. GSU came away with twentyseven fouls, whereas, VMI only had twenty.

Special conference awards were also announced on Friday. Heidt, midfielder, was chosen for the Coaches All-Conference first team. Also, for the second team, Brian Buback was chosen as defender.

Larsen tied the GSU record for assists in a season with 10. The original was set by John Regan, now assistant coach, in 1986. Tim Boarman tied the school record for most saves in a season with 111, set by Jerry Greer in 1985.

The new field device also has a built in timer that figures out to one-tenth of a second how long a vehicle has been parked in a time zone. This new feature will be used especially in areas around Sweetheart Circle and at the newly acquired spaces around Veazey and Louis Halls.

These additional 30 minute parking spaces have been added around Veazey and Louis Halls to provide students with an extended amount of time to take care of business around the circle.

Most of the violations on campus deal with people not having parking permits.

Any additional revenue that may be generated will be used to construct additional parking facilities. These new facilities are expected to emerge within the next year and a half.

any funding other than the ones generated from selling permits and fines," Pollack

In addition to constructing new parking lots the old lots must also be maintained. This maintenance includes repaying, striping, lighting, landscaping, upgrading and cleaning. Landscape and cleaning totals about $134,000 a year for all of the parking facilities on campus.

Pather than a student not realizing that he or she has $500 in parking tickets and be unable to register for classes, the problem with outstanding tickets can be detected early on. The information from the new system will automatically be communicated up to the registrar's office. If any outstanding tickets are present a hold will be placed on the perscr's account.

It is also more convenient for the students to check on their parking ticket status.

"We can just pull the information up on the system and immediately tell them when and what the ticket was issued for," Chambers said.

Nov. 10-20 students will be given an amnesty period. People with outstanding parking tickets will receive notices to pay all outstanding tickets before their car will be booted or towed.

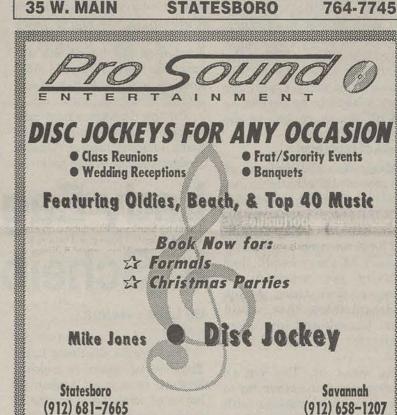

In the near future laser bar code scanners may be added to the field devices. This lot survey equipment will give a sample of how many cars occupy a lot at a time and for how long. This data will then be used to make adjustments in the parking supply.

"This will help us meet the needs of people more effectively," Chambers said.

These surveys will eventually take place about once a quarter.
