ELTON JOHN AIDS FOUNDATION ESTABLISHED

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Entertainer Elton John announced Monday that he was forming a foundation designed to fund AIDS-related causes in the United States.

The nonprofit Elton John AIDS Foundation will be directed by John and based in Atlanta, where he recently bought a home.

The foundation will concentrate on AIDS education, patient care and research, his publicist, Sarah McMullen, said.

John has long been active in the AIDS battle. The British entertainer recently announced that proceeds from all his single record sales in America, beginning with "The Last Song," will be donated to AIDS organizations.

BOOKSTORE OWNER SELLS 'SEX' FOR MONEY

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — A book store owner who sold $1-a-minute glimpses of Madonna's "Sex" book said he raised $1,355 for AIDS research.

Vald Svekis, owner of Liberties book store, said Friday the sneak peeks were very popular and some people even donated money without looking at the controversial book. Svekis said about 15 people complained that the whole idea was in poor taste, but hundreds more applauded the effort.

The check has been sent to the American Foundation for AIDS Research in New York, Svekis said.

He said his store sold their allotment of 265 copies of "Sex" in four days.

LOTTERY TICKET PRINTERS SEEK GEORGIA CONTRACT

GAINESVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Georgia lottery officials won't even have to leave the state to find printers for game tickets because the two largest in the country are home-grown.

Both are in north Georgia, and both plan on bidding for Georgia's contract.

If either wins the job, not only would lottery money remain in the state, the games also would create some new jobs.

"We plan to add 100 more jobs in this facility in the next year," said Jim Culver of Scientific Games, one of the Georgia firms. "Part, but not all, would be related to the Georgia lottery."

Scientific Games of Alpharetta and Moreno Press of Oakwood each produce several billion lottery tickets a year. And each are ready to bid to add Georgia's tickets to their production lists.

Gov. Zell Miller plans to begin setting up the games this week by appointing a seven-member board of directors to operate the Georgia Lottery Corp.

The board will regulate which games will be played, set ticket costs, determine the number and size of prizes, establish how winners will be picked and verified and decide how payments will be made.

University bookstore clarifies its used book buy-back policies

By David Hillis
Staff Writer

The University Store, located next to Landrum Cafeteria, recently released a memo stating their buy-back policy.

This memo, which will be mailed to GSU students, answers many questions asked by students about the policy.

"When possible, we try to reimburse half of the books' retail price," said Joe Franklin, manager of the University Store. "But about 50 percent of the time, books returned by students are not used the following quarter at GSU, and so are often sold to our wholesaler at a lower price."

According to Franklin, the price the University Store pays students for used books is based on whether they can resell them the next quarter.

If a book can be reused at GSU the next quarter, a 50 percent refund often can be paid to the student. If not, the store will try to sell it to the wholesaler for about 25 percent of the retail price.

If the textbook is not used at GSU the following quarter and the wholesaler does not wish to purchase the book, then the store will not buy the book from the students.

"Eventually, every textbook printed will get stuck with someone," Franklin said. "Some get stuck with the wholesaler, some get stuck with the students, and some we get stuck with. We don't like it ... that's just the way it is."

Fountain draws mixed reviews

Some call it beautiful; others say it's a waste

By Enoch Autry
Staff Writer

Construction on the GSU water fountain outside the Williams Center was completed about two weeks ago. During the building and finishing of the attraction, the student body has been given the opportunity to make their own appearance judgments.

Some of the opinions were quite favorable toward the fountain.

Tyler Bagwell, a senior communication arts major, said that it "adds beauty to the campus."

Gay Popham, an undeclared sophomore, said that she likes water and that the fountain beautifies the campus.

Other students felt the fountain had its bad points also.

Derwin Hughes, a senior middle grades education major, said, "I think it is interesting, and it is nice."

"It looks beautiful at night with the lights from the water, but I thought there was going to be two parts to this fountain." Hughes said he feels the fountain looks funny because the pool is off-center.

"It gives the campus something; we just haven't figured it out yet," Hughes said.

Kristin Smith, a senior mass communications major with a broadcasting emphasis, said, "Sure it is nice, but is it really necessary?"

"It gives the campus something we just haven't figured it out yet,"

Derwin Hughes

Smith added that there is a greater need for professors in the communication arts department than a new fountain in the middle of the pedestrian.

More critical students saw the fountain as a "campus eye-sore."

Carey Adams, a senior journalism major, said, "There are pine needles in it, so what's the deal?"

"Whoever thought of this must have been a real genius."

Legendary eagle bone to be displayed in GSU museum?

By Kim St. Hilaire
News Editor

Legendary Eagle football coach Erk Russell recently received a unique honor from GSU — his bones are going to be displayed in a new wing of the GSU Museum.

This is the result of a motion made at a faculty senate meeting shortly after Erk's hip replacement operation.

According to Museum Director Del Presley, Erk's hip bone will be displayed somewhere near the world's oldest fossilized whale.

"Erk is the winningest football coach and so I think it's appropriate," Presley said. "He's probably almost the world's oldest football coach too."

The whale, which was found just below Augusta, is displayed in the context of Georgia's geology; therefore, Presley plans to display Erk's hip bone in terms of Georgia's football geology.

"He came from up in North Georgia in a small school north of Atlanta, and he made fame there and then when he came into South Georgia where the whale was, he really grew in popularity," Presley said. "Erk was virtually unknown until we discovered him in South Georgia."

Along with Erk's hip bone, Presley hopes to exhibit the skull of an eagle beside a cast of the "original bald eagle's" skull.

"Since the museum is in the preservation business, I think we should preserve the original bald eagle who, of course, is Erk Russell," Presley said.

A ceremony will open the museum exhibit honoring Erk. Cheerleaders and victim coaches of the Eagle Legend will be on hand for the event.

"We will invite all the coaches who have been defeated by Erk Russell over the years ... and let them realize how fortunate they were not to have been so victorious," Presley said. "Otherwise they would have lost their hip bones too."

Although this is a very far-fetched scenario, this motion was in fact made at the Oct. 7 faculty senate meeting, and Presley was more than willing to go along with the idea.

Russell could not be reached for comment.

New Statesboro Post Office is one of many progressive changes

By Selena E. McKinnon
Assistant News Editor

The opening of the new post office on Oct. 26 was only the beginning of several changes within the Statesboro postal system.

The new post office, a $2 million dollar project, was a necessary adjustment, according to Raymond E. Steinberg, superintendent of mails and delivery.

"Growth was part of the reason," Steinberg said. "At the time the old post office was built, parking was adequate, but now, with the growth of Statesboro, it is inadequate."

The new post office is expected to serve Statesboro for 30 years. After that, it will probably go the way of the old building, which will become a federal courthouse.

Other recent changes include the closing of the GSU branch and the issuing of a new zip code for box office holders.

Steinberg cited centralization as the reason for the closure and growth as the reason for the new zip code.

"Because of the growth, Statesboro was simply just running out of numbers," Steinberg said.

Currently, mail carriers run eight city routes and 12 county routes. Soon, however, rerouting will begin for rural carriers.

"We want to find the most direct route," Steinberg stated.

Rural patrons will also begin receiving permanent addresses with street names and house numbers.

"That's where 911 comes into play," Steinberg pointed out.

Steinberg stated that more changes are on the way so that as Statesboro grows, the post office will grow with it.

The new fountain is considered the jewel of the campus by some; others feel differently. In any case, it's here to stay. (Photo by Jesse Stribling)

Vicki Alvin, a junior accounting major, said, "I thought I was going to see an Eagle spitting water, but this looks like a big sprinkler for the yard."

The fountain was not worth the time and effort the workers spent tearing up the little sidewalk, Alvin added.

"I could have done that; all I had to do was hook up my water faucet, take it outside and sprinkle water straight up in the air," Alvin said.

Mark Foutch, a senior computer science/electrical engineering technology major, said, "Why did they tarp it instead of concreting it?"

Dorinda Eller, a senior journalism major, said, "I honestly think our money would be well put in getting rid of the com. [communication] arts trailer."

Eller said she felt the fountain was more of Georgia

Southern's wasting money to attract students.

"Stop attracting more people and start treating the ones you do have right," Eller said.

There is a need for more buildings and more residence halls for students because there are too many temporary structures on campus, Eller said.

"I am tired of the South Building stinking because it is on a swamp," Eller concluded.

Former Public Safety building will become Welcome Center

By Melissa Sherrer
Staff Writer

A new Welcome Center will be coming to GSU soon.

The planned location for the center – in the old public safety building on Sweetheart Circle – is ideal, since most visitors to GSU end up on Sweetheart Circle at some point.

"It has been a desire on the part of the administrators for a while to have a way to greet visitors to make sure they get where they need to go [on campus]," said Bob Chambers, director of parking and transportation.

Chambers said that the main objective of the Welcome Center will be to "greet the visitors and give them a good South Georgia welcome and help them get around campus."

The building will house two functions: the Welcome Center and the Parking and Transportation Center.

The Welcome Center will be in the old public safety lobby. It will be a small room with a bathroom and possibly refreshments. The Parking and Transportation Center will be located in the back of the building so that it will be easier to provide parking stickers to the visitors.

The Welcome Center is working with the Bulloch County Visitor's Bureau. This will help GSU establish programs that will not conflict with Statesboro's.

The hours have not yet been established but will be convenient and helpful with the activities scheduled at GSU.

Needs of the disabled to be addressed by Tools for Life

By Deborah Hendrix
Staff Writer

A grant from Vocational Rehabilitation Services has provided for a new Tools for Life Center (TLC) to be opened in the double wide trailer behind Hanner Fieldhouse.

According to a computer printout from Ray Williams, one of the coordinators for the program, the principal goal of this project is, "to increase the independence and self-sufficiency of persons with disabilities by significantly expanding their access to technology-related assistance, disseminate information about assistive technologies and access to devices, provide technical devices for demonstration and trial use, provide consumer training, and sponsor public awareness events for clients, their families, employers, service delivery personnel, and citizens of local communities."

Williams is known to many GSU students for his visits to education and exceptional child classes and his teaching of American Sign Language through the GSU recreation department.

GSU students will be able to see first hand how the Americans with disabilities act is to be implemented. This is especially important to business majors and education majors, but it is educational for all students who may have coworkers, supervisors, subordinates, students or friends with disabilities.

"Terminology is important," said Williams, who is also well known to the deaf community for his leadership in the Southeastern Club for the Deaf in Bulloch County. "Disability refers to the physical limitation, while handicap refers to the barrier which limits the physical disability."

It is quality of life that is important to Williams and his staff, and this varies for each individual. The Tools for Life program will be a means of allowing each individual to live life to his fullest potential.

Rachel Ross, a student assistant for the program, has had much experience with assistive devices for people with disabilities. Since the advent of her own disability (via a car accident), she says she has become more focused in her career plans. She plans to specialize in workers' compensation and personal injury laws and advocate for middle class and disabled people.

The goal, according to Williams, is to use both technical and non-technical devices "not for the disabled person to get out of doing the work or taking the test, but to assist the person with disabilities to learn to do the same things as non-disabled persons."

He stresses enriching the quality of life and developing the means to overcome barriers and become independent and self-sufficient. He also advocates an attitude of understanding and empathy rather than one of sympathy.

All the staff members of the TLC program have disabilities of their own and understand the barriers personally as well as professionally.

Other members of TLC are Martin Kolzman, coordinator, and Linda Barnes Polk, former editor of the "Patriot" and other military publications. Dr. Shelar oversees the program.

According to a pamphlet on TLC programs for Georgia, our state ranks 7th highest in the state on the number of adults 16-65 years of age with a disability. Over 920,000 Georgians have one or more disabilities, but rank 39th nationally in the number of adults with disabilities who work.

The staff is currently involved in obtaining equipment, making connections with businesses, assessing the needs of the community, research, and setting up for the January

GSU Greeks aid Andrew victims

By Camille Childree
Staff Writer

Hurricane relief money totaling $1,000 was raised by various GSU fraternities and sororities to aid hurricane Andrew victims in Florida.

Mike Aronson, a member of Kappa Sigma Fraternity, presented the check to the Bulloch County Red Cross Tuesday.

Aronson presented the idea of the fund raising project to the IFC (Interfraternity Council) at their second meeting of the year.

"They [IFC] agreed to help and came up with a set figure that each fraternity had to be responsible for a least $2 per member including brothers and pledges," Aronson said. "We contacted the sororities and asked if they would like to participate in the project."

The project went on for about five weeks. Phi Kappa Alpha, Delta Tau Delta, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Kappa Alpha, Sigma Chi and Kappa Sigma fraternities all participated. Sororities Alpha Omega Pi and Alpha Delta Pi also made contributions to the fund raiser.

Ranger Challenge held at Fort Stewart

By Melissa Sherrer
Staff Writer

The last weekend of October, Georgia Southern's ROTC hosted the Ranger Challenge at Fort Stewart.

"Ranger Challenge is an ROTC competition that includes every school in the nation that has ROTC," GSU's Major Cox said.

There are four regions to the Ranger Challenge. Georgia Southern is in the first region which includes Georgia, Florida and Puerto Rico. The region consisted of 20 schools with GSU being in the sixth brigade.

The GSU ROTC ranked ninth out of the 20 schools in the competition.

The team included nine cadets who tried out for the competition. The tryouts for the team involved GSU, Armstrong State College and Savannah State College.

The competition consisted of eight events. A patrol and exam was on Friday night.

Six events were held on Saturday: a PT test which consisted of push-ups, sit-ups and a two mile run, a timed rope bridge exercise, an M-16 rifle and M-60 machine gun assembly and disassembly, a grenade assault course, an orienteering course and a marksmanship competition.

Sunday's event was a ten-kilometer road march, in which cadets were judged on their ability to finish first while carrying a 40 pound rucksack.

Georgia Southern's ROTC

scored 1513 points out of 2800. The winning team was Florida Southern University with 1733 points.

GSU was ranked the third Georgia school with the University of Georgia ranked fifth and North Georgia College ranked sixth.

The top two ranked schools from every brigade will compete at Fort Bragg, N.C., for first place in the region.

Habitat for Humanity fundraiser a success

Habitat for Humanity's spirit chain fundraiser last week was a success, thanks to the student body and a few other special people and organizations.

We would like to extend a special thanks to Lynn Tabor, manager of the Print Shop, for donating the paper for our spirit links. Without his contribution, our fundraiser would not have been possible.

We would also like to thank the sororities and fraternities that donated the most. Delta Sigma Theta contributed the most. Other contributors included Pi Kappa Phi, Pi Sigma Epsilon, Alpha Phi Alpha, Kappa Delta and Alpha Omega Pi.

The total raised for the fundraiser was $450, which will go to help build homes in the Bulloch County area. Anyone interested in this organization is welcome to come to our meeting Monday, Nov. 16 at 5 p.m. in Union room 252.

GSU professor places second in National Bodybuilding Championship in Orlando

By Marlene Allen
Staff Writer

Dr. Robert Lefavi, of the Health Sciences Department, recently won second place in the National Bodybuilding Championship, which was held October 2-3 in Orlando at the Orlando Convention Center. The National Bodybuilding Championship, the largest amateur bodybuilding contest held in this country, is the highest an amateur can go before turning professional, of which there are only about thirty in the world.

As the first South Georgian to place in the nationals, Dr. Lefavi was proud of his performance for the simple fact that he placed ahead of many bodybuilders who had beaten him previously and that he also had two votes for first place. He feels that if a bodybuilder looks better than he looked at an earlier performance then he is a winner regardless of how he placed because a bodybuilder's biggest competitor is himself.

Although Dr. Lefavi is greatly interested in bodybuilding, to him it is just a sport because of the fact that bodybuilding is tremendously draining. Dr. Lefavi stated that he would not turn professional even if he had won first place in the Championship, though the sport offers great potential for wealth through promotions and prize money. He feels his career at GSU as professor of Health Promotion to be more rewarding personally than turning professional would be. Dr. Lefavi also contributes articles to bodybuilding magazines such as Muscle & Fitness, for which he and his wife Sue, who is expecting their first child, recently did a photo shoot here in Statesboro for an article on exercise and pregnancy.

So how does one prepare for an event like the National Bodybuilding Championship? Dr. Lefavi expressed that it takes a minimum of three months for him to get into shape for a contest of this caliber. In addition to the customary weight training exercises, he performs aerobic activities to his in order to burn any excess fat. He also has to go on a strict diet, with a typical menu consisting of such low-fat, highly nutritious foods as pasta, potatoes, brown rice, chicken breast, tuna fish, vegetables, and Cream of Wheat.

As one of the owners of Gold's Gym, Dr. Lefavi stresses the fact that everyone should be interested in bodybuilding. "Weight training is not just for looking good but for feeling good," he stated. Bodybuilding is not just a sport but is a useful way for people to enhance their overall health. Dr. Lefavi hopes that by his example he can motivate others to take interest in their bodies and see that if he, at age 32, can become physically fit and compete in bodybuilding contests, then they too can enhance their bodies and their health. When asked if he will compete again anytime in the near future, Dr. Lefavi expressed his need to put his wife first at this point in his life because of her pregnancy and the individualistic aspect of the sport.

ESPN will broadcast the National Bodybuilding Championship Thursday, November 12, at 10:00 p.m.

Lady Eagles "Pursue the Dream" of the upcoming season

By Marchell Gillis
Staff Writer

Picture this: a three-year-old boy running alongside a 6'4" giant to win a one-mile race. Sound like a "wanna be like Mike" ad? No, it's GSU Lady Eagle Toy Williams running alongside young Jacob Barter in the "Pursue the Dream" Road Race.

Like the 25 other runners in the road race, Jacob was out supporting the Lady Eagles in their endeavor to have a winning season.

The road race, which was held on Oct. 31, is starting the season off right for the Lady Eagles, who are aiming for the automatic bid into the NCAA tournament.

The race included a one mile and 5K race, which was broken down into male and female winners in each age division. In the one-mile category the winners were Jeff Watkins, Scott Cram, Katie Moore, and Sarah Watkins. In the 5K race the winners were Jason Morrison, Glen Palmer, and Ann Pierce. Barter, who finished the mile alongside player Toy Williams, received an honorary award.

The race was sponsored by the Lakeside Cafe, who donated t-shirts and key rings to all the participants, including the Lady Eagles.

David Williams, manager of the Lakeside Cafe, says he likes to support student activities, especially women's basketball, since it doesn't get as much support as football or men's basketball.

Williams also said, "We usually put together several campaigns to get the name [Lakeside Cafe] out to students."

The road race was a good kick-off for the Lady Eagle season since the next day at 3:30 p.m. practice began for the players.

What makes this season so special to the Lady Eagles is the fact that they finally get a chance to aim for the NCAA tournament in March in Johnson City, TN.

For seniors Toy Williams, Andrea Stults, Jill Dunn, and Stephanie Christmas, this is the year of the Lady Eagles.

These four seniors have been waiting for a chance at the automatic bid into the NCAA tournament since they were freshmen. "It's a dream come true," says Dunn.

Head Lady Eagle coach Drema Greer says, "It's always an athlete's dream to play in the NCAA tournament, so that's where we get that motto 'Pursuing the Dream.'"

Until this year the team never really had anything to shoot for except a good record, according to Andrea Stults.

During the 1990 season, the team won the New South Women Athletic Conference (NSWAC) in the hopes they would get a bid into the NCAA tournament.

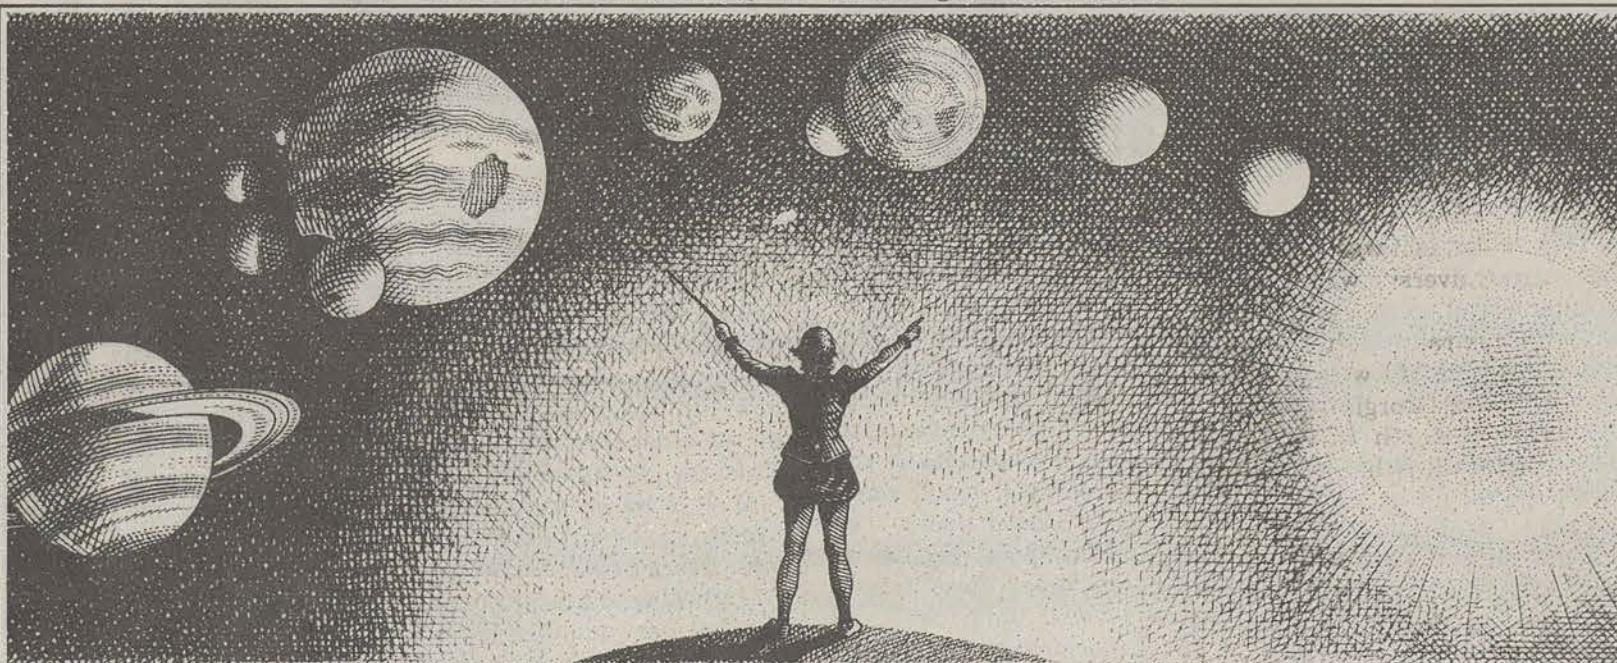

Dunn said, "When we won the tournament in '90, we practiced the whole week thinking we were going to the tournament and we didn't. It was a big let-down."

Toy Williams said, "Before, we just had to work hard, and have a maybe, and now it's a definite."

"We've got six seniors, this is our last year, and we're going to try to go out in style," said Saabrice Smith, another Lady Eagle.

This is the first year that the football team, men's basketball, and women's basketball are in the same conference, the Southern Conference,

Tune in, turn on to GSU talk radio show

In the film Talk Radio, actor/comedian Eric Begosian referred to radio talk shows as "the last neighborhood."

People just don't talk anymore, he said, citing radio as one of the last outlets people have to get together and express themselves to each other.

While we in the print media would like to think that newspapers also serve the purpose of furthering communication among an audience, there is no denying the amount of information and entertainment that can be received through listening to an hour or two of the banter created when an on-air personality and a few vocal callers get into the business of discussing the day's hottest topics.

Luckily for GSU students, there is such a show here on campus.

The Controversial Mike Bailey Talk Show, heard every Wednesday at 6 p.m. on campus station WVGS/FM, 91.9, provides not only a look at some of the issues important to us as students, but gives listeners a chance to call in and express their views on those issues.

Discussions on date rape, AIDS in Statesboro, freedom of speech, homosexuality at GSU, finding a job and even witchcraft have been featured on the show in recent quarters, as well as numerous forums on coping with college life and several debates between campus political groups.

Things often get a little heated and at times almost out of control during the one-hour format, but they nearly always prove to be entertaining.

Mike has done a fine job during the past year of consistently keeping a finger on the pulse of Georgia Southern and bringing some vital issues to the forefront of student discussion.

All students are encouraged to tune in to this program and to contribute to the discussion by phoning in with questions and comments for the panel, usually consisting of faculty and students knowledgeable about the week's topic.

After all, where else can make your opinion known to an untold number of listeners without ever having to show your face?

Final paper of quarter approaching

Next Thursday (Nov. 19) will be the final edition of the George-Anne for fall quarter, providing the beleaguered newspaper staff a week or so to make a last ditch effort to actually pass some classes.

Students and faculty who would like to submit letters to the editor, advertisements, personals, classified ads or press releases should do so by tomorrow for inclusion in the Nov. 17 paper or by Tuesday for the final edition.

The George-Anne will resume publication on a weekly basis on Jan. 5 (the day before classes begin) and will return to a twice-weekly format on Jan. 19.

Entertainer loses a fan Lack of scruples discredits call for 'love and respect'

I know I said this wasn't an opinion column. Well, I have an opinion I feel is warranted to be put forth.

Mike Mesmer-Eyes, the hypnotist, is a hypocritical, unprofessional weasel unworthy of any respect for his ability within his profession or his character.

Now, don't get me wrong. I'm not making some oblique, misinformed statement based on his appearance in front of the public eye. I am basing my statement on his actions as witnessed by myself at Blind Willies after his second show Thursday night of last week.

After the show, a group of two friends, one of which was in the audience with me and one of the on-stage participants, and I went to Blind Willies where we met Mike, his assistant and one of the opening act comedians.

After some of the usual jovial small talk, Mike, in a seemingly friendly manner, sat next to the girl, let's call her Uncorrupted, who was on of the subjects on stage.

After talking pleasantly (I

Uncorrupted conveyed that, unnoticed by us as we did our own things, Mike started pulling the harassment-style quickly; however, he did this little one-on-one performance two or three times during the time we were there, at one time keeping her under for upward of three minutes, and whispering something in her ear.

Suddenly, after less than two hours, Uncorrupted wanted to leave immediately. When out of the building, she slurs and approaches such as (not direct quotes), "I've done so much for you, what do I get in return," "Don't you want to have breakfast with me," and "I'm the man everyone wants to be with."

From what she said, it did not stop here, but went on to a couple of misplaced touches.

I am not condemning Mike for having male urges, and yes, Uncorrupted is a beautiful girl. What does infuriate me is his disregard for his own terms -- "Love and Respect," which during his show he had us believing were the keys to his show and to life.

In his alleged actions at the bar I can find no love and utter disrespect for Uncorrupted. Hypocrite? I think so.

Also, once you're hypnotized, you are, shall we say, "programmed" for life. Mike seems to have used this in an attempt to coerce Uncorrupted back to his hotel room.

There are no gory details to this particular act. But I do know that Uncorrupted was mad as hell and let down by Mike's lack of scruples. She indicated that he did try to use his hypnotic ability to convince her of the legitimacy of his propositions and that he attempted to sway her to feel she was doing him and injustice by not willingly accepting his approaches.

Let me say that I was thoroughly impressed with Mike's

African-Americans, others should know true history of Africa

Dear Editor,

The truth about Africa can finally be told.

I often wondered when the world would finally honor the true mother and father of civilization which is none other than Africa. One must always study to show him or her self approved, this is what I suggest that African American as well as all other groups do.

The history books you read are designed to make the dominant group feel superior while on the other hand all the other groups feel inferior. No group of people should feel inferior to another group of people, especially the African Americans who are direct descendants of he group that gave birth to all culture, religion, education and government.

Before Africa there were none and after her there shall be no more; she is truly the Alpha and Omega.

I make this point because encompassed in Africa's history is the world's history.

That which is not so clear in my mind is how can a child not include his mother and father in his history. This seems virtually impossible, but obviously it is not.

Society dictates that history started in the West in most of my school texts, but Africa is in the East. I probably would not be so against these teachings if Africa had given just a little to civilization, but this is not so and the world needs to know this.

It is believed that the first democratic society was created in the West, but again we need to be looking toward the East to Ghana (Tenkamenin), Mali (Sundiata Keita and Mansa-Musa), and Songhay (Sonni Ali). These are some of the places that implemented a democratic system of government first.

The history books do not reflect that truth, however they only tell the side that again benefits the dominant group.

We (The African) were here some 600,000 years before the Diaspora that created all the other groups including the Europeans, so why are we not mentioned in the history books but in small passages.

Our children are lost in the African American communities because their parents are lost. The truth is written but we refuse to look for it, we would rather accept the untruth as the truth and the youth are saying "To hell with that."

We must know that education started in Africa in places like Timbuktu, Jenne, Gato, Egypt, etc. We must also know the first "trade system" started in West Africa, so do not be tricked into thinking it started in the West and Africa just picked it up.

This is a false notion, just like most of the other things American education tries to sell about Africa.

William Shakespeare, who was of questionable origin, said, "I speak of Africa and golden joys." Even he wanted to thank Africa for giving birth to him.

We do not have to defend Africa because "truth crushed to earth shall rise again," said Dr. King. Please study the truth to help you understand why there has to be untruths.

The time has come for the African to wake up. I think of Marcus Garvey when he said, "Wake up Ethiopia! Wake up Africa!" and I add to that, "Wake up America for the new birth, and rise!"

GSU students should express more school spirit at games

Dear Editor,

This letter is in response and support of the article discussing school spirit ("Where, oh where, has your school spirit gone?" 10/29). Tammy Scroggins was the author of the article. In it, she discusses her uncertainty of the lack of school spirit.

Some good points are brought out in the article. First of all, she points out the growing population of this school, but that attendance gets smaller and smaller at sports events.

Why is this? The majority of students that attend football games are only there because they have to be, and to discuss the drunken state of others.

Those that show up rarely participate in cheering on the team. I believe most of them are there for a fashion show.

I am a first quarter freshman here, and I expected college football games to be outrageously exciting. I have attended a couple of football games, a volleyball game and intramural sports events. There has been very little support at any of these events. I am not impressed with this.

I came to this school because of the energy and excitement I saw when I was here for visitation day and orientation. I expected to see this same energy at the games.

The author compared us to the fans of the Braves. We have done the opposite of the Braves -- having won championships in earlier years -- so why has our spirit gone downhill since then? Our football team is still doing well, so what is the problem?

These athletes really sacrifice a lot of time for us, so why can't we do the same? They deserve our support.

I think we should show our support for our teams by attending the games and participating in the excitement that football games are supposed to be. Sitting at home in front of the television and drinking beer does not show support.

It does not cost anything for us as students to attend the games, so what is the problem? Are you afraid you might lose your buzz if you attend the game?

Republicans are here to stay

Dear Editor,

Now that the Democrats have gotten their every other decade President, I will stand back and let them have center stage. I have to ask about two things though.

1. Does George Cox, a professor of political science, really believe that George Bush received a "thrashing" from the man who got 43 percent of the vote (11/4)?

He also spoke of the end of the Republican party. Come now, Mr. Cox, you sound like a small child after Christmas (to all the other teachers, I apologize for the reference to Christ). Trust me, the Republicans are not going anywhere.

2. It is always great to see those who have jobs and careers espousing the virtues of Affirmative Action. Such is the case with Debra Sabia, Assistant Professor of Political Science.

According to her letter in the George-Anne, if I cannot get a job that I am qualified for after I graduate because of a quota and I am bitter about it, I am a racist.

With all due respect to Ms. Sabia, I think not. As much as the left likes to call conservatives "Hitler" and other useless slurs (which I thought was what they were against), America should guarantee Equal Opportunity, but cannot guarantee Equal Outcome.

At some point it is up to the individual to take some responsibility and stop blaming society.

In closing, I would encourage anyone who does not believe there is a liberal bias at this university to take a stroll through the Political Science building.

Top 10 things to do
at the football game:

(From our home office right here in the 'Boro).

10. Yell, scream and holler until you turn blue.
9. Dress up with blue body paint and go shirtless.
8. Moon the referee.
7. Spill your beer on the people in front of you and try to explain to them that it was an accident.
6. Get a bunch of friends to dress up and go together to look like a fraternity.
5. Start the ever popular chant: "We're not gonna take it..."
4. Practice your own rendition of our national anthem.
3. Streak naked across the field while 70-year old security guards try feebly to chase you down.
2. Hunt down Erk and give him a 'noogie'.
1. Show up.

Attendance is key

Alright students, this weekend is your last chance to prove your worth and show up for a football game.

Maybe it's my fault that you haven't shown up so far this season. Maybe you weren't aware of the importance of each and every game. Well, this one is the most important one of the season because of its consequences.

This weekend's game against Troy State is far more important than the UGA game ever was for the simple reason that our playoff chances hang in the balance.

Although the Trojans are not ranked in the latest I-AA poll, they just came off of a stunning defeat of 12th ranked Samford. Should the Trojans pull an upset over the Eagles, it would most possibly knock GSU out of the top twenty and out of the race for an elusive playoff spot.

And even if the Eagles manage to win, they also have a few other things that the pollsters don't like about them.

One, we have a winning history. Pollsters seem to think that because we have won in the past, that everybody else deserves a break. The truth is, they just plain have it in for us.

Two, we still are operating under a two-quarterback system. This seems to make the pollsters feel that since we can't have one team leader on the field, then we are not worthy of another chance at a national championship.

Three, our schedule is a little weak. Even with a division I power such as UGA in our date book, all the pollsters have to do is look at how many division II opponents we play and say that while our record is outstanding, we didn't play against enough talent to challenge ourselves.

Hopefully in the end all things will work out for the Eagles, but only time will tell. Be a part of our last home game of the year and cheer your team on.

Eagles to face off against Trojans

By Robin Johnson
Staff Writer

As the 1992 football season slowly comes to a halt, the excitement of the last home game could be echoing in some people's ears for a long time.

On Nov. 14, at 1:30 p.m., our Eagles will host the Division II Troy State Trojans.

Being that GSU is 7-10 against schools from the state of Alabama, they currently hold a 2-1 record in meetings between Troy State.

When the Eagles played the Trojans in '85, they mounted a 17-10 victory. Then, last season when the Trojans made their pilgrimage to Statesboro, the Eagles captured their first-ever defeat on the home turf (19-12).

Hard times plagued the Trojans last year, enabling first-year coach Larry Blakeney to only pull his squad to a 5-6 effort.

Overall, though, their strength and potential should not be underestimated. On Nov. 16, Eddie Coleman broke loose for a 63-yard scoring run—the longest by an opponent in Paulson Stadium history.

Coincidentally, with the duration of this season pretty much behind them, they still could not avoid a replica of heart-felt challenges. The Trojans' schedule includes nine I-AA foes—Alabama State, Samford, a No. 8 ranked team whom they beat 29-24, and of course, Georgia Southern.

"One of the main problems that we could face this Saturday is Troy State's quarterback, Kelvin Simmons," Coach Stowers stated. "He has all of the prerequisites of a good quarterback, and is a chief reason Troy State is currently 8-1 in their division."

"I think that this Saturday will be closely reminiscent of last year's game," he added. "We have two outstanding defensive teams, and what we have to do is just simply hold up our end of the game."

As far as overall preparation is concerned, Coach Stowers noted: "Since we're still in the playoffs, this will be an equally important game as last week, and we just have to keep our defense and offense strong."

The game is set to kick-off this Saturday at 1:30 p.m. at Paulson Stadium.

Two-sport star shines in swimming and running

By Laney Nelms
Staff Writer

How many athletes do you know that compete in two varsity sports on a college level at the same time? Georgia Southern has its own two-sport athlete in Heather Gordon.

Heather is a member of the Georgia Southern swim team and cross country team which is very active during the fall quarter. It seems it would be very difficult to compete in two sports at one time and according to Heather, it is. "It is very hard competing in two sports at one time because it takes up a lot of time and hard work." She spends a lot of time in the pool, weight room, and running around campus.

Cross country is a very demanding sport and your physical condition has to be superb. Heather is the number one runner on the women's cross country and has to practice mostly on her own considering that the swimming practice is held during cross country practice.

Heather feels that swimming has helped her performance in cross country. "I think swimming has helped me as far as my cardiovascular system is concerned because I can run further without giving out as soon."

As far as swimming is concerned, Heather likes it very much and feels that the team has a good chance at the conference championship. "The team is loaded with a lot of talent and the freshmen should do a great job."

After upsetting Louisville last year to win the conference title, the Lady Eagles may be the team to beat. "I feel that Louisville is going to be ready for us this year and they are going to be tough to beat, but we have a good team."

Coming off last Thursday's meet with Florida State, the Lady Eagles looked strong and Heather didn't do so bad herself. Heather swam in the 50-yard freestyle, 100-yard freestyle, and 400-yard freestyle relay. She did very well and placed third in the 50 free, sixth in the 100 free, and her relay team finished second. "I am glad that we did so well against FSU because their program is much bigger than ours," also she said "It was great to be able to just get to swim against FSU."

Lady Eagle swimming coach Scott Farmer agrees that Heather is a great athlete. "Heather is an exceptional athlete and I am proud of her accomplishments."

Heather came to Georgia Southern as a walk-on and has earned a scholarship through hard work and has proven that nothing comes easy. "I find her situation very rare and it's hard to believe that someone

Eagle swimmers drowned by Florida State

Last Thursday afternoon the GSU mens' and womens' swim teams faced explosive Florida State in a dual swim meet. The Seminoles of Florida State prevailed over the men by the score of 160-62 and the GSU women were defeated 150-73.

Coach Scott Farmer was pleased with the Lady Eagles performance against Florida State. "I thought they swam very well and we knew that they were going to be very strong and hard to beat."

Stacey Scheible picked up where she left off last year by setting a new pool record in the 200-yard individual medley with a time of 2:10.52. "Stacey swam really well and I am pleased to see her get off to a great start," noted Farmer.

The freshman class proved any doubts that anyone might have had about them with an impressive showing against Florida State. Sherlonda Pitts set a new GSU record in the 200-yard backstroke with an incredible time of 2:11.22.

Another outstanding freshman by the name of Amanda Nixon placed first in the 50-yard freestyle. Coach Farmer was impressed with the newcomers. "They have worked hard and I am glad to see them do well in their first meet."

For the men, Crandall Ryles and captain Rod Butcher blew away the rest of the field to take first and second place respectively in the 50-yard freestyle. Ryles took first place with a time of 22.44 seconds and Butcher touching the wall shortly after with a time of 22.66.

PARKING "BOOT" AMNESTY

Do You have any unpaid parking tickets? If so, the office of Parking and Transportation is giving you a chance to take care of them without penalty.

Parking has recently purchased an electronic ticketing system that allows officers to enter in license plate numbers on-site to check for outstanding tickets. Anyone with three or more unpaid tickets will have their car booted (immobilized).

You can avoid having this happen to you. Parking is granting amnesty to all students, faculty, and staff with unpaid parking tickets by extending a grace period until November 20. During that time you are strongly encouraged to come into the Parking Office and pay your parking tickets. After November 20, officers will be identifying and booting vehicles with three or more unpaid tickets.

If you have any questions about whether you have any unpaid parking tickets, please call 681-0702. Take advantage of this amnesty and avoid getting the boot!

I wish I could use the more extreme vulgar insults in print, for I would put together a string of winners that would make a sailor turn his head in shame.

I will never see another Mike Mesmer-Eyes show. I don't enjoy watching a blatant hypocrite put on his halo for the sake of a dollar and that applause at the end.

I would go so far as to encourage the rest of the student body to boycott any future Mike Mesmer-Eyes performances on the grounds of refusal to support an over-trained fortune-teller who would use his, perhaps only, talent to further the achievement of his sexual drives with women who probably wouldn't receive him unless they were hypnotized.
