NEWS BRIEFS

Arizona plans first King Holiday Celebration

PHOENIX (AP)—Arizona hopes to put two decades of frustration, boycotts and embarrassment behind it this year as it celebrates its first official Martin Luther King holiday.

Arizona voters approved the holiday in November, making New Hampshire the only state without a holiday honoring King. New Hampshire does celebrate a civil rights day, and its legislature this year will consider adding King's name to that holiday.

The biggest celebrations will be in Phoenix, where thousands are expected to attend a city-sponsored prayer breakfast on Friday. The traditional march from downtown to the state Capitol on Jan. 18, the actual holiday, also is expected to draw thousands.

Marches, rallies, prayer vigils and concerts are planned by cities, churches and schools throughout Arizona.

Georgia Secretary of Senate retires after quarter century

ATLANTA (AP)—After 25 years of bailing out senators and lieutenant governors mired in their own parliamentary procedure, Hamilton McWhorter is bailing out himself.

The short, stocky secretary of the Senate, who has guided the chamber's 56 members through votes on thousands of bills, resolutions and amendments is retiring.

McWhorter, a spry 79, will tally his last vote Monday when the Senate confirms the appointment of his successor.

"He will be missed more than anyone else I can remember leaving this Capitol in the 30 years I've been here," Gov. Zell Miller said of his longtime friend.

McWhorter stood at the head of the Senate chamber with Miller during the governor's 17-year reign as lieutenant governor. The two also served side by side as senators during the 1961-62 term.

Jesse Jackson says Georgia law should be repealed

ATLANTA (AP)—Jesse Jackson said Saturday Georgia's majority vote law that enabled Paul Coverdell to defeat incumbent Wyche Fowler in the U.S. Senate race should be repealed.

He said he believed repeal of the law would give black candidates a better chance of winning elections.

"Why do we win in the primary and not in the runoff," Jackson asked during a speech at the Antioch Baptist Church North in Atlanta.

"It's because of the system, not because something's wrong with us," he said. "If we repeal the law, it means...we can win in a three-person race."

Fowler, a Democrat, led the field in the general election, but failed to get 50 percent of the vote. The Georgia law—only one of its kind in the nation—requires the winner in a general election to get a majority vote.

Students will receive new ID cards this quarter

New identification cards 'scream GSU'

By Selena E. McKinnon
Assistant News Editor

Students can look forward to new identification cards during early spring registration.

The decision to replace the I.D. cards came after intramural stickers on the cards jammed Cash to Card machines.

"This is a different style of card," stated Licensing and Marketing Coordinator Connie Lipsey. "It's like a credit card rather than the plastic laminated card we have now."

Pictures for the new cards will be taken on a video camera connected to a computer. The computer will process the image and save it on disk. A thermal printer will emboss the card.

"It will take only four seconds to produce a card. Now, students wait up to an hour," stated Tom Palfy, Director of Food Services.

Because images are saved on disk, replacing a lost card will not require having another picture taken.

"You could call, and we would bring your image up on the computer and have the card waiting for you," explained Palfy.

The cost for a replacement will remain the same.

The front of the card will be a picture of GSU students at a football game.

Gold foil holograms of the Eagle mascot and the Eagle Express logo will also appear on the front.

"We were looking for something that screamed GSU," commented Palfy.

A computerized image of the student, a bar code, and a magnetic strip for future dorm access will appear on the back.

Lipsey commented that the front of the card will be changed periodically.

These jubilant GSU football fans will grace the front side of the new student IDs.

"Hopefully, it will be something that will keep students interested," she stated.

Graduate students, faculty and staff located in Savannah will not be receiving new cards.

"It would cost an additional $7,000 to add another video camera," explained Palfy. "There's no way I could justify that."

Costs for the new equipment totaled $13,000.

"In the long run, we're saving money. It costs 64 cents to make the current cards, while the new ones will only cost 36 cents," Palfy stated.

Palfy added that the new system has an advantage. It's program allows the design of the card to be changed to meet any future needs.

"Also, students will no longer be able to add false dates of birth into their I.D.'s," he stated.

'Tools for life' center opens

New GSU center will help the handicapped

By Enoch W. Autry
Assistant News Editor

On a rainy last Friday afternoon, the opening of the new Tools for Life Center drew about 50 umbrella-clad people of nursing, faculty and concerned GSU student body.

The center will offer people from 27 Southeast Georgia counties with hearing, vision or mobility problems devices needed to make life more livable.

"This is the kind of thing that Georgia Southern is supposed to do and should do."

President Nicholas Henry

"This is the kind of thing that Georgia Southern is supposed to do and should do," said President Nicholas Henry as he cut the ribbon to the center.

Dr. Dawn Shelar, Coordinator of GSU's Therapeutic Recreation Program, said she felt "really wonderful and really good" about the chance to assist disabled persons in neighboring counties.

"Now we can get started ordering all of the equipment (for the center)," Shelar said.

The requisition of a state grant was made in June 1992 and the project was funded in July by a four-year continuation grant.

Those involved in the opening have been attending workshops in Atlanta to understand the responsibilities of the center, according to Shelar.

The center's staff is representative of the disabled persons that will receive help by having Ray Williams who is deaf and Martin Holzman who is in a wheelchair from a spinal cord injury as co-coordinators and secretary Linda Polk who is hearing impaired.

For those individuals that feel that the program is not worth the funding, Shelar said, "The old thing has been that we [GSU] don't have enough people to use wheelchairs or people who are blind to spend all that money to accommodate them, but if we put that concern first then they will come."

Shelar added that there are four students presently on campus along with several with hearing disabilities.

The center will be setting up an advisory board that will have representatives from the 27 counties because they are more aware of their problems than the center, Shelar said.

In addition, Shelar mentioned that there is a possibility that a transportation system can be set up to visit all of the counties in their coverage area.

Committee preparing report for SACS reaccreditation

By Kim St. Hilaire
News Editor

With a year of organization and research under their belts, members of GSU's self-study project are almost prepared to draft a major report, which, when finalized, will be sent to the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools (SACS) for approval.

This project is part of the reaccreditation process universities must go through every 10 years.

Having a school's accreditation reaffirmed not only adds legitimacy to its degrees, but also makes the school eligible for federal funds.

Dear Elvis,

The King' makes his postal debut

By Enoch Autry
Assistant News Editor

On Friday Jan. 8, 1993, Elvis Presley was sited on the GSU campus.

The last reported sitting of The King was at the Time Saver Minit Market in the Stadium Walk Plaza, but this cannot be confirmed by the Statesboro Police Department.

According to reports, Presley was seen in the GSU Post Office with a microphone in his hand and looking much younger than his age.

Of course, the sitting was on the new commemorative rock n' roll postal stamp of Elvis that went on sale at noon Friday, his birthday.

Jesse Stribling, a sophomore art major, said, "After I bought my Elvis stamps, I thought, 'wait a minute, I thought they only printed stamps of deceased people'."

Former GSU publications specialist Ellen Harrison, who became interested in stamp collecting while in Statesboro, took the opportunity Friday to get her 15 month-old son Gene involved in the Elvis-mania.

When a co-worker was mailing postcards on the king's birthday, Harrison sent one out to Gene bearing the new stamp.

"I thought it would be kind of neat for my son to have a piece of rock n' roll history with his name on it," said Harrison, who emphasized she is not a "big" Elvis fan. "He seems to like music a lot; it kind of runs in the family."

Assistant postal manager, Ron Lee said that the office received 2,500 and he gave each worker at the front desk 800 stamps a piece.

Health center expands AIDS testing

By Kim St. Hilaire
News Editor

With the number of AIDS cases on the rise in America, doctors and educators have tried to emphasize not only the importance of safe sex, but also the importance of testing for the HIV virus. In accordance with this goal, GSU has expanded its HIV testing services, so that they are offered Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., Health Educator Whitney Himes said.

Last May, GSU's health center began offering anonymous HIV testing. Himes explained that a number code is used in place of the students' names.

In addition, only the medical staff has access to the students' results - they are not reported on their medical records.

Last year, the testing was conducted only on Thursdays by appointment. Although Himes said the center saw a rush of students before spring quarter of 1992 ended, the staff was not large enough to accommodate daily testing until now.

"Now that we're offering it every day of the week, we're hoping that we'll start to see the numbers double and triple," Himes said.

She also stated that the center really wants to push the HIV testing service to the students. She feels that the students in high risk groups for contracting the virus are not being tested.

"Often times people say, 'Oh, if I had HIV, I wouldn't want to know' because they're so afraid of the social stigma and all that's associated with AIDS," Himes said.

High risk categories include iv drug users, homosexuals and heterosexuals who are not monogamous.

Many of the students who have gone in for HIV testing Himes said she would characterize as "the types who lead pretty healthy lifestyles and really are assertive in areas of health... so that it would only be natural that they would come in and have the HIV test done."

Although there is no known cure for the disease, it is important for people in high risk categories to be tested in order to help stop the spread of the disease, Himes stated.

Construction still plagues the campus but is necessary to accommodate fast growth

By Christopher Cole
Staff Writer

Growing pains are evident all over campus. At the south end, a bulldozer rests in the mire of a wooded area behind the Lakeside Café and Newton. Beside Johnson Hall, the supporting structures of a new dormitory stand unsheltered in the rain.

According to David Hainley of Facilities Planning, the work currently being done behind Newton has two purposes: an extension of the underground electrical system and construction of a new sewer system.

Both underground systems, according to Hainley, will serve the needs of growing facilities on the southern end of campus. "It's the only place to build," he commented.

The dormitory currently under construction next to Johnson Hall, across from the Health Center, should be completed by the winter or spring of 1994, according to Housing Director Patricia Burkett.

The engineers originally intended to be finished by November or December of this year and to begin housing residents there winter quarter of 1994, but weather problems delayed construction, and the facility is not likely to house students until spring quarter of 1994, Burkett said. The three floor residence hall is expected to have 246 beds and house both male and female students.

The Georgia Legislature has also approved construction of an apartment-style complex next to Stratford Hall. Burkett said the original objective was to include 500 beds, but after further developments, the goal is now to have at least 430.

GSU's housing staff has not yet met with the architects of the new complex next to Stratford, and design is only in the preliminary stages.

Construction should be completed "no sooner than probably the fall of '95," Burkett said.

Names have not yet been chosen for either facility. President Henry has appointed a committee to select names for the new buildings on campus.

Get in shape before break with GSU's new nutrition program

By Kim St. Hilaire
News Editor

Every December, after final exams, college students rush home to relax, celebrate the holidays, and catch up with old high school friends. For many students, the holiday season becomes consumed by family dinners and parties.

Unfortunately, somewhere between the Christmas cookies and the New Year's champagne, once-small waistlines are also consumed.

The real tragedy, however, is that many students return to school after the holidays and start thinking about how bad they will look in bathing suits if they do not lose weight before Spring Break.

Desperate, many will turn to unhealthy weight loss programs to remove the excess fat quickly.

According to GSU Health Educator Whitney Himes, last year after the holidays the Health Center became flooded with students who wanted to lose weight quickly - before Spring Break.

"We have seen as many males as females," Himes said.

She added that some students resorted to unhealthy, "quick fix" dieting programs, which often cause dieters to regain weight as quickly as they have lost it.

In an attempt to help students either escape or avoid the yo-yo dieting dilemma, the Health Center is implementing a nutrition program.

The program is tentatively scheduled to meet in Johnson Hall every Monday and Wednesday, Himes stated.

During one of the sessions, the focus will be directed toward discussion about nutritional services. The other meeting will be an exercise class, where student aerobics instructors will teach fitness tips to their peers.

Included in the exercise class will be stretching and aerobics, as well as advice on other forms of fat burning exercise students can participate in throughout the week.

"The freshman 15 has become more like the freshmen 25 today," Himes said.

She pointed out, however, that even for students who eat out frequently or eat in the residence halls have many healthy options.

Anyone who is interested in the nutrition program can contact Whitney Himes at the health center for more information.

GSU's Community Service Fair is today

By Enoch W. Autry
Assistant News Editor

Representatives from agencies, councils and groups in the community will be on hand from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. today in the University Union Commons for GSU's First Community Service Fair Day.

According to Victoria Futch, director of volunteer services, "We can get the representatives on campus with their materials, their brochures and their fliers to let students know how rich a field of volunteer services and opportunities there are in the community."

Some of the organizations that will be represented at the fair will be as follows: Bulloch County Victim Witness Assistance Program, First Step Program, Department of Family and Children Services, Girl Scouts, Joseph's Home for Boys, Ogeechee Home Health Agency, Ogeechee Tech, Parks and Recreation, Educational

Other projects are currently in progress such as the weatherization project, a storyteller at the Statesboro public library and the Special Olympics, Futch said.

Futch wants GSU students to understand that there are many reasons to be a part of volunteer services.

"There is the payback of satisfaction from doing things for other people, having the abilities to show the community and being able to further your own experience to hone your skills", Futch concluded.

GSU to host sport management conference

By David S. Hillis
Staff Writer

On Jan. 29 and Jan. 30, the first sport management conference anywhere of its kind will be held at GSU.

The conference, which currently has between 200 and 300 students registered from colleges and universities throughout the Southeast, was designed because of a need for sport management and related majors to learn marketing techniques and related skills.

More than 100 of those currently registered are students at GSU.

"This conference will teach students things that they just won't get in the classroom," said Dr. Doyice J. Cotten, conference organizer and director on behalf of the Department of Sports Science and Physical Education at GSU.

According to Cotten, a similar conference will be held this year in Paris, France.

"However, this conference (at GSU) will be geared more to marketing skills and will be more useful to the students," Cotten said.

Several guest speakers will be attending the two-day conference, some traveling from as far as St. Louis and Orlando.

The keynote speaker of the conference will be Dr. William Sutton, Vice President of Properties with Del Wilber and Associates. Sutton has also served as a professor from Robert Morris College and Ohio State University, and was formerly president of the North American Society for Sport Management. He currently is on the editorial board of the new Sport Marketing Quarterly. Sutton's keynote address is titled "Sport Marketing - Evolution from the 1800's to the Year 2000."

Other conference speakers include John Bevilacqua, CEO and president of Bevilacqua International; Peter Bragan, general manager and vice president of the Jacksonville Suns; and Eric Leins, general manager of the Orlando Predators

Two GSU students to make a "Journey of Hope"

The students will pedal from San Francisco to D. C. to raise money for disabled persons this summer

GSU News Service

They're not just sight-seeing. This summer, Clent Chatham and Mike Davis, members of GSU's chapter of Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity, will be doing something quite different from the average college student. They will "go the extra mile" for people with disabilities.

And they'll be going 3,500 "extra miles" by bicycle! On June 14, Chatham and Davis will meet 48 other students from universities all across the country and embark on a 62-day "Journey of Hope."

The team members are all members of Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity and are joining forces to pave the road for a better understanding of people who are disabled. From San Francisco to Washington D.C., the PUSH America team will be cycling from city to city, bringing the message of PUSH

America in unique and inspiring ways.

PUSH America was founded by Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity with the intention of improving the lives of people with severely handicapping conditions through service, volunteerism, education and awareness. PUSH America is a private, non-profit organization which has served the needs of the severely disabled across the U.S. for over 15 years. Since its founding, PUSH America has received more than $2.5 million raised by the collegiate members of Pi Kappa Phi.

Chatham, whose hometown is Lawrenceville, and Davis, who hails from Evans, will provide dozens of presentations on campuses and in communities to help others understand the issues facing those with disabilities. After cycling an average of 75 miles each day, the team will take part in many presentations and special events, often meeting with those for whom they're riding.

In addition to raising awareness, the Journey of Hope will raise more than $250,000 for future educational projects and programs. Much of this money is raised by the team members. Chatham and the rest of the PUSH America team must each raise a minimum of $4000 to qualify.

Anyone interested in "going the extra mile" by making a tax deductible donation to Push America on behalf of Clent Chatham or Mike Davis should contact them at 681-6861 (Chatham) or 681-3811 (Davis).

Studies show that cutting down on table salt will reduce risk of hypertension, heart disease, and stroke

Today millions of Americans are consuming far too much sodium, which accounts for approximately 40 percent of common table salt. It is true also that the body needs a certain amount of salt every day to maintain a natural balance of water and sodium; however, Americans generally consume more than is necessary.

Excessive sodium in the diet may contribute to high blood pressure, and persons with high blood pressure are at a greater risk of heart disease and stroke (Healthline June 1992). It is suggested that individuals limit their sodium intake to 3,000 milligrams, or a little more than a teaspoon of table salt, per day. This amount of sodium also includes the sodium already present in food.

HEALTH AND FITNESS

Do yourself a favor and cut down on using the salt shaker. You can likely receive an adequate amount of sodium from the foods you eat every day without drowning them in salt.

The best way to reduce salt intake is to gradually reduce the amount put in or on food until one can eat without it. The food may taste bland at first, but once the taste buds adjust, the natural flavor of foods is the reward. Pepper, garlic salt, or onion salt provide a comparable alternative, if cutting seasoning out is not within reason. Non-sodium salt substitutes are also available.

Keep in mind that many food manufacturers add salt to their products. Processed foods contain the most salt, so be sure to check labels for sodium content. Restaurants also tend to add salt to their dishes. Because of this, one should request that the food not be salted.

At what point does a diet become a suicide mission?

A lot of people are dying to be thin. Starving themselves with diets, abusing diuretics and laxatives, or inducing vomiting after meals. And their obsession with being thin can lead to permanent physical damage or even death.

Eating disorders - anorexia, bulimia and compulsive overeating - are addictions, which, left untreated, get progressively worse over time. The outward signs are often subtle, but if the condition isn't treated, the effects can be devastating on the whole family.

Identifying the problem is the first step toward treatment and recovery.

Here are some signs to look for:

- ☐ Constant dieting or preoccupation with food.
- ☐ Distorted body image.
- ☐ Frequent trips to the bathroom, especially after meals.
- ☐ Extreme fluctuations in weight.
- ☐ Mood swings.
- ☐ Isolation from family and friends.

At Advance Treatment Services, we have years of experience successfully treating individuals with eating disorders. Call for a free, confidential consultation.

You don't have to be sure. Just concerned.

Sign of the times?

This approximately eight month-old political sign has remained by the side of a busy Statesboro intersection long after most folks' memory of the political season has faded. Do the voters of Bulloch County really need this much thanks, or is someone just putting off taking the thing down?

Political sign needs to go

Harking back to Statesboro's political season, which because of the prominence of the Democratic party on the local level was over for many after the primaries on July 21, GSU students may remember when the roadsides of our fair town were virtually covered with signs promoting political candidates.

After the primaries, and the general election on Nov. 3, most politicians in the area were fairly prompt in removing the campaign signs, many of which had deteriorated to one extent or another, from the thoroughfares of the 'Boro.

However, one of the larger signs to grace our highways and byways this year still stands, for some unknown reason, in one of the town's most frequented areas.

A large wooden campaign sign supporting re-elected Bulloch County sheriff Arnold Ray Akins, which according to some students has been in place since last May, still graces the left side of Brannen Rd., just past Winn-Dixie.

Despite the fact that Akins cruised to victory in July and was unopposed in November, the approximately eight month-old sign has not yet been removed by the sheriff's supporters.

The nature of the sign's message was, in fact, changed after the primary from a solicitation for votes to a "thank you," which adequately justified its presence for a few more weeks. But after an entire season has come and gone, it can only be assumed that everyone who voted for the sheriff has been thoroughly thanked.

It is time for the sign to come down.

Time and weather have begun to take their toll on the wood used in its construction and, quite frankly, it is becoming an eyesore for those of us who are thoroughly sick of politics and want a break for a couple of years.

Whoever is responsible for the sign should remove it before the thing either crumbles to the ground or becomes a Bulloch County historical landmark.

Thank you for your support.

Ah yes, the ceremonial New Year's resolution.

We resolve to lose weight, save money, be faithful, quit gambling, write to relatives, be nice, make good grades, not have wrecks, quit smoking, eat right, exercise, go to church and generally improve our lives.

But do we ever live up to these proposed personal mandates? No.

So, I wonder, do we make these resolutions to try to set goals to strive for or do we just go through the process as some socially induced means of self-observance?

Is the point to look at ourselves and find faults to be corrected? And if so, why do we recognize these faults only at this specified time of the year?

Maybe we internally know these goals will never be reached; we just want to prove to ourselves that we are still feeling enough to recognize our own quirks.

breaking the resolution.

Well, now, as a public service, I am providing a list of resolutions worthy of achievement and easily done.

1. Resolve never to take a used car salesman at his word.
2. Resolve to do the right thing.

3. Resolve to keep from being arrested.
4. Resolve to become independent of the parents before they reach retirement.
5. Resolve to eat, sleep, drink and perform most bodily functions.
6. Resolve to show compassion on a daily basis.
7. Resolve to routinely feed your pet.
8. Resolve to watch fewer commercials.
9. Resolve to do something for the environment.
10. Resolve to do whatever you damn-well please.

And what are my resolutions? I resolve to listen to more obnoxious music, abandon hope of ever getting my room straightened up and to hunt down the creator of the smiley face pin (sticker, T-shirt, etc.) and poke his eyes out.

Happy frickin' New Year.

Each year, millions of dogs, monkeys, mice, rats and other laboratory animals are used to test beauty products such as mouthwash, mascara, shampoo, lipstick, hand lotion, face cream and perfume.

According to The Green Consumer, by John Elkington, Julia Hailes and Joel Makower, the animals "sacrifice their health, and often their lives, in the name of 'science,' testing a wide range of cosmetics and personal care products."

Before a product can be put on a supermarket shelf, it goes through a series of animal tests to make sure it will not be harmful to humans. Approximately 14 million animals die each year as a result of these tests.

Animals are "routinely burned, injected with poisonous substances, artificially stressed, infected with disease and administered electric shock," the book states. The tests usually go on for days or weeks and the animals are seldom given painkillers.

One test frequently used by cosmetic companies is the Draize Eye-Irritancy Test.

This test surveys the "irritancy" of prospective products by putting albino rabbits in restricting appliances, then distributing a few drops of the test substance into their eyes. The animal's eyes usually be-

The Humane Society of the United States said that this test alone kills four million animals each year. Before death, animals will usually suffer "bleeding from the eyes, nose and mouth, an inability to breathe, vomiting, convulsions and paralysis."

According to the Humane Society, these tests give little to no information about the products' potential danger to humans.

Animal activists also state that there are alternatives to animal product testing. The tests that do not use animals save money, time and provide more efficient information concerning human health.

Most of the products found in the supermarket are manufactured by companies that support animal product testing. Listed below are several major companies that test on animals (courtesy PETA).

Blame It On The Rain

Last quarter I had the distinct pleasure of working with Campus Recreation and Intramurals when GSU and the County Rec Department hosted the Georgia State Flag Football Championships.

Georgia Southern welcomed over a hundred teams from colleges and universities from various parts of the state. The games started early and ran late and the only weather in the forecast was rain, rain, and more rain. It was amazing that all of those athletes came out to play in the rain and never had any complaints.

Anyone who was there might wonder why I called the experience a pleasurable one considering I had to be at work at 7:30 a.m. on a weekend and stand out in the pouring rain for ten hours. The scorekeepers were the luckier ones. At least I could try to hold my umbrella while juggling the clipboard, downmarker, and walkie talkie. The officials and players just had to stand there and let the water drip off the ends of their noses.

The tournament ran very smoothly considering all the drawbacks. As a matter of fact, I think the mud and muck made every play a little more interesting. It was just funny watching so many people get so dirty to win.

The wet surface actually gave teams an advantage. One could always pick up a little extra yardage if they dove. However, it was tough to throw and catch a wet football, that is, if you could keep your footing.

After one game, a team from Berry College decided since they were already dirty that they would use a stretch of grass as a slip and slide. Of course, I was trying to be as professional as possible so I didn't take off running and become a human bodyboard, although I really wanted to.

To be honest, I wasn't looking forward to sloshing around all day, but the excited and friendly players made it fun.

I just wanted everyone to know that I had a great time and commend the department for the wonderful job of organizing and running the event. Under the circumstances with all the rain and such, we could have had a horrible time.

The participants and their fans really helped me to keep a smile by not complaining and having some laughs themselves. All in all, I would say it was a success. Hopefully, the teams really did have a good time and will want to bring the tournament back to Statesboro next year.

I should mention that the sun did shine for a little while on Sunday and the final games were played on drier fields. However, the damage was already done leaving a few outfields and practice fields in desperate need of care.

Congratulations to the Bad to the Bone team who won the state championship and went to the December nationals. Also, officials Bryan Reynolds, John Key, David Sams, and Joey Fennell deserve some praise for the outstanding job they did that awarded them bids to nationals.

I can't say I would really like to work out in the rain all weekend again anytime soon, but at least I'll have a positive attitude about it if I have to.

Men at top of Southern Conference

By Chris Sherwood
Staff Writer

The Georgia Southern Eagles destroyed the Buccaneers from Tennessee 96-75. GSU for the second straight game received great bench support and played well in front of the home crowd to improve their Southern Conference record to 3-0 and 9-2 overall.

Charlton Young and Dexter Abrams both threw in 16 points to lead the Eagles. Young also lead GSU in rebounds with nine.

While Coach Kerns was pleased with his teams performance, he felt that: "The team would have to improve in this weeks practice to continue to play well."

"There were times in the second half where we just didn't pull down the rebounds and East Tennessee State would get a second chance and put it in and they pulled closer and we will have to improve on it this week."

The Eagles have played much better in the last three games and their bench has contributed greatly, "I knew that our bench would contribute the way they have, it was just a matter of time," commented Young.

Alan LeForce, the head coach at East Tennessee State, summed up the game real well. "GSU out rebounded, out hustled, out shot us and totally dominated the game." "I'm not making any excuses but this Saturday-Sunday schedule is probably the worst possible thing for this Conference, it's tough to prepare for the Sunday game because you only have a couple hours to get ready."

"I think that the weekend schedule will only hurt our Conference, we want our Conference to get more recognition and we're killing each other by not having any teams with great overall records," said coach LeForce. As the top team in the Southern Conference for the last four years, East Tennessee State faces a much tougher road if they want to repeat. "The guards run the show, they are the ones who lead your team and their role is not an individual one, but it is a team position," said LeForce.

"Our guards need to involve everyone on the floor, the guard is not only supposed to look good, but he is supposed to make everyone look good," mentioned LeForce.

Our Eagles kicked the Buccaneers around and sent them packing, but their early success cannot lead to complacency because there are many hard road trips in the future which will definitely impact the Eagles season and post-season.

In the previous two games of Southern Conference play...

GSU 66
THE CITADEL 58

The Eagles opened up their Southern Conference play at McAulister Field House on the campus of The Citadel on Tuesday, January 5th.

The Eagles played a sloppy game, but managed to hold on to win this very important road game. "It's a very, very big win for us, any time you win against a conference team on their home court you're happy," commented Kerns. The leading scorer for GSU was Charlton Young with 23. The Eagles top rebounder was Warren Johnson with 10 boards.

GSU 103
APPY ST. 76

The Eagles played their second Southern Conference game in front of 2,314 fans at Hanner Field House on Saturday, January 9th.

Appalachian had just come off a 111-92 pounding of Marshall to open their conference play, but as they quickly realized GSU was ready to play. The Eagles leading scorer was Dexter Abrams with 20 points. The leading rebounder was Calvin Sinkfield with nine. This was a huge win for GSU as it finally showed that this Eagle team can face a challenge a defeat a good quality team.

These past three games were great victories for the Eagles as they started off on the right foot in conference play, but our men will have to keep their level of intensity where it is because of the great parity in the league.

The next game for the Eagles finds them travelling to Marshall this Saturday with a starting time of 3 p.m.

Bad to the Bone wins nationals in OT

By Tammy Scroggins
Staff Writer

GSU sent two teams and four officials to the National Flag Football Invitational Collegiate Championships in New Orleans, Louisiana the weekend of Dec. 28-31. Campus Recreation and Intramurals sponsored the students with financial support for fees, transportation, and hotel accommodations.

Bad to the Bone captured National Champion honors after defeating the University of New Orleans in a thrilling 20-14 overtime game. Bad to the Bone became the Georgia State Champs in November. Members include Stephanie West, Cynthia Hunt, Sheri Wilson, Christy Hill, Ginny Hall, Julie Jordan, Dawn Lingo, Linda Harris, Connie Pack and Caty Bentner. This is the second National Championship win for Coach Rob Whitaker and his team in three years.

Julie Jordan, quarterback, was named to the All-American Offensive First Team. Others chosen for first team were Dawn Lingo, Defensive MVP; Stephanie West, Defensive Rusher; and Sheri Wilson, Offensive Receiver. Cyn Hunt, Christy Hill, and Ginny Hall got picked for the All-American Second Team, with Hunt as Defensive Rusher and Hall and Wilson for Offensive Receivers.

GSU was well represented with officials Bryan Reynolds, David Sams, Joey Fennell, and John Key. Reynolds and Key received bids from GSU, while Sams got a bid from the State Tournament. Fennell was an All-American Official in 1991. Only twelve officials are chosen out of eighty-five who hail from colleges and universities throughout the nation.

Key was honored with an All-American Official 1992 plaque and was the head referee for the men's championship game. Key was also selected as MVO (Most Valuable Official) for GSU.

Sigma Chi, GSU's Men's Champs, also played at nationals. They lost in the first round of playoffs after a sweet victory over the European champions. They ended up in 17th place.

The Bad to the Bone intramural team traveled to New Orleans to win the national championship. Their trip was sponsored by Campus Recreation and Intramurals. (Special Photo)

Lady Eagles start out at 7-3

By Tammy Scroggins
Staff Writer

The first week in December basically marked the end of the year for GSU students as they packed for the winter break and left Statesboro a cold and rainy town. However, the Lady Eagle Basketball team was just getting started, heating up scoreboards all over the South. After ten contests, the Lady Eagles have an impressive 7-3 record.

GEORGIA SOUTHERN 77 CSU 49

The Lady Eagles gave CSU a beating for their season opener at home on December 4. Monique McClelland was top scorer and rebounder for the game with 22 and eight, respectively. McClelland also accomplished some individual highs for this season with ten field goal attempts and six offensive rebounds. Stephanie Christmas scored twelve and pulled five rebounds while Janice Johnson netted ten points with three rebounds. Beverly Copeland had five points and Jill Dunn and Drea Autrey each contributed six.

GEORGIA SOUTHERN 101 CENTRAL FLORIDA 47

On Dec. 8, McClelland was also top scorer with 23. Dunn and Subaricca Smith were top rebounders, each with seven. Dunn had an individual offensive rebound high with seven and McClelland came out with a high of six steals. S. Smith, Autrey, Marysue James and Johnson all contributed ten points a piece and Copeland ended with four baskets.

GEORGIA SOUTHERN 63 TENNESSEE TECH 71

TU handed the ladies their first loss of the season. This came during the Tennessee Tech Krystal Holiday Inn Classic in Cookeville, TN, on Dec. 11. Johnson was top scorer of the game with 14 points and Autrey pulled ten rebounds while netting nine points. Christmas also had nine and McClelland scored eight. Dunn managed three points and five rebounds.

GEORGIA SOUTHERN 82 FLORIDA A&M 67

GSU gained this win at the Tennessee Tech Classic on Dec. 12. Christmas attained her individual total points high with 24; she also had 14 rebounds. McClelland found the basket seven times for 14 points while Autrey and Johnson scored twelve a piece. Autrey also ended with 11 rebounds.

GEORGIA SOUTHERN 63 NEW ORLEANS 75

The Lady Eagles played two contests at the ISES Corporation Southern Invitational in Atlanta on Dec. 15 and 16. GSU suffered their second loss against UNO where Johnson and McClelland each had 16 points and McClelland was top rebounder with 12. Tara Anderson contributed 10 points.

GEORGIA SOUTHERN 67 GEORGIA STATE 63

Top scorer and top rebounder was McClelland with 18 and nine, respectively. Johnson added 10 points and seven rebounds while Christmas netted 14 points and pulled down eight. Dunn contributed nine points and five rebounds with six assists and Copeland helped with six points and five rebounds.

GEORGIA SOUTHERN 79 MOREHEAD COLL. 53

GSU hosted the Days Inn Lady Eagle Invitational where they faced off victoriously against MSU. Once again, top scorer and rebounder honors goes to McClelland with 19 points and eight rebounds. Anderson netted 15 points and Christmas added 13 with seven rebounds. Christmas reached an individual high with three blocks. Gwenda Smith ended with nine points and seven rebounds. As a team, GSU attained highs of blocks with five and 3-point field goals made of five.

GEORGIA SOUTHERN 80 SOUTH ALABAMA 70

Anderson and McClelland tied with top scores of 12 each. McClelland pulled six for top rebounder honors. Autrey was next in scoring with 11 and Johnson and G. Smith contributed 10 a piece. G. Smith made 10 of 12 free throws for a season high as well as free throw percentage of .833 and nine assists. Anderson's individual high for 3-point field goal percentage (.667) was reached. For the team, the Lady Eagles had a record high of 21 free throws made.

GEORGIA SOUTHERN 97 STETSON 43

Johnson was tops with 16 points and Autrey was second netting 15 and pulling five rebounds. McClelland and Dunn each added 12 and McClelland had seven boards. Anderson found the net 11 times and Christmas nine. On the whole, the team managed 53 rebounds, 32 of which were offensive.

GEORGIA SOUTHERN 63 SOUTH FLORIDA 72

The Lady Eagles most recent matchup was away on Jan. 6 where they suffered loss three. McClelland netted 21 points and Christmas pulled 11 rebounds. Dunn added 14 points while Johnson managed 11. Dunn gained and individual high in 3-point field goals attempted with 11 while making four. The Lady Eagles attempted 18 3-point field goals in this game.

During the Days Inn Lady Eagle Invitational, Anderson and McClelland were named to the all-tournament team. Anderson racked up 53 minutes, 9-18 field goals (6-10 from three point range), 3-4 free throws, 27 points, six rebounds, and four assists. For McClelland this was her second all-tournament honor and she finished with 47 minutes,

SACS

SACS will vote in the fall of 1994 whether to approve or to reject GSU for reaccreditation. Before this, however, a SACS team will conduct a site visit at Southern [from Feb. 28, 1994 to March 4, 1994], and they will examine the data compiled by members of the self-study project.

According to Project Director Hal Fulmer, 12 principle committees have been working hard gathering information on every aspect of GSU from educational programs to intercollegiate athletics. Each committee will turn a report in to him on Feb. 22.

These 12 committee reports will become the basis of the major self-study report, Fulmer explained.

With help from Olivia Edenfield, a GSU English professor chosen to be editor of the self-study report, Fulmer will lift information from the committee reports and pull it into the major report.

March 17 is the projected date for the completion of the major report. After that, the report, which Fulmer expects will fill hundreds of pages, will be reviewed and revised.

This year is one of "writing and rewriting and rethinking," Fulmer said.

Various GSU communities, such as the deans and the faculty senate, will review the final draft of the report before it is sent to SACS in Nov. 1994.

Fulmer explained the essence of the self-study project is "where have we been, what are we doing now, and where are we going?"

"This [the self-study project] is a living process," he later added, because the report will be taken and utilized in upcoming years to make improvements at GSU."

Lee added that each sheet has 40 stamps, so the student actually purchased 200 stamps.

"I personally bought over a 100 stamps myself because I voted for the new Elvis," Owens said.

Office of Volunteer Service Announces

GSU's First Community Service Fair Day

Tuesday, January 12, 1993 • 10 A.M. – 2 P.M.

University Union Commons Area

Come by and meet representatives of community organizations

Learn about local volunteer opportunities Sign Up for "GSU Campus Community Have A Heart Day" Event

- Volunteers gain work experience which effectively breaks the "no experience/no job" cycle.
- Volunteers develop "networks" which later can become a valuable resource in career development.
- Volunteers feel good knowing they have helped another person improve the quality of their life – and discover they can have fun doing it.
- Volunteers can have a personal hand in issues that are important to them.
- Volunteers gain recognition and status in the community, and enhance their own personal perspective.

There are many ways to be involved as there are students. Bring your interests, your talents, and your concerns.
