NEWS BRIEFS

Hundreds of anti-abortion protesters arrested

(AP)—Police arrested hundreds of anti-abortion protesters at demonstrations in several cities Saturday, one day after President Clinton lifted some abortion restrictions to mark the 20th anniversary of the Supreme Court's Roe vs. Wade ruling.

Clinton signed a series of executive orders that removed restrictions placed by his Republican predecessors on abortion counseling and medical research using fetal tissue.

Protesters in Washington, D.C., glued shut the doors of an abortion clinic, chained themselves to a homemade metal blockade and used cars and a "human wall" to block entrances at others.

Police arrested 165 people for blocking one Washington, D.C. clinic. Another 147 protesters were arrested outside three other clinics in town.

In Dallas, 30 anti-abortion protesters were charged with criminal trespassing at an abortion clinic.

And in Milwaukee, 15 protesters were taken into custody, some of whom tried to block the doors to an abortion clinic.

Poll surveys opinion on homosexuals in military

NEW YORK (AP) — Although 72 percent of Americans answering a poll released Saturday think homosexuals can serve effectively in the armed forces, 53 percent believe President Clinton shouldn't lift a ban on gays in the military.

The poll of 663 people is reported on in Newsweek's Feb. 1 issue, which hits newsstands Monday. It was conducted by the Gallup Organization on Thursday and Friday, and had a sampling error of plus or minus 4 percentage points.

According to the poll, 72 percent of Americans think that gays could serve effectively in the military if they keep their sexual orientation private, but more than half still think the military's ban on gays should remain.

Police blame peer pressure for junior high murder plot

LORAIN, Ohio (AP) — Two junior high school students charged with plotting to kill a teacher may have felt pressured to try because classmates were betting on whether they would do it, police and school officials said Friday.

A school official thwarted the plan minutes before it was to be carried out.

"It's a bizarre case," said Police Capt. Cel Rivera. "They say to this day they to this day they were going to kill her."

The two seventh grade girls are 12 and 13. Rivera said the 13-year-old, who allegedly planned to stab the English teacher while her 12-year-old friend restrained the teacher, told him she had no choice but to make good on the threat.

"She felt she had to do it because the other kids had put her on the spot," Pivera said.

By Wednesday their classmates had bet about $200 on the outcome, authorities said.

GSU professor, students have a ball at last week's inauguration

By Enoch W. Autry
Assistant News Editor

"The Times, They Are a Changing" could be heard echoing throughout Washington D.C. last week as the GSU College Democrats joined over half a million spectators to usher in our new leader at the 52nd inaugural celebration.

"The whole feeling in Washington was different than anything that I have ever experienced before," David Robinson, an English professor and advisor of the College Democrats, said about the experience.

Joining Robinson on the trip to the Capital were Chris Brown, President of the College Democrats; Debra Gibbons, Secretary of the chapter; Chris Clark, Admissions Counselor; and juniors Lori Anderson and Kenny Hill.

As Robinson sat in his office wearing a rectangular blue pin with Bill Clinton's impression and the words "The Cure For The Blues" printed on it, he reflected on his most exciting memory of the event.

After having the opportunity to shake hands with the president, see numerous famous celebrities, and attend an inaugural ball, Robinson said, "The most moving thing was just being there on the [Washington] mall during the swearing in."

According to the advisor, "hordes of people came up from the Union Station" and converged on the capital for the swearing in ceremony.

"The crowds were just bunched together and were in deep silence while things were taking place. Half a million people standing in silence is a strange thing," Robinson added.

Robinson was even able to shake the hand of the president at the Youth Ball, which was in Washington's old main post office building.

"After I figured out where Clinton was most likely to come in, I stood in one spot pretty much for three hours to shake his hand," Robinson said about the ball where no fights broke out even though "everybody had their elbows in each others stomachs."

As the advisor put it, "[The president was] running on 'Clinton standard time.' He didn't come until about midnight, which was three hours late."

The wait was worth the trouble because when both Bill and Hillary showed up the people went crazy, Robinson said.

When Hillary Clinton then went to the microphone to speak, the president received a sweatshirt from the crowd and threw it around his neck. The crowd started cheering for the president while Hillary just looked at him and laughed, Robinson said.

Vice President Al Gore and his wife Tipper also made an appearance at the Youth Ball which was just one of 11 inaugural balls.

"[V.P. Gore] danced for about 15 seconds to 'You Can Call Me Al,' and he can really cut the rug," Robinson said. "[The Gores] did some swing dancing for a few seconds and then they were gone."

Robinson observed that almost everybody from out-of-state was from Arkansas. He estimated that the Arkansas Ball had about 9,000 in attendance.

"The city was really full of people wearing Arkansas paraphernalia — cars with Arkansas license plates and people just talking about Arkansas," Robinson said.

Proposed landfill causes stink with locals

By David S. Hillis
Staff Writer

A 600-acre tract of land that the city and county are considering purchasing may be used as a landfill site in the future, county officials reported last week.

The proposed site, currently known as the Riggs estate, is located off Hwy. 301 South, just a short distance from the Irongate and Hazlewood subdivisions and the country club area.

According to county commission chairman Raybon Anderson, this site is not being considered as a regional landfill, as some rumors have alleged. "I'll always vote no on that," Anderson said. "I don't want other counties' trash trucked in here."

City Administrator Carter Crawford reported, however, that the current city and county landfill can be used for another three to five years, and the tract of land now being registered is just a possible site for a landfill.

"That's not the only site we have looked at, but that just happens to be a piece of property that is for sale," Crawford said.

Statesboro and Bulloch County are better equipped for the future than other areas in Georgia. According to a survey in November by the state Environmental Protection Division, 56 of the state's 181 landfills will soon close due to a lack of space or unwillingness to meet new state landfill requirements.

The voices of Statesboro are guaranteed to be heard. Any actions taken by the city or county concerning the proposed landfill must have the consent of the city at large.

"There will be a public hearing on the 26th of this month for needs assessment on the landfill, as required by the landfill process," Crawford said.

There will be four Chamber of Commerce Eggs and Issues sessions open to citizens. Questions or comments concerning the landfill may be brought up at these meetings.

Guns, drugs seized near campus

By Kim St. Hilaire
News Editor

What appears to be a rock of crack cocaine, suspected marijuana joints and two semi-automatic weapons were confiscated by local police Jan. 17 after approaching a suspicious vehicle, according to Sgt. Sandy Taylor.

Three suspects from Candler County were arrested by officers Stanley Slater and James Johnson. Roderick Ladonnis Wright, a 19-year-old from Metter, was charged with possession of marijuana, possession of cocaine, carrying a concealed weapon, and carrying a weapon on school grounds, according to police reports.

The names of the other two suspects have not been released because they are juveniles, Taylor stated. The arrest was made after one officer watched a suspicious vehicle pull over near Georgia Avenue and turn off its lights, Taylor said. The officer immediately called for back-up before approaching the car.

When reaching the vehicle, the officer smelled what he believed was marijuana. The suspected illegal drugs which were seized by the arresting officers have been sent to the crime lab for analysis.

A preliminary hearing for the juveniles is scheduled for Jan. 29.

Construction of bird sanctuary to begin soon

By David Byrd
Staff Writer

The construction of the GSU Eagle Sanctuary is set to begin within the year, and is estimated to open in 1993.

The five-acre site is designed to educate students about birds of prey. Housing eight to nine different birds, the faculty will not keep birds that would normally survive in the wilderness, but instead save injured birds from being put to sleep.

Steve Hein, director of the project plans to appeal to visitors of the sanctuary by mixing today's technology with a dying species of birds.

The sanctuary will adopt videos, an amphitheater, a bird flight program, habitat enriched buildings, and detailed graphics to better appeal to the public. On entering the sanctuary, students will be exposed to educational videos about the birds of prey.

After the videos, the students will be directed to an amphitheater where Hein or an assistant will incorporate the bird flight program.

The bird flight program is designed to mechanically release certain birds from their cage.

The trained birds will then fly over the amphitheater to land on Hein's or an assistant's arm while the audience gets an up close view of the bird being explained. Next, visitors will be allowed to walk through the five acre garden and sanctuary.

"Rather than placing birds under a net outside in a strange unnatural environment, this facility will be equipped with 40 by 60 foot buildings that complement the natural environment of the individual bird," Hein said.

Visitors will walk through these buildings as they walk through an art museum and admire the art of nature.

Steve Hein, artist and bird trainer, will direct the new bird sanctuary which will be completed in 1993.

Steve Hein is an artist and for many years has captured birds of prey on paper. He is planning to post prints of his art in the sanctuary to give visitors a still view of a hidden side to nature.

The theme for the Eagle Sanctuary is education. Hein's goal is to get people involved with nature so they might better understand it.

"You can aid injured birds, but unless you change the mentality of the people who shoot the birds then nothing will change. By educating the children there is better hope for endangered species in the future," Hein said.

The sanctuary will be a great escape for an afternoon of fun, as well as a great educational program.

The center expects to draw record numbers of students and other visitors in its first year of operation.

The sanctuary will be unique from the day the doors open.

In addition to being the only sanctuary of its kind in the Southeast it's an exciting educational program at GSU.

Sociology Club active outside of class

By Erin Klevens
Staff Writer

Students and faculty of all majors and departments are invited to join GSU's division of the Sociological Society Thursdays at 4:30 p.m. in the Union.

Frank Smith, the group president, said the club is "open to all majors with an interest in social issues, problems, gender roles, criminology, social work and family counseling."

The organization is looking for bright, ambitious people who want to get involved and make a difference.

The purpose of the society is to "use sociological paradigms to explain the policies of our government and who these policies benefit and discriminate against," Smith said.

The club explores diverse issues in an educational manner by participating in several different activities throughout the year. The group travels and takes part in the Georgia Sociological Association's annual undergraduate writing competitions, as well as writing for the American Sociological Association on a quarterly basis.

Marina Gentile, the secretary of the group, stressed that not every member has to participate in the writing fairs. "Not everyone presents papers," Gentile stated. "I don't want people to get the opinion that they have to have a 3.8 or something to be involved. A lot of people just go along for the ride."

Faculty and graduate students also compete in the contests, but are judged on a different level than the undergraduate students.

Other activities include volunteering with juvenile delinquents, working with children in the Top Step program, and dressing up as clowns for the residents of various nursing homes. The group also volunteers at St. Joseph's Boys Home.

This organization has already planned two fundraisers this quarter, and is planning a trip to Emory University in Atlanta for a paper competition.

Tommy Smith, vice-president for the organization, said that the group hopes to sponsor a scholarship for sociology majors. The scholarship will be funded by the group through fundraisers and donations.

The Sociological Society meets every Thursday in room 273 of the University Union. New members are always welcome, and anyone interested is encouraged to attend.

FREE dirt dessert

At Pizza Inn, we want to dish some dirt—that is, our "dirt dessert," a sinfully rich parfait chock-full of chocolate sandwich cookies and creamy dessert. Dessert at Pizza Inn? Absolutely.

Another favorite is stromboli, a handmade crust buttered and filled with brown sugar, cinnamon and nuts, and baked to a golden brown. And desserts are just the beginning. We also have quesadillas, burgers, homemade soups, an extensive salad bar, vegetarian items, hot & spicy wings, hot sandwiches, pasta, grilled chicken salads and much more—including terrific pizza, of course. In fact, you can check out what we have to offer and get a free dessert. Just look in your paper on Tuesday, January 26, for an insert with our menu and bring it with you on your next visit to Pizza Inn. We'll give you a free "dirt dessert" with your meal purchase. So, whether you want pizza or fajitas or sandwiches, be sure to save room for dessert.

Sugar and Caffeine: To use or not to use?

Experts still debating about benefits and detriments of the two; a proper diet ensures safe use

Sugar and caffeine are two of the most common forms of quick energy. Some athletes use one of the two, and others use both. Despite the discouragements to avoid sugar before workouts, some athletes insist on consuming some form of sugar (such as candy bars, soft drinks, etc.), claiming that it gives them an immediate boost of energy and increased stamina and endurance. Other athletes, on the contrary, claim that sugar before exercise takes away from their performance.

Studies have shown that some athletes, after consuming sugar before exercise, experience rebound hypoglycemia (an abnormally low level of glucose in the blood, which causes a lack of energy), while other athletes experience no harmful hypoglycemic effects.

HEALTH AND FITNESS

If you do decide to eat sugary foods before exercise, keep in mind that pure sugar, as in a sweetened beverage, presents a high risk of stimulating a hypoglycemic reaction. However, sugary foods such as cookies or ice cream, which contain a significant amount of fat along with the sugar, buffer the sugar's entry into the bloodstream. They contribute less of a surge in blood sugar and offer sustained energy as opposed to a quick fix. The smaller the sugar surge, the lower the risk of experiencing a hypoglycemic reaction (The Physician and Sportsmedicine, Nov. 1991).

The best thing to do is to eat properly and adequately before you exercise to avoid any need for quick energy. If you practice a proper diet all the time, energy shouldn't be a problem. Meals that are high in carbohydrates will provide lasting amounts of energy and will eliminate the need for a quick boost of energy.

Controversy exists on whether or not caffeine enhances performance. Caffeine was once believed to increase stamina and endurance in athletes such as marathon runners. More recent research, however, claims that if an athlete consumes a proper diet (high in carbohydrates) and is well rested, caffeine is not beneficial. The effect of caffeine on the nervous system is also controversial. Consuming caffeine before a strenuous workout, allows one to work harder without perceiving the increased intensity of his or her efforts. Also, one should be informed that caffeine can also cause an acidic stomach, the jitters, and a dehydrating effect. These effects are far more significant than the benefits.

Salutations from the Campus Life Enrichment Committee!

Are you ready for a Rapp session? If so, CLEC is offering a presentation that will be of interest to you.

"Self-Concept: Taught, Bought, and Caught" is being presented by Dr. Donald Rapp on Jan. 28 from 7 p.m. until 9:30 p.m. in room 241 of the Union.

ECLECTIC COLUMN

Rapp is a professor at Florida State University who has presented a number of speeches and workshops in the area of child development, mental health, parent-child relationships, teacher improvement, and motivation toward personal and educational betterment.

Rapp's program, "Self-Concept: Taught, Bought, and Caught" provides information on how an individual formulates his or her self-concept and how it can be improved.

Rapp says that self talk such as, "I am an important person and every day in every way I'm becoming better and better," raises one's self esteem.

If you want to learn more about boosting your own, a family member's, or a friend's self-concept, come and enlighten yourself with Rapp's session.

Contact Cynthia Martin for more information on this program at 681-5345.

Tickets are now available in the Union for the performance group Saturday Brass.

Students, staff, and faculty will be allowed one free ticket for each event upon presenta-

A Few Good Men: If you haven't seen it yet, you must

By Terry Hand
Staff Writer

With names like Tom Cruise, Jack Nicholson, Demi Moore, Kevin Bacon, and Kiefer Sutherland, this film was already guaranteed to provide superb performances and thrilling entertainment. However, A Few Good Men provided more than just entertainment, it provided a story. A story of courage and honor where two Marines' truth is challenged by a government's lie.

When the military is faced with a case that could embarrass the government, it assigns head litigator and "claim to fame" plea-bargainer Lt. Danny Kaffee (Tom Cruise) to confront the problem. Danny thinks that he is faced with one of his regular three-day bargaining sessions, but when faced with the pride and honor of two soldiers behind him and a pushy assistant edging him on, Danny quickly finds himself thrown into the walls of a courtroom. Blessed with his father's ability for litigation and his own natural flare, Lt. Kaffee battles in a case where the odds are stacked heavily against his clients.

Charmed with a brilliant performance by Tom Cruise and an outstanding display of a supporting role from Jack Nicholson, A Few Good Men is destined to become a classic. This is a must-see film; a movie that will grab you with its suspense and thrill you with its action. Its unexpected twists and turns will keep you on the edge of your chair waiting for the next scene. Take a date, a friend, or a close family member. A Few Good Men is sure to be one of the year's best movies.

INAUGURATION

On Sunday Jan. 17, two days prior to Inauguration Day, a free mega-concert took place at the Lincoln Memorial which attracted massive amounts of spectators.

Chris Clark who was on hand for the star-studded event, said officials were expecting about 300,000 people, but more and more people continued to gather, crowding closer and closer to the stage as the day progressed.

"They came over the loud speakers and said 'we have a preliminary report of how many of you there are; there are half a million,'" Clark said. After the announcement at the event, he looked back and saw people "pouring" past the Washington Monument.

Celebrities such as Jack Nicholson, Diana Ross, Michael Jackson and Barbara Streisand were among those on hand for the Lincoln Memorial concert, Clark said.

Drum roll please ...

Bad Song Survey results

I hope you haven't had anything to eat recently, because as promised last week, today I am presenting the winners of the Bad Song Survey.

In analyzing these results, I had to make a few adjustments. For example, the Bob Dylan song "Lay Lady Lay" would have easily won as Worst Overall Song, with 17,006 votes, except that I had to disallow 17,004 votes on the grounds that they were cast by my Research Department, Judi Smith, who tabulated the votes, and who HATES "Lay Lady Lay."

To win, a song had to be known well enough that a lot of people could hate it.

This is a shame, in a way, because some obscure songs that people voted for are wonderfully hideous. One reader sent a tape of a song called "Hooty Sapperticker" by a group called "Barbara and the Boys." This could be the worst song I've ever heard. It consists almost entirely of The Boys singing "Hooty! Hooty! Hooty!" and then Barbara saying: "Howdy Hooty Sapperticker!"

Several readers sent in an amazing CD from Rhino Records called "Golden Throats," which consists of popular actors attempting to sing popular music, including William Shatner attempting "Lucy in the Sky With Diamonds," Leonard Nimoy attempting "Proud Mary," Mae West attempting "Twist and Shout," Eddie Albert attempting "Blowin' in the Wind," and - this is my favorite - Jack "Soul" Webb attempting "Try a Little Tenderness." You need this CD.

But now for our survey results. Without question, the voters' choice for Worst Song - in both the Worst Overall and Worst Lyrics category is - ... (drum roll ...)

"MacArthur Park," as sung by Richard Harris, and later remade, for no comprehensible reason, by Donna Summer.

It's hard to argue with this selection. My 12 year-old son Rob was going through a pile of ballots, and he asked me how "MacArthur Park" goes, so I sang it, giving it my best shot, and Rob laughed so hard that when I got to the part about leaving the cake out in the rain, and it took so long to bake it, and I'll never have that recipe again, Rob was on the floor.

He didn't believe those lyrics were real. He was sure his wacky old humor-columnist dad was making them up.

The clear runner-up, again in both categories, is "Yummy Yummy Yummy (I Got Love In My Tummy)," performed by actress Julie London, who at one time - and don't tell me this is mere coincidence - was married to Jack Webb.)

Coming in a strong third is "(You're) Having My Baby" by Paul Anka. This song is deeply hated.

As one voter put it: "It has no redeeming value whatsoever - except my friend Brian yelled out during the birth scene in the sequel to 'The Fly' in full song, 'Having my maggot!'"

A recent song that has aroused great hostility is "Achy Breaky Heart," by Billy Ray Cyrus. According to voter Mark Freeman, the song sounds like this: "You can tell my lips, or you can tell my hips, that you're going to dump me if you can; But don't tell my liver, it never would forgive her, it might blow up and circumsise this man!"

One reader sent a tape of a song called "Hooty Sapperticker" by Barbara and the Boys. This could be the worst song I've ever heard ...

Many voters feel a special Lifetime Bad Achievement Award should go to Mac Davis, who wrote "In the Ghetto," "Watching Scotty Grow," and "Baby Don't Get Hooked On Me," which contains one of the worst lines in musical history: "You're a hot-blooded woman-child; And it's warm where you're touching me." That might be as bad as the part in "Careless Whisper" when George Michael sings "I'm never gonna dance again; Guilty feet have got no rhythm."

Speaking of bad lyrics, many voters also cited Paul McCartney, who, ever since his body was taken over by a pod person, has been writing things like: "Someone's knocking at

THIS MODERN WORLD by TOM TOMORROW

Time to keep a watchful eye on Clinton

CHRISTOPHER COLE
STAFF WRITER

Last Wednesday was an exciting day for Bill Clinton.

For it marked the moment of a culmination of a life's work -- in fact, it was almost exactly thirty years ago when young Clinton decided he was going to be President of the United States, having met John F. Kennedy at a visit to the White House.

His pattern of behavior throughout the campaign and afterward seemed to echo his awe for JFK: he brought back the late President's lofty phrases like "we can do better," and reminded us that "the torch has been passed" to a new generation, this time having been born after World War II.

Indeed, the moment Mr. Clinton set his hand on that Bible must have sent chills through his body.

Yet, looming in the shadows of the Inaugural Parade, hiding behind all the pomp and circumstance of a new President, was an eerie feeling that might also have sent something like nausea through his body at that very moment.

Because, even as the bells of hope rang and the color guard clattered down Pennsylvania Avenue, the immense responsibility of his childhood dream became an adult reality. Should it really have been an exciting day for Bill Clinton?

Let's look at that harsh reality -- for the fun and festivities are over and it's time to get down to business. Mr. Clinton has made a lot of promises and he has no excuse not to deliver.

President Bush had Congress to blame for his troubles. Mr. Clinton had a vast majority of his own party in both houses and the Democrats will be responsible for inaction -- or worse, utter failure of Clinton policy.

While Democratic party infighting and Republican resistance will affect the speed of legislation, in the end Clinton will be to blame for failure. His party controls Washington and that fact is inescapable.

I already see hints of typical slippery evasiveness in the Clinton Presidency. He has virtually dropped the middle-class tax cut proposal, even though he used it as an effective tool against fellow Democrat Paul Tsongas in the primaries and repeatedly said it would be introduced during his first week in office.

And even though he attacked Tsongas for proposing gasoline taxes, he's suggested a 15 cent-per-gallon increase in the gas tax. That's a tax hike, not a tax cut.

Even though he courted the liberal wing of his party by promising to offer Haitian refugees political asylum in the U.S.A. (Putting People First, p. 120), he put the action on the back-burner when reality set in and it was time to wake up and be President.

And of course, the third whammy: suddenly, he can't cut the deficit in half in four years like he promised to do (P.P.F., p. 27). Al Gore brushed off criticism of the broken pledge by saying voters would think the administration "weak-minded" if it didn't adapt to "changing circumstances."

Mr. Gore is once again pretending to be a Washington outsider; people forget he was a U.S. Senator and surely must have known the earlier deficit projections were modest. After all, it's the Congressional Budget Office that cooks up the estimates.

The only "changing circumstances" here are the slippery minds of two expert politicians; Clinton and Gore are weak-minded because they clearly lack the resolve to keep their promises.

If these gentlemen think an early wake-up call is going to make Americans forget by 1996 their numerous pledges to change the country, they should think again. That fine tome of theirs, Putting People First, is going to be quoted over and over again -- and laughed at -- by angry Republicans and pundits when the next election rolls around.

And so, the time has come to keep a watchful eye. Mr. Clinton's biggest lie -- those pertaining to the tax cut and deficit -- are enough to get the 1996 political pot boiling. Now we will see how adept he is at filling in the rest of the gaps.

The burden on his shoulders is great; voters expect much of him. He's already tried to

Advice column found offensive

Dear Editor,

As a faculty member at GSU for almost 22 years, I rely on the George-Anne for reporting on university events and issues of interest.

I also enjoy the students' reactions on local controversies such as the one involving the geese. I believe you do an excellent job reporting these matters and others.

I must strongly protest, however, the content of "Annie's All-Purpose Advice" column in the January 21, 1993 issue.

I find the unnecessarily graphic language offensive and certainly not becoming a newspaper with a wide readership on campus.

I sincerely hope that you will exercise a little more judgment in adhering to bounds of good taste.

Tie This!

What's the deal with this supposedly "encouraged" dress-up code imposed on our athletes by the Athletic Department? I think our athletes have a hard enough schedule juggling practices, games and classes without having to pick out which outfit they'll wear each Wednesday.

If they're not comfortable in such attire, they shouldn't be put on the spot. If you want to get some unity among our various athletes on campus, make up some T-shirts that say: "I am GSU, you are too!" or some other catchy slogan.

As a matter of fact, I have gotten to know a few student-athletes in the past year and I could care less what they wear. They're people too. Let's save the dress codes for Greek Row.

Who cares?

For those of you too hung over to make it, the gym was not jammed Saturday. Now I'm not very good at math, but Hanner holds around 5,000 people and we've got over 14,000 students enrolled (or so they say) in classes here at GSU. Is it too much to ask that a little over one-third of the student population show up?

And while you're at it, why don't you come to Hanner a little early and catch our Lady Hoopsters in action. The only difference between the men's and women's level of play is that the women don't really dunk all that much.

Our women can play ball, believe it or not. After they outscored Mercer 53-16 in the second half of last week's contest, I can't imagine any SoCon team whose posterior they wouldn't punt.

And they would likely juke you right out of your Nikes if you ever decided to step on the same court with them.

The Eagle needs a nest

Let's talk mascots. In particular, that bird that inhabits Hanner Fieldhouse, the Eagle.

One doesn't have to be an ornithologist to identify with the Eagle. He's a fun-loving guy, enjoys great basketball and melts the ladies' hearts on the dance floor. There's one thing missing: his own place in Hanner.

"Huh?" you say? Well, I can remember when the Braves had Rally Alley in the right field stands for their mascot Homer the Brave, not Jim Varney (knowhutimean) of Mello Yello fame. They even had a cannon there for him to shoot off every time a Brave hit a homerun.

Maybe we could have a nest for the Eagle and he could toss eggs on opposing players who whine too much.

Men defeat WCU; lose to UTC

By Chris Sherwood
Staff WriterGSU 92
UTC 103

The Eagles played two conference games this weekend and managed to split the two games by defeating WCU Sunday and losing to top-ranked SoCon powerhouse UTC.

GSU 80
WCU 52

The GSU men's basketball team handily beat the Western Carolina Catamounts on Sunday.

The Eagles were a little sluggish in the first half of the game. The fatigue they displayed was due to the tough game against UTC on Saturday and an unforgiving schedule that does not allow for much rest or quality practice time during the week.

The first half of the game saw thirteen lead changes with no team extending their lead by over five points. The biggest lead was for GSU, who pulled to a five point lead at half 32-27.

The Eagles spread the scoring around fairly evenly in the first half with Charlton Young sinking seven points.

WCU's offensive output in the first half of the game was similar to that of GSU with a good distribution of scoring. The leading scorer for the Catamounts was Williams, who knocked in seven.

While the Eagles once again had a small offensive output for the first twenty minutes of the game, they sped up their play in the second half and shot forty-seven percent from the field. The Eagles opened the second half with a nine to zip spurt and finished the game similarly with a 20-11 run.

Charlton Young and Calvin Sinkfield both sank 13 points to lead GSU in their victory. The top rebounder for the Eagles was Sinkfield with ten rebounds. The Eagles played well in this conference game, one in which they needed to win.

The Eagles came into the Saturday matchup against the Moccassins tied with ETSU for the conference lead. UTC accomplished two things in their victory over GSU on Saturday. The Moccassins left Hanner Fieldhouse sitting in second place all by themselves in conference play, and the Eagles were now tied with Marshall for third.

UTC especially outplayed GSU in the post. "They got great play out of their post, offensively and defensively," according to Coach Kerns. UTC employed a "Diamond and one" defense which successfully shut down the Eagles offense in the second half. The so-called "Diamond and one" was perfect as it limited the GSU offense to one shot and no rebounds on many occasions.

While GSU played a close game in the first half by controlling the tempo, UTC changed all of that right before half.

Overall, GSU had controlled the flow of the game and appeared to be building a small cushion with a seven point lead and only six minutes remaining in the opening half.

The last six minutes in the first half turned out to be only a foreshadowing of things to come for the Eagles; they were totally dominated and were down by four at the break.

In the second half, UTC took control of the contest by making their shots in transition as GSU began to falter when they could not connect on shots underneath the hoop.

Ladies defeat Mountaineers; lose heartbreaker to ETSU

By Tammy Scroggins
Staff Writer

Lady Eagle basketballers had a busy weekend at home splitting two conference match-ups, a win with Appalachian State University on Saturday and a loss to East Tennessee State University on Sunday.

GSU is in the middle of a six-game, 12-day stretch that began Jan. 16.

Final score for the Lady Mountaineers game was 96-77, bringing GSU's record to 10-5 and 2-2 in the conference.

The Lady Eagles took an early lead playing very aggressive defense and sinking shots. With 3:00 of game-time left in the first half, GSU was up by 18; however, ASU cut the lead to 11 with good free throw shooting leaving the half-time score at 47-36.

GSU came out shooting in the second half. Jill Dunn put up a three-pointer and Drea Autrey added two points within the first minute. ASU also came back ready to play, pulling together their offense. ASU forward Angie Crosby managed to give the Lady Eagles a little trouble down low.

According to Toy Williams, "We let our help-side defense down and Angie Crosby's a good player and she took advantage of that. We picked ourselves back up and doubled down onto anybody coming into the lane."

Crosby helped the Lady Mountaineers to within seven points before GSU was able to shut her down; however, the Lady Eagles came back to score the next eight points with 2 steals. The final score was 96-77, victory for GSU.

Top scorer for GSU was Monique McClelland with 21; she was 10 for 10 in field goal percentage. McClelland also pulled six rebounds. Dunn had 19, four of which were three-point goals and five rebounds. Autrey contributed eight baskets for 16, grabbed five rebounds and stole four. Beverly Copeland managed 12 points while Stephanie Christmas added 10.

Greer's troops also managed to set a new school record for field goal percentage with 69.6% in this game.

GSU 82
ETSU 83

The match-up vs. East Tennessee State University was a heart-breaking loss for the Lady Eagles as play went down to the wire. The two teams had never met prior to Sunday's game.

Coming off from a week of wins against Western Carolina, Mercer and Appalachian State, GSU was a bit tired. McClelland stated, "We started out with no intensity at all. The first ten minutes we were playing at their level and needed to be at a higher level."

GSU seemed to be scoring on fast breaks, but shots were not falling on set plays as consistently as they were the day before. The Lady Eagles did take a lead about halfway through the first half, but never by more than 8 points. Half-time score was 39-32, GSU.

There was a lull in play at the start of the second half; however, GSU's game turned around when G. Smith stole a ball and took it in for an easy lay-up. That intensity lasted throughout the rest of the game, but GSU still came up short.

With a little more than two minutes to play, GSU was given a technical foul.

The technical was called because Kevin Washington had remained on the floor although he had received his fifth personal foul one minute earlier. Evidently the official believed that the GSU bench knew that Washington had already fouled out when the first technical was called.

Coach Kerns had substituted Washington out of the game after the first technical had been called. The official was about to tell the GSU bench, because he is required to, that Washington had now collected five personal fouls.

Washington somehow returned without checking in with the scorer and started playing. It took the officials a whole minute to realize that Washington was still playing. As soon as the officials noticed

The Human Papilloma Virus

Genital warts are caused by a virus now known as the human papilloma virus. This same virus that causes genital warts can also cause pre-cancerous changes in the cervix. The best screening test for these cells is the common pap smear.

Both women and men can have HPV (human papilloma virus), although not all will have genital warts. Women are more likely to find out they have the virus by having annual pap smears, the most reliable screening tool to prevent/detect cervical cancer. In some groups of young adults approximately 70% of those sexually active may carry HPV.

Once the virus is detected another more specific diagnostic test called colposcopy should be done. Colposcopy is the microscopic examination of the cervix to detect abnormal precancerous cells. A biopsy (small sample of tissue) is taken if abnormal areas are seen under colposcopy.

Genital warts may often begin with symptoms of itching, irritation, or small rough areas visible on the external genitalia. Some warts may be very small and difficult to see without magnification.

If you think you have genital warts see you health care practitioner for accurate diagnosis and proper treatment.

After recovering the ball under their basket with eight seconds left, the Lady Eagles made a vigorous attempt to tie the game. Dunn shot for three, missed and Williams rebounded and redeposited for two, leaving the final 83-82, ETSU.

Head Coach Drema Greer commented, "If you don't play intense for 40 minutes, you have a let down. The kids were flat, but it was good to see Jill [Dunn] shooting the ball without really thinking so much about it."

Scoring for GSU in double figures were McClelland (16), Dunn (15), Tara Anderson (14), and G. Smith (14). McClelland pulled seven rebounds and Williams had six pulls with two blocked shots. Anderson also managed four steals.

G. Smith noted, "They [ASU] basically beat us on free throws." The Lady Buccaneers were 22 for 28 from the free throw line compared to GSU's five for seven.

ETSU had the worst record in the conference before this weekend. They beat University of Tennessee at Chattanooga, the best team in the Southern Conference by 13 on Saturday. According to Greer, "On any given day, this conference could go any way."

Greer is looking for her 100th win at GSU this week and is only six wins shy of the 150th win mark as a collegiate coach. She is now 53-10 on the home floor. You can come and check out the ladies as they take on Florida University, on Wednesday, Jan. 27 at 7:30 p.m. at Hanner.

There were strong votes for various tragedy songs, especially "Teen Angel" ("I'll never kiss your lips again; They buried you today") and "Timothy," a song about - really - three trapped miners, two of whom wind up EATING the third.

Other tremendously unpopular songs, for their lyrics or overall badness, are "Muskrat Love," "Sugar Sugar," "I'm Too Sexy," "Surfin' Bird," "I've Never Been To Me," "In-A-Gadda-Da-Vida," "Afternoon Delight," "Feelings," "You Light Up My Life," and "In the Year 2525" (VIOLENT hatred for this song).

In closing, let me say that you voters have performed a major public service, and that just because your song didn't make the list, that doesn't mean it isn't awful.

Now the winds have shifted. The festivities were lively. The Inaugural ceremony was healing. His generous words about the outgoing President were warm.

Yet the chill of a new day, full of awesome responsibility and uplifted hopes, will sober Mr. Clinton beyond measure in the coming weeks.

Perhaps the moment should have been more exciting for George Bush, who silently passed the nuclear football to a new President and entered private life as a statesman -- the nice word for a guy who gets a generous pension for the rest of his life and spends his time fishing and drinking longnecks while watching his successor try to deal with all of his old troubles.
