NEWS BRIEFS

Intensive care units delayed by ventilation problems at MCG

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — The Medical College of Georgia has delayed occupancy of its three intensive care units in a new $37 million building until problems with the ventilation system are corrected.

The Augusta Chronicle said Monday a review of the project's records showed that problems with the system, supposed to prevent the spread of germs at the Ambulatory Care Center/Specialized Care Center, date back to its design.

MCG contracted with an independent engineering firm in October to review the problem after repeated complaints about the heating, ventilating and air conditioning system from employees in other parts of the building.

A review of records obtained by the Chronicle under Georgia's open records laws showed the building's ventilating system lacks the proper air exchanges for the intensive care units.

As installed, the exchanges do not isolate certain infectious bacteria and could allow the germs to spread to other patients, according to the records.

Ball State tops in nation in alcohol-related arrests

MUNCIE, Ind. (AP) — Ball State University's first-place ranking nationwide in the number of alcohol-related arrests by campus police is a positive sign, a school official says.

"It doesn't mean there's something bad," said university police chief Joseph Wehner. "What this shows is that we have a very successful alcohol interdiction program."

In its Jan. 20 issue, The Chronicle of Higher Education published a compilation of campus crime statistics from 2,400 colleges nationwide.

BSU ranked first in alcohol-related arrests made by campus security — 608 from July 1991 through July 1992. Coming in a distant second, with 446 alcohol-related arrests, was the University of Arizona.

Alcohol-related arrests include everything from underage drinking to driving while intoxicated, Wehner said.

While some may say the arrests indicate an alcohol abuse problem, the president of the local Mothers Against Drunk Driving chapter said she believes police are "just doing their jobs a little better."

Lobbyists spent $100,000 wooing legislators in 1992

ATLANTA (AP) — Lobbyists spent more than $100,000 dining, entertaining Georgia legislators during the last five months of 1992, a computer-aided study shows.

Bankers' and doctors' lobby groups were among the highest rollers, and top-dollar freebies went to chairmen of the legislative committees that act on those groups' legislative requests.

A computer-produced list showed Rep. Terry Coleman, D-Eastman, got more than any other legislator in lobbyist spending between Aug. 31 and Dec. 31.

Under Georgia's new ethics law, passed last year, lobbyists must make periodic reports of what they spend to influence legislation. The first full reports were filed earlier this month.

False epidemic rumor causes student concern

STD's in check, says Himes — but be careful

By Camille Childree
Staff Writer

Cases of chlamydia and genital warts are being treated daily by the GSU Health Center, however, there has not been an unusual outbreak of cases as recent campus rumors have suggested, according to Health Educator Whitney Himes.

"Not a day goes by when each nurse, practitioner and doctor doesn't treat a couple of cases of chlamydia or genital warts," Himes said. "I think it is really important that we continue to battle AIDS, but I think that a lot of people feel like they don't have the perceived threat of AIDS, so, if they don't feel threatened by AIDS, they won't be threatened by anything."

Chlamydia is a micro-organism that infects both men and women. In adults it can damage the reproductive organs, sometimes causing sterility. This disease is a major cause of cervicitis, pelvic inflammatory disease and nongonococcal urethritis.

Genital warts, on the other hand, are growths that appear in the vaginal area, on the penis, on the cervix, near the anus or occasionally in the throat.

While AIDS demands public attention, it should not completely overshadow the other sexually transmitted diseases, such as chlamydia and genital warts, which are also threatening to our society, Himes stated.

"It's my feeling that genital warts are going to be the disease of the decade," Himes stated. "I think that AIDS has overshadowed our perceived threat of all the other sexually transmitted diseases."

Some colleges and universities, which previously did not screen for genital warts, are now beginning to offer screening, according to Himes, who feels that this is "one reason the public is beginning to notice such drastic numbers of cases appear."

"I think the numbers were there, just not known about," Himes said.

GSU's Health Center does screen for genital warts.

Chlamydia is the most common sexually transmitted disease in the United States, and it is most prevalent on college campuses,

Volunteers to tidy-up downtown Statesboro

By Enoch W. Autry
Assistant News Editor

As a way of beautifying the downtown district and showing appreciation to Statesboro, volunteer services plans to send both organizations and students into the streets for some early spring cleaning.

According to organizers, the office will hold its first annual "Have a Heart" Day on Friday, Feb. 12 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in an attempt to spruce-up the downtown area of the city.

Director of Volunteer Services, Victoria Futch said, "We are expecting about 200 out of our 14,000 students."

Futch has turned the reins of the improvement program over to Gina Brothers and Robyn Reinheimer.

Brothers, an office intern and human resources management major, said, "The theme for the event is 'Your small change will make a big change.'"

Reinheimer, a senior public relations major, stated, "This [event] is to express our appreciation to the Statesboro community."

In addition, Reinheimer said that interested students and organizations should sign up for the historical area clean-up and return the information to the office.

This is a spot project that is part of several ongoing programs, and hopefully the first of more "Have a Heart" days in later years, Futch stated. Reinheimer said garbage bags will be available for those that participate, but there may be a shortage of work gloves so be prepared.

Futch said that hot dogs and soft drinks will be provided to work.

SGA adopts financial support guidelines for campus organizations

By Christopher Cole
Staff Writer

The Student Government Association (SGA) agreed by consensus Tuesday night to adopt seven general guidelines which will be used to judge various organization fund requests which are submitted to the senate.

Andy Meador, a member of SGA's Executive Committee, composed the guidelines, which apply to all student organizations seeking funds from the group.

Due to the limited financial resources of SGA — $7,000 annually — members agreed to fund no more than $500 per year to any club. This rule will go into effect spring quarter.

Under the new guidelines, at least one representative from the group must verbally explain to the senators the reasons for the monetary request.

The organization must be recognized by GSU as active, and must be registered and listed on the organizations roster in the University Union Office, room 224.

In order to see as many groups as possible, SGA will fund a given club only once a year, unless the Executive Committee accepts an appeal under extenuating circumstances.

Any amount up to $500 may be granted as decided by a vote of the senators.

Recipient groups must then provide documentation in the form of receipts within five days of a trip as proof of how the money was spent. SGA will not pay for food expenses.

In other business Tuesday night, SGA granted partial funding to two organizations for upcoming events.

The first was a $122 grant to the Institute of Industrial Engineers, which asked for $258 to attend a conference this weekend. SGA voted to fund $122 for lodging expenses.

The Institute was unable to raise money due to its small size (11 members), and the "low interest level" in fund raising activities.

The College Republicans chapter was granted $200 to attend this year's state convention in Athens the weekend of Feb. 26. The former chairman of the club, Chris Ingram, is running for chairman of the state federation.

SGA voted to grant half of the $400 request. College Republicans, through fund raising and individual costs, defray $1,700 in remaining expenses.

Ham featured in CFL trade

Former Eagle to join forces with the Rocket

By John Munford
Sports Editor

What do you do when your team decides they no longer need you and ships you off to a different team? If you are former Eagle quarterback Tracy Ham, you take it all in stride and look forward to a new start in an already illustrious career.

Ham, who led the Eagles to two national championships in 1985 and 1986, and owns practically every school record in passing, rushing and total offense, gets to look forward to a new start in Toronto, Canada after his former team, the Edmonton Eskimos of the Canadian Football League, unloaded him to the Argonauts in a monster 16-player trade last Thursday.

It will definitely be another new experience for Ham, who will get to be involved in a high-powered passing offense playing catch with the likes of one Raghbir "The Rocket" Ismail in search of the Canadian equivalent of the Lombardi Trophy, the Grey Cup. "Those are my plans and I'm looking forward to it," noted Ham.

In his six-year career with Edmonton, Ham has become a hot commodity in the CFL. He has passed for more than 4,000 yards and rushed for more than 1,000 yards in two seasons. As well, he has led the Eskimos to Western Division titles in 1988, 1989 (with a record 16 victories) and 1991, only to lose in the playoffs. In 1990, they went all the way to the Grey Cup final, losing to Winnipeg in a romp,

Tracy Ham

50-11.

In the Canadian Football League, the rules are a little bit different than here in America. For starters, the offense has only three downs to work with as opposed to the four here in the states. "Basically, it means your first down is your second down," Ham noted. "That was one thing I had to get used to since in the past I had used the first down as a throwaway down. It is very important to get positive yardage on first down."

As well as the difference in downs, there are also 12 men on the field as opposed to 11, according to Ham. The extra player can be used according to each team's strengths and weaknesses, which makes for a more exciting offensive show.

Ham, the only GSU player to have his number retired, is in the process of moving back to Statesboro with his wife Valerie and their son Tracy Jr., who incidentally was born the day after his father's birthday.

"We'll be down there in mid-March and will live up here in Canada during the season," Ham said.

Ingram running for College Republican seat

By Kim St. Hilaire
News Editor

The former president of GSU's College Republicans is running for chairman of the state board of College Republicans at the organization's annual conference in Athens Feb. 26 - 28.

Chris Ingram recently resigned from his leadership role with GSU's chapter in order to pursue the position of chairman of the state board, according to his successor, Doug Simon.

If elected to this position, Ingram would be the "top elected republican collegiate student," Simon stated.

A student from Emory University is opposing Ingram in the election.

Simon explained that each school in Georgia will send as many delegates as possible to the upcoming Federation of College Republicans Convention.

Because GSU's chapter hopes to send 20 students, members have been working on fund raisers in an effort to cover part of their expenses. The group has already raised approximately $300.

SGA members to attend conference

By Christopher Cole
Staff Writer

Seven members of the Student Government Association (SGA) are attending a Student Advisory Council Winter Conference this weekend at Georgia State University in Atlanta, according to SGA advisor Sandra Terry.

The conference, which begins at 5 p.m. Saturday, is administered by the Board of Regents and involves topics such as legislative affairs, communications, internal affairs, student life and academic affairs.

"All the SGA's in Georgia are going," Terry said.

GSU students attending are Jerald Carter and Patrick Harrison of the Executive Committee; and student senators Kenya Edward, Melissa Garnett, David Spran, Kimberly Hill and Michelle Peczynski.

On Monday night delegates will attend a Chancellor's dinner. The delegation will submit a proposal presentation to the Board of Regents the following night.

Three new students senators, who are not attending the conference, were welcomed as new members to SGA Tuesday night: Ellen King, a junior majoring in science education; Ronco Johnson, a freshman communications major; and Serena Spears, a sophomore in human resources management.

North Carolina fraternity charged with hazing

Woman testifies members of Alphi Phi Alpha blindfolded, assaulted her during membership ritual

RALEIGH (AP) — Members of a fraternity at St. Augustine's College, blindfolded and sexually assaulted a woman last fall during a membership ritual, according to the woman's testimony in court.

The student said she told administration officials about the hazing and assault, but went to police two weeks later when it became apparent that "everybody on campus wanted to keep it quiet."

Five members of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity and two women have been charged with hazing. Three of the men also were charged with assault on a female. They are being tried first, and the remaining four will be tried later.

Court testimony revealed that the young woman and 13 other women students at St. Augustine's were going through initiation ceremonies to become "sweethearts" when they were all hazed on Oct. 28. "Sweethearts" are a support group for pledges of the fraternity and are selected by senior fraternity members.

The women were blindfolded and led into different rooms where they were teased, touched or ordered to undress, testimony showed. They also had to eat a variety of foods, such as ketchup, mustard and raw eggs.

The student who filed the assault charges told police that she was singled out for more severe hazing because she had gone off-campus to see a member of the Kappa Alpha Kappa fraternity.

Raleigh Police Det. Mary Blalock testified that the student told her she was led into a dark room where several men assaulted her.

The student testified that she tried to resist the assault and was eventually led from the room.

Spurgeon Fields III, the attorney for the three fraternity members, argued that even if the student was assaulted, she could not identify his clients as the offenders because she was blindfolded.

Meanwhile, a state legislator who represents the area including the campus has said he is preparing an anti-hazing bill that would add to the activities prohibited in a 1980 New Jersey law.

Democratic Assemblyman John Watson said Thursday

the legislation he is writing may broaden the hazing activities prohibited to include acts which embarrass or denigrate others.

The current law makes it a disorderly persons offense to participate in initiation activities that endanger fraternity members or pledges. The law also states that aggravated hazing, or hazing that causes serious bodily injury, is a felony punishable by 18 months' imprisonment.

In a letter he wrote this week Luedeke, Watson said, "incidents like the one on your campus necessitate consideration of prohibitive legislation."

"As an African-American lawmaker who represents this Mercer County constituency, I would be remiss if I sat passively to the side and did not address this issue," Watson wrote.

Ophelia Daze to release False Prophet

Statesboro band's original tunes to be heard on their second release

By Ana Lucio
Staff Writer

Two and a half years ago four crazy individuals got together and formed a band. Donald Painter became the band's vocalist and lyricist, Hans Gutknecht took over lead guitar, Ronnie Thornton worked on bass guitar, and Ann Clayton sat down at the drums. They came up with the name Ophelia Daze.

The band's debut album, Tasty, was in stock at The Emporium, but much to the band's liking, the l. p. sold out.

This Friday will be another landmark in O.D.'s history. The release of the band's second l. p., False Prophet, will be commemorated with a bash at The Collegiate. The band will play some of their new tunes for the crowd, and of course, some old favorites, such as "America" and "SPD".

The band itself has several inspirations but one in particular which they look to as god is Jimmy Bickert, manager and design artist otherwise known as Sick.

Bickert has designed three different 100% cotton T-shirts for the band which are out on the market today and are said by Painter to be "the O.D. sportswear for the inactive."

Bickert has also been busy promoting the band locally and to markets elsewhere, including several nearby college radio stations.

Sick is not the only inspiration to the band. Painter recently took an inspiring trip to Europe, and one thing he accomplished was that he "spread the gospel of O.D. all around."

According to Painter, his lyrics come from his experiences in Europe as well as from bad relationships, soundtracks from pornographic movies and unfair political events.

The band obscurely calls its style of music undefinable. When asked about their opinion on underground bands "selling out" or becoming mainstream, Thornton says, "Music has not caught up to the people, but the people have finally caught up to the music." Thornton finds this to be the case because of the diversity of the band now sees in its followers, as opposed to earlier years.

Painter says that the "grunge" image is not the one they are trying to promote, but that they have long hair because they can't afford to get haircuts (yea, right!), and be-

THIS MODERN WORLD by TOM TOMORROW

You deserve a break today ...

Take advantage of on-campus activities

As mid-term exams approach, we as college students are sometimes prone to get so caught up in our course requirements to appreciate everything else that is going on around us.

To some extent this is understandable. With a term paper due a week from Thursday, a major exam tomorrow and a novel of War and Peace proportions to be read by Monday, a student may not see where he or she has any spare time at all.

When we do set aside a spell for rest and recreation, the events we take part in usually involve a keg of frothy beverage, music pumped to ear-drum damaging decibel levels and about 300 of our closest friends.

But for folks here at GSU, several groups on campus offer alternatives which are enjoyable, relaxing and usually free.

A brief glance at the George-Anne's announcement section or a look at the paper's advertisements will usually be a good source to look for this campus sponsored entertainment.

For example: this weekend, Union Productions is sponsoring cheap movies at the Union and a "disco pajama jam" which should prove to be nothing less than entertaining. On Monday, the group will sponsor a free concert in the Union Commons. These events are only a few the group brings to campus for our benefit every quarter.

The Campus Life Enrichment Committee sponsors weekly movies on Tuesday nights, as well as bringing in internationally acclaimed musical and theatrical performers on a regular basis.

For those who don't get quite enough intellectual stimulation in the classroom, the various departments on campus offer numerous guest lectures from both visiting experts and professors from right here at GSU. Topics ranging from "Conservation and Management of Tanzanian Game Parks" to "Singing Musical Theatre: Technique and Interpretation" will be explored in the next week or so, and it's a pretty safe bet that plenty more will be explored in the coming weeks.

Students with a particular field of interest have the opportunity to learn a little more about their favorite topic through clubs and organizations that meet regularly on campus. From the Sociological Club to the Society of Professional Journalists, almost every field of study has some sort of group dedicated to satisfying the inquiring mind.

If getting physical is more the student's style, the Campus Recreation and Intramural department offers free rental equipment (including tents for a stress-relieving get-away weekend) and opportunities to pick up a team and compete with some of GSU's other armchair athletes.

These are only a few of the many entertainment opportunities available here on campus.

We encourage all students to keep their eyes open to the opportunities these folks are working hard to provide for us and give this on-campus recreation a shot sometime instead of saddling up to the bar every free moment.

Your liver and wallet will thank you, and you just may enjoy yourself in the process.

Now I'm mad. I'm angry. I'm pissed; boy am I pissed.

My book bag was stolen last Friday. It had two of my three textbooks in it, all my class notes, my bike lock, my favorite shirt, my little book of phone numbers and addresses, my writing notebook containing some poems and unfinished stories and columns, my checkbook, my computer disk -- even a Bible.

The textbooks were immediately sold to the College Bookstore. I wonder if the thief will keep the Bible.

Now I am not going to waste a lot of space with some feeble attempt at placing myself on a higher moral plane. I am not going to tone down my message by sugar coating my language, or by writing an exquisite piece showcasing my artistic ability or mastery of sentence structure and adjective use.

I am not going to make some demeaning plea to have the bag returned, offer a reward, and ask no questions. I am not going to ask that, at least, due to its irreplaceable contents, the yellow covered writing notebook be returned

I'm not going to beg for the return of the bag itself, even if it is the exclusive backpack I've owned since the sixth grade.

I'm not going to bore you, the reader, with some heavy hearted sermon on how I've taken this opportunity to produce in myself some spiritual victory.

Nope. I'm not going to take the time because ... well, because I just don't think it would make a bit of a difference. It's like pissing off the back of a pickup doing 60 -- it's going to end up in your face.

Besides, these words are not the product of pride, merely unabashed rage and blind fury.

So here it is.
This is to the son-of-a-bitch who stole my bag.

You are the pre-eminent example of a low-life.

The sciences have not yet discovered the primordial level of existence in the animal kingdom which you occupy.

The textbooks were sold to the College Bookstore ... I wonder if the thief will keep the Bible ...

I was sitting, stewing, after destroying my room out of rage, writing this and thinking, "He'll probably laugh as he reads this."

Then it dawned on me. "That's not possible." Why?

Because you are probably so damned stupid and underdeveloped that you can't read.

What are you even doing in college (if you are, by some galactic miscue, a student)?

Why aren't you knee deep in cow manure shoveling it into a fertilizer plant. Better yet, why don't you just jump into the chute with the rest of the dung.

Then again, why don't you just do the rest of us a favor, quit school now and enter your chosen career as the right-hand man for some middleman, two-bit crack dealer, because that's what you should have been trained for since birth, instead of wasting your time and our tax money on a feigned attempt at academic accomplishment.

Since the chances are that you will never read this, I hope one of your equally slimy friends, with at least a fifth-grade reading level, will see this and read it to you.

And you better pray, on the Bible you stole from me, that I never discover your identity. For if I do, they will have to kill me, cremate me, and scatter my ashes over seven states to keep me from you, you sorry bastard.

And about your mother...

Checking in on Governor Zell, Pierre and the capitol gang billion budget, an increase of $650 million from last year.

Did you hear that? Zell wants another 650 million dollars to spend next year.

On this issue I have just two questions: one, what do you think he wants to do with all this money; and two, where do you think he's going to get the money? The lottery? No, no, no... that money will only be used on our public schools. My guess is, once again, this money will come out of our pockets.

Welfare reform. Now this looks promising. Why? Because Zell has introduced a welfare reform package that will give these sorry, blankety-blank Georgians living off our welfare system each a swift kick in the butt.

Among other things, this package would force the able-bodied to work or forfeit their benefits. It would also deny increased benefits to mothers for having more babies. Maybe this proposal will redeem Mr. Zig Zag in my eyes.

No... I don't think that is possible.

Term limits. Remember this old issue? During the general election last November, several states had items on their ballots posing the question, "should our legislators be limited in the number of terms they serve?"

All of the states in which this proposal appeared answered with a resounding

"yes!"

Well, now Lt. Governor Pierre has proposed legislation on this very issue for the citizens of Georgia.

Under this proposal, Georgia legislators would be limited to six terms, or a total of 12 years. Statewide officials would also be limited; Pierre's proposal would limit these folks to two terms each, or a total of eight years. This measure is currently before the Senate Special Judiciary Committee.

Child abuse. This is another issue that Lt. Governor Howard is trying to do something about.

Good old Pierre is backing a group of bills to give law enforcement officials more power to protect children from child abuse. This group of bills is also currently before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Okay, that's basically what you can look forward to from the Georgia General Assembly in the weeks and months ahead.

You know, most of these sound pretty good, if you can

Kevin Washington makes the most of his playing time

By Chris Sherwood
Staff Writer

I know what you guys are thinking. The Super Bowl was anything but exciting; that is, of course, unless you are a Dallas Cowboys fan and really wanted to see the Bills suffer defeat.

Look on the bright side. If you were like me you were one of those people who wanted to see all those new and entertaining commercials the papers and your marketing professor have been talking about for weeks. These ads went for about $1.8 million per 30 seconds.

Will wonders ever cease? Please explain to me why an NBA star got just as much coverage as either of the two quarterbacks at the Super Bowl. Jordan was a smart-alec superstar teaming up with Bugs Bunny for Nike, and for McDonald's, he was a nice guy shooting hoops with Larry Bird.

I really liked the game of horse between Jordan and Bird. They were playing for a McDonald's burger and each shot they took got more and more outlandish and far-fetched. The Nike ads pitted Jordan and Bugs against Marvin the Martian where they were trying to save the world's supply of Air Jordan shoes. Did you catch Jordan's cartoon check made out for "one bazillion simoleons?"

Reebok finally got themselves a name, a big one from a big guy, Shaquille O'Neal, who is facing ultimate NBA stardom. I really do not remember seeing this one, but I read that legends Bill Walton, Bill Russell, Wilt Chamberlain, and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar treat O'Neal like a rookie. O'Neal walks out onto the court and Russell says, "You're early," and O'Neal replies, "But I'm ready."

Just for the sake of being fair and mentioning everyone, Pepsi introduced its new Crystal Pepsi and a new campaign targeting teens about how fun Pepsi is. No, I don't drink Pepsi products. I do have three cheers for 7-UP who countered Pepsi with the "It takes more to be the uncola than just being clear" slogan. Very clever, if you ask me.

My favorites were the Lee jeans commercials. Who missed seeing that guy suck up the canary when he was trying to button his jeans? It was the funniest thing. They also got laughs with their other ad.

A girl is getting ready for a date and you can see her likeness in the window jumping up and down trying to get her jeans on. With flowers in hand, her date gets out of his car and sees her right when she falls into the arms of what looks like another man (which is actually a mannequin). Her date is appalled and his flowers wilt.

Who can forget the ongoing Bud Bowl? Once again Bud competes against Bud Lite in series V. They were witty with the Rocket and the Illuminator. What was the final score anyway?

As much as I enjoyed the ads, the half-time show, which was sponsored by Frito-Lay, was spectacular. Michael Jackson did his thing and sang with a pre-recorded tape, but the show also focused on a very important message of how special children are.

I can't imagine organizing the placards for the people in the stands and coming up with a picture of children in a circle holding hands. That was the neatest thing. The end of the show brought tears to my eyes as Jackson sang "Heal the World" and the Los Angeles school children joined in.

Well, I know many of you were really looking forward to a good game between the Dallas and the Bills. At least the American way (turning a profit) came through to give you some entertainment.

The GSU men's basketball team has a new weapon. His name is Kevin Washington and he has already made a huge impact as a starter.

The Eagles already have a solid three point man in Charlton Young, but Washington has shown that he can shoot the long shot also as he has connected on 13 of his 48 shots. He has also brought down an average of 8 rebounds in his 17 games as an Eagle.

As a high school player, Washington played for Soldan High in St. Louis, Missouri. Washington had a stellar career as he was a member of the varsity squad every year. During his junior and senior years Washington earned all-district, all-metro, and all-state honors.

Washington had a terrific senior year as he averaged twenty-eight points a game while pulling down eight boards.

Coming out of high school, Washington had some tough choices to make. His first decision was whether to attend a Division I school and play basketball or go the route of many before him and attend a Junior College to shore up his basketball skills on that level first.

In the spring the decision for Washington was made and he planned to attend Odessa Junior College. He had his reasons for choosing a Junior College.

One of the reasons he chose Odessa was for its basketball. "I chose to play at Odessa because it is respected for its basketball program and a lot of Division I schools look to it for their future players," commented Washington.

Although his grades in high school were better than average (a 2.8 GPA), Washington also believed that attending a Junior College would help his transition to the next level. During his high school years

Kevin Washington, a new addition to this year's men's basketball team, has averaged eight rebounds in 17 games for Frank Kerns' squad.

Washington not only managed to light up the scoreboard, but obviously his grades also.

After two years on the Junior College level, he was ready to make the move to Division I basketball.

He chose to continue his education and basketball at GSU. The main reason Washington chose GSU was for the chance he had to be a big part of the Eagle success.

"Coach Kerns did not tell me that there would be a spot there for my taking. I would have to fight for it, but I would not have to worry about my place on the team every day," commented Washington.

According to Washington, "There were bigger schools that were willing to give me a shot like Oklahoma and Arizona State, but I would have had to fight for my place a lot and I did not want that."

So far this season, Washington has had his chance to contribute for his new team. "I've tried to accomplish a lot and in time I hope that I can contribute more, it's just a matter of time," mentioned Washington.

This year has brought a new team and a new style of play for Washington to adjust to. "It was a change for me because I

Rugby tournament to be played at GSU

By David Byrd
Staff Writer

The Black Rose Rugby Tournament is becoming a new tradition at GSU. The tournament is a head crunching, frightful battle between warriors from colleges in the southern-eastern district.

On February 13 and 14, six schools will compete for the first place title at the Black Rose.

The games will begin Saturday at 9 a.m. on the football practice fields. Teams will play all day and the winners will advance to play again on Sunday at 3:30. The teams who make the finals are both worthy of winning, but only one will go home with the first place trophy.

Last year GSU's rugby team won the Black Rose. They played Clemson for the final game. Southern slaughtered them with veteran players and skill.

After the tournament, GSU lost seven prized starters. Their teammates were challenged to replace the lost players. They had to rebuild the team.

This year's team consists of more new members than veterans. Lance Goldsmith calls them "The New Talent."

The team has been preparing for the Black Rose since the fall quarter. The team practices three and four days a week for two and three hours at a time. The hard training is necessary to build the players both mentally and physically.

Rugby season opened last Saturday. The GSU rugby team was challenged by Georgia State on the Southern grounds. GSU, unfortunately, lost the game 17-10.

The team has one match left before the Black Rose. They will take on the Macon Men's Club Saturday in Macon.

Jon Davell and Lance Goldsmith, veteran members of the team, believe SCAD will give GSU the most trouble during the season and in the tournament.

"SCAD is at the highest point in their career and they have been together for four years and all of their starters are experienced seniors," said Goldsmith.

"SCAD should be our toughest competition although no game will be an easy victory," said Davell.

GSU's rugby team is a young but promising team. They are determined individuals who charge on the field with the rage of Viking warriors. This team has faith that they will prevail again this year in the Black Rose Tournament.

In addition to helping Kingston win the election, GSU's College Republicans also served as the county coordinators for the Coverdell campaign and the Bush-Quayle campaign.

The job of the organization, according to Simon, is "to get republican candidates elected to office."

Simon also stated that GSU's chapter of the College Republicans is open to "anybody that's interested in the conservative cause."

For more information, students can contact Doug Simon at 871-6560 or Chris Ingram at 489-5418.

Himes stated that recent programs conducted through residence halls and other organizations have been successful in calling people's attention to the problems placed upon our society by STDs.

"We will continue to provide as many programs about these issues as people want in residence halls and organizations," Himes said. "We have a lot of students right now who are willing to work with us to help get the word out."

HILLIS

sift through all the red tape and fancy wording (which is meant, by the way, to leave imbeciles like us clueless).

Only one of these proposals am I adamantly against... guess which one that is? If you still don't know, you will pretty soon... I promise.

Look at that! I can make promises too!

The only difference is this: I won't lie and squirm my way out of a promise. Now who do you know that was just inaugurated who might do such a thing?

If you don't know who I'm talking about, you will soon. Sometime in the next four years, count on it: the "landslide" will land at your front door.

Did you notice which two guys in this profound column of mine were most often mentioned? Take a minute... look it over. Yes, you guessed it: "Zig Zag" Zell Miller and Pierre Howard. Now why do you think that is?

Remember, folks... it's 1993. What will be happening next year in Georgia? Election time.

Personally, I just see this attempt to "win Georgians over" as humorous. You have to... I just hope these bills are passed before they have to leave in 1994.

P.S. If I have now sufficiently ticked anyone off, drop me a line... my L.B. is 17007. Also, if you have any questions and would like to attempt to tap into my unlimited source of knowledge, your are as always welcome to do so. Make your voice heard... get fired up!
