Man arrested for giving a false name in I-295 shooting report

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A motorist has been charged with filing a false police report after admitting that he lied when he said his rear window was shattered by a sniper on Interstate 295.

The beltway around downtown Jacksonville has been the site of almost 40 cases of highway violence in the past year. One driver was killed by a chunk of concrete and two were seriously injured when shots were fired into their cars.

William E. Gordon, 21, of Bryceville, first told police that the rear window of his Chevrolet Blazer was shattered at about 3:30 a.m. Sunday as he drove on the beltway.

However, when detectives questioned Gordon's passenger, Eric Bright, he told police that Gordon had lied about the shooting and the window had actually been broken out at a party.

A police report said Bright told officers that Gordon was afraid his father would be angry about the broken window. After police arrested Gordon, he gave a statement saying he had lied.

Curry said the misdemeanor charge should serve as a warning to anyone who attempts to use the I-295 incidents as a way to avoid personal troubles.

Probe underway into secret files of Savannah River Site

SOUTH CAROLINA: AIKEN, S.C. (AP) — An independent group searching through thousands of once-top secret files at the Savannah River Site says it wouldn't be surprising to find information about early releases of radioactive material.

"This study is going to tell us the truth about the past," said John Till, a member of the group. "It will tell us the truth about the releases from this site."

This is the first time an independent group has been allowed on-site to dig through what were once classified documents and top secret files about the nuclear weapons complex that has been operating for 40 years.

Critics attack bills they say will hurt GA's international image

ATLANTA (AP) — Critics say the timing couldn't be worse for bills pending in the Legislature to make English Georgia's official language and to deny most public assistance to illegal aliens.

"I think it's an incredible step backward," said Mexican Consul General Teodoro Maus, noting that the legislation is being considered at the same time the state is preparing for the 1996 Olympics.

Maus and others say the bills are anti-foreigner and will hurt Georgia's international image.

One proposal would deny public assistance and medical care to illegal aliens, except in emergencies or if the patient is pregnant. Undocumented aliens who receive medical care would have to be referred to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The language bill is given little chance of passage, having been reassigned last week to a committee. The move, however, has not silenced critics of the measure.

No leads in Stratford Hall vandalism slur incident

'No one knows anything' say investigators

By Doug Gross
Editor

GSU Police have no suspects in a Feb. 10 incident of vandalism at Stratford Hall which was apparently racially motivated.

According to GSU Police Lieutenant Guy Sharp, the star of David, a symbol of the Jewish faith, and the words "K.K.K." and "rules" were discovered written in shaving creme gel on a wall near the doorway of the dormitory's lobby between noon and 12:30 p.m.

Campus police officers have been questioning residents of the co-ed dorm in an effort to identify the parties responsible, Sharp said. "We've spoken with [approximately] 95 percent of the residents of Stratford Hall and what we've found so far is that no one knows anything," he said.

He said that residents told officers race-relations in the hall have been good and many expressed surprise at the incident.

Sharp said suspects apprehended for the crime may be charged for not only criminal trespass, but could also be deemed in violation of state and federal hate-crime laws because of its "bias-related" nature.

"The person probably doesn't realize the severity of this crime," he said.

Suspects may also be subject to sanctions at the hands of the GSU Judicial Affairs Office, which may include suspension or expulsion, Sharp said.

"We're not going to put up with this kind of thing," he said. "We've got a nice . . . mostly friendly campus and if we've got one bad apple doing this sort of thing, we want to weed that out."

According to Stratford Hall Resident Director Sheila McFarland, a meeting was called at which residents of the dorm to talk about the incident.

"We called a meeting to discuss it, and hopefully this is the end of it," she said.

AKA Celebrates Founders Day

By Kimberly R. Hill
Staff Writer

The Lambda Kappa chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc. is celebrating its founder's day in conjunction with Black History Month from Feb. 15-21.

Tolla Soto, chapter president, explained the purpose of some of the week's events which she said support GSU and the community.

On Wednesday the Black Men Seminar was held, addressing the problems facing young African-American males.

"We have a decline of black men coming to college and when they get here, a lot of them don't stay," Soto said.

The program, aimed at black males from Statesboro High School and GSU, focused on family values and educational issues.

The purpose of Greek Unity Day, which is being held at 7 p.m. in Union room 280, is to eliminate the stereotype that various Greek organizations oppose each other.

According to Soto: "Everybody is separated. It appears to everybody that we can't speak and we can't attend the same functions and it's really not like that. We're just trying to say that we don't have a problem with any other organization."

Soto also stated that each Greek organization does things differently, yet they all serve the same purpose of helping the black community.

"We all need to join together because we'll be able to accomplish more together than apart," Soto said.

SGA runs Winter funds down to $9

Grant to Geology club nearly taps out quarterly funds

By Christopher Cole
Staff Writer

Student Government's budget has dwindled to $9 for the remainder of the quarter after voting Tuesday night to grant $50 to the GSU Geology Club.

SGA had decided last fall to budget $2,000 per quarter for fund requests in order to control excessive spending. SGA can legally dip into the $2,000 budgeted for spring quarter, however.

For the first time this quarter, senators voted to reject the original motion, which was to give the Geology Club $100.

The club requested a total of $400 in partial funding for a trip to the southeastern Appalachians over spring break to "see and do geology in the field." The money would help fund a four-day camping trip costing $1,065.

The first complaint from SGA after the request was made came from a member of the Executive Committee, who suggested that the senate would be "paying for their spring break." He said that without SGA funds, the individual cost for each geology student after fund-raising would still be less than $20.

One senator debated the comment, saying the money would not be used for "frolicking" in the mountains, but for "digging up rocks."

The senator who motioned to grant the club $100 stated, "We haven't turned anyone down yet." Nevertheless, only five members voted affirmative, and the majority rejected the motion.

The second motion, to grant just $50, passed by all but a few votes. The senator who made the original motion for $100 voted against the $50 motion, protesting, "I want more."

The Executive Committee, which normally informs the senators of the quarter's remaining balance, did not mention the winter budget.

Recent efforts have been made to put new caps on SGA spending. The senate recently adopted, without a vote, new guidelines for organization money requests which limited funding to $500 per year.

That guideline, however, does not take effect until next quarter.

Statesboro's first oyster bar, 'Crybaby's,' opens

By Kimberly R. Hill
Staff Writer

Statesboro's first and only oyster bar and restaurant, Crybaby's, opened Feb. 5 in the University Plaza at the former site of the Statesboro branch of the U.S. Post Office.

According to the owners, Jason Anderson and Lee Jones, their goal is to attract all types of people.

"We're going to be different, something that may be new to GSU and Statesboro," Anderson said.

Crybaby's is part restaurant and part nightclub. The restaurant and bar will serve raw and steamed oysters, crab legs and shrimp, which are imported from distributors in Louisiana, Florida, Texas, and Virginia.

According to Anderson, the nightclub features a mirrored dance floor and "the best light system in Statesboro."

The nightclub features DJ Tripp West, who will play various types of music including reggae and house/industrial-techno. Crybaby's will also do joint promotions with Slurpee's of Savannah, providing a free shuttle to Savannah and one free drink at Slurpee's.

Anderson, an alumnus of GSU, said Crybaby's has several advantages over other local bars.

"Crybaby's is within walking distance for students who live on campus, non-alcoholic drinks will be available - we want to attract all types of students," Anderson stated.

"We intend to follow the law to the fullest extent," he continued. "We will not serve intoxicated persons or let them in the door."

The owner of Woods Barber Shop, located next door to Crybaby's in University Plaza, said that the bar will not affect his customers.

"I think parking would be the only problem," the barber shop owner said.

He also said that Crybaby's will bring more business to the plaza, especially in the afternoons.

Former GSU English professor dies at 85

Retired GSU professor Dr. Fielding D. Russell, 85, died Monday evening at Bulloch Memorial Hospital of respiratory failure and complications of a Feb. 1 stroke.

The Russell, Ga. native was a prominent Georgia educator. He was a professor of English at GSU from 1932 until his retirement in 1975, and was chairman of the Division of Languages from 1939-1971. He also served terms as dean of Men (1932-1935) and acting Dean of the College (1940-41). He returned to full-time teaching in 1971.

Russell was also active in the school's athletic program, serving on the Faculty Athletic Committee for over 40 years and coaching the GSU boxing team until it was dropped at the outbreak of World War II.

GSU students honored him twice as Most Popular Teacher in the 1930s and dedicated the Reflector yearbook to him in 1950 and 1965.

He was a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Kappa Delta Pi, Alpha Psi Omega, the Modern Language Association and the South Atlantic Modern Language Association.

Russell received his A.B. and M.A. degrees from the University of Georgia in 1929 and 1930 respectively. He also earned letters at UGA in freshman basketball and varsity boxing. He received his Ph.D. degree from George Washington University in 1947 and did other post-graduate work at the University of North Carolina, Duke University and the University of Michigan.

During his time here, Russell encouraged the establishment of Campus Life Enrichment Committee, which brings writers, musicians and other performers to campus. He was a featured speaker at the June, 30, 1990 ceremony which marked the establishment of the school as a university.

Annual report says time served is increasing

Georgia prisoners sentenced to life now serve an average of 12.5 years

ATLANTA (AP) — The time actually served by convicts sentenced to life in prison is on the rise, according to a new state report, but that's still not enough for some prosecutors.

The annual report of the Georgia Board of Pardons and Paroles said the average time served by inmates awaiting parole for murder a conviction which carries a mandatory life sentence when the death penalty is not imposed — rose 32 percent from 9.44 years in 1982 to 12.5 years in 1992.

The numbers suggest that the increased bed space in the state's prisons has eased the pressure to release inmates from overcrowded cells, board spokesman Michael Light said.

But Spencer Lawton, district attorney in Chatham County, said there was little to cheer him in the findings.

"A 12-year average sentence for people convicted of taking another's life is inadequate," Lawton said. "It only serves to point to the necessity for an option of life without parole, which Gov. (Zell) Miller has proposed and the state's district attorneys endorse."

A bill to create a sentence of life without parole, part of the governor's legislative package this year, is pending in the General Assembly.

"While we should give people who are given life sentences the opportunity to rehabilitate themselves, as a prosecutor I'm glad to see that the pardons and paroles board is keeping people who get those sentences longer," said Gwinnett County District Attorney Danny Porter.

"But I think there are some people who should never get out of prison, and for that reason most prosecutors are supporting ... life without parole," he said.

Britt Priddy, the district attorney in Dougherty County,

Ohio poll shows Clinton's disapproval rating high

CINCINNATI (AP) — President Clinton has stirred more opposition among Ohioans during his early weeks in office than his predecessors did at the same point, a statewide poll reported.

The Ohio Poll found that 56 percent of those surveyed approved of Clinton's performance, while 34 percent disapproved and 10 percent had no opinion.

The Democratic president's popularity among Ohioans is less than Republicans George Bush and Ronald Reagan enjoyed in their first weeks in office in 1981 and 1989, the poll reported Monday.

Pollsters conducting the telephone survey questioned 844 adults selected at random — Feb. 3 through last Wednesday. The poll has a margin of error of 3.4 percentage points.

The University of Cincinnati's Institute for Policy Research conducted the poll. The university and The Cincinnati Post sponsor the Ohio Poll.

The Ohio figures compare with a similar Gallup poll that was taken Jan. 24-26. The Gallup survey found that 58 percent of Americans approved of Clinton's job performance, 22 percent disapproved and 20 percent had no opinion.

Clinton has generated controversy among Ohioans by allowing homosexuals to serve in the military and a perception that he is breaking campaign promises, particularly with his backpedaling on a middle-class tax cut, the University of Cincinnati pollsters said.

Of those who disapproved of the president's performance, 11 percent cited the issue of homosexuals in the military, while 9 percent expressed beliefs that he is ignoring promises that were made during the campaign.

Clinton's approval ratings are only slightly lower than those of Reagan (59 percent) and Bush (63 percent) at the same early point in their terms, but his 34 percent disapproval rating is more than twice that of his predecessors.

Home of Thousands wins Bandemonium

Local band earns title of most original and best band in band competition held in Savannah

By Ana Lucio
Staff Writer

One of Statesboro's finest local bands, Home of Thousands, made their presence known at Savannah's Bandemonium '93, held last Saturday. The band earned the prizes of most original band and best band in the competition.

"I am more proud that we won most original band than winning the whole thing," Jason Bueker, the band's drummer and vocalist, says.

Home of Thousands not only gained notoriety from their sweep of Bandemonium, but they also received $200 and ten hours of recording time at Reeltime Studios in Savannah. The band plans to use the time they won to cut a second demo, which they hope to release sometime around spring break.

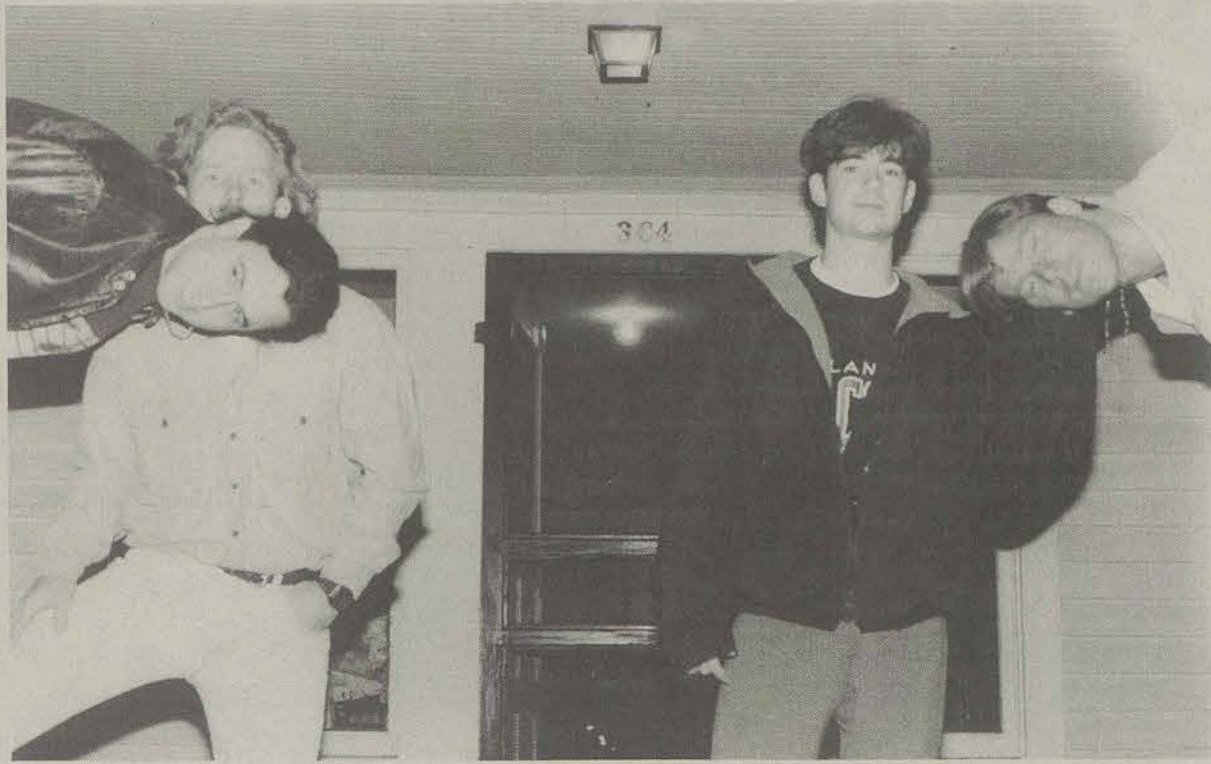

In '92 at the same competition they won best instrumental, best vocal, and second place overall.

Two members of Home of Thousands, Bueker and Brian Bice, head vocalist, guitarist, and lyricist, were members of Silent Remarks, a cover band who played the Statesboro area.

When musical maturation and inevitable parting caused the band to break up, Bueker and Bice formed Home of Thousands in '91 with the addition of Van Thompson on bass guitar.

The break up of Silent Remarks was no big loss, according to Bueker. "There was no artistic merit in the music of Silent Remarks," he says.

The band has recently added a new member, James

Home of Thousands hangs out on the porch. Members are James Salter, Jason Bueker (who appears a bit shy), Van Thompson, and Brian Bice. The band will soon record their second demo tape with recording time won at Bandemonium. (Photo by Bob Schwindler.)

Salter, guitarist and occasional saxophonist.

The members of Home of Thousands feel that they are constantly maturing and growing in their musical aspect but that the Statesboro crowd has not taken notice of that and is still focused on the previous band's music.

Band members' influences range from the Cure to the Beatles, but they adamantly insist that no Seattle bands have made their influence. Bice focuses on knowledge and truth and states arguments against racism in his lyrics. "Ideological intolerance burns me," he says.

When asked about the band's music originality, Bice said, "You can't escape using bits and pieces, but you still want to strive to use different things."

"Our music is constantly changing," Salter jokingly says. "It's because I'm always screwing up and making it simpler."

Does Home of Thousands support the local band scene? Well, yes, of course, since they qualify as one, but the band feels that they do not share the recognition that they merit. Salter goes as far as saying, "We are like the red-headed stepchild of Statesboro bands."

They say that certain crowds in this town have stereotyped their music and don't give them the time of day to hear their recent and more original sounds.

The band feels that they need to expand their horizons. Chena's Cantina, they say, is the only really good place to play around here, but it has its size limitations.

After August the band hopes to move on, but they are not sure where because some of the members will still be attending GSU.

Plans for the very near future include playing at Chena's Cantina tonight. They will hopefully debut their new backdrop, which will be created by graphic designer Jonathan Freeman.

Statesboro, take notice! Home of Thousands has proved their talent and originality at a forum other than the limited one of Statesboro's music scene. If you want to hear a real music with audible, intelligent lyrics, see them tonight at Chena's.

Ms. African American 1993 crowned

By Marchell Gillis
Staff Writer

Sander Scott, a freshman criminal justice major from Stone Mountain, was crowned Ms. African American 1993 Monday evening in the Union Ballroom.

After competitions in talent, evening gowns, and the question and answer area, Scott was selected by the judges to reign as Ms. African American 1993.

Teresa Bailey, Ms. African American 1992, entertained the audience with a number of songs before giving her farewell address and placing the crown on Scott.

According to Charisse Chisolm, one of the pageant coordinators, Scott received a $500 scholarship and various gift certificates from local businesses.

"Do unto others as you would have them do unto you" is Scott's philosophy, she said after the pageant. Although she appeared a bit nervous, she also seemed exhilarated and relieved.

Keela Whitest, a junior majoring in television broadcasting, was first runner up and received awards for Ms. Congeniality and most talented in the pageant. Whitest gave a wonderful modern dance performance to Nina Simone's "For Women".

"It's been an experience," Whitest said.

Kelleita Thurman, third runner up and freshman, said, "I can't believe it!"

Other awards were given in the pageant, including most academic, earned by Danielle Hill, and entrepreneur, earned by Sadaris Smalls, who raised the most sponsor money.

The emcee for the pageant was former GSU student Lisa Allen, who led the audience in the African American national anthem, "Lift Every Voice" at the beginning of the program.

In addition to the performances of the contestants, Umoja, a performance group at GSU, entertained the audience with three monologues about African American women and the African American community.

Despite the technical difficulties that occurred during the program, the pageant was a success.

"I am enormously proud of my phenomenal African American women who performed tonight. Each is a winner. I believe this pageant was an even greater success than last year," said Nicole Henderson, one of the pageant coordinators.

Foolin' with the fountain

Although we cannot totally condemn you for attempting to lighten-up the general mood on campus during this, the dreariest and most depressing of quarters, we must say that your actions were totally tasteless and displayed an utter lack of originality.

We fail to see the humor which "you" – the person or persons who filled the GSU fountain with soap suds – intended. Especially since the exact same thing was done just last quarter.

If you, whoever you are, haven't anything better to do than to carouse around campus at night reliving your adolescence with such idiotic stunts, we pity you.

Instead of giving us a laugh or two, you have, if anything, given us all a solemn reminder of the redundancy of life here at GSU.

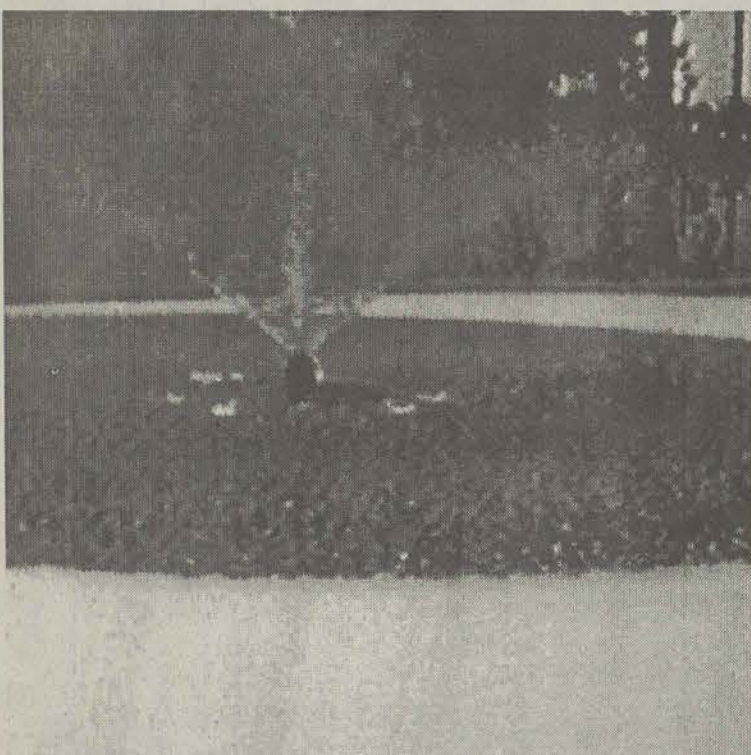

Pranks are inevitable at any college, and in some instances they are viewed as just "a part of college life." However, these frivolities of youth are often framed with fine lines, and on certain unfortunate occasions they stray into the realm of unacceptability. What happened Monday night was clearly unacceptable behavior in any instance.

The "ol' soap suds in the water fountain" routine has been recreated an infinite number of times in colleges and public places all over the country for years. But today, at this university, its charm is wearing a bit thin.

If the perpetrator(s) of this "travesty of prankster-manship" (and we assume that you are not the same group of freshman girls from Oliff Hall who did it the first time) are reading this, we must suggest that in the future you allow these tired old escapades to be played out only in memory – or at least be a bit more original.

Top Ten Things to Put in the Fountain:

10. Green beans (College students never get enough vegetables)
9. Vodka
8. Goldfish
7. Iron sculptures from Foy Building
6. A Fountainside Café
5. Green dye (St. Patrick's Day only)
4. The geese
3. Salt ("World's only inland saltwater fountain")
2. Grendel
1. Grits

Most Southerners ashamed of racist past, proud of history

CHRISTOPHER COLE
STAFF WRITER

Governor Zell Miller ought to watch his step.

After strongly endorsing the liberal candidate for President, now he wants to change the Georgia state flag so we don't ruffle a few feathers outside the state. He's about to slide fast in popularity among conservatives in Georgia.

A recent George-Anne letter writer, Kurtis Wheeler, sent one of the most potent messages I've ever seen on this editorial page.

His concept, which some find so hard to swallow, is that love of the South and her heritage is not linked to racism and slavery. Indeed, most people in the South are ashamed of their racist reputation, but still choose to remember the past -- scrapping the wicked practices of slavery and segregation but holding dear their nature of independence and dignity.

I come from a small town outside Charleston, the home of King Cotton and the birthplace of secession. The Confederate emblem can still be seen flying at our state capitol.

Yet our neighbors, black and white alike, get along just fine.

Most of our crime is among members of the same race, and we never see race riots. That's a lot better than I can say for the big northern cities, which house the liberal establishment.

The fact is, racial tensions

in the South have often been ignited not from internal conflict, but from the influence of carpetbaggers and liberal educators who are determined to paint an ugly picture of our heritage.

That's not to say we don't have a few scars. Of course slavery was wrong. Of course

Jim Crow was wrong. But if you sit down for a friendly chat with an average Southerner, you'll find a pride in the South that just isn't rooted in racism.

It's rooted in the unique cohesion of this region, bound together by the fundamental principle that states formed the federal government, not the other way around. That we must abide by federal supremacy but maintain the integrity of states' rights.

Incidentally, the war in the 1860s (I won't even get into naming it) was fought on our side by plain, average people. Since winners always write the history books, those who are ignorant of the facts seem to believe the battle was waged by slave-owners. Not only did slave-owners comprise a very tiny segment of our population, but almost none of them fought in the war.

The ranks of Robert E. Lee were mostly filled with average people who were fighting for the sanctity of their home turf, not the protection of slavery.

Again, that's not to imply slavery shouldn't have been abolished, or that integration shouldn't have happened. The point is that the Confederate emblem symbolizes, for most Southerners, a love of heritage -- black and white.

We are outraged that evil groups like the KKK fly our emblem as a symbol of their cause. While it's true that the Georgia flag was changed in 1956 in defiance of the civil rights movement, that shouldn't be an argument for changing it again today. For most people in Georgia, the flag represents not defiance of civil rights but the love of our past -- which, like any other place in the world, has its flaws.

The Republican party, which freed the slaves, is now committed to protecting Dixie as a land of hope and opportunity that's been liberated from the chains of racism. Republicans shut their doors on racist Southerners (i.e. when former President Bush censured David Duke from the party). We have no

How to cope when things start caving in: A day in the life Part 2

"What's wrong Chlo?"
"Zak... I... oh..."
"Come here, let it out, that's it, it's all right." Tears. This must be big. Come on Chloe, let me in, let me help.

"Zak, I just don't know anymore."

"What do you mean? Did you have another fight with your dad?"

"Yeah, that, and I think I flunked that Calculus test, I can't concentrate in Geometry anymore, Julie won't do anything to keep the room in decent shape, and on and on. I'm not even sure about us anymore. And to top it all off, Gramp said he has to cut my monthly cash by half. I can't blame him for that; it's his money. But it still puts me in a bucket of crap. I just can't seem to get out from under this load. If you have any of that Lord Calvert left I sure could use a hit."

"Yeah, just a second." Whoa, I'm not sure how to handle all this. Maybe we need to bring someone else in. She may require some help I'm not able to provide.

REFLECTIONS FROM THE EDGE

"Here you go, it's a bit strong. Tweets, honey, listen. Your dad is way off base. You want to teach. Because he has some hang-up about teachers doesn't mean he should try to keep you from teaching."

"I know. But it's not just that. He's scared that I'm going to end up in some back-country middle school, teaching a bunch of snot-nosed kids - as he calls all kids between kindergarten and tenth grade - how to tie their shoes, making only twelve thousand a year, and he'll have to support me until he dies."

"Can't he understand that you will be shaping the future? So maybe you won't be in the upper tax bracket. You will have one of the most important jobs in the world: educating the children who will one day be deciding whether or not his social security will be cut. Anyway, it's what you want to do."

"I don't think dad ever will understand why I want to be an educator."

"Chloe, maybe you need some outside help with all this. The fact seems to be that your father will not support your decision about your future. The question is what are you going to do about it? Let it slide as usual only to resurface later, change your decision, argue every time you talk to him? I'm sorry, but I don't have the answer, and I'm not sure that any advice I might give you would be the best possible. I think you're going to have to straighten this out before you can get back on track with Geometry or Cal. I don't really know what to say about the money part, you know I'll help out as much as I can. As far as Julie is concerned, you just need to have a woman-to-woman with her and put everything on the line. I have to think that talking to someone who is trained to handle things like this, who does so on a regular basis, would be a good thing. About us, I do want to be with you and stick by you in whatever you do."

"I'm not sure that I want to talk to anyone else about this stuff. Who would I talk to anyway? I don't have sixty dollars an hour for a shrink!"

"The folks in the counseling center are pretty good people. I would think that one of them would be ideal. It's free."

"Would you go with me?"

"Sure. It may do us both good."

"May I stay the night? I don't want to sleep alone, Zak"

"You needn't even ask Tweets. I like having you beside me"

She's even more beautiful

A Bit Perturbed...

There's a sandwich board sitting out in front of Hanner advertising "This Week In Athletics." Surely some of you have seen it.

The men's and women's basketball games are shown as well as the baseball game. I think it's great that someone over in Booster's is doing things to help make students more aware of athletic events.

However, I find some discrepancy in this act. Somebody please tell me why there was no mention of either of the two double header softball games going on Thursday and Saturday. It is our first home game of the season, don't we deserve a little support, too?

Really, I wasn't going to get on my soap box, but if I let this pass, I will not be able to forgive myself. I may sound a bit more particular about women's sports than men's and probably a great deal more about softball. I have good reasons; I play and see firsthand the way some athletes and their sports are treated differently.

I tried to reason that there wasn't enough space to put all the athletic events up. Or perhaps softball just takes a back seat because baseball and basketball are revenue sports.

I also know that ranked among crowd pleasers, softball isn't at the top of the list, but how many people who have come to see the team play really hated the game?

Being objective didn't make me feel any better so I called to complain and had to leave a message. I'm not trying to gripe or discourage anyone because I really can appreciate the hard work put into GSU athletics. It's just that the softball team, as well as swim team (who, by the way, have their conference meets this weekend) and other teams, work really hard to be competitive and it is a slap in the face when nobody seems to want to invest time and faith in you.

No, softball doesn't have their own field (nor does soccer) and the ones we play on need some work, but we can deal with it. Our white sliding pants turned pink last season when they were bleached and the ones ordered for this year don't have the same stripe. So we do not match and some of us look like the Pink Ladies, but we can handle that, too.

I keep hearing about how women's athletics have come a long way. I feel sure they have, although, not as far as they need to be. Someone told me last quarter that it was rebel's like me who would bring collegiate athletics down since I wanted equality. I never asked for equality; I only ask to be treated fairly.

No gender equity law can turn about the attitude people have against the so-called "lesser" sports, like softball, swimming, tennis, and soccer. There shouldn't have to be laws to force colleges into sponsoring and supporting teams other than football, basketball, and baseball. However, since you have to have the teams, why not have a little faith in all of them?

I really do not care about how much money goes into which sport or that the football recruits eat at nicer restaurants around town. My concern is with the attitude. I only wish for a little respect, in the gym, on the field, and, yes, even on the sandwich boards when people go to advertise.

Bench reserve Wallace plays the 'D'

True freshman Brian Wallace attempts to improve his scoring average, but realizes his role is on defense. (Photo by Jesse Stribling)

By Chris Sherwood
Staff Writer

It's always good when you have something in reserve. All the students at GSU know the players who start for the men's basketball team, but what about the guys who come off the bench to contribute to the Eagles success?

Brian Wallace, who is a true freshman, is one of the main players that Coach Kerns can go to in time of need.

Wallace, who is better known for his defense, has helped out the Eagles in many games this year. While playing in all of the Eagles' twenty-two games so far this season, Wallace has contributed an average of 3.3 points per game and has brought down 39 rebounds for an average of 2.0 a game.

"My role on the team is a defensive one mainly, and the offense comes around when you play good defense," commented Wallace.

The offense definitely came around for Wallace in the first game against Appalachian State and also the second game against The Citadel.

In the game against Appalachian State, Wallace had a terrific all around game:

he put in 11 points and grabbed five rebounds in only 17 minutes of play.

The Citadel came to Hanner on January 30th to play GSU, and Wallace had another great game. He put in seven points in 17 minutes to help the Eagles win an important conference match-up.

While Wallace has had a few better games so far this season, the two most important efforts came against Southern Conference teams.

The Eagles' starters cannot play the whole game without some break, and that is where players like Wallace become important.

"Our bench is very important because when we come in, we need to sustain the effort put forth by our starters," mentioned Wallace.

The type of contributions that Wallace has put forth do not necessarily show up in the scoring section, but are very important because he plays some key minutes while the starters rest.

This year has been a learning experience for Wallace with so many upperclassmen on the Eagles team, and he has had a pretty good year.

"My importance to this team has been purely defensive so far, and the offense sometimes comes with it," commented Wallace.

A few years ago, the GSU men's basketball team played a slower, more controlled style of ball. The main reason for this style was the simple fact that the Eagles had a 7'0" player and two other 6'8" players.

These last few years however, have proven that versatility is in Coach Kerns' dictionary. The Eagles' recruits have gotten smaller but much faster, which has allowed them to play more exciting basketball.

One of the reasons that Wallace chose to play his college ball at Southern was because of the up-tempo style. "I wanted to play at GSU because of the fact that Coach Kerns had an up-tempo style," commented Wallace.

Wallace along with the rest of the players off the Eagles bench will definitely play a key role down the road for GSU.

Their next home game in Hanner will be Saturday at 3 p.m. against VMI.

A wide reciever? Sinkfield ponders pigskins

By Chris Sherwood
Staff Writer

Schools have a lot of players who participate in two sports. Calvin Sinkfield has announced his plans for the fall to possibly include football.

Last Saturday, Jerry Pelphrey who plays for the ETSU basketball team learned that Sinkfield is strong enough to punish players on the football field.

Both Pelphrey and Sinkfield got ejected from the basketball game for a shoving match that was brought on by a hard foul by Pelphrey.

It is not so surprising that Sinkfield wants to play football for the Eagles. At Griffin High School, Sinkfield started as a defensive back and also played as a receiver. After his junior year at Griffin, Sinkfield decided that basketball was his calling as the Griffin team won the state championship in AAAA.

This decision was partially made last year as some of the coaches on the GSU football team approached him with the idea. Sinkfield, thanks to NCAA regulations, can participate in another sport for one year of eligibility.

"I was asked by some of the coaches on the football team last year about the possibility of playing, but I wanted to wait until my basketball college career was over," commented Sinkfield.

Sinkfield has expressed interest in playing somewhere in the secondary. "My first priority would be trying to play in the secondary, or maybe a receiver position," mentioned Sinkfield.

Sure, he can slam, but can he hook up with Joe Dupree or Charles Bostick on a long pass? Maybe time will tell. Or maybe Calvin's just pulling our leg. (Photo by Jesse Stribling)

Coach Kerns has not said anything to Sinkfield about his football choice, but he also has yet to find out about it according to Sinkfield.

Sinkfield is definitely big enough and quick enough for football, the only question is whether he will make the team, or will he move on to greener pastures?

Rugby Club takes Black Rose

By David Byrd
Staff Writer

The fifth annual Black Rose Rugby Tournament was held at GSU this past weekend. Hilton Head, Georgia Tech, Savannah College of Art and Design and GSU lined it up on the field with the Eagles emerging victorious and taking the first place trophy.

The first game began at 10 a.m. with Georgia Tech facing off against SCAD. Tech dominated the field during the first half, leading SCAD 10-5.

After the half, SCAD scored a try and kicked the extra point to tie the game. Tech pushed back down the field for another try, missing the extra point.

With three minutes left in the game, the Bees from SCAD pulled one last trick from their sleeve. They ran the ball across the field for a last score, giving them the victory. The final score was 19-15.

The second game was between GSU and Hilton Head. The first half passed scoreless for both sides. Hilton Head scored two tries giving them the 10-0 win.

Georgia Tech, left after their loss, not staying to enjoy the championship festivities. Hilton Head is not in GSU's division and couldn't play for the tournament cup.

Rip Us Off.

That's right — you heard right. Rip us off. Get something for nothing. Say hello to a friend. Find a roommate. Get a job. Find a home for a litter of kittens. Buy a wombat. Or sell your Beamer (right, like you expect us to believe you — and not your folks — actually have the title to that BMW). Regardless of your purpose (or even if you are a congenital liar like the Beamer owner), Georgia's liveliest classified ad section is for you. Students, faculty and staff can have 25-word action ads published for nothing. Fill out the little rectangles at left, and send your ad to G-A Action Ads, LB 8001, GSU or drop it by the Williams Center, Room 111. You MUST include your name and Landrum Box number to qualify for a freebie. Remember, keep it short: students, faculty and staff will be billed at 10 cents a word for words in excess of the 25 word limit.

The poll was released prior to Clinton's nationally televised address Monday night from the Oval Office.

Other reasons Ohioans expressed for disapproving of Clinton included perceptions that he is not addressing major issues (7 percent), his pro-choice stance on abortion (6 percent) and that he is a Democrat (4 percent).

Eleven percent of Clinton's supporters said they think he represents change, and 8 percent said they like him because he is a Democrat.

room for them.

We do have room for those who cherish the South and state's rights.

Liberals in the academia, such as a few professors and writers on campus at GSU, have the nerve to accuse state flag advocates of racial hatred. They should be forgiven, since they've been spoon-fed these worn-out stereotypes all of their lives, but it enrages me because I love Americans of all colors.

I also love my home.

when she's asleep. All the problems of the day, all the confusion, the pain, the worry and strain abandon the eyes, the curves, the lines of her face. The night seems to all as the pain of consciousness gives way to tranquil sleep.

I wish I could have been more helpful; but I'm afraid of giving the bad advice. I think that if a person, who is giving advice, has never experienced, first hand, the strife another is going through, the possibility of bad, due to erroneous comprehension is too great to be ignored.

Listen to her breathe; rhythmic, sustained, unhampered, contrary to the processes of our lives. I almost would prefer to stay up and witness this example of the only time I, we, let go of all problems and simply live, function without fear, sleep.

Good night cruel world. Tomorrow we meet again, in battle. And this time we've got a secret weapon, called a counselor.

RUGBY

SCAD and GSU drew the lines in Paulson Stadium, a first for the rugby squad. A warm but windy afternoon proved to be a kicking challenge for both teams, but GSU proved to be the hungrier of the two, slamming the Bees.

After having his first try called back for a foul, Chris Morrison quickly ran for another one, putting the Eagles on the board first.

The half ended with Duncon Wylie making a forty yard field goal attempt. Wylie used the tireless wind to his advantage to give GSU a 8-0 lead over SCAD.

After halftime, GSU blazed back onto the field, planning not to lose their lead. Quickly the backs found another hole in SCAD's defense and Keith scored by kicking the ball over the defenders' heads and stealing the ball from the their fumbling fullback.

Keith's efforts gave the team another try and boosted the lead to 13-0.

After Keith's try, a series of runs shot up the Southern score. Pete Zylstra scored by pushing his way over the SCAD defense and Jay Caldwell topped the score by kicking the extra points.

The score that GSU coach Steve Weeks, said "summarized the game" was made when Caldwell ran the ball to the one yard line and placed it down.

Thomas Woelber grabbed the ball and pushed two SCAD players, trying to put the ball down behind the goal line.

Weeks charged the SCAD players, pushing them aside and allowing Woelber to score.

Jay Caldwell scored the last try. The GSU Rugby team won the Black Rose tournament 30-0, victorious for the second year in a row.
