Gingrich modifies his stance on gays in the military

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House Speaker Newt Gingrich's support for restoring a ban on homosexuals in the military represents a shift. As recently as 1993, he said asking recruits about sexual orientation was taking things "radically too far."

Lauren Sims, spokeswoman for Gingrich, said Monday that Gingrich modified his position because of a court ruling last week and because military officers have advised him that homosexuality "was not consistent with the military lifestyle."

A federal judge said in a New York ruling last week that President Clinton's "don't ask, don't tell" policy was unconstitutional.

Gingrich said Sunday that the Republican-led Congress would seek to bring back the ban, reversing the administration's policy.

"I'd be very surprised if you don't see a Republican Congress saying that serving in the military has a unique set of requirements, and if the military feels that in fact it's inappropriate, we're willing to abide by the military judgment," he said.

A gay rights group, the Human Rights Campaign Fund, pointed out that Gingrich had earlier spoken in favor of at least partially lifting the ban.

Tuition hike proposed

By John Munford
Assistant News Editor

The Georgia University System Board of Regents will vote next week on a proposed tuition increase for the 1996 fiscal year of 5 percent for all students and a separate 15 percent increase for out-of-state students.

According to the Proposed Tuition Policy Direction, the purpose of raising the out-of-state tuition is to increase the amount that out-of-state students pay of their instructional costs. Currently out-of-state students pay for 75 percent of their actual educational costs, which the Board of Regents has calculated at $9,699 for a full school year. In-state students pay about 25 percent of those educational costs.

The 15 percent increase for out-of-state students would bring in approximately $4 million, which will offset the $4 million of losses the state will incur with the proposed 5 percent reduction in tuition for students at Georgia's two-year colleges.

The proposed increase will affect GSU's 1,982 out-of-state students, who now pay $1,504 per quarter for tuition and related athletic and activity fees. In-state students currently pay $626 per quarter for tuition and related fees.

The proposal also reveals that out-of-state students can expect further increases as the universities attempt to make out-of-state students pay for 100 percent of their educational costs by fall 1998.

John Nolen, GSU's vice

GEORGIA COLLEGES."

— W. DALE WASSON
ADMISSIONS DIRECTOR

president for student affairs, said he is worried that the raise in tuition will cost both potential students who would consider coming to GSU, as well as those already attending GSU.

"I understand the reasons for [the proposed tuition increases], but I am concerned from two perspectives. First, for students currently at GSU who are having a good experience and aren't aware of this thing coming, they may find out it will be difficult to be able to stay here.

"My other concern is that we will lose some students that would come to GSU otherwise. Only time will tell if it is approved. I'm sure we'll lose some students because one of our attractions is that we offer a reasonably-priced education. I'm also concerned about the potential effect on out-of-state students, including our international students. They bring different backgrounds and a special way of thinking to campus."

Admissions Director W. Dale Wasson said he doesn't think GSU will be hurt in the first year of the raise, but it would probably hurt GSU's enrollment in the long run.

"I don't know if it will hurt us the first year out because parents usually plan for tuition increases," Wasson said. "But by the time they're through [with the increases], it may have an impact on all the students that might have gone to Georgia colleges."

Wasson also said students on financial aid will not be affected as much as those who aren't, since the tuition increase will increase the number used to determine each student's need.

Sexual harassment explained

By Kim Wagner
Senior Staff Writer

In an effort to reaffirm the federal law and the Board of Regents policy on sexual harassment, a letter outlining the policy was recently sent out to all GSU departments.

"The (sexual harassment) policy is still the same, but we just wanted to reaffirm it and update the contact people," said Director of Affirmative Action Larry C. Taylor.

The policy details two types of sexual harassment, according to Taylor. Most people think of sexual harassment in the form of quid pro quo, meaning something for something. An example of this is if someone were to be offered a job promotion or a good grade in exchange for sex.

The other type of sexual harassment is frequently overlooked.

"People usually don't tend to think of sexual harassment as creating a hostile environment," Taylor said.

This could include things such as posters on the walls, the language that is used or comments that are made that interfere with people's performance.

"We're gearing up to bring in more people to educate (GSU) about sexual harassment," he said. "One of the roles of the office is to do a lot of educating. We base this on the assumption that if people know better, they do better."

According to the policy, unwelcome sexual advances, request for sexual favors, and other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature constitutes sexual harassment when submission to such conduct is made explicitly or implicitly a term or condition of an individual's employment or academic standing.

Sexual harassment could also be considered a factor when the submission to or rejection of such conduct by an individual is used as a basis for employment or academic decision affecting an individual. Also if such conduct unreasonably interferes with an individual's work or academic performance or creates an intimidating, hostile or offensive working academic environment, it can be considered sexual harassment.

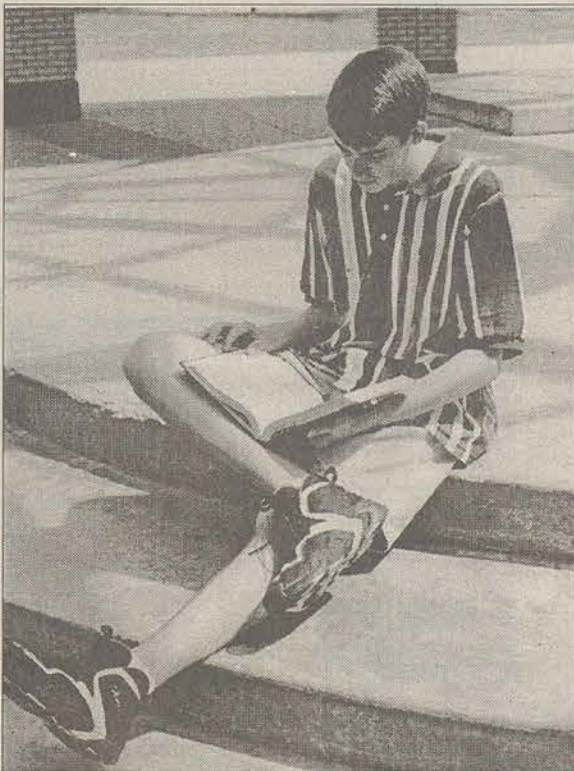

"This information was sent out because the different things that protect employees need to be posted in the place of employment for the employees to see," Taylor said.

"I think that sexual harassment parallels some behaviors that are socially acceptable in some settings," said Jane Thompson, assistant dean of students. "Sometimes flirting, no matter how distasteful, is accepted in the social scene, but it's not tolerated in the work place or the area of education."

The biggest misconception about sexual harassment, Thompson said, is that most people aren't familiar with the parameter of sexual harassment.

Another 'Boro student is SAT whiz

Statesboro High senior Brian Tanner scored a perfect 1600 on the SAT, making him the second SHS student to master the aptitude exam.

For the second consecutive year, a Statesboro High School senior and joint-enrolled student at GSU has scored 1,600 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, marking the school as the first in Georgia history to be honored with back-to-backs.

Brian Tanner, 17, SHS's 1995 soon-to-be valedictorian has taken the SAT every year since the seventh grade. In seventh grade, he made a 1080, and his scores have increased over the years until he finally hit the perfect 1600.

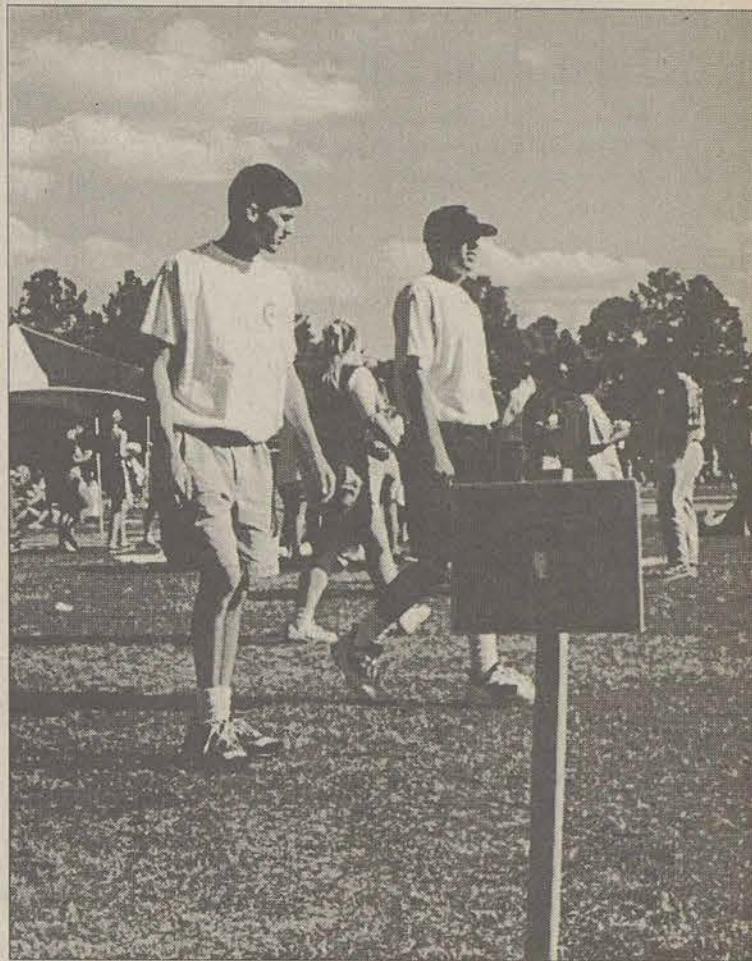

"My parents and my teachers did push me, but it was also a matter of me wanting to do my best," Tanner said. "It was a little of both."

Last year's winner, Chris Ricker, was enrolled at GSU through joint enrollment long enough to take introduction to art, introduction to philosophy and two English courses. Ricker, whose father is Curtis Ricker head of GSU's Learning Support, was a weekend dj at WVGS and Tanner's science contest partner at SHS.

Tanner, aside from being an outstanding student, is president of the SHS National Honor Society, captain of the school's Science Olympiad.

Reggae Fest fails

The power went out before the Wailers could play at Oxford Field Saturday, but it didn't stop a crowd of students from partying nearby throughout the afternoon.

By Erika Anderson
Staff Writer

Hundreds left the Union Productions sponsored Third Annual Reggae Fest disappointed after in-house and city power failures prevented all but one of the scheduled bands from performing Saturday afternoon at Oxford Field.

Initial problems came when the generator used for the bands was too small to handle the wattage of the festival.

But as UP officials attempted to use a backup plan, the city of Statesboro was hit with a 50 percent power outage.

Sources said an attempted backup plan had UP officials linking their power cables to a nearby College View apartment. Additionally, attempts were made to contact the Georgia National Guard for their assistance.

Jay Studstill, a regional sales manager for Georgia Power, said a transformer, located at South College Street and Vista Circle, was hit with a power surge when electrical lines connected to it ceased to work Friday. Because of the failure, the city and GSU was on a backup transmitter when an outage occurred again around 3:15 p.m. Saturday.

"Georgia Southern was in a site that was isolated from power," Studstill said. "We then brought them on gradually. This is a very rare failure."

Studstill said most of the campus buildings received power later the same day, excluding some of which that are unused during weekends.

Power officials worked to switch each area of Statesboro to three other substations, a little at a time, he said. The campus, which was the last to be switched, regained power by 6:30 p.m.

Ryan Hall, public relations coordinator for UP, said the city's power problems put a major roadblock in the festivities.

"We were ready to go with our backup plan," Hall said. "We couldn't help what happened with the Statesboro power."

Mystic Dino, a reggae band out of Jacksonville, Fla., was the only scheduled band who were able to perform. They began playing at 6:30 p.m., five and a half hours after their scheduled performance.

Carlo Mercieri, member of Mystic Dino, said Statesboro does not have everything together.

"It's quite frustrating," Mercieri said, "I find it an absurdity that the city is against music. Tomorrow we're playing in Gainesville where they have things together."

Others scheduled to perform were The Positions and featured band, The Wailers, Bob Marley's original band.

Because of the generator problems, Trey Britt, owner of Legends Bar and Grille and co-sponsor of the Reggae Fest, attempted to transfer The Wailers to Legends and let customers in at no charge, but Britt said the sound company was not willing to work with him.

"The people at PsMazo Sound were assholes," Britt said. "They wanted twice as much money to put the sound in. The Wailers wanted to play here, but I didn't have the p.a. to play them."

PsMazo, sources said, were paid $1,800 for moving music equipment.

Britt also said the initial problems with the generator posed the biggest problem.

"We could have had all the power in the world, and the bands still couldn't have played without the right power generator," Britt said.

Volunteers for the festival spent two days setting up for the event.

Ellen Waterson, assistant director of the Russell Union, said no one could be more disappointed than the UP students.

"We've been planning this event all year round," Waterson said.

Hall said although the event did not go as planned, UP was very pleased with the turnout.

"I estimate that at least 2000 people passed through here today," Hall said, "That's one of the biggest turnouts ever for a UP event."

Hall also said that festival attendees seemed to be having a good time, even with lack of live music.

"People stuck around even though the bands didn't go on," Hall said. "People were here, not only for the music, but for other students. We even had families and members of the Statesboro community. That was great."

Hall said although the initial problems with the generator were UP's fault, the power outage in Statesboro really "killed us."

"Those who do blame us will soon realize that it was beyond our control," Hall said.

VP Bradshaw moving on

By Jana Mobley
Staff Writer

Wilson Bradshaw, vice president and dean for graduate studies, will be leaving GSU in July to assume the responsibility of provost and vice president for academic affairs at Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania.

Bradshaw has been at GSU for the past five years. During this time he has worked to consolidate the graduate programs at Armstrong State, Savannah State and GSU, which has helped GSU to expand.

"I think that the Ph.D. programs that GSU has are a reaffirmation of the strength of the faculty and the program and will serve the needs of the region very well," Bradshaw said.

Over Bradshaw's five years at GSU, classes at Savannah increased by roughly 85 percent. He will assume more duties by transferring to Bloomsburg University which is part of Pennsylvania's state system of higher education.

"As provost, my sphere of responsibility will increase to include all areas of the university from academic affairs to student affairs, business and finance, where as at GSU my sphere of responsibility has been primarily in areas of graduate studies and research," he said.

Bloomsburg has a graduate and undergraduate enrollment of approximately 7,200.

Bradshaw, a graduate from Florida Atlantic University, earned his Ph.D. in psychology from the University of Pittsburgh.

He continued his post-doctoral research at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Although Bloomsburg University is much like GSU as far as being the traditional-type university, GSU will always be dear to Bradshaw.

"I will miss the student body that I've come to know and the positive changes and growth that are occurring at GSU," Bradshaw said.

1 New Hampshire Cook accused of adding some Tabasco

The Associated Press

LEBANON, N.H. — Michael Towne will be on the hot seat June 6.

That's when the 20-year-old cook is scheduled to go on trial on charges he assaulted two Vermont state troopers by spiking their breakfast eggs with Tabasco sauce.

Towne, a cook at Denny's in Lebanon, said the hot pepper sauce must have been left on the grill from an earlier order. He said when the troopers complained, the waitress offered them a free meal and he came out to apologize.

"One guy said it was spicy; the other said it was flavorful," he said.

Towne said he went back to the kitchen, but the troopers called him back.

"They asked me if I had a problem with cops and if I did it on purpose," he said. He said he had not and thought the incident was over.

The troopers didn't believe him, and went to the local police to complain.

"Both felt due to the intensity of the burning, it had to have been put on the food intentionally," a court affidavit said.

Troopers Timothy Cloutre and Michael Manning were served the fiery food after crossing the nearby border into New Hampshire for breakfast one morning in February. They said the eggs burned their mouths and gave one "stomach pain to the point of near vomiting."

Hillary 'not a dog,' say
GOP lawmakers

The Associated Press

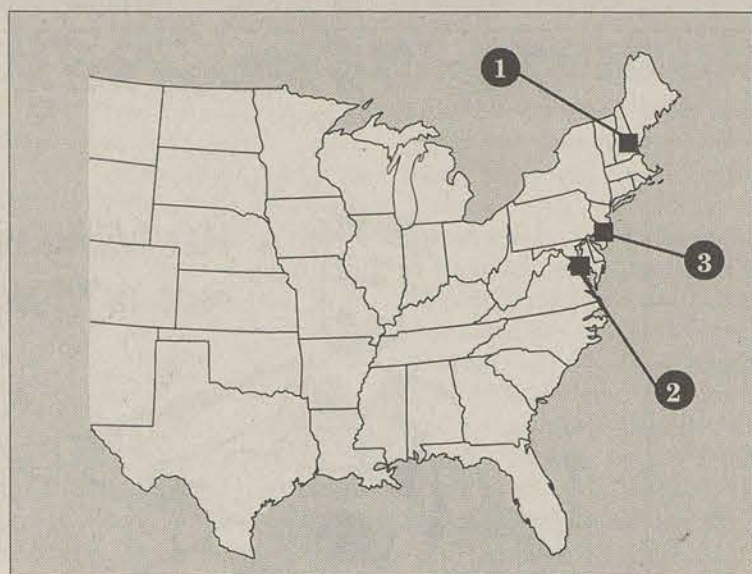

WASHINGTON — Do you think Hillary Clinton is pretty?

Posing as a publication for GOP teens, Spy magazine posed that question to new Republicans in Congress. Responses ranged from a grudging "not a dog" to a partisan "attractive lady but ... pretty liberal" to a comment on the size of her hips.

"She's not my type, let me put it that way," said Rep. Sonny Bono, R-Calif. "Obviously Bill thinks she's pretty but she wouldn't pass the test. ... Nothing personal."

"She's not a dog, but I — you know — she's not gorgeous. I'd give her a five," said Rep. Steve Chabot, R-Ohio.

Rep. Sue Kelly, R-N.Y. offered, "Yeah. Hillary's OK." Randy Tate, R-Wash., said, "Actually, Hillary Clinton is an attractive lady, but she is pretty liberal."

3 New Jersey
Prosecutor ticketed
going to crime scene

The Associated Press

SOMERVILLE, N.J. — Nicholas Bissell may have been going 72 mph in a 55 mph zone, but he thinks he had a good excuse.

Somerset County's top law enforcement officer was rushing to the scene of a robbery attempt at a Franklin Township jewelry store on March 14, during which the wife of the store owner was killed.

But homicide investigation or not, Trooper John Soulias pulled Bissell over on the southbound shoulder of Route 287 and gave him a ticket. Even when Bissell produced identification, the trooper wasn't dissuaded.

"I told him I was going to a homicide investigation. It didn't seem to make a difference," Bissell told The Star-Ledger of Newark.

John Hagerty, spokesman for the State Police, would not say whether there is a policy, written or not, on when speeding law enforcement officials should be ticketed.

"Troopers have wide discretion when they're out on the highway to make a determination how they will handle any given situation," he said. "If there's an alleged violation, the trooper is doing his job, regardless of who the violator is."

The George-Anne is looking for experienced photographers. If interested, come by room 223 to pick up an application.

piad and Math Team, and member of the Beta Club. He is also an active member at Eastern Heights Baptist Church and works 20 hours a week at the Statesboro Mall. When he finds spare time, Tanner enjoys playing basketball, street hockey and taking a ride on his rollerblades.

To get a jump on his college studies, Tanner is enrolled in statistics 255 at GSU via the joint enrollment program.

"I do my homework, don't study that much, and take the afternoons off to do what I want to do," Tanner said.

SHS Principal Allen Fort said that "holding a job, and doing homework both from high school and college keeps him pretty busy."

Tanner's plans for the future are not totally decided upon. He plans on attending Georgia Tech and majoring in biomedical engineering, but he is still pondering what he wants to be when he grows up.

"Brian is a great, average, super kid," Fort said. "You couldn't pick him out of a crowd. He is a regular child that works hard, studies hard and is very smart."

Although Tanner is very modest about his achievements, Fort said he is "a good kid" and deserves the recognition.

"He works hard, and has good teachers that challenge him," Fort said.

Indeed some of the credit for Tanner's performance is given to his teachers.

"SHS has good, outstanding teachers, that demand both work and good study habits," Fort said, adding that the attitude of the student plays an important role in success.

"These students have gone through school together for a long time, and there is a competitiveness to succeed," Fort said. "A lot of students want to do well, and it is the competition among the students that make them do well."

By helping SHS set a record goal, Tanner's accomplishments are also reflected through the community.

"I am as proud as I can be. This speaks well of the school, the people, and the community," Fort said. "In a town like Statesboro, this is not something expected. It is expected from metro area schools or private schools."

When asked how the school produces such remarkable students, Fort said, "I think it's the water in the water fountains."

Ricker, now 19 and currently enrolled at Georgia Tech, traveled over the weekend to Nashville, Tenn., to assist his school in a national college quiz bowl tournament. Georgia Tech finished second behind Harvard.

"We were friends in high school and we were on a bunch of teams together," Ricker said of his relationship with Tanner Sunday evening from on-campus residence. "I saw him a couple of weeks ago when he was up here. He was in town for the Science Olympiad."

Both Tanner and Ricker will be attending Georgia Tech when Tanner begins classes there this fall.

Looking back on his score, Ricker only said that "it's not that big of a deal anymore."

Board of Regents must avoid unfair tuition hike

Higher education has rarely been free, or even cheap, and it seems the cost is getting more prohibitive each year.

That cost may be going up again.

The Georgia University System Board of Regents will decide next week whether to raise tuition at state universities. Under a proposal currently being considered by the board, all students would pay an additional 5 percent in tuition beginning in the 1996 fiscal year.

But wait, because the proposal doesn't end there. The Board of Regents will also vote on whether to raise out-of-state tuition an added 15 percent, which amounts to a 20 percent per-year increase in the cost of a GSU education for out-of-state students.

Perhaps it should be noted that international students are still considered out-of-state for assessing tuition.

The additional increase on out-of-state students is being considered because the Board of Regents wants to reduce tuition by 5 percent at Georgia's two-year colleges and — if it is reduced — will face an estimated $4 million in losses. In other words, the proposed increase for out-of-state students will be used to pay for a tuition decrease for others. That's what upsets some students.

As for The George-Anne, we believe this further penalizes out-of-state students — who already pay 75 percent of the cost of their education — for merely being residents of some place other than Georgia.

Our suggestion for the Board of Regents is to vote against the 15 percent increase for out-of-state students, and find an alternative that will not impose higher costs on those who want to receive a higher learning degree from our southern state.

Gentlemen, if you take away the non-Georgians from our institution and others then you take away the culture that is an important part of the college experience.

We will be the poorer for it.

THE THIRD ANNUAL REGGAE FEST

Similarities between McD's and GSU uncanny

THE POINT CLEARLY MADE

DEREK LEWIS

Let's talk about a subject that is of utmost importance in the culture we thrive in today. No, it's not abortion or race relations or even that infamous catch phrase "political correctness." As a matter of fact, it isn't even about the O.J. Simpson trial.

Wait! Keep reading! I promise that it won't take a whole lot of your time and I promise to keep it short and sweet.

What I want to talk about is McDonald's Happy Meals.

Now, wait, keep reading.

The other day I was going to the drive thru window at a McDonald's in rural Georgia. I began to think back to the simple days, those days when happy meals were my sole reason for eating at McDonald's. I remember the endless begging and torture that I put my mother through until she agreed to take me and my brother to McDonald's for happy meals.

And what was the great thing about these happy meals? No, it wasn't that tasty fried burger or the soggy fries or even the free package of cookies that used to come with the happy meal. The great thing was two-fold: the prize and that neat little box that it came in. You remember the boxes right? You remember those clever build-a-city sets or the jokes or the find Ronald and the Fry Guys in the picture below games.

Well, what can I say, I was a bit nostalgic. So I asked for a happy meal hoping to spark some bit of childhood memories.

Much to my surprise, the happy meal has changed. It is no longer some super prize filled goodie box. In fact, it isn't even a box any more. The particular McDonald's that I went to served the happy meal in this white paper sack. The prize was some crappy cardboard picture of Ronald and the Fry Guys. Needless to say, I was a bit disappointed.

Well, like Annie Dillard's "Tree of Light" this sack of disappointment opened my eyes to the injustices of the world. That day I came back to my room to read The George-Anne (like we all do every Tuesday and Thursday right?).

The articles on the front page concerned fee hikes and the closing down of one of the theaters. I immediately saw the connection. Don't you?

People have become cheap. McDonald's, in an effort to reduce cost has eliminated those neat prizes and free packages of cookies (not to mention the box itself) in order to save money. The administration at GSU is doing the same thing.

They cut corners in the name of "progress" they blame proposed increases in minimum wage as the reason to increase meal plan prices. They shut down productions like the weekend movies because they don't make as much money as they used to. They do all of this for one reason: MONEY.

I have a hard time agreeing that GSU is in a financial dilemma when I walk by the faculty lot and see a red Camaro parked in the President's space. I have a hard time accepting the fact that this same university is having to cut corners to save money.

And what do we do about it?

Nothing.

The administration calls meetings to discuss fee hikes and who shows up?

Nobody.

How can the administration be blamed for running the campus the way they want? No one else wants to take the responsibility.

In my history class the other day, my professor said "If you do not take responsibility for your role in making decisions for the world around you then someone else will."

It all is relative.

If when McDonald's decided to change the boxes to bags people had protested and rioted, then the boxes would be back in the stores on the next day.

Likewise, if we would take charge and rant and rave and (gasp) actually show up for these information sessions then perhaps we would have more authority on our campus.

If we registered to vote and participated in local elections, then we would be listened to in this community. A Liquor Referendum vote would have been had with ease if students were seen as a threat.

So the next time you drive through McDonald's and get a happy meal and it is in some crummy sack remember fee hikes at GSU. Ask yourself where were you when those meetings were held.

The next time a law is passed that "oppresses" college students in Statesboro ask yourself when was the last time I registered to vote or actually voted in the city of Statesboro?

Think about it. The more involved you are on this campus in the inner workings and policy making the more those policies will reflect your individual wants and needs.

So do not key President Henry's Camaro when they raise student fees by 300 percent because as long as you let them get away with this attitude without complaining you are just as responsible as the policy makers are.

Easter is more than just bunnies and pretty eggs

Let's do a little word association. Easter. What's the first word that comes to mind? Maybe it was "egg" or "bunny." If so, you probably think like a majority of Americans. To most people, Easter is a time of egg hunting, festivities and family, and baskets brimming with candy. Easter is all of those things to me. I've eaten my share of jelly beans and I have had a number of fights with my brother over who found "THE" Easter egg first ("THE" Easter egg was a Leggs panty hose egg with money in it). Yet, there is something more, a meaning that has been lost amidst the shuffle of colored eggs and chocolate bunnies. Easter is a time for celebrating new life, the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the grave. How can it be that we are so excited about the Easter Bunny that we ignore the Savior of the world? With that thought, I reevaluated my own way of thinking through poetry.

IN OTHER WORDS

JANA NEWSOME

"The Day the Rose Bore My Thorns"

The greatest day of my life,
I wasn't alive at all.
It was a Friday afternoon that saw where fate would fall.
The day the Rose bore my
thorns,
With strength—yet humbleness.
A day filled with pain,
But softened by impending bliss.
The day the Rose bore my
thorns,
The day He suffered the blistering scorn,
The day the Rose met the tree...

Flowing with crimson deity,
The day they massacred perfection
with bitter pierced nails.
And jealousy
And hate
And foolishness prevailed.
It was His death that breathed the wind of life so deep in me.
The day the wilting Rose did die
to set me free.
How delicate the petals torn and ripped for me, a filthy and unworthy soul,
filled with apathy.
Tenderness and love did on this Rose thrive,
until the dirty world choked

Him with its foolish pride.
But through the stormy, raging blaze
the Lord held tight a seed, and rained His tears upon it to meet a world of need.
And in the third morning's dawning light,
I beheld a wonder,
glowing serenely—yet powerful as thunder.
A Rose, though surely not as before ...
For no thorns this Rose bore!
Before me was the ultimate strength, that healed the blind and blessed the meek.
And I shall never fail to seek the pure and thornless Rose.

This Easter, go ahead and gorge yourself on candy, but be sure to remember the cross and the price that was paid for us there. Better yet, remember the empty tomb and the victory that was won for us there.

SGA President leads in different manner

Dear Editor,
After reading Mr. Autry's column in the April 4 edition of The George-Anne, I was compelled to come forward in defense of OUR SGA President.

Students have found it necessary to scrutinize the actions, or as some would like to put it "lack of actions," of SGA. People tend to find fault in things they do not comprehend. So, to the Editor and others, as you focus on what you consider "lack of action" by the SGA, should also look in the mirror and take note of your own "lack of knowledge" about SGA.

I'm writing in an effort to make some students, Mr. Autry included, more informed of my understanding of the actions of the 1994-1995 GSU SGA. Each of the 48 SGA positions has its own responsibilities. All candidates are placed on a ballot and these posts are filled via annual elections where registered students are given the chance to vote for the candidate of choice.

Ryran Traylor is/was not in competition with past SGA presidents. The past accomplishments of SGA does not negate, nor diminish, Ryran's accomplishments during his term. Each year is different, just as each year's officers are different. Besides "outward" accomplishments of past officers, Ryran has been able to lead this year's officers in a different manner — a backstage approach. Ryran believes doing what needs to be done is more important than showing it.

Ryran, and fellow officers, have concentrated on student counseling. SGA has spent much time and effort in improving the relationship between GSU and Statesboro. In order to improve relations, Ryran has had several meetings with Mayor Averitt, the Exchange Club, and various Statesboro merchants. SGA Executive officers, along with Ryran, have attended statewide conferences, insuring the GSU student voice is heard in Georgia. By participating, Ryran and fellow officers have opened major doors for future SGA officers. Through volunteer services, SGA has given the city a chance to see GSU students more positively.

More students participate in CRI than vote in SGA elections, so, therefore, in order to gain support and participation, SGA has participated in athletic events. Rather than scrutinizing, maybe Mr. Editor should focus more attention on lack of concern and participation.

Mr. Editor, you have the capacity to influence many students across the campus. Students are not only influenced by the paper's accuracy, but also by its content which is a big responsibility. Perhaps you can better serve GSU students by lending your "expertise" to the Association during its tenure as opposed to scrutinizing at the end.

If something goes wrong with The George-Anne, all fingers point to you. But is this the way it should be? No. If something is wrong, the Managing Editor, News Editor and Staff Writer are also to blame. The blame and glory rests on the shoulders of the entire staff, not just the Editor — likewise for SGA officers. You, as chief officer of an organization, should be the last one to point fingers at Ryran, the chief officer of another organization. One day, maybe you will be scrutinized for actions of an entire group and understand how unfair your scrutiny was.

Ryran, as I, was taught it is not necessary to put down others to make ourselves seem better. I feel you, as Editor, used this column to inform readers of your 11 awards and 7,000 circulation. In order to make your own accomplishments seem greater, and to gain recognition, you decided to bad mouth SGA and its President. That is not admirable.

Mr. Autry, if I were to pass you on campus, I would not recognize you. But does that mean you have done any less as a newspaper editor? No! Why must SGA broadcast their accomplishments to gain the respect of students?

The President did not take this campus post for popularity, nor did he take this position to gain recognition amongst students. If we directly equate recognition and popularity to success and accomplishments, then we elected the wrong man.

Editorial wrong; lack of patrons closed Chena's

Dear Editor,
At the end of winter quarter, on Tuesday, Feb. 6, you ran an editorial and a cartoon both lamenting the demise of Chena's Cantina. While personally we agree that the closing of this establishment is a loss for the city of Statesboro, we heartily disagree with your analysis of the failure.

Readers of your editorial were led to believe that this closing is part of some conspiratorial effort on the part of townsfolk to deprive students of a popular hangout! Nothing could be farther from the truth. A basic tenet of a free market system is that people may start businesses and others may patronize them (with a few legal exceptions) as they see fit. When a business such as Chena's Cantina closes, it is because not enough paying customers showed up often enough to warrant the owners' time and effort. As we are personally acquainted with the owners of Chena's Cantina, we know this to be the real reason for the closure.

Simply put, if enough people share your tastes and act on them to buy the goods or services of firms that cater to those preferences, those businesses make a profit and stay in business. If the places you enjoy are closing, it is because the "we" in your "we have nowhere to go" statement are not numerous enough to justify the expense of operating the establishment. From what we gather, your idea of just what it is that constitutes a "college oriented attraction" was not shared by approximately 13,900 other GSU students.

We encourage the editors in the future to be less inflammatory and better educated in analyses of situations such as this. Openings and closings of this sort are a natural and expected part of our economic system.

We also encourage students and faculty to be more loyal and more frequent patrons of establishments like Chena's that provide a high quality product. Chena's closing is no one's fault but our own.

Adoptee shares hope for seekers of birth parents

Dear Editor,
As an adoptee who recently found her birth mother and father, I feel an obligation to other adoptees who are looking for their biological parents to share the resources that I found so valuable in my search.

If the adoption was finalized in the state of Georgia, the Adoption Reunion Registry/State Adoption Unit, 2 Peachtree Street, 13th Floor, Atlanta GA 30303, is able to conduct a search for the birth parent regardless of where that parent might be currently living or where the parent was living at the time of the adoption.

Unfortunately, there is a long waiting list (up to four years) if the adoptee wants to have the search conducted for free. If the adoptee is willing to pay a fee of $205, a search will be conducted immediately through a private investigator hired by the state. Most investigators charge upwards of $2,000 so this option is worth considering. By the way, this organization was the one that located my birth mother.

If the adoption was not finalized in Georgia, call the Department of Family and Children's Services in the state where the adoption was finalized and they may be able to help you or direct you to someone who can.

Another option is the International Soundex Reunion Registry, Box 2312, Carson City, NV, 89702. This organization does not conduct searches but uses a computer system to match the adoptee's name with any birth parent who may have registered. The service is free, and it is very successful.

Also, if the adoptee has a name to go on, Cambridge Statistical Research Associates, 23 Rocky Knoll, Irvine CA 92715, will scour national databases for an address or phone number. The fee is $15.

If all else fails, there is the option of using a private detective agency that deals specifically with adoption cases. The Rat Dog Detective Agency/Adoption Search Division, 336 Bon Air Center #145, Greenbrae, CA 94904 has a high success rate in adoption cases, but the fees are high.

I would also like give two pieces of advice to any adoptees considering a search. First, don't think you need a lot of information in order to begin a search. I didn't have any.

Secondly, do go to at least two counseling sessions. The staff at the GSU counseling center is equipped to talk about both your motivations and expectations, and these things need to be thoroughly explored before the search begins.

Autry simply forgot to research, report facts

Dear Editor,
I may live in a fantasy world, but for some reason I believe in the power of words. They have such an effect on people — positive or negative, they always leave an impression. As far as your position in the media goes, you also carry a heavy weight with this responsibility. As editor of a newspaper that is circulated to thousands of people, you not only have a responsibility to report the facts, but to also report them accurately. This is an area where I feel that you have a great weakness. On April 4, you wrote the article "SGA under scrutiny, like all of us." You spoke of all the lack of accomplishments that SGA has offered this year. Well, I am a new member of SGA senate and I have already seen many things happen.

The first thing that I have seen happen is the giving and support we offer to the community. Whether it's painting children's faces at a carnival or spending hundreds of dollars on smoke detectors in the hopes of saving one person's life, student government is there for the community, and every ounce of dedication and understanding is an accomplishment.

The outside community is not the only group we are in contact with. In your article you insinuated that SGA does nothing for the GSU community. I suppose you forgot to research properly because if you had, you would have discovered the many ways in which SGA is out there. This past quarter we held two events to try to reach out to the student body to find out what they need. We held a concern table outside the Russell Union to answer any questions or concerns students have about their school. This was so successful that our very own Ryran Traylor, President of SGA, held a forum in the Union with a panel of faculty to answer questions. Mr. Traylor is there for the community; maybe you should try to give the community a little bit of what it needs — like he does.

The community needs the accurate facts and positive reinforcement — neither of which I feel you offer. You should come to an SGA meeting to see all the accomplishments that we have on a weekly basis. Maybe then I would honor your opinion about SGA and Ryran Traylor, but until the day I see you in the back of the room, my only advice to you would be: the pessimistic attitude of the glass being half empty instead of half full won't get you very far in life.

Allison Oasis
SGA senator

Rhymes on baseball

A is for arrogance — ah, the players with their bats should be swatted.

B is for beaches, and bikinis and beer — better than baseball, which should be boycotted this year.

C is for comic, which the strike had become.

D is for Don Fehr, the player's representative — call him Mr. dumb and then dumber, and then still dumber some.

E is for egomaniacs, both players and owners.

F is for fans, who've again been made Gomers.

G is for Glavine, with his head like an onion.

H is for hell, and a pox on baseball's butt like a bunion.

I is for injunction, a small dose of reason.

J is for the judge who jumpstarted this season.

K is for strikeouts, if you like to keep stats.

L is for a lockout of all the twisted prats.

M is for millionaires, who populate the game by the score.

N is for the negro leagues players, who played well under worse conditions by far.

O is for obscene, the salaries being paid.

P is for the players, who were too selfish to realize they had it made in the shade.

Q is for quibbling — ah, if only it was that.

R is for replacement players, who never got an official at bat.

S is for scorn, heaped on the scabs in great lots.

T is for them (see "R" above), who I'd rather watch.

U is for umpires, who also may soon leave.

V is for Venezuela, which is where they should go, I believe.

W is for whining, of which the players did much.

X is Xenophanes — seems those ancient Greeks never struck.

Y is for Yogi — as in Berra, not the bear,

Z is for zero, which is about how much I care.

(Note: As the sun gets closer and the weather gets hot, it should be pretty clear that a Shakespeare I'm not.

A Dr. Seuss maybe, if I really tried hard. But like Deion Sanders, my head's full of lard.

But baseball these days has me really pissed off. And I hope one by one, all the players get lost. The owners can go, too, for all that I care, especially since they are unwilling to share.)

Athletic Director on future of GSU sports

By Jeff Whitten
Sports Editor

First in a three-part series

G-A: First off, about the name Bucky. Is that a nickname?

BW: That was a name my father gave me. My real name is David, and my mother's father's name is Bowman, kinda formal, and my Daddy just liked Bucky and I've been called Bucky ever since.

G-A: So you've been called Bucky since you were a kid?

BW: Yeah, but when I'd move usually people would call me David for about two weeks until they found out my name was Bucky then they'd call me Bucky.

G-A: What's your favorite sport?

BW: Well, my favorite sport ... I was a football player in college, football and baseball. I really like all the sports.

G-A: What's the best thing about your job?

BW: The best thing about my job is that I just love athletics.

G-A: What's the worst thing?

BW: I guess the worst thing about my job is the tarnishing of amateur athletics by people who want to influence it from the outside.

G-A: Like agents?

BW: Agents and boosters who want to fire coaches, people who want to manipulate the system, who don't understand the true beauty of amateur athletics, that we're here so our best kids play against somebody else's best, and that there's a lot more than winning and losing in sport. That we're dealing with people, we're dealing with their development and we're dealing with the way they grow, we're dealing with setting the right kinds of principles and ideals for them.

And when you look at some of the things that we go through, some of the things that, ah...the way that intercollegiate sport ... some of the scandals, some of the things we have, that's the bad part about it. 'Cause the kids that go through that, what type of principles are they coming out with?

You know, when they know the coach is cheating, or they know you can get through life without working just because you're a player, you're not really doing those people any good.

G-A: A survey was taken of GSU boosters. What were some of their complaints (about football)?

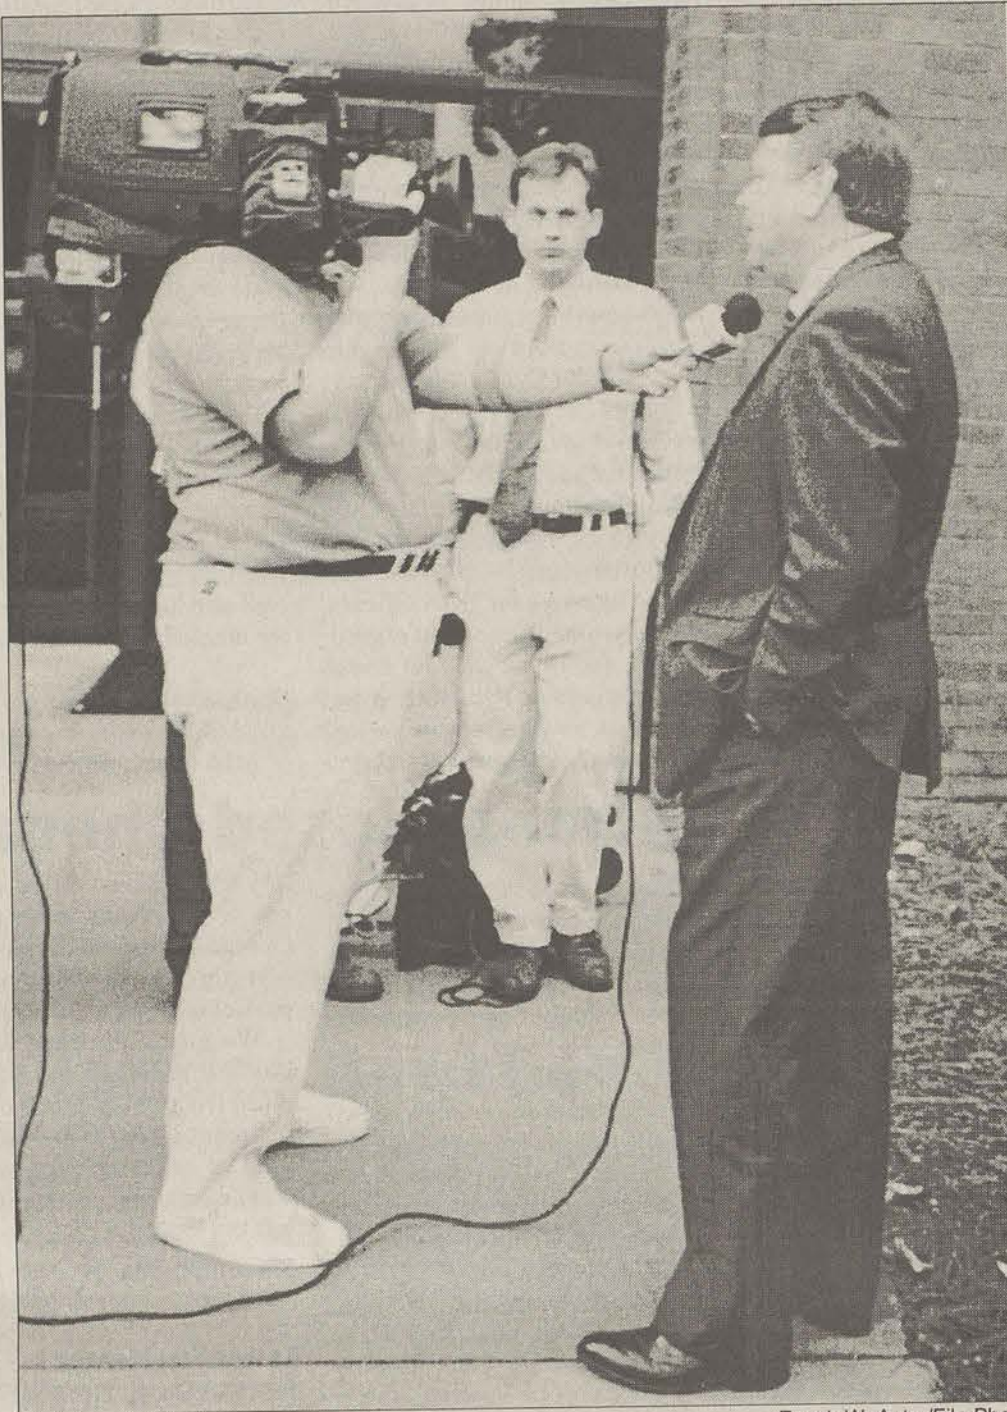

BW: Basic complaints were the win loss record and the fact that the play was boring. We weren't wide enough with our attack, throwing the ball.

G-A: The new offensive coordinator, Coach Dickey, is supposed to fix that, right?

BW: Well, we think so. We moved him into the offensive coordinators position, he was an offensive coordinator at Kentucky and even though they didn't win they scored points. And he played quarterback at Tennessee, and I think he'll add a perspective...he is very much of an option...

G-A: They had an option offense at Kentucky, right?

BW: Right. So he knows how to teach

Dr. Wagner faces the media after basketball scandal surfaces.

the option, knows how to throw out of the shotgun, so I think that one of the things that that will do, even if it doesn't improve our offense, it will improve our defense, because we run the ball against our defense so much that our defense prepares to stop us, then they get into a game where people throw the ball 40 times and it puts them at a disadvantage.

If we're throwing the ball more in the spring and the early fall they're going to learn more on how to cover the pass.

G-A: Briefly describe — in layman terms — the role of the athletic department as a part of the university.

BW: Okay. We are tied directly to the mission of the institution. We take the mission of the institution and then from that we'll develop our athletics mission.

So GSU as a regional university, a teaching university, will be interested in the growth and development of the individual first, we then look in athletics...see in order for us to be congruent with the mission of the institution then our concerns have to be for the student-athlete first, for their growth and development, and then we move to the safety of our players, that they play under safe conditions and have proper medical support for them, and then we move into — as a regional university — we want to serve this region. We want to provide sports programs that the people in the region play, we want to provide those entertainment — so to speak — activities for people in the region. The football games, the basketball games.

Everything we do should come from the mission statement of the institution.

G-A: So is it safe to say your primary concern is the student-athlete?

BW: That's where we're starting in. If we are doing...if our program is treating the student-athlete properly, if our program, when that student-athlete is through he feels good about it, we've taught him the proper principles, and we've helped him through those developing years of the early twenties, and they go away from here feeling good about that experience, then we feel we've provided a good experience and that's basically our goal, first and foremost.

We hope in there that if we do things right we believe the right way to do it is the way that will also show up in the win-loss column...that there aren't any shortcuts to winning.

Winning comes from having good morale, from treating people properly, good coaches morale, good player morale, if they feel good about themselves they'll play hard every time out. If you play hard every time out then you when some of the games that you shouldn't win and you don't lose the ones you shouldn't lose, and if you do that over a period of time you'll end up on top.

G-A: Do you see us making the playoffs this year?

BW: My view of athletics right now is that we grew very fast, as the university did, through the '80s. We had four national championships. We got to the point where now its...we're thinking about do we want to go I-A? What's our next step?

And the NCAA has been kind of in turmoil as far as restructuring Division I-A.

They've been talking about it for about six or seven years, that they will reduce the number of teams in I-A, which means several of those teams will have to move down to I-AA. The Mid-American Conference, the Big West, some of the smaller independents.

We felt like the future was so precarious at that point that if we move up to I-A, and spend the money and do everything we need to do to move to I-A, we may find in a year or two that whole group we moved up to is moved back to I-AA.

So until that clears up, we've just kind of sat here. And where we were always developing and building through the '80's, we got to 1990, 1991, we get into the Southern Conference, we say that's our next move, because you either stay the same or you get better (laughs). I mean, excuse me, you never stay the same, you either get better or you get worse.

So we grew, and we're national champions, and we get up and Marshall buys the national championship game from us, so we lose that sucker and that doesn't help. And then we go 7-4. And we go 7-4 again, and some of the luster starts to come off.

At the same time, we can't determine where our next step is because the Division I-A situation is such that we make a move to I-A and we're not sure it's gonna be there when we get there.

So we're kind of had to sit here for two, three, four years and we haven't been able to have a vision of our future. Well, some of those things are straightening out. And, about the same time, we're gonna be changing coaches, we've changed coaches in basketball — but Coach Kerns was 62 and would probably have retired at the end of this year anyway, it would've been better if it had happened that way — and in football we're ready to do something or we'll probably have a change there.

We can't go 6-5 again, we can't go 7-4 again. If we go 8-3 we're in the playoffs and then we got to play good when we get there.

At the same time we're seeing restructuring the NCAA being voted on, probably in January, so we'll have a different structure of the NCAA and probably have a better idea of where GSU is going to fit. Then probably, in the next year, Division

SPRING PRACTICE

Players gearing up for 1995 season

By Scott Garner
Senior Staff Writer

Ahh, the sights, sounds and smells of spring: beachgoers in bikinis, flowers, bees, pollen, the happy chatter of young couples in love. And, of course, large, sweaty men in pads massacring each other in the hopes of catching a coach's eye....

Spring football practice at GSU began in earnest last Friday when the team began practicing in full pads, and head coach Tim Stowers is excited about this spring's drills.

"We're still pretty rusty at most positions," Stowers said Friday. "But I'm really pleased at the effort and considering that this is the first day in pads, I think we're doing pretty good."

Last year GSU players and fans suffered through a tough 6-5 season, and although the Eagles have still never experienced a losing season in their modern football history, it's obvious that neither the coaches or players are content to be middle-of-the-pack.

"The 1994 season resembled the 1993 season in a lot of ways, except that where we got all the good breaks in 1993, we didn't get them in 1994," said Stowers.

The greatest change GSU fans can expect to see this next year is in the expanded offensive attack. In the off-season, Southern football added Daryl Dickey as their offensive coordinator. Dickey brings with him a philosophy that will be more liberal with the use of the passing attack.

"We're still going to go with the running game as the base offense, but we'll also be mixing in the shotgun at some points," said Stowers.

Charles Bostick will also be returning to GSU for an almost unheard-of sixth year of eligibility. Kenny Robinson is still the established starter, but Bostick is expected to play a key role through the season.

"Charles could come in at another position, but he won't be changing positions," said Stowers. "Our offense dictates that we keep two quarterbacks at all times."

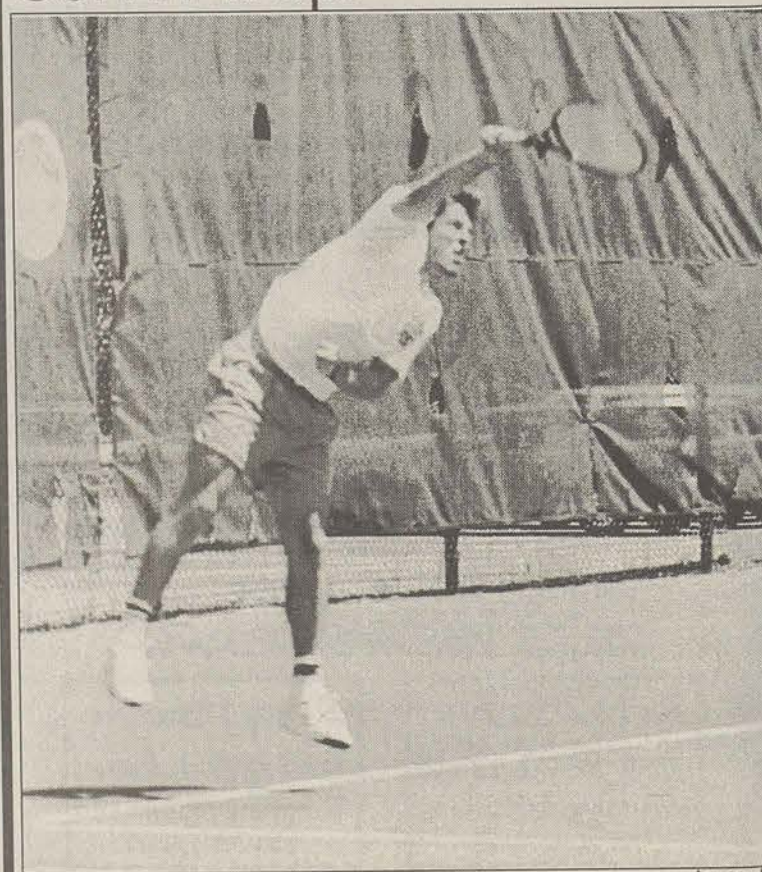

And as for those "breaks" that a team needs, coach Stowers believes that tough mental preparation will keep his team competitive late in ballgames.

"We've talked about maintaining great effort in the fourth quarter and mentally overcoming fatigue," said Stowers.

With just over 140 days until the opener with South Carolina State University, the GSU coaching staff still has miles to go with the team, but coach Stowers is optimistic.

"The schedule dictates that we get out and win some tough games early, and if we do that and maintain our mental toughness, then we should be all right," he said.

Servin' it up!

Library to add new IBM-compatible computers by fall

By Stephen Kirven
Staff Writer

The Henderson Library staff is working on re-arranging the first floor to add approximately 75 new IBM-compatible machines to the LRC. The project is not expected to be completed until fall.

In order to make room for the additional computers, bound periodicals dated earlier than 1971 will be moved from their current location on the first floor to the fourth floor which is currently occupied by Records Management and Archives. These periodicals will still be available, but on a request basis.

"The total number of computers may or may not go up," said Julius Atrial, director of Henderson Library. "The plan is to replace all of the older machines with faster machines."

The move is projected to begin sometime in mid-May or late-May.

The new computers will include a graphical interface into the World Wide Web, a menu-based system for accessing items on the Internet, as well as the current services offered by the Henderson Library.

An undetermined amount of the older computers will be moved into faculty offices and other areas of the library for student use.

Once the space now occupied by the periodicals is cleared, study tables will be put in until the plans can be finalized and the installation of the new computers takes place. The plans won't be finalized until the end of spring quarter when the library can determine how much money it can allocate to the project.

"Probably the students who see the ultimate benefit of this will be the ones who will be here in the fall," Atrial said.

GSU honors Women's Awareness Week

By Kim Wagner
Senior Staff Writer

"Lasting Traditions Through Changing Times" is the theme of the fourth annual Women's Awareness Week. The events of the week will be highlighted with keynote speakers, motivational speeches, a research breakfast, various authors and personal narratives from women teachers from April 10-14.

"We try to have an assortment of programs to cater to a variety of needs," said Stephanie Ray, coordinator for the Office of Multicultural Affairs. "We also try to get as many GSU faculty, staff and students to do presentations during the week."

Highlights of the week include author and professor Elizabeth Nunez. Nunez will speak Wednesday at 7 p.m. about her most recent book, "Bruised Hibiscus," which tells the story of two women who are from different classes and ethnic backgrounds, but who are affected similarly by abuse and oppression.

On Thursday at 7 p.m., Natalie Adams, GSU assistant professor of middle grades and secondary education, will participate in, "Womentalkin': A Readers' Performance of Teachers' Stories," a performance based on the personal narratives of four women teachers.

"Re-Engineering the 21st Century: A Role for Women in Tomorrow's World" will be the topic on Friday at noon. During this presentation, Carolyn C. Thorsen, director of K-12 programs at the Center for Education Integrating Science, Mathematics and Computing at Georgia Tech, will talk about the roles women play and will play in science and technology, fields traditionally male-dominated.

The university-wide committee, consisting of faculty, staff and students, has been working on this year's events since fall quarter.

Any questions about this year's events or anyone interested in serving next year's Women's Awareness Week committee should call Ray at 681-5409.

THE DATING GAME

ASHLEY HUNT

Dating, frankly, is a pain

Dating. Single. I hate those words. They sound so negative.

Maybe it's because now those words describe me. My boyfriend and I have temporarily split up after two years of dating each other only. So now I am dating again.

I hated it the first time and now I hate it again. It's a pain. And it is hard to find a good decent guy, if they exist. And if they do, they're hard to find.

So far I haven't had much luck finding a date. And the guys I have found are immature and irresponsible: in other words, jerks. But maybe I have been looking in all the wrong places. I don't know where to look.

I have many romanticized visions of love and dating, things that I didn't have with my last boyfriend. Maybe I am unrealistic, but there is nothing wrong with wanting it all, is there? I want some man to come and sweep me off my feet, one whose eyes light up when he mentions my name, one who will tell me he loves me every day. Yeah, I know you're thinking, "What book has she been reading," but I know it can happen.

It happened to one of my dearest friends. After several failed relationships, Jane found the perfect guy. They have only been together a couple of months, but they truly love each other. Their eyes light up when each other's name is mentioned, they tell each other they love each other every day, and I could not be happier for them. She found it, so I know it exists.

Dating is a scary thing, but to meet that special someone, you have to do it.

Meeting people is worse. I am so shy. I have heard so many horror stories about dating and meeting guys. A friend of mine was in the same situation I'm in. Sarah and her boyfriend hadn't exactly broken up when she met this really nice guy. Well, a week later, Sarah and her boyfriend broke up. So she was free to date other people, including the other guy. Well, guess what? He wasn't interested in her anymore. Now that she no longer had a boyfriend she wasn't interested to him.

I don't understand why guys are like that. Does it make them feel good that they can do this to girls? This really hurt my friend. Not all guys are like that. You just need to get back out there and keep looking and keep looking and maybe, just maybe, you will find the perfect date.

Editor's Note: The Dating Game is a new advice column for The George-Anne. If you have a dating horror story, some good dating tips, or advice on how to handle rejection, drop us a line at Landrum Box 8001 with your dating frustrations or fantasies.

Coalition urges people to donate their organs

GSU News Service

The Georgia Coalition on Donation, a state wide alliance of organ procurement organizations and transplant centers, is launching a campaign to coincide with National Organ and Tissue Donor Awareness Week, April 16-22.

The Georgia Coalition is affiliated with the national Coalition on Donation.

"The primary objective of the Georgia Coalition on Donation is to ensure that every individual in the state understands the need for organ and tissue donation and accepts this concept as a fundamental human responsibility," said Lisa Tunnell, spokesperson for the Georgia Coalition on Donation.

Their theme is share your life, share your decision, which will be utilized in such things as public service announcements and promotional events.

The coalition also will unveil the Tin Man robot, an icon symbolizing the Wizard of Oz character.

The robot will help persuade individuals to sign organ and tissue donor cards.

Organ donors are desperately needed. According to the United Network for Organ Sharing, more than 2,000 people die each year waiting for an organ transplant. Thousands more are waiting on tissue transplants.

"The most recent statistics demonstrate the shocking need for organ donors in the United States," said Tunnell. "The demand far outweighs the supply with only a small percentage of all eligible potential donors actually donating their organs. As a result, the number of actual organ donors increased less than one percent in 1994."

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

For fast relief from the nagging ache of taxes, we recommend TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs are tax-deferred annuities designed to help build additional assets—money that can help make the difference between living and living well after your working years are over.

Contributions to your SRAs are deducted from your salary on a pre-tax basis. That lowers your current taxable income, so you start saving on taxes right away. What's more, any earnings on your SRAs are also tax-deferred until you receive them as income. That can make a big difference in how painful your tax bill is every year.

As the nation's largest retirement system, we offer a wide range of allocation choices—from TIAA's traditional annuity, with its guarantees of principal and interest, to the seven diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity. What's more, our expenses are very low,* which means more of your money goes toward improving your future financial health.

To find out more, call our planning specialists at 1 800 842-2888. We'll send you a complete SRA information kit, plus a free slide-calculator that shows you how much SRAs can lower your taxes.

DIRECTOR

I-A will have a membership structure change.

Right now you have the major conferences, The Big East, the ACC, the SEC, the Big Ten, the PAC 10, the Big Eight, which is now the Big Twelve, and the Western Athletic Conference, seven conferences, with another conference that has Houston and Tulane and Southern Miss and that group that's just forming...

G-A: The Metro...?

BW: Well it used to be the Metro, I can't tell you what the name of it is but it's just forming.
But those eight conferences plus
Notre Dame will likely be Division
I-A.

G-A: Exclusively?

BW: Exclusively. Yeah.

Now, your Mid American Conference, your Big West conference, your people like, you know, here's Central Florida, they're gonna make a big move and go Division I-A and I said you'd better wait now. Because it's gonna come back down to you. They're gonna have to come back down to us.

Or, we're either gonna end up with a more elite group of I-AA schools, or it will be easier for us to join a I-A associates group.

The I-A associates group will be a group of schools that gives 70 or 80-percent of the grants-in-aid that the Division I-A schools get, and who's games will count as I-A games for the I-A teams.

We won't be able to be eligible for the bowl games they have set up to work out their national championship.

We may be able to have bowl games of our own.

So we will be structured just like a Division I-A conference.

Or, we may have the Southern Conference playing the winners of the Yankee Conference, or the winners of the Mid-American Conference in a bowl game in Florida instead of having a championship game.

So we will be structured like a I-A team and what this will permit us to do, it will permit us to play more I-A games.

This year we couldn't get a I-
A game because our games don't count.

When our games start counting then we can play...but we don't have to win eight games minimum to get in the I-AA playoffs.

Now we can play two or three Floridas and Alabamas and North Carolina States, which would help us financially....

Editor's note: In Thursday's edition, Dr. Wagner's comments on football, the fairness of Title IX — also known as gender equity — the school's investigation into the basketball program and more will be published. The interview was conducted April 7.
