Federal grant to improve education in Southeast

The Associated Press

GREENSBORO, N.C. — The University of North Carolina at Greensboro will receive a five-year, $7.3 million federal grant to continue a project to improve students' math and science performance in six states, including Georgia.

The U.S. Department of Education made the grant to the Eisenhower Consortium for Mathematics and Science Education, which functions under the UNGC School of Education.

It will aid students in grades K-12 in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina and South Carolina.

"Important steps are being taken through this initiative to enhance mathematics and science education in the Southeast," said UNGC Chancellor Patricia Sullivan.

"While the need for improving scientific, mathematical and technological literacy and knowledge is a national problem, it is especially serious in the Southeast. The region's economic prosperity is linked to a work force that is well versed in mathematics, science and computer technology," Sullivan said.

Francena Cummings, director of the consortium, said the public needs to be concerned about improving math and science education.

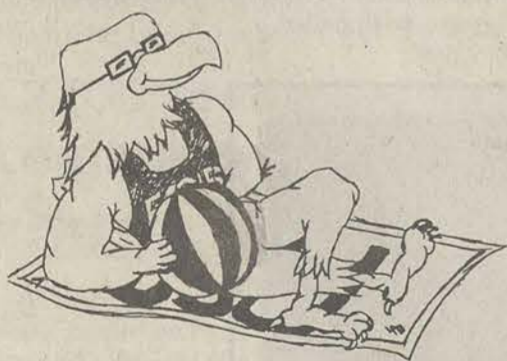

"The Southeast has a tremendous stake in the success of this endeavor," she said.

GSU wins council seats

Director of Stores and Shops Wendell Hagins defeats incumbent John Newton; student Cory Andrews elected

By Ashley Hunt
News Editor

GSU Director of Stores and Shops Wendell "Wendy" Hagins and graduate student Cory Andrews have now captured seats on Statesboro City Council.

Hagins beat incumbent John Newton for the District three seat with 121 votes or 53.53 percent of the vote compared to 98 votes or 43.36 percent for Newton.

"I am really excited," Hagins said. "I work at GSU and now I can serve the citizens of GSU and Statesboro. I hope I can live up to the trust and faith that the people put into me."

Hagins said he was surprised at the outcome and said he feels "very fortunate."

Newton would not comment on the election.

Andrews, treasurer of the political action committee Students for Statesboro, ran unopposed in student-majority District Four and had 76 votes, or 75.24 percent of the vote. There were only 101 ballots cast in his district.

14.85 percent of the votes were under-votes. These are the votes that were not counted and were unqualified write-in candidates that voters wrote in on their ballots at the polls.

The write-in candidates in District Four were Robert Martin, Shannon Thatcher, Robert D. Ward, Jack Williamson, Richard Johnson, Christopher Leverett, Lambert and two no-name candidates.

Andrews was the first to cast a vote in the election for his district.

He said he is excited and is looking forward to working with the rest of the city council.

Emory Fiveash, Andrews' campaign manager and president of Students for Statesboro, said he had anticipated at least 100 votes for Andrews, but said he was pleased with the outcome of 76 votes.

James Hood was defeated by incumbent Mayor Hal Averitt. Averitt triumphed with 1,691 votes or 78.61 percent compared to Hood's 295 votes or 13.71 percent. Hood was the only qualified write-in candidate for mayor.

"The only reason I ran as a write-in candidate was to give people a choice," Hood said.

Incumbent David Shumake retains his seat, beating Loretta J. Williams with 226 votes or 56.35 percent. Williams had 159 votes or 39.65 percent.

A run-off election will be held in District One between Eddie Rushing and local businessman Frank Parker and in District Five between Doug Lambert and Jack B. Williamson.

A total of 2,151 votes were cast in the city elections. There are 8,922 registered voters in Statesboro.

Two arrested in fight after homecoming game

By Ashley Hunt
News Editor

An apparent racial fight between students at last week's homecoming game over an apparent taking of a confederate flag led to two arrests.

Ryan Lee, 22, of Statesboro, and Tatu Hill, 19, of Decatur, were arrested for disorderly conduct at the entrance to Paulson Stadium and Robinhood Trail.

Lee said the fight began after a black man took a confederate flag that a vendor was selling near a house across from the stadium.

According to other eyewitnesses, the fight began after a black man allegedly took a confederate flag from a residence near the stadium and proceeded to carry it away.

"An African-American stole the flag and went up the road toward Stadium Club and threw the flag in the road," said a source speaking anonymously who was a witness to the fight. "He started taunting the guys who came after him to try and get the flag back."

He said other men came over to join the black man and the group then started getting into a "bitch" match with the men who were trying to retrieve the flag.

Ryan Lee, who was present, was then hit in the face by Hill, according to the source.

Wayland Wiseman, another witness, also said that a man came and took a flag from the duplex and began taunting others around him. Wiseman also said that Lee was hit.

Eyewitnesses then said a large group of people became involved in the fight.

Carla Jackson, another witness, said she saw six black people gathered near the duplex surrounded by several white people.

However, Jackson said the white people were pushing the black people and that a white man hit one of the black men. Shortly after, she said, the police arrived.

Statesboro Police Chief Richard Malone said when the police arrived there were "apparently two individuals in an altercation." Malone said the fight had already occurred after the police arrived.

Hill and Lee were taken into custody and released on $350 bail.

Hill was unable to be reached by press time.

Chain stores attracted to Statesboro's low tax rate, population

By Kim Wagner
Staff Writer

The grand opening of Maurices Incorporated, a juniors', women's and men's fashion retail store, at the Statesboro Mall last Wednesday may not be the only chain store attracted to Bulloch County.

Operating over 600 fashion stores nationwide, this Minnesota-based chain appeals to a wide variety of people, said Anne Robb, from Maurices' marketing department.

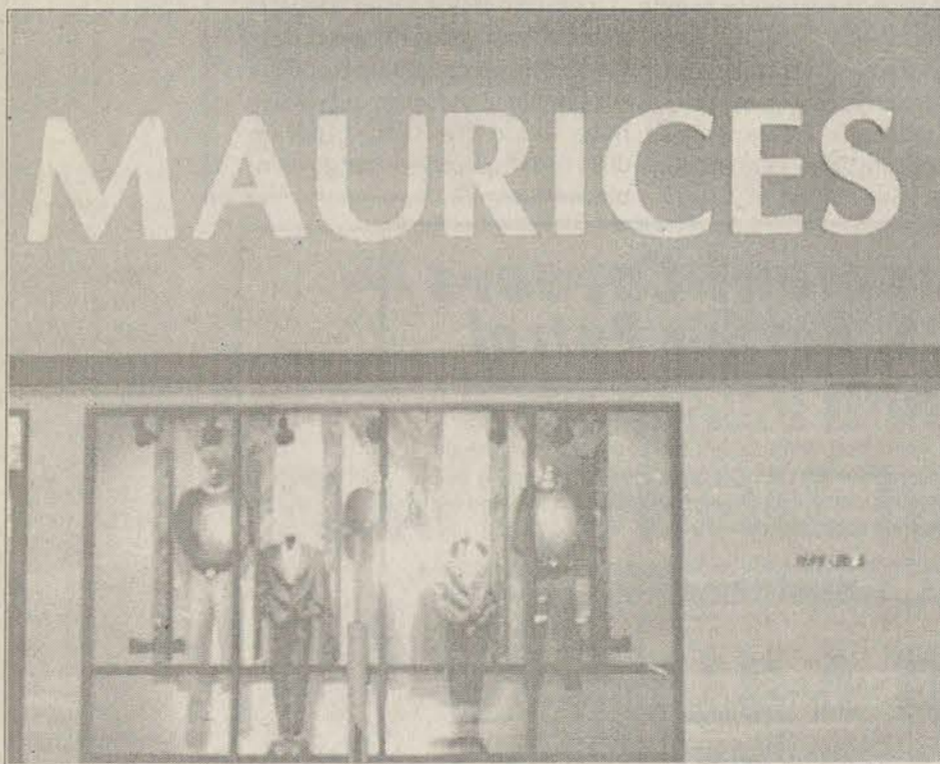

"We carry a little bit of everything," said Tracie Anschutz, manager of Maurices in Statesboro. "We have sportswear, custom made dresses, CK jeans, t-shirts, leather coats, shoes, accessories, underwear and lots of other merchandise."

Maurices Incorporated prides itself on its customer service, Robb said.

"We like to go into small communities rather than big cities," Anschutz said. "We have some stores in large cities, but most of our stores fall in small towns, we like to get to know the people in the community and even be on a first-name basis with customers."

Maurices has a six-week layaway plan, accepts four major credit cards, operates during the mall's business hours and has a return policy based on "no sale is ever final."

"I don't really know exactly how long they (Maurices' headquarters) have looked at the Statesboro area as a location for a Maurices store, but I know it has been quite a while," Anschutz said. "My understanding is that we had looked at the Statesboro Mall years ago, and they (headquarters) had wanted some changes to be done before they would open a store there. The mall recently made some changes so they decided to open a store down here."

Maurices' headquarters would not release information about why the chain decided to open a store in Statesboro, or the criteria the company looks for in a prospective store location.

However, a factor that some chain stores look into before choosing the location of a new store is the population of the area.

"One of the big factors that has come into play concerning businesses happened in January of '94 when outside areas were annexed and our population went from 16,000 to 21,000," said James Drinkard, director of programs and member services for Statesboro Bulloch Chamber of Commerce and associated with the development authority of Bulloch County. "A lot of chain stores use a population of 20,000 as a minimum before they'll consider an area."

Bulloch County now has a population of 21,000.

A lot of students are not included in the census or the annexation because they're figured in at home, so that means there is about 12,000 "extra" people living in Bulloch County.

Chain stores are now starting to take a look at how students' buying power plays a part in the overall picture," Drinkard said. "Bulloch County also has a very low tax rate, and this is attractive to businesses, especially to northern companies because up north taxes are considerably higher."

"A lot of chains don't like to let us know they're thinking about coming here (Statesboro)," Drinkard said. "When they come to look at the area they'll (the prospective business) tell a little about the store, but they usually don't tell the name of the store. They don't want the phone ringing off the hook from realtors, and people looking for jobs because then it becomes a nuisance."

Campus speaker brings controversy

Christopher Cole

Media figure Jeff Cohen lectures in the Union Ballroom.

By Christopher Cole
Editor

When SGA president Lee Hyer discovered that a partisan media figure was coming to speak at GSU, he began questioning the membership and funding of the Campus Life Enrichment Committee.

CLEC sponsored a lecture by Jeff Cohen, who has been described by some as "Rush Limbaugh's worst nightmare," Monday night in the Union Ballroom. Cohen was paid $3,200 for the two-hour lecture, said Maria Cahill, executive director of CLEC.

"I think bringing a left-wing speaker, or a right-wing speaker, with a political agenda is an unnecessary politicization of CLEC," Hyer said Tuesday. "It's an organization that should remain nonpartisan and nonpolitical."

Cahill would not comment on the Cohen lecture or on CLEC membership and funding without consulting first with the committee.

CLEC is funded $68,000 per year with student activity fees, and is additionally funded by other sponsorships, Cahill said.

Hyer said the university should invite speakers who do not require honoraria, such as Secretary of State Max Cleland. He said the CLEC sponsorship amounted to endorsing "the agenda of one speaker."

Another student leader, Statesboro City Councilman-elect Cory Andrews, sent a letter to Cahill Oct. 13 regarding the Cohen lecture.

"I have noticed what appears to be a disturbing trend of inequity in the disbursement of student funds with regard to speaking events," the letter read in part. "There seems to be a clear case of discrimination based on a potential speaker's political persuasion. This can be interpreted essentially as a freedom of speech issue, as students are being denied the right to hear contrasting points of view."

"If [Cohen's] remarks were being presented in a forum or context of competing points of view, it would not be so volatile a situation," Andrews wrote. "By not providing students with alternative points of view, Campus Life Enrichment is in effect endorsing a clear-cut political agenda."

Hyer has also said the 10 student members of CLEC were appointed without his approval, as required in Article IV, Section 1, Part D of

Miller declares Veterans Day

Special to the G-A

ATLANTA — Governor Zell Miller today signed a proclamation declaring Saturday, Nov. 11, 1995 as Veterans Day in Georgia.

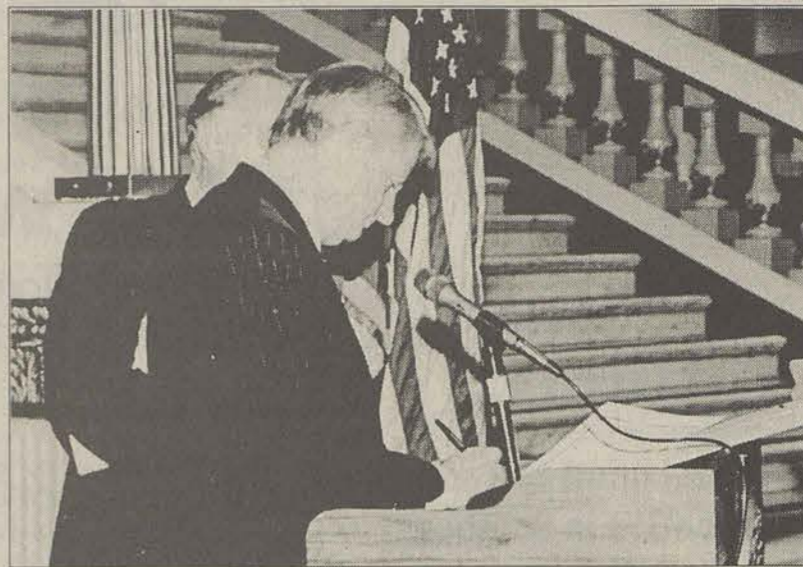

Miller also declared that Friday, Nov. 10 will be an official state holiday to honor veterans.

"It is fitting and appropriate that we designate a day to pause in our daily routine and remember our veterans' loyalty, patriotism, and courage in the face of danger," Miller said. "They have earned all the honor and glory that a thankful nation can bestow."

Miller, a former Marine, paid special tribute to the 324,372 Georgians who served overseas during World War II.

"In this 50th anniversary year of the end of World War II, we especially remember and honor the veterans who fought in that war — the most recent war, and hopefully the last, to span the entire globe," Miller said.

World War II saw 6,782 Georgians killed in action and another 11,650 wounded. Ten Georgians won the nation's highest honor for heroism in combat during the war — the Medal of Honor.

Georgians answered the call in other conflicts as well.

More than 110,900 Georgians served in Korea; 246,000 in Vietnam and 41,000 in the Persian Gulf War.

"Finally, we should remember the veterans-to-be — our troops on duty all around the world today," Miller said. "Our thoughts go out to them on this special day as they stand ready to defend liberty and fight aggression."

Students outraged with police behavior

The Associated Press

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. — Administrators at Wesleyan University were coping with student unease after police admitted they took four black students including a Georgian into custody without any cause.

The handcuffed students were released as soon as they arrived at police headquarters, where a sergeant said a mistake had been made. They also received a formal apology, but the incident left the students shaken and angry.

"We were violated to the extreme," Umi NiiLampti, an 18-year-old freshman from Atlanta, said Wednesday. "It wasn't justified."

NiiLampti said he and the three other students detained by police had contacted an attorney to determine whether they have any legal recourse.

"I don't even know, you know, about the law and which of my rights were violated," said NiiLampti, who declined to give details about the encounter with police. "It was awful."

Another student involved, Markell Parker, 19, of the Bronx, N.Y., declined to comment. The other two, sophomores Bishara Wilson, 19, of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Tarik Holder, 19, of West Hempstead, N.Y., did not return telephone messages left at their dormitory rooms.

Blacks make up about 9 percent of the student body at Wesleyan, an elite liberal arts college with about 2,700 undergraduate and 300 graduate students.

In Middletown, a city of about 43,000, blacks make up about 11 percent of the population.

The confrontation with police occurred about 1 a.m. Tuesday when a Middletown patrol officer spotted the four students in the middle of a public street near dormitories, police said.

When the officer asked the students to move aside, they did. But police said they did not respond when asked if they were students.

The officer followed them and contacted campus police. Stopped again, the young men said they were students but declined to produce their ID cards, police said. With campus security officers present, the students were then handcuffed and taken to the police station.

A sergeant released the students, informing the officer, identified on a police log as rookie David Godwin, that there were no grounds for charges.

Police Lt. Christopher Barrow went to campus and met with the students at 2:30 a.m. to apologize.

Capt. Robert Clayton, who is leading an internal investigation, said there was no cause for the students' detention and that they did not have to produce their ID cards.

Clayton said Godwin, who is still on a probationary status used for new officers, has been assigned to ride with a more senior officer. More action is expected, he said.

Wesleyan Dean Allen Green said administrators were meeting with students and counting on them to come forward if there have been other confrontations with police.

Senators crusade to end CDC research program

By Curt Anderson
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A group of senators led by Republican presidential front-runner Bob Dole wants to end an injury research program at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, claiming it promotes an anti-gun political agenda.

The senators, including Republican Christopher Bond of Missouri, wrote in a letter that the Atlanta-based National Center for Injury Prevention and Control "has focused its firearms work entirely in areas that most directly affect the law-abiding uses of firearms.... We are absolutely committed to getting the politics out."

The center, created during President Bush's administration, denies that its research contains any anti-gun bias.

Nevertheless, it is a favorite target of the National Rifle Association, which alleges that some of the center's $2 million in annual federal grant money has paid for literature urging people to support gun control.

Proposed ammendment asserts parental rights to educate children

By Dick Pettys
The Associated Press

ATLANTA—A proposed constitutional ammendment asserting the right of parents to direct their children's education and upbringing was denounced by one group as "very dangerous" Monday and praised by another as an important statement of public policy.

The comments came during a public hearing by the Senate Education Committee on a measure introduced by Sen. Ed Gochenour, R-Macon, during the 1995 legislative session and eligible for consideration next year.

The committee took no action, but several members of the panel said they were having trouble understanding what new rights the law would confer on parents that they do not have now.

Gochenour said he introduced the measure because "there are situations where parents have not had any opportunity to get involved" in local school decisions.

Teresa Nelson, executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union in Georgia, told the committee "this is very dangerous... Let's say I want to pull my child out of school at 13 to go to work. I certainly could that (if the proposal became law), regardless of the fact that they now have to go to school until age 16."

Matthew Glavin, president of the Southeastern Legal Foundation, a conservative law firm, said the proposed ammendment would "send a very powerful message" to government bureaucrats.

Sen. David Scott, D-Atlanta, was among those questioning why the proposal was needed. "Parents already have these rights. My concern is the whole Pandora's box would open," he said.

Sen. Mary Margaret Oliver, D-Decatur, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, called the proposal "a theoretical, symbolic statement you wish to make that's already in the law."

Attorney General Michael Bowers said in a letter given to the committee that if the measure won legislative approval and was ratified by voters, it would fall to the courts to decide what it meant.

Among other things, Bowers said passage of the ammendment could make it more difficult for the state to remove children from abusive parents.

In a school setting, it could be used to challenge state-mandated course work and health rules, such as immunizations, he said.

Medical Association contributes to campaigns

The Associated Press

ATLANTA—The Medical Association of Georgia was the largest contributor to legislative campaigns in 1993-94, The Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported Monday.

Sen. Charles Walker, D-Augusta, chairman of the Senate Health and Human Services Committee, received the most contributions, said the newspaper, which reviewed campaign finance reports. Walker raised $153,908 in 1993 and 1994, even though he didn't face any opposition.

The medical association, which represents doctors, gave money to 125 of the 180 representatives and 43 of the 56 senators more than 70 percent of the General Assembly. It spent a total of $146,200 on lawmakers and other elected officials, including Walker, the newspaper said.

David Cook, the association's legislative director, said the contributions promoted "good government." "There's a lot of support of a lot of good legislators down there," Cook said. "My sense is that most legislators are good people trying to do a hard job, trying to do the best they can."

But the money is also meant to buy access, said Melissa Metcalfe, director of the government watchdog group Common Cause of Georgia.

"Incumbents are always a good investment," Ms. Metcalfe said. "You're garnering more support, getting access to more people and hopefully getting more people to vote your way when you have that bill come up that's so important to you."

Other top givers were dentists, Realtors, hospitals, NationsBank of Georgia and Philip Morris Inc., each spending at least $90,000, the newspaper reported.

About a third of Walker's money came from drug companies, doctors and other medical industry groups with a keen interest in health care legislation, the newspaper said. He spent more than $16,000 of the money he raised on family members and business partners who worked for him, it said.

Walker was not at his Augusta office Monday and did not return a phone call seeking comment.

After Walker, those receiving the largest amounts were Republican Sens. Eric Johnson of Savannah and Perry McGuire of Carrollton and Democratic Sen. Ron Slotin of Atlanta. McGuire spent his money on two campaigns in the 1993-94 cycle.

Senate Majority Whip Richard Marable, who recently held a fund-raising dinner attended by lobbyists, said further restrictions on campaign giving would give wealthy candidates an enormous advantage.

"I couldn't afford to finance my own campaign," said the Rome Democrat, a teacher. "There's no way I could compete against someone if I couldn't raise money this way."

In addition, he plans to publish special alerts that call attention to bills in danger of being buried in committee, along with recommendations for citizens who want to get involved.

ated by other government, public policy and political groups, he said.

"Sunshine is a great disinfectant," Kaye said last week. "The more the people know about their government and the activities of their elected officials, the better it is for everyone."

He said die-hard political junkies probably will be among the first visitors to his home page, but that students also may find it useful for research papers and other assignments.

The cost of running the page is minimal only about $65 a month, he said and uploading the data should require only about a half-hour each day.

Although Kaye has lined up some volunteers to help operate the page, he is no stranger to the Internet.

"I surf the 'net quite regularly. The wealth of information is amazing. The other night I was listening to some of Richard Nixon's, Joe McCarthy's and Martin Luther King Jr.'s speeches (through a CD-ROM). Through the U.S. government home page, you can get old Constitutional documents."

A backbencher serving only his second term, Kaye is known for employing confrontational tactics to challenge the rulings of House Democratic leaders, and for successfully suing to halt a tax on used car sales between individuals.

He said he plans to seek reelection next year.

Millner and Issakson are two of six vying for Senate seat

By Dick Pettys
The Associated Press

ATLANTA—Johnny Isakson was the early favorite in the Republican race for U.S. Sen. Sam Nunn's seat, but some analysts say Guy Millner's decision to join the fray makes it at least a two-man battle.

Millner, a millionaire Atlanta businessman, was the 1994 Republican gubernatorial nominee, and came within 33,000 votes of upsetting Democratic Gov. Zell Miller.

Millner mailed letters to supporters last week saying he will announce his Senate candidacy this month.

Six other Republicans including Isakson, the GOP's 1990 gubernatorial nominee have already announced for the seat that Nunn, a Democrat, is vacating next year.

Only one Democrat Secretary of State Max Cleland has announced his candidacy.

However, candidates can't officially enter the race until qualifying opens next April.

Among Republicans, "it will be a major race between Guy Millner and Johnny Isakson," said Whit Ayres, an Atlanta pollster who worked for Millner in 1994 and now is polling for Republican Lamar Alexander's presidential campaign.

"It's going to be very difficult for any of the other candidates to raise a significant amount of money, given the fact that two titans of the Atlanta business community already are in the race," he said.

Isakson is a state senator and Atlanta real estate executive. Millner "would logically become the co-frontrunner with Johnny, based upon the contacts within the Republican Party that each of them have and based upon the pocketbooks that each of them have and can get into," said Atlanta pollster Claibourne Darden.

many Georgia Democrats, including the governor, said Millner made "rookie" mistakes in 1994.

"But there's nothing quite like the learning curve of having been through it once to strengthen a candidate for the next go-round," he said.

He added, "One of the key questions is, who learned more from his whipping at the hands of Zell Miller Isakson or Millner? The candidate who better applies the lessons he learned is going to have a real advantage in the primary."

Millner has not returned repeated telephone calls from The Associated Press. In his letter to supporters he said:

"In November, I plan to announce that I will run for the Republican nomination for the United States Senate and I need your help, support and your prayers."

One Millner booster who got the letter, Bob Bell of Atlanta, said, "He's coming off of an almost-win, so he has that momentum going for him, and I don't know anybody who has anything like the name recognition he's got. He's positioned perfectly."

Bell is a former state senator and was the Republican gubernatorial nominee in 1982.

Millner and Isakson aren't the only Republicans with money in the race.

State Sen. Clint Day, a Norcross Republican whose family founded the Days Inn hotel chain, is also in the race and has closely aligned himself with the party's religious right wing.

Christian conservatives are an important factor in Republican primaries, and consequently most of the announced GOP Senate candidates have taken strong anti-abortion positions.

Isakson, however, has said he supports a woman's right to choose a position that plays better in general elections because the impact of the religious right is diluted.

Other Republicans in the race are physician Paul Broun of Americus, businessman Bruce Patrick Hatfield of Kennesaw, state Rep. Kip Klein of Marietta and state Sen. Charlie Tanksley of Marietta.

Venezuelan doctor shot during convention

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — An eye doctor from Venezuela was hospitalized in stable condition this morning after being shot in the stomach while walking with other doctors attending an ophthalmology convention.

Dr. Henrique Orozco, 45, of Barquisimeto, Venezuela, was shot about 11 p.m. Tuesday near Piedmont Park north of downtown, said Benjamin Sims, spokesman for Atlanta police.

He was taken to Grady Memorial Hospital.

Orozco and the two other Venezuelan doctors noticed two young men following them as they walked, Sims said.

The doctors crossed the street to elude the men, but the men followed and confronted the doctors, he said.

The other doctors managed to run away when one of the men grabbed Orozco, who was shot in the stomach with a handgun during a struggle, Sims said.

Police made no arrests by Wednesday, he said.

Orozco is one of 10,000 eye doctors in town for the American Academy of Ophthalmology's 99th annual meeting.

About 30 members are from Venezuela, said Pamela Beach, spokeswoman for the convention.

"We are shocked and saddened by the senseless shooting," said the organization's executive vice president, H. Dunbar Hoskins Jr.

Legislature plans to open a page on the web

By Dick Pettys
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — The customary sniping between Democrats and Republicans in the Georgia House won't be confined to the legislative chambers next year. Computer buffs also may be able to catch some of the action on the Internet.

State Rep. Mitch Kaye, R-Marietta, and members of his Conservative Policy Caucus announced plans last week to open a home page on the World Wide Web to report developments of the 1996 General Assembly session from their perspective.

The majority Democrats haven't gone that far, but Rep. Bill Lee, D-Forest Park, chairman of the House Democratic Caucus, said they are looking at ways to use technology more effectively.

Opening a home page on the Internet is one possibility, he said.

Kaye said he will use his site to post lists of how every legislator votes on every bill, resolution and ammendment, and the names, addresses and telephone numbers of every lawmaker.

Our Opinion

If homecoming is such a problem — get rid of it!

Homecoming is supposed to be a time for GSU students to come together. But it seems lately that students have been disagreeing more and more over homecoming. That is, people have turned it into a racial issue. Blacks get upset because some say the elections were rigged, thus a white contestant won. When or if a black contestant wins, whites say the same thing.

It seems that students cannot reach a consensus about homecoming. Why is the homecoming king and queen contest so popular? These students do not represent the university. It is really just a popularity contest.

And it seems lately that homecoming is becoming more and more a racial issue. Last month when the committee wanted to change the rules of homecoming, i.e. making candidates write an essay, go through an interview process and have a 3.0 GPA, many got upset, including blacks. Many of them said they were doing this to prevent black candidates. With all the tension that resulted, the committee decided to leave them the way they were because they wanted homecoming to be a time for students to come together, not fall apart.

During voting, a student said she witnessed cheating when she saw ballots being given out to whites, but not to blacks. The students in charge of the precinct at the time were allegedly filling out cards for the blacks.

Some students said that an organization cheated in the voting in order to have its candidate win.

If homecoming causes so many problems, then do away with it. If all students are going to do is disagree and accuse the other of cheating, it would be better not to have it at all.

Cohen lecture inappropriate

One of the great challenges of a public university is to bring a wide variety of opinions and insights into contemporary issues to the student body. But the Campus Life Enrichment Committee has worked against that challenge by sponsoring, with public school dollars, a highly political media figure to appear on campus.

The notion that GSU paid Jeff Cohen $3,200 to visit GSU for the sole purpose of debunking conservatives in the media is one that students should hardly countenance. Had CLEC sponsored a debate between Cohen and one of his right-wing counterparts, the event would have been fair and balanced. We find it ironic that Cohen, the executive director of FAIR (Fairness and Accuracy in Reporting) makes his living by presenting an unfair, one-sided radical position — and getting paid for it.

We would take the same position if GSU offered money to a right-wing speaker, such as Pat Buchanan, to present his opinions without our benefit of rebuttal.

While we would predict that SGA president Lee Hyer wouldn't attack a paid lecture by a conservative speaker, he is at least on target with this one. His complaints about CLEC are to be looked up questionably, thanks to his own partisan agenda, but that doesn't mean his feedback is invalid.

Using student activity fees, which are already too high, to bring a biased lecture to campus raises questions about CLEC's integrity. The committee is designed for the benefit of our cultural environment at GSU, not our political one. CLEC's sponsorship of this lecture would be comparable to a "Jeff Cohen Hour" on public radio or television. It simply is not appropriate.

Gender shouldn't make a difference

AMANDA CREWS

MANAGING EDITOR

Girls and guys are totally different. No, seriously — I'm not just talking about biologically.

I can understand how John Gray could make a killing off of his book called Men are From Mars, Women are From Venus.

It's absolutely true. We might as well be from two different galaxies.

These are not inherent differences, though. From birth, we are taught to be opposites.

Experts have a fancy name for it: socialization. Basically, though, it all boils down to the fact that society wants a clear distinction between men and women.

As soon as a child is born, the doctor identifies the sex of the child. From that moment on, that child is treated as society dictates his/her sex should be treated.

Girls automatically receive pink blankets; boys get blue ones. Who made that rule? Personally, blue is my favorite color.

Also, toys are definitely gender-biased. If you don't believe it, just take a quick look at the toy aisle at Walmart or K-Mart one day. While some toys nowadays are unisex, most are designed especially for boys or girls.

Boys have their Tonka trucks and G.I. Joe action figures. Girls "play" with baby dolls they must change and feed, vacuum cleaners, and Easy Bake ovens. Who thinks playing housewife is fun? I'll tell you who does. I did, along with about every other little girl in America. One of the reasons I did, though, was because that is what society deemed acceptable for little girls.

Let's face it: parents, mothers especially, go crazy if their daughter wants Tonka trucks and their son likes Barbie dolls. Forget about letting the child be an individual, just as long as society's norms are met.

As a child moves into adulthood, society continues to dictate how he/she should act based on sex. There are a ton of things that girls can get away with in public that guys cannot and vice versa. I'll share just a few.

First, what would happen if you saw a girl spitting or hacking a loogie on your way to class? We see guys doing that all the time, and we don't even bat an eyelash. As far as I know, a man does not have more saliva in his mouth than a woman does. The only reason, then, that men spit in public is that society allows them to do so.

Second, girls are able to hug each other in public. How many guys do we see hugging? Some guys hug each other, but it is a very rare event. I guess they are afraid of what people will think if they express any feelings for another guy.

I've even noticed recently that a lot of guys who go to the movies together sit with an extra seat between them. Some claim they sit like that for more room. Somehow, I bet it has something to do with what other people will think.

And how many girls do you see with a big ole chaw of tobacco in their mouths? Living in the south, we do see older women who enjoy chewing Red Man on a daily basis. For the most part, though, women aren't supposed to engage in this type of activity. The very fact some women do defy the norms and choose to chew the mess proves that society, not biology, prevents more women from doing so.

Fourth, guys grabbing, holding, and scratching themselves in public has become so commonplace that we barely even notice anymore. Just let a girl do something like that, though. She would turn more than a few heads and catch more than her share of dirty looks. Plus, she'd never go out on another date again.

Finally, a lot of guys hoot and holler when they see a pretty girl walk down the street. Girls, for the most part, are expected to be passive and subtle about their sexuality. We may look at a good-looking guy and even make comments about him to other girls, but most of us try to do it very quietly. The sexual urges of the male and female are not that different. Through the centuries, though, men have been allowed the opportunity to be more vocal about their sexuality.

The differences between men and women are not solely biological. Society plays a major part in making us different. Some of these differences aren't all that bad. I don't want to chew tobacco or scratch myself in public, but I would like the choice to do so without raising eyebrows.

Everything's connected!

Yo!Yo!Yo! How are things kicking in the 'Boro?

"Think globally, act locally." I'm sure many of you have seen those bumper stickers around. Of all the bumper stickers I have seen, that one is the cream of the crop.

Just in those few words exists a powerful idea. An idea that expresses the effect of what you can do. What you do here in Statesboro can directly or indirectly affect someone or something on the other side of the planet, be it your pal or an endangered animal.

"Everything is connected," stresses one of my professors on a daily basis. Everything is connected, things such as the nature world to even the political world. Neighbors affect neighbors and nations affect nations. What happens in China will relate to you in one way or another. Especially when one out of every five people in the world's population live in China. Did you know that?

Check things out; everything doesn't exist in your immediate area. Take a road trip or something. You'll get a scope of what's out there. Or just read a book, newspaper or magazine. Once you find what is out there, then you will be able to relate to the "everything is connected" idea. You might even see something on the other end of the connection that you can make better or have a bigger impact on. By acting locally you might effect something on the other end of the planet.

The other end of the planet is not too far away, especially with the age of mass communication and large populations. Even speaking in miles, the world is not massive, only about 24,000 miles following the equator.

There are no "new worlds," like the one Columbus found, on this planet anymore. This is the global age; we must think globally. We are connected. We must all get along. This is our home!

Voting, recycling, signing petitions or just being active are just a few things you as a citizen can do to act locally. Tons of actions are waiting for you so you can act locally, while thinking globally.

Wouldn't it be great if everyone, the whole world, thought globally and acted locally? If everyone did, people would direct their local actions and the world would be globally responsible.

What you see is not everything there is. When you throw something away, where does it go? UNO! Everything is connected and maybe you should think globally and act locally. You have got the Chance to make a change!

Your Opinion

In defense of his race, responds to letter writer

Editor,
After reading the Opinions section of the Nov. 7 George-Anne, I feel compelled to write a letter in defense of my race and the integrity of the whole student population of GSU.

I find myself shaking my head with a growing sense of cynicism as I read a letter to the editor vaguely pointing out how this year's election of the Homecoming Queen and King was an "obvious" attempt to insure the victory of the white candidates ("Homecoming process works against blacks," Krystal Roland). The change in the election process mentioned in this letter seems to be an easy scapegoat for these complaints. I hardly believe that this change was made without some sort of black representation or input; that is unless the change-making entity fell prey to some sort of conspiracy against the black race altogether.

The element of the election in question is the clause that dictates the voter to primarily select five candidates for both king and queen and later to vote on his or her favorite of these five "finalists." Her letter insinuates that this process results in more blacks than whites being chosen for the court, thus making the black vote more dispersed. Does this in some way mean blacks know more people, and consequently vote more people onto the court? Or, is this going on the speculation that more blacks are involved in activities on campus than whites? Either of these, I fear, are far-fetched.

It also interests me that she in no way acknowledges the simple possibility that a white individual could very well vote for one of the black candidates. Perhaps this is out of retaliation from blacks having been openly accused of "block-voting" in the past.

One problem with society today is that many people like to play what I call the "blame game." Some people, no matter what the case, feel they in some way have been looked down upon or discriminated against. Being a psychology major, it seems the writer would have noticed the serious victimization complex which was undertoned throughout her entire letter.

I guess the toughest patient is the self after all.

FROM THE FAIRWAY

RONNIE SWINFORD

All-Conference or All-political player-of-the-year?

I don't know how many people follow women's soccer at GSU. There are a few that show up regularly, but for the most part, fan interest is small. But now we now have a conspiracy against one of the ladies on the team. So I thought that everyone should be aware of it.

Debbie Hensley has done as much as possible in this conference. But she does not have the title of best player in the conference. That went to a sophomore at Furman. Last year she led the conference in scoring, and was ranked nationally in goals scored, but did not win the player-of-the-year award.

That might have discouraged some players, but not Hensley, this year she led the conference in goals with 12, and assists with 12 and total points with 36, and still did not get the award.

WHY?

The voting for this is done by the conference coaches. Is GSU really hated that badly by the other members of the conference?

I have talked to Tom Norton, GSU's head coach several times, and he thinks she is the best player in the conference.

So why?

Well it is widely known that GSU is looked down on by most Southern Conference schools. GSU wanted to go into division one football, by taking the entire conference to division one. Well Marshall said we need to go now so they did, where does that leave the rest of the conference?

Also many schools resent the past football success of GSU. When you look at the Southern Conference football media guide, and you see national championships in football, you see GSU's name only under the loss to Furman in 1988. I do believe that there have been four by this school. No we weren't in the conference at that time, but that tradition makes the conference look better, instead of worse.

Another sport that gets resentment from other conference members is baseball. We have never won the SoCon championship in baseball, but other teams see us as outsiders.

Why?

Well I do have an answer to this question, Jack Stallings. You don't win 1,100 some odd games without being a consistent power in the area. This frightens some coaches, you know every year that you have to contend with GSU.

Another source of distaste for many schools was the success of Bucky Wagner. On the surface, they all seemed to like him, but the envy of his business ability is also well known. He was able to get three championship games in this town. He also gained for the school many years of playoff shares of money.

So what am I trying to say to you, we are the red-headed stepchildren of the conference to many. That is fine, but when it starts to interfere with post season individual awards that the kids deserve, then it is uncalled for.

I plan on calling every women's soccer coach in the conference and asking who they voted for and why? I want to see the reasons behind the vote. Then I will write a story about it, because Debbie deserves at least that much, since she didn't get the actual title.

Eagle linebackers, special teams players give defense tougher edge

By Carolyn Wynn
 Staff Writer

Overall, the Eagle defense has been proving their abilities, and showing themselves as one of the toughest in the Southern Conference.

And despite problems with the depth and the experience of the linebacker corp, they have also shown that they are a valuable component of the total defensive success.

One of those linebackers is a converted slot-back and kick-block specialist Jonathan Richardson, and the other is the starting strong-side linebacker Chad Nighbert.

Both of these gentlemen are former walk-ons who have demonstrated talent, skill and leadership.

Jonathan Richardson is a senior 5'7, 190 pound linebacker. After four years this former walk on was awarded a well-deserved scholarship.

Richardson or "Frankie J" as called by teammates describes himself as a nice guy off the field. But on the field likes to make challengers aware that height is no way an indicator of his talents.

In 1991 Richardson walked on and was red-shirted. In 1992 he became a valuable member of the special teams, playing in every game.

In 1993 played in all 13 contests, blocking 2 punts, and had one carry during the regular season for 45 yards. In 1994 Richardson led special teams with 12 solo tackles and 3 assisted tackles.

Richardson a native of Brunswick, Georgia has as 36 inch vertical and has a forty time of 4.57.

He also benches 410 pounds and squats 635 pounds.

Jonathan Richardson

"As a linebacker, I feel my performance could have been better, but I do feel as if it has been steadily improving. Playing linebacker is a little different but I have never been one to walk a way from anything."

Last week this Eagle senior played what may have been his last game at Paulson Stadium.

"It was a very emotional game for me. I can't help but to think about all of the years of memories that I have made here and how this one part of my life has shaped who I am now," he said.

"Being a senior is a good feeling but I know that after it is all said and done I am going to miss it all: the game, the fans, and most of all my fellow senior teammates."

Richardson is the second oldest of five, with two brothers and two sisters.

"My greatest influence is my family. They are the ones that sparked my interest in football to begin with."

The building construction and contracting major says he would one day like to own his own construction company.

This week Richardson says he feels the Eagles will be successful if they execute effectively.

He notes that they cannot afford to underestimate anyone because gameday can bring out the best in a team.

"I don't think the long road trip will be a factor in our success. We cannot let it be one," he said.

Chad Nighbert a fellow linebacker, is going into his second season as an Eagle.

Nighbert is a 6'1, 227 pound sophomore, majoring in apical education.

Nighbert is originally from the United States but spent the last 13 years before coming to GSU in Frankfurt, Germany. Nighbert is another Eagle who belongs to a military family.

Currently, his family is stationed in Hidelberg, Germany. However his parents recently had a chance to watch their son play on the collegiate level in last week's Homecoming contest.

During high school, in Germany, Nighbert was a four year letterman in football.

There he played both linebacker and quarterback. He was a two time MVP at quarterback, and defensive back, and was also voted All-Europe at quarterback in 1992, while being voted All-Europe as a defensive back in 1991-1993.

While in high school Nighbert

Chad Nighbert

also participated in wrestling, winning the European Wrestling Championship in the 189 pound weight class his senior year.

He also lettered in track and field through the discuss and shot put events.

In 1993, his first year as an Eagle he was red-shirted, but in 1994 would serve as a back-up strongside linebacker behind Scott Davis.

However he had the opportunity to play in every game, and finished the season with 40 tackles, 17 of which were solo.

He also returned an on-side kick for 45 yard touchdown against the Moccasins of Tennessee-Chattanooga.

His game high during the '94 season was 11 tackles verses the Citadel, and seven stops against Virginia Military Institute.

This year the Eagle returns as the starting strong side linebacker and is the leading tackler on the team with 68 stops so far this season.

Following the Citadel game, Nighbert was also nominated as the defensive player-of-the-week.

"I feel like I started out slow this season, but I hope I have been progressively getting better after every game."

Nighbert says his biggest influence is his older brother.

"I have always looked up to him. He was the first in our family to complete college," he said.

Nighbert's brother is now also a member of the military and is a first lieutenant in the United States Army.

Although he has a military family and speaks fluent German, Nighbert said he does not plan to return to Germany to live or to become a member of the military himself.

"I will go back to visit Germany, but I would like to live in the states."

The Eagle linebacker is looking to a possible career in high school athletics as a football coach.

As to this must-win match up with Liberty University, Nighbert said, "I think the outcome may be a positive one."

"They are the only thing standing between us and the playoffs, so I think we can pull together and focus on our goal as a team," he said.

Six Eagles selected to all-conference teams

By Ronnie Swinford
 Sports Editor

GSU placed two men and four women on the So-Con all-conference teams.

The men chosen were Greg Gundrum and Jeremy Simmons.

Gundrum was named to the team for the second year as a defense man. He scored two goals this year in 21 matches.

Simmons was named to the second team at mid fielder, with four goals and six assists for 14 points.

The Lady Eagles honored were Debbie Hensley, Amanda Sandling, Rachel Tolliver and Morgan Cox.

Hensley led the conference in goals (12), assists (12) and total points with 36. She was named all-conference striker for the second straight year. While Hensley led the conference in all offensive categories, she was not named player-of-the-year.

Amanda Sandling was named as goalkeeper. She tallied a 1.56 goals against average with 104 saves, in 1,731 minutes played. She also scored a goal this year.

Rachel Tolliver added her name to the list, as a mid fielder. She scored six goals, had eight assists and 20 total points.

And beside Tolliver at the mid-field position was Morgan Cox. She had four goals and two assists as well as 10 total points for the season.

MEN'S SOCCER

Soccer splits in SoCon tourney

By Mike Davis
 Staff Writer

The GSU men's soccer team finished their performance at the Southern Conference tournament by winning their first game with Appalachian State in overtime 6-4, and dropping the second to Davidson, the hosts and eventual winner of the tournament.

The Eagles found themselves in a hole when Appalachian State's Greg Rhinehardt scored 24 minutes into the game.

Almost four minutes later, the Mountaineers struck again when Naoshi Yamauchi fed Brett Harrell to put Appy State up 2-0.

Towards the end of the first half, GSU answered their wake-up call when Noel Kievans and Lawrence Nelson combined in assisting Chris Carlson for the Eagle's first goal of the game.

In the second period, Appy increased their lead 3-1 with a goal from Jay Lane.

The Eagles bounced back when Pat Parris scored his first of two goals after being assisted by Lawrence Nelson cutting the lead to one.

After Denny Tucker's match tying goal, Appalachian State scored with twelve minutes remaining in the contest to give the Mountaineers the lead and the apparent win.

But GSU's Chris Sklar broke free and fed Jason Russell 10 meters out to send the game into overtime.

Kevin Hanfman was assisted by Dakeya Woods in a goal which gave the Eagles their first lead of the contest.

GSU's Russell scored his second goal of the game five minutes later to assure the win and a second round appearance.

The Eagles either ran out of luck or were just overmatched against Davidson in the second round.

The Wildcats jumped out to a quick lead nine minutes into the game when Coley Dominal scored from outside the 18-meter box.

Another goal from Robert Clarke would be all the scoring Davidson would need to do as they shut out the Eagles 2-0, ending GSU's season with a 7-13-2 record.

Cassell and Rockets trying to 'three-peat' in 1995

By Micheal Graczyk
 The Associated Press

HOUSTON — Despite winning championship rings in his first two years in the NBA, Houston Rockets guard Sam Cassell knows he still needs to improve.

"During the off-season, I watched film and decided I needed to be more aggressive offensively and defensively," he said Friday night after scoring 23 points—14 of them in a fourth-quarter spurt that pulled Houston to a 110-92 victory over Golden State in the opener for both teams.

"I'm trying to bring my game where I feel confident to be the leader on the court," he said.

Cassell did just that, providing the spark off the bench and hitting all three of his 3-pointers during a 19-1 run that broke open a close game.

"He was all over the floor," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said.

"It was really disappointing. We just self-destructed." The Rockets started the night

The win, the 11th straight for the Rockets over the Warriors, spoiled the coaching debut of Rick Adelman for Golden State.

by getting their 1995 championship rings and watching as the NBA title banner was lifted to the ceiling of the Summit, where it joined a similar banner marking the 1994 title.

"I don't know how it feels to lose in this league," Cassell laughed.

The Rockets led 81-79 early in the final period after Golden State started the quarter with a 10-3 spurt.

Then, after Hakeem Olajuwon hit a basket, Cassell took over, hitting 11 of the Rockets' next 12 points to give them their seventh straight home-opening win.

"We had that one stretch where we had closed the gap, then we had two or three possessions where we just stood around and all of the sudden they were up eight points," Adelman said.

"It's the last run that counts, and they buried us in the fourth quarter," added Rony Seikaly, who finished with 13 points.

The game was close in the third quarter, tied eight times and with neither team able to lead by more than two until Houston closed out the period with a 14-4 burst.

The Warriors bounced back to start the final period before Cassell took charge.

"It's hard for teams to get an identity. This team has done that," Tomjanovich said.

"This team knows what it takes for this team to win. That's the big factor. Our guys are sure of what it takes, and that's good team defense."

"It's great to watch a team play that way," Seikaly said. "Hopefully, we can learn from them."

Tim Hardaway topped the Warriors with 23 points. Joe Smith, the top pick overall in last summer's draft, finished with 14.

"I really wasn't in awe," Smith said.

"It just felt so good, and I was so excited to play in my first NBA game."

GSU Harriers end regular season

While most GSU students were celebrating Halloween two weekends ago, the GSU cross country teams were traveling to the Southern Conference Championship meet that was hosted by Furman University.

Both GSU teams came into the meet looking to end successful seasons and improve upon last year's finish. Among the several Eagle supporters at the meet were interim GSU Athletic Director Frank Ellwood and Senior Women's Administrator Brenda Carter.

Men's Race

The Eagles, while mostly comprised of sophomores and freshman, faced a tough field that included several teams that are among the top 20 in the southeast.

The men finished in seventh place overall. East Tennessee State "upset" Appalachian State for the overall title, Western Carolina (3rd), Tennessee-Chatanooga (4th), Marshall (5th), VMI (6th), GSU (7th), The Citadel (8th), Davidson (9th) and Furman (10th).

"Our guys did as good as they could have this year," said Brad Simmons, GSU head cross country coach.

"They are moving up and next year we are shooting for fifth."

Leading the charge for the Eagles was sophomore Rodney Stoker (30th).

He was followed closely by senior Dejon Drinks (35th), Chuck Jones (40th), Mike Dumas (41st), Wade Council (47th), John Norton, Chris Koukos, David Stoker and Greg Avra.

Simmons said going into the meet he would have been pleased with an eighth place finish.

"I think that Dejon Drinks, Mike Dumas and Chuck Jones had probably the best overall performances on the guys side," Simmons said. "Overall as a team, we had the best conference finish (since joining the Southern Conference)."

In the past three years as members of the conference, the GSU men have finished eighth, ninth and tenth.

"The overall team performances in the meet fell true to form really (for how the teams have been running this year), with East Tennessee State and Appalachian State finishing one and two," Simmons said. "Both Furman and The Citadel had beaten us this year, Furman doing it twice. I think at the Districts (NCAA Division I District Qualifying meet) we will catch VMI and Marshall also."

The District III Regional meet is comprised of 50 of the 80 Division I schools in the following states (Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, South Carolina, North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia).

"This District includes the teams from the: SEC, ACC, Big South, Conference USA, Ohio Valley, Sunbelt and several other smaller conferences," Simmons said. "We could finish (with the exception of the SEC) in the top three in all of those. Our guys are looking for a top 25 team finish."

The Women's Race

Youth and constant improvement was the best way to describe the Lady Eagles this year. GSU finished in eighth place overall. The traditionally very strong Furman team was the team champion, for the second year in a row.

"Understanding the circumstances, they ran as best as they could," Simmons said. "Their finish is what the guys faced last year (our ladies are now becoming very dedicated to running 365 days a year. We have a lot of bright stars on our team.)"

The Lady Eagles were led by Melissa Burnette, Elena Tolbert, Meredith Novack, Meredith Sheppard, Amy James, Ashley Carter, Sherlonda Pitts and Kristy Dahne.

"The best performances were turned in by Meredith Sheppard, Meredith Novack and Elena Tolbert," Simmons said. "Next year the women will be looking to improve in the conference to seventh or sixth place."

BASKETBALL

Mourning comes home to Miami

By Steven Wine
The Associated Press

MIAMI— The fanfare that accompanied Alonzo Mourning's arrival in Miami failed to reach the sandwich shop where he had lunch prior to his first game with the Heat.

"A couple of people asked me if I played basketball," Mourning said with a smile. "I said, 'Sometimes.'"

Not everyone in Miami has Heat fever, but it's spreading. A capacity crowd of 15,200 cheered as Mourning and coach Pat Riley made successful debuts Saturday night with the Heat, who beat Cleveland 85-71.

The final 2,000 tickets were sold after Riley swung a six-player trade Friday to acquire Mourning from the Charlotte Hornets. The new coach and new center received standing ovations when introduced before the game.

"These nights just make you feel alive," Riley said.

Mourning played 33 minutes even though he knew only a few plays. The two-time All-Star scored 15 points and blocked five shots, but he also had six turnovers, committed five fouls and shot an air ball.

"I'm a little disappointed in the way I played," he said. "But it's going to come."

Mourning made an immediate impact on the Heat's defense, which tied a team record by allowing only 71 points — 24 in the second half. Cleveland's centers scored eight points.

Last season, the Heat ranked 16th in defense in the NBA, allowing 102.8 points per game.

"They are going to be a good team with Mourning in there," Cavaliers forward Tyrone Hill said. "They're a whole lot tougher."

Credit Riley too. He used aggressive, in-your-face defense to make the New York Knicks title contenders, and it looks as though Miami will play the same way.

Heat rookie Sasha Danilovic traded blows with Cleveland's Chris Mills in the fourth quarter, and both were ejected. Danilovic needed 12 stitches in his face and mouth but made a point: The Heat (32-50 last season) no longer will be shoved around.

"The key to our success is going to be defense," Mourning said. "We have enough young legs and young bodies that we should be able to move well so we can double-team and trap."

As for offense, Mourning figures he'll provide a decoy. He had only one assist against the Cavaliers, but he plans to draw a crowd of defenders, then feed the ball to Danilovic, Billy Owens and Kevin Willis.

"The guys are going to get a lot of layups coming down the middle," Mourning said. "If we take our time, we'll be playing H-O-R-S-E because of all the double- and triple-teams."

The next game is Wednesday against Houston and Hakeem Olajuwon, giving Mourning three days to become acquainted with Riley's thick playbook. But Mourning said he already has learned enough about the Heat to know where this season is headed.

"To the playoffs, no question," he said. "We're going to be a team to be reckoned with."

In Miami, those are bold words. Attribute them to Heat fever.

Lady Eagles upset in first round

By Ronnie Swinford
Sports Editor

The GSU Lady Eagles soccer team finished up their season this past weekend at the Southern Conference Tournament. The Lady Eagles bowed out in the first round to eventual champions Davidson, 4-0.

Davidson scored 28 minutes into the first half, when Amy Kanoff broke away from the pack and slammed the shot by GSU's keeper Amanda Sandling.

Davidson scored three times in six minutes to put the game out of reach.

Their second goal of the game came 26 minutes into the half.

Davidson scored two more goals, one each by Kanoff and Lombard to win the game 4-0.

FOOTBALL PREVIEW

Eagles prepare for Liberty University Blazers

By Carolyn Wynn
Staff Writer

This week the Eagles leave for the first of two trips to Virginia to play the Flames of Liberty University.

The Flames are led by head coach Sam Rutigliano who is in his sixth year as head coach at Liberty. Rutigliano's record within his six years at Liberty is 36-29.

Rutigliano was also a former coach on the professional level, as the coach of the Cleveland Browns during 1978-1984.

During the 1980 season, Rutigliano's Browns clinched the AFC Central Division.

He later left coaching but decided to come back because he said he believed in the principles Liberty University stood for.

The game will be played in the William's Stadium which seats 12,000 people, and is artificial turf.

Last season the Flames had a 5-6 season, but are currently 7-2 this season.

Liberty is coming off of a 28-14 win over Hampton University and will be ready to meet the Eagles for the first time since 1984 during the Paulson Stadium's opening game when GSU defeated the Flames 48-11.

The Flames have a full arsenal on offense and defense with All-American candidates: quarterback Antwan Chiles, line-backer David Long, tight end Tony Dwees and running back J.T. Morris.

They also have the talents of running back Lawrence Worthington.

Antwan Chiles is a senior 6'3 230 senior quarterback from Lauderdale Lakes, Florida. Chiles transferred from the University of Florida in 1993.

During his time at the University of Florida he only saw action in two games where he was 2 of 3 in passing for 61 yards and had a 48 yard touchdown pass.

After transferring to Liberty, he started four games completing 123 of 228 passes for 1,487 yards and nine touchdowns.

During his junior season at Liberty, Chiles completed 211 of 385 passes with 24 touchdowns.

He also went into the school's record books for a single season performance by getting 2,823 passing yards, and 2,839 total offensive yards.

Chiles' current career total passing yards is 4,310, and his total offensive yards is 4,300.

So far this season, Chiles has completed 129 of the 237 attempted passes for 1,643 yards averaging 182.6 yards per game, with the season's longest pass being a 86 yards during the Delaware State.

Another offensive leader is Lawrence Worthington, the 6'0, 200 pound junior who has won a starting position over All-American candidate J.T. Morris.

Worthington, is tied for seventh in the nation in scoring averaging 10 points a game.

He also need just 164 yards to hit his second straight 1,000 yard rushing season. Last week he tied a Liberty record for most rushing touchdowns in a season with 15.

Overall, Worthington also only needs two more touchdowns to move into third place for all-time career rushing touchdowns at Liberty with 24.

The other half of this duo is J.T. Morris, the 5'11 223 pound senior. Morris is a transfer from Penn. State.

During his freshman year at Penn. State, Morris rushed for 13 times for 145 yards, scoring 3 touchdowns averaging 8.5 yards per carry.

He finished the year with 281 yards on 33 carries and was ranked fifth in rushing.

In his sophomore year he had 450 yards in all-purpose offense. He was the fourth leading rusher and had 240 yards on 50 carries. During his first season with the Flames, Morris only saw action in two games before an injury occurred.

However he had 143 yards and two touchdowns on 32 carries.

This year the Lynchburg Va. native has net rushing yardage of 644 on 131 plays averaging 71.6 yards per game.

The next offensive all-american candidate is Tony Dews a 6'2 259 senior from Centerville, Va.

Dews is considered as one of the Flames top offensive threats.

During the 1994 campaign he started in nine games having 41 receptions for 539 averaging 13.2 yards with 2 touchdowns.

Defensively, the Flames have 6'1 240 pound senior linebacker

So, what I'm saying is this: coming up this week in the rockin' town of Statesboro there will be a plethora of live music and bar room activities for you to dive right into.

• Beginning tonight, Bloodkin will play at Blind Willie's. They're an Athens-based band that's a little bit blues and big bit rock-n-roll. Bloodkin's lead singer, Daniel Hutchens, has been called the "Mark Twain of Rock & Roll." He wrote "Makes Sense to Me," "Henry Parsons Died," and "Can't Get High" for Widespread Panic. Bloodkin will be here promoting their debut album Good Luck Charm.

Tripp West will be at Legends to D.J. for the Z102/WZAT Old School Party.

Bubba's is having a Lady's Lock-up Champagne Jam from 8 - 9. Men can join either before 8 or after 9.

• On Friday, Nov. 10 Mount Pilot will return to Blind Willie's.

A new band out of Boston, Expanding Man, will be at Legend's. I've heard their tape and they sound pretty darn good (not that it makes them cool by any means; that's just my humble opinion). They're a guitar-based band who was produced by the same folks that produced Letters to Cleo and Gigolo Aunts.

South Cactus, a country band, will be at Bubba's.

• On Saturday, Nov. 11 break out your leather and stick out your tongues because Strutter will be at Legend's doing the Kiss thang. Strutter has been doing its Kiss tribute for years, but now, they will grace the small-time city of Statesboro to give all you Kiss fans the time of your life.

Also on Saturday, Wallace Green will be playing at Blind Willie's. Wallace Green is a local band that the potential to put on an excellent show.

South Cactus will be at Bubba's.

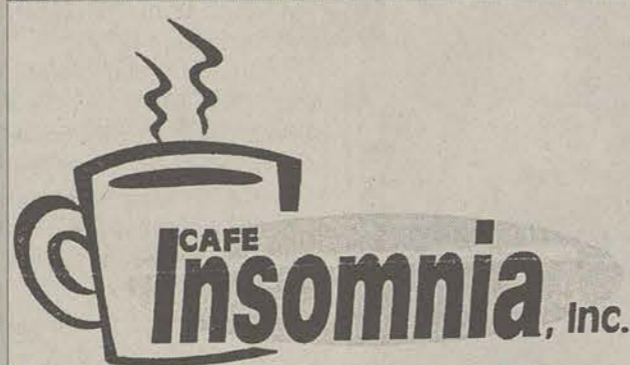

• Bubba's will host Monday Night Football with free subs from Subway.

• Blind Willie's will host Punkenhead on Tuesday, Nov. 14 while Legend's tears the roof off the mutha with their Disco/Retro 80s night. Tuesday night is GSU night at Bubba's from 7:30 to 10:00. Bring your own container for just rewards.

• On Wednesday, Nov. 15 Cravin Melon will be returning to Legend's. Cravin Melon has received a considerable amount of air-play.

Also, on Wednesday, Blue Miracle will perform at Blind Willie's.

Bubba's will have its infamous boxing matches. This includes both men and women boxers. It's definitely an experience. It's something you may never get the chance to see anywhere else.

When asked about their opinion of Cafe Insomnia, one coffee fanatic said simply, "It's about time." This seems to be the consensus among the majority of those involved in the ever-so-popular industry of lounging.

Cafe Insomnia, for those who haven't heard, is the 'Boro's newest and most popular addition. Whether you're in the mood to study class notes or just sit and get deliriously slap-happy with friends for no apparent reason, Cafe Insomnia is definitely the place to be.

The coffee? Oh yeah ... it's great! They have espresso, latte, cappuccino, mochaccino and the insomnia. They tempt you with 12 desserts, 10 flavored syrups, hot chocolate, bagels, muffins, danishes, croissants and hot tea. Yes, hot tea: Earl Grey, English Tea Time, Cinnamon Stick and Plantation Mint. Statesboro should count its lucky stars. Did I mention the cheesecake?

The atmosphere is easy-going. The light sounds of music ranging from classical, jazz, and a variety of soothing favorites like Peter Gabriel or Phish float softly through the Cafe.

It offers lighting bright enough to read to but not bright enough to make you uncomfortable.

Paul Dickerson, the founder of Cafe Insomnia, is currently taking suggestions for future additions to the Cafe. Anyone with art work that they would like to have displayed should contact him. The walls are virtually empty and need your talent.

Dickerson also mentioned that Cafe Insomnia may have live jazz and blues in the near future. He hopes to have games for the use of his patrons such as chess, cards and backgammon. In the spring, Cafe Insomnia hopes to add on a deck with tables for your outside chillin' enjoyment.

Cafe Insomnia is located on Chandler Road in the same shopping center as the University Books of Statesboro, Dingus Magee's, and that ATM machine that we all know and love. It's open from 7 a.m. 'til midnight on weekdays, 'til 1 a.m. on Friday and from 11 a.m. to 1 a.m. on Saturdays. It's a nice, quiet place to come and it's great for after-parties and intense conversations.

Melissa McDonald, senior psychology/philosophy major, says "It's better than 'Cats' ... four stars! I will go again and again."

Paul Dickerson invites you all to come in. He wanted you all to know, "Cafe Insomnia is here to serve you."

ARTS UPDATE

• On Thursday, Nov. 9, Gallery 303 will host the opening reception for the November show. The reception will begin at noon and works by four different artists will be on display. The exhibition includes prints by Mick Jilg, paintings by Julie Plasketes, metal bowls by Cathy Morgan, and woodcut prints by Rosemary Feit Covey. The exhibit will be in the gallery through Dec. 1. Come by and view the exhibition on Thursday or during the month. Questions? Contact the art department at 681-5358.

• Performance Works will present "Gifts of the Body," a dramatization of Rebecca Brown's award-winning novel about AIDS caretakers. The show will be performed in the Communication Arts Building, room 101 on Nov. 14, 15 and 16.

The admission is free and it begins at 8 p.m. Seating is very limited so get there early to assure yourself a spot.

For more information contact 681-5138. There will be parking available in the Newton Building lot.

Struck by lightning!

By Eric Bray
Staff Writer

In the offbeat style of movies such as "Ghost," "Powder" provides a heart-warming theme within a supernatural/science-fiction-type context.

Given the bare story line one wouldn't think it, but "Powder" is a real tear-jerker.

The movie depicts the integration into society of an albino, played by Sean Patrick Flanery ("The Young Indiana Jones Chronicles"), with unusual powers. The boy is named Powder, and his hairless, ashy exterior is chalk-white, indicative of his name.

Powder's mother is struck by lightning when he is in the womb, giving him an electric-like charge and powers such as telepathy, telekinesis, and unprecedented intelligence. Raised in seclusion, he is introduced into a less-than-accepting community.

In this respect the film's theme centers around being different and society's discrimination. The extent of this prejudice is overdone throughout the movie — one of its few flaws.

I'm aware that youths in boy's homes may be more rowdy than most, but even so, those depicted in the one in which Powder is enrolled are inhumanly cruel.

Another flaw is the accuracy within the albinism. Flanery's makeup is good, but he looks more like Michael Stipe than a true albino. His lips are dark in hue, exposing the melanin he purportedly lacks.

Also, albinos are supposed to have light pink eyes, whereas Powder's are deep violet. This may be explained, however, by the possibility that he is misdiagnosed in the movie (in which

"... BUT HE LOOKS MORE LIKE MICHAEL
STIPE THAN A TRUE

case he is a bona fide freak).

Aside from this ambiguity, the film is excellent all-around. Flanery's performance is wonderful, accompanied by equally competent contributions by the rest of the cast.

This is good for costars Mary Steenburgen ("Parenthood," "The Butcher's Wife") and Jeff Goldblum ("Jurassic Park," "Hideaway"), both of whose careers have not exactly been soaring since the mid-80s. Goldblum is his usual, amusingly quirky self.

Lance Heinreiken ("Aliens," "No Escape"), on the other hand, has had a relatively successful career in recent films. His performance in "Powder," though, displays substantial ability in emotional drama.

The cinematography is powerful in places and the musical score accompanies it well. Carter Burwell's theme from "Miller's Crossing" is played in the previews, but those of you who are fond of it will be disappointed to find it's nowhere in the film. Why do movies do that, anyway?

I must confess my expectations for "Powder" were marred to begin with.

There's been some heat in the media because writer/director Victor Salva was convicted of molesting Nathan Winters, the child star of his 1988 film, "Clownhouse."

To give him due credit, though, he has done a superb job with "Powder." This appraisal after my initial prejudice will attest to its quality.

It just goes to show that bad people can make good movies. It's not my place to judge Salva as "bad," but my point is that it doesn't matter what the story is behind a film. All that matters is what it means to the viewer.

the Faculty Senate by-laws.

"It states very specifically that [Cahill] nominates students and I confirm or appoint them to CLEC," Hyer said.

Charlene Black, associate vice president for academic affairs, who is Cahill's boss, said Wednesday there had been a meeting of administrators and members of SGA on the issue.

"It should be Mr. Hyer's responsibility to inform students" about the meeting, Black said. She would not comment on her opinion of what transpired.

"This is a student government issue," Black said.

Hyer said Wednesday the meeting included himself, Executive Assistant to the President Ruth Ann Rogers, Union Director Earl Cashon, SGA Vice President for Finance John Walraven, Black and Cahill.

He said earlier that a "mutually-agreeable" solution had been reached concerning CLEC membership, but was unavailable for further comment by press time.

Cohen delivered his lecture Monday evening to a packed audience of over 100 people in the Union Ballroom. He spoke for one hour, then answered questions for one hour.

Cohen discussed media mergers, which he said results in "self-censorship" by reporters who are afraid of angering their corporate employers, who, he said, are primarily conservative. He spoke extensively about the merger of Time and Warner. He also covered cable television and sponsors of news shows who allegedly influence the content of shows.

Cohen also criticized conservative figure Rush Limbaugh during the latter part of his lecture, listing alleged "errors" by Limbaugh.

Rip Us Off.

That's right — you heard right. Rip us off. Get something for nothing. Say hello to a friend. Find a roommate. Get a job. Find a home for a litter of kittens. Buy a wombat. Or sell your Beamer (right, like you expect us to believe that you — and not your folks — actually have the title to that BMW). Regardless of your purpose (or even if you are a congenital liar like the Beamer owner), Georgia's liveliest classified ad section is for you. Students, faculty and staff can have their 25-word action ads published for nothing (non-commercial listings only, please). Fill out the little rectangles below, and send your ad to G-A Action Ads, LB 8001, GSU or drop them by our offices in the Williams Center, Room 223. You MUST include your name and Landrum Box number to qualify for a freebie. Rembmer, keep it short: students, faculty and staff must pay 15¢ per words for as which exceed the 25-word limit. And, please — no telephone calls... at this price we don't take dictation.
