Miller proposes changes to HOPE program

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — The governor proposed major changes to the HOPE program that could make it tougher for some students to qualify for the popular college scholarships financed by Georgia's lottery.

Under one proposal, high school students seeking to attain the "B" average required for a HOPE scholarship could only count grades earned in core courses like English, math and science. Electives could not be counted.

The requirement would take effect with students entering 9th grade next year.

"In the long run, we will have better-prepared students entering college," Gov. Zell Miller said.

Miller said the step is designed to correct a problem educators found with the first two classes of HOPE scholars. Those who had difficulty maintaining a "B" average in college to maintain their scholarship eligibility often were the ones who attained "B" averages in high school by doing well in easy, non-academic courses, he said.

Another change, effective next fall, would require students in private colleges to maintain the same "B" average to keep their scholarships as those attending Georgia's public universities.

A main goal of the HOPE program should be "to encourage and reward hard work," Miller said. "This ought to be the case at both public and private colleges."

Miller announced the proposal in an address to legislative budget writers who are meeting this week to prepare for next week's opening of the 1996 legislative session.

To help prepare for the 1996 Olympics, Miller said he is recommending $21.7 million to house, feed and train the thousands of state law enforcement officers who will be required for security.

Andrews joins Council

By Ashley Hunt
News Editor

As the new city councilman for District Four, Cory Andrews plans some changes for Statesboro and GSU.

Graduate student Andrews was sworn in as councilman for District Four Jan. 3.

He plans to bring up the issue of legalizing liquor in Statesboro.

"I have made it clear that this is something I want to attach to the November general election ballot because I think that the presidential election and a national election will always have the biggest turnout of voters, and I'd like to get the most accurate reading of the people of Statesboro as to what they want to do," Andrews said.

The issue of legalizing liquor in Statesboro is expected to be put to a referendum in the fall, he said.

Andrews said that once the council votes on something to be put on referendum, it has to go on referendum within 45 days.

"That's not going to be something I will look at doing until September or October," he said.

He also said that many of the council members want to poll people in their district to see what people think of putting it to a referendum.

"I think it's becoming more and more of a popular issue not just among students, but to immense proportion."

"It will bring in extra revenue for the city and also will obligate us to provide more services to the people after we take them into the city, services like sanitation and trash reduction," he said.

The council also plans to open another landfill by contracting out to another county, instead of creating another one in Bulloch County.

Andrews said the one currently in Bulloch County will be closed down, but will still have people there to treat and clean it.

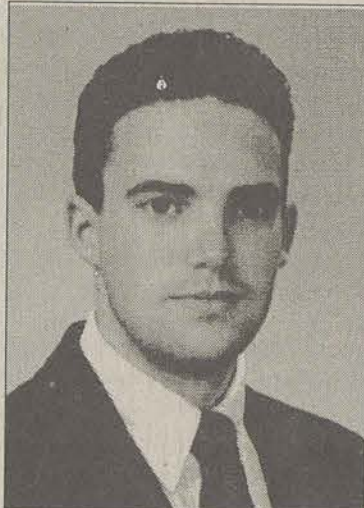

"We're in the process now of working out an arrangement with another county to where we will haul our garbage there and deposit it," he said. "That's just a temporary solution; I'm not sure if it would be a five to ten year contract."

He said the current landfill is expected to run out in about a year to a year and a half.

"We are going to have to take care of this promptly because of all the paperwork, contracts and bidding process," he said.

"Whenever the city does something of any significance, they accept bids from contractors, private and government townspeople as well," he said. "I think it has a good chance of being put to referendum."

Andrews said if liquor is legalized in Statesboro, then it might create more jobs, businesses and more investments for people in the town.

But Andrews said the council's main focus this year is the annexation of more property into Statesboro that will be a "great and vast project of

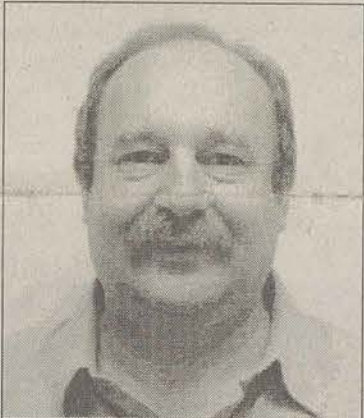

Hagins serves as District Three Councilman

By Ashley Hunt

Director of GSU Stores and Shops Wendell Hagins was sworn in Jan. 3 as the new councilman for District Three, and said that he wants to see students more involved and knowledgeable about Statesboro.

Hagins said the first thing he will do as councilman is look at his priorities.

"The mayor has given me the chair of the public works committee and I want to start looking at what the priorities are, such as what the needs are, how we can coordinate students that live off campus and what kind of service we are giving," he said.

One of his priorities is to start building a new fire station that helps serve GSU and the surrounding community.

College of Education building to be complete by summer

By Melanie Weinberg
Assistant News Editor

GSU is planning some large-scale construction projects which are expected to drastically affect the southern end of campus in the coming years.

The first phase for the new College of Education Building is slated to begin this month and should be completed by July.

Phase I has a budget of $1.5 million and consists of the site preparation on the southern end of Forest Drive.

"This includes replacing the existing curvy part of Forest Drive and projecting it further into the woods," Philip Hodge, director of facilities planning, said. "We are also moving the intersection of Plant Drive and Forest Drive further south."

The pedestrian will also be extended when the new building is built, he said.

The second phase of the project is the building itself.

Construction of the building is scheduled to start in the fall of this year.

The new College of Education building will be located in what is now the wooded area adjacent to the gravel parking lot across from the College of Technology Building.

"The building itself will be similar in character to the College of Business and Technology Buildings," Shedrick Coleman, project manager for the College of Education, said.

After construction is complete, the existing Carroll Building will be renovated and used by other departments yet to be determined, Coleman said.

The expansion of the Southern Center is another project aimed to begin this fall. The budget for construction is estimated at $18 million.

This includes the addition of several new conference rooms and a 600-seat performing arts center.

Red Cross suffers from blood donor shortage

Organization issues a statement appealing for more donors in the southeastern region of the United States

By Ashley Hunt
News Editor

The American Red Cross has gone on a public appeal to its donors in the southeast region because of a rapidly decreasing blood supply.

The Red Cross issued a statement Jan. 3 describing its critical need for donors, especially types O and B, both negative and positive.

Nancy Martin, a consultant for the Red Cross, said in an interview last week that the organization was on an appeal because it is unable to meet the needs of patients in its area.

"We give the hospital a projection and they will schedule (surgeries) around it," she said. "That blood is promised to a patient."

Martin said that the blood shortage might be due to the holiday season because many people are traveling, schools are closed, and also many people are sick during this time of the year.

Martin said that when this happens they have to import blood from other regions, and that the southeast region may not be the only region on appeal.

In the statement issued by the Red Cross, the region goes on appeal when its blood supply "has reached a critical level and the headquarters has less than a three days' supply on the shelves."

Last month, the Red Cross issued a statement denying allegations that 78 percent of the blood collected at the Nov. 27 drive at GSU was HIV positive. The blood that was collected proved good, and has already been used.

Those over the age of 17 and weighing at least a 110 pounds can give blood up to six times a year. The entire process takes about an hour. For more information about donating blood, call the Red Cross at 1-800-GIVE LIFE.

Second Chandler Road bike accident

Statesboro Police responded Monday morning to a bike accident on Chandler Road in front of In The Pines apartment complex that left one student injured. Becky Williams, 19, was injured after she failed to yield while crossing Chandler Road and struck the car windshield of Carla Brown, 19. Brown was driving south on Chandler at the time of the accident. Williams refused initial treatment but was later treated at the hospital for lacerations on her hands, said Officer Briley. This is the second bike wreck on Chandler Road this school year.

Republican plan allows big tax cuts, tougher prison sentences

By Joan Kirchner
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Republican leaders trotted out a legislative agenda Friday that calls for a tax cut larger than the governor has proposed, tougher prison sentences for serious crimes and mandatory jail time for uninsured motorists.

The GOP leaders did not say how they would pay for their proposals.

"I don't think it's our job to say the money ought to come from this place and go to this place," House Minority Leader Bob Irvin said at a news conference.

"We believe there's ample places where changes can be made to spend money on these new priorities."

The GOP agenda for the 1996 session, which begins Monday, also includes tougher penalties on welfare mothers who have additional children, a two-night jail stay for first-time drunken drivers and a ban on legislators accepting gifts from lobbyists.

Republicans also will push for passage of a bill pending from last year to outlaw affirmative action programs in state and county governments.

The measure passed in the House, but then was tabled indefinitely.

The GOP leaders said Gov. Zell Miller's tax cut should be larger.

Miller has proposed removing the 4-cent state sales tax from groceries over the next three years, beginning with a 2-cent cut this year at a cost of $175 million.

But Republicans said the tax cut should be at least $250 million, the size of a tax cut that was vetoed by Miller last year after the attorney general deemed it constitutionally flawed.

To do that, Irvin said the GOP will propose trimming 2 cents off the sales tax on July 1, instead of Oct. 1 as Miller has proposed.

"It should be as big as the one the governor vetoed last year," Irvin said.

The Republicans also are pushing a bill to require first-time offenders to serve at least 85 percent of their sentences for serious crimes.

Those would include homicide, aggravated assault, robbery, burglary, drug dealing and sex offenses.

OUR JOB TO SAY THE

PLACE AND GO TO

— BOB IRVIN
HOUSE MINORITY LEADER

The Department of Corrections said the proposal would cost $1.1 billion over five years, but Attorney General Michael Bowers said making cuts in prison operating costs could lower the estimate to $400 million.

Bowers cited figures showing that inmates in Georgia serve only 27 percent to 41 percent of their sentences.

But corrections spokesman Mike Light said 1995 figures show that most violent criminals serve 50 percent of their sentences.

"There's one indisputable fact we know about crime: Bad people who are locked up cannot commit new crimes on the street," said Bowers, who attended the news conference.

Insurance Commissioner John Oxendine said he is pushing a bill to require jail time for motorists caught driving without insurance for at least 45 days. A first-time offender would spend 24 hours in jail, second-time offenders would spend two nights in jail and third-time offenders would spend 10 days in jail.

About 30 percent of drivers have no insurance, Oxendine said.

Currently, there is no mandatory jail time for uninsured motorists.

"They are also the most dangerous individuals driving on the street today," he said.

Child drowns in grease trap

The Associated Press

SHREVEPORT — Police are investigating how a lid covering a grease trap outside a hotel restaurant was moved or loosened, allowing a 5-year-old boy to fall in and drown.

But investigators said they were in no hurry to interview the other children who were playing with Nil A. Roy when he fell into the vat on New Year's day.

"They're traumatized already," said Detective J.B. Walker Jr. of the police department's Youth Services Bureau. "We're giving them a cooling-off period."

The boy died 14 hours after being pulled from the 1,000-gallon trap outside the Hong Kong Dynasty restaurant. An adult pulled him out of the vat after being alerted by the children, but the boy never regained consciousness.

Walker said witnesses told him the 2-foot-wide circular lid was closed before the accident, which occurred during a party the child's parents were attending. "There was no security on it at all," Walker said. "And (the lid) was fairly light. I don't think it weighed 10 pounds."

Video game dispute ends in double slaying

The Associated Press

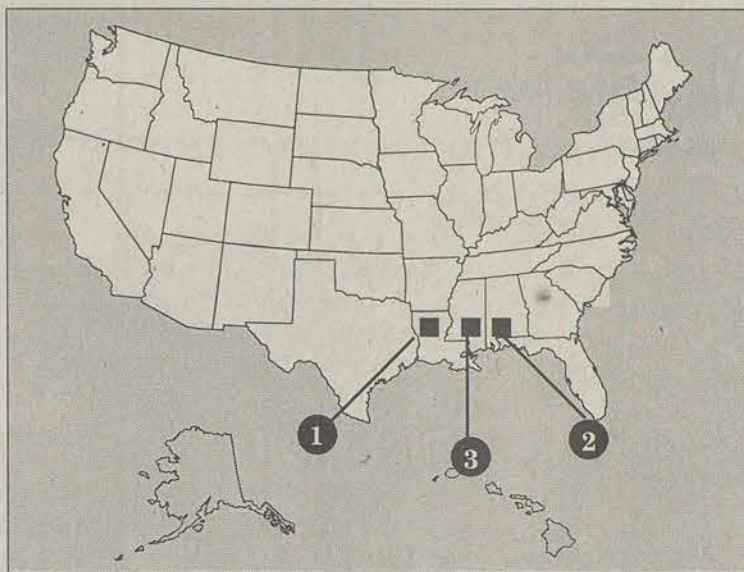

BAY MINETTE, Ala. — An argument over a video game triggered the fatal shootings of two cousins last month, the mother of one victim said.

The motive surfaced during a bond hearing in Baldwin County for Andy Dean Deas, who was recently returned to Alabama from his home in Gastonia, N.C.

Deas, 18, is charged with capital murder in the Dec. 19 killings of Jason Boyd Prisock, 16, and Jeffery Scott Rosa, 23.

Sheila Aho, Rosa's mother, quoted police saying the shootings resulted from a dispute over a video game. The police investigator was unavailable for comment, but court officials confirmed the video game link to the slayings.

The victims were shot in the head with a .22-caliber pistol in their home. Deas lived next door.

Couple ties the knot after 15 years

The Associated Press

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — An elderly couple will end 15 years of courtship when they marry this weekend in Hattiesburg.

It will be the second marriage for both Evelyn Stewart and Benjamin Ratcliff who will tie the knot Saturday at the Starlight Missionary Baptist Church.

Ratcliff, an 88-year-old retired gardener, said he saw no need to hurry.

"All we're going to do is go ahead and get married and get through with it."

Ratcliff's daughter Mattie Lawrence said the couple has always gotten along well together.

"They do a lot together like friends," Lawrence said. "They talk every night before going to bed, for hours on end."

Why get married after so many years of friendship?

"Well, because he asked me to get married," said Stewart, an 88-year-old housekeeper.

Cook celebrates 50 years at Melrose Diner

The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — No one at the Melrose Diner was surprised when Walter Birkhead strolled into work two hours early.

After all, Birkhead has been working as a cook at the South Philadelphia diner for 50 years and was late only once. That was in 1955.

And it wasn't his fault.

"They changed my schedule and forgot to tell me," Birkhead recalled with a chuckle. "They didn't dock my time for it."

That might have had something to do with the fact that diner owner Richard Kubach realized that Birkhead, who turned 90 in November, had not missed a day of slicing hams and seasoning soups since he was hired in 1945.

Birkhead's colleagues and family helped him celebrate his 50th anniversary at the diner by seating him at a banquet table in the chrome-filled kitchen where he has worn out dozens of pairs of shoes and letting him enjoy a meal cooked by someone else.

But Birkhead decided he had work to do first.

At 10 a.m., he settled in at the meat slicer where he slices enough turkey for 100 sandwiches every Wednesday and Friday, the two days a week he always works.

He also checked on the cream of tomato soup.

"Needs some more zip," Birkhead proclaimed as he added pepper.

He figured he would have a full afternoon of breading seafoods, one of his primary kitchen responsibilities in the last few years as he's gradually scaled his work week back from three days to two.

"He holds down his job, nobody carries him, even at age 90," said Paul Tierney, 66, the general manager, who himself is working on 41 years at the diner.

Birkhead grew up near Salisbury, Md., and came to Philadelphia after working as a cook at a restaurant in New York. He spent most of World War II working as a machinist at the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard and returned to his first love, cooking, after the war.

80-year-old finishes ultramarathon

The Associated Press

HAGERSTOWN, Md. — Dizzy and queasy, Carl Llewellyn managed a modest smile as spectators along the dark road slapped him on the back and cheered.

He crossed the finish line 14 minutes shy of the 14-hour time limit — becoming the first 80-year-old to ever finish the grueling John F. Kennedy 50-Mile ultramarathon.

Then he made his way to the side of the road and threw up.

The chicken soup, power drink, beef bouillon, water and flat cola that had fueled the 134-pound man's feet also had upset his stomach. A few minutes later, he was composed and feeling fine.

The race began the morning of Nov. 18 with a three-mile warmup on paved streets near Boonsboro in western Maryland, about 70 miles northwest of Washington. Racers then began an 1,190-foot ascent up South Mountain for 12.7 miles on the Appalachian Trail, which was icy and slushy from a recent snowfall.

"The trail was horrible," Llewellyn said minutes after finishing. "My feet were just sliding all over."

Our Opinion

Don't let fear-mongers get their satisfaction

A vicious rumor relating directly to the GSU community circulated in south Georgia last month deserves nothing but an angry response from the student body.

Some pathetic creature decided to "leak" so-called information to the mass media suggesting that 78 percent of the blood donated at GSU during a blood drive was contaminated with HIV, the virus responsible for AIDS. The rumor further suggested the Red Cross had to destroy most of the donated blood because of contamination.

The fear-monger who fabricated this information clearly has no idea how serious the implication must be. This person seemingly sees no personal impact from the horror of AIDS, perhaps the most widely-dreaded disease of our time. Nor does the person responsible seem at all sensitive to the very real dangers of HIV infection among college students. If he did, he would not have so cavalierly thrown about rumors of such a serious nature.

Even if we had any reason to be skeptical of the Red Cross's assertion that none of the blood was contaminated and all of it was used, we know that if the rumor were true GSU would be in chaos right now. As Red Cross officials noted, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, along with the Health Department, would be mounting a major investigation on campus.

Leonard Pickens, news director for WPIQ radio station in Brunswick, said a call-in from a listener first alerted the media and the Red Cross to the rumor. Pickens speculated that the call might have originated in a political office, but declined to be more specific.

If Mr. Pickens' speculation rings true, or he knows more than we do about who placed the call to his radio station, there are some very frightening scenarios to consider. That this rumor about GSU could have been politically tainted is a bone-chilling proposition.

Is it really too wild an idea to wonder if someone in a political office, or one of his lackeys, has some kind of vendetta against GSU, the Red Cross, Statesboro or maybe just college students? Or if it is not a vendetta, might the rumor involve a radical conservative trying to scare people into abstinence? A radical liberal trying to blow the AIDS crisis out of proportion? Any of these scenarios, while frightening, are possible.

Even if speculation of political involvement sounds paranoid, we are still faced with the fact that someone among us, somewhere, has spread a cruel rumor about the GSU community for the pure sensation of it. That's almost as bad.

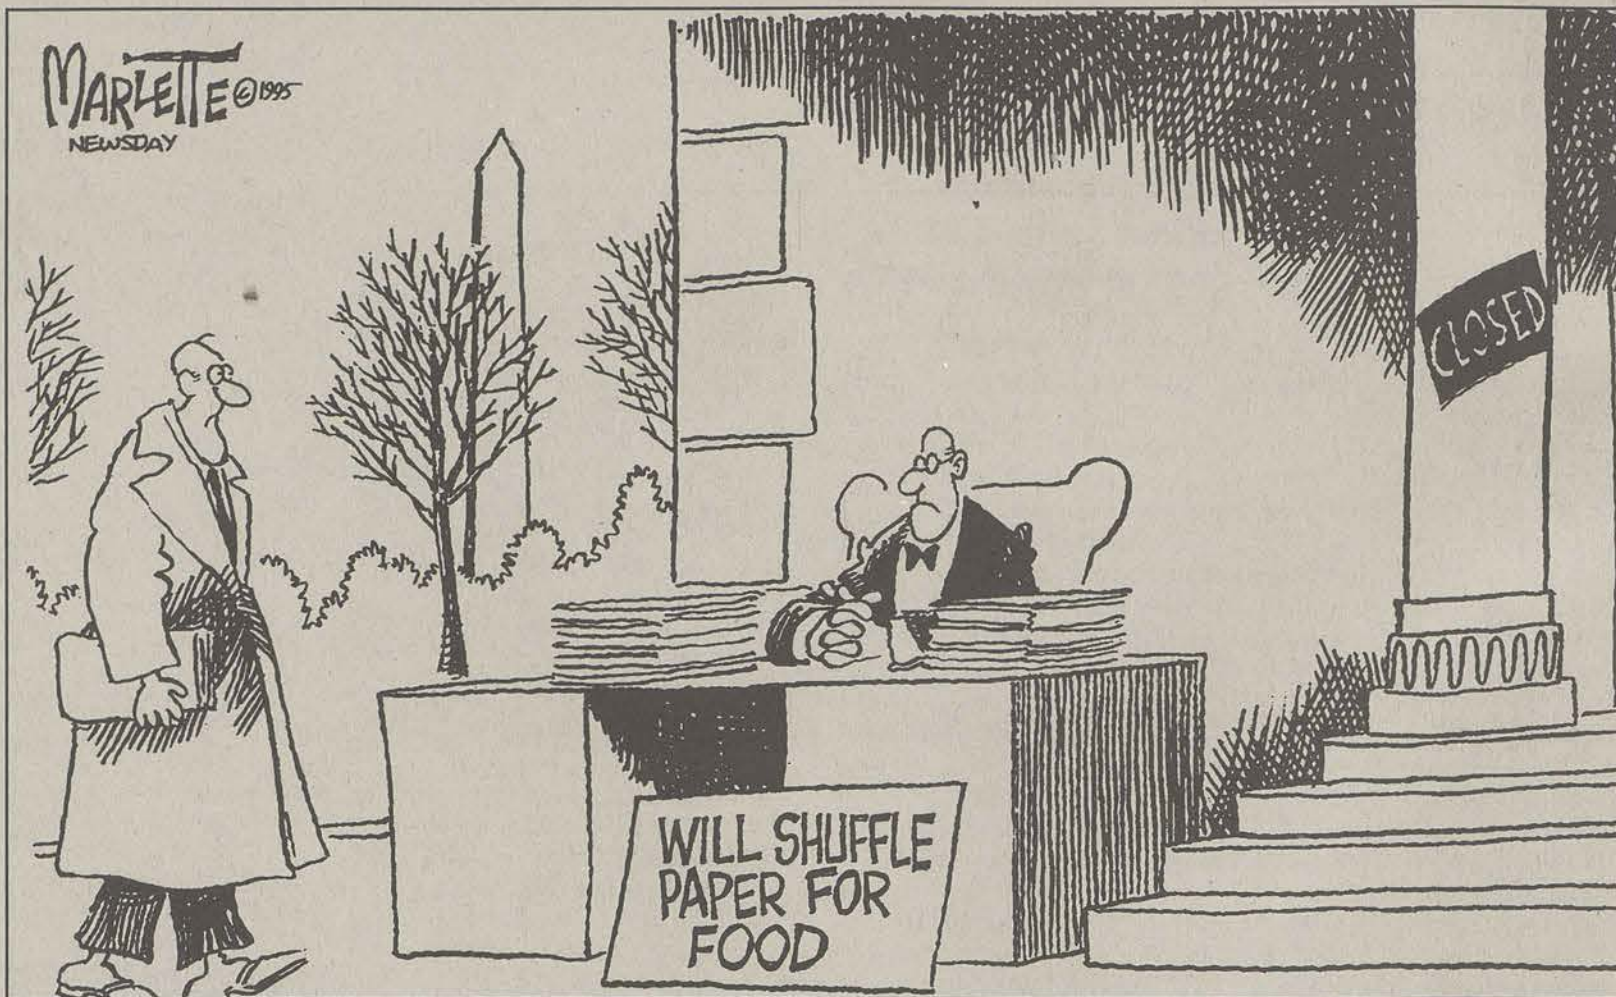

Our advice to those who might have heard the rumor, or read about it, is to concern yourselves with the truth of the matter and not what a random person wants you to believe.

Arm yourselves with facts, not fear.

Your own donation is next step

While one mission of a college student is learning to detect the difference between factual evidence and fiction, yet another is learning how to serve others. Healthy members of a society have a moral duty to help those in need of precious commodities. When you give blood, you give life. Participate in upcoming Red Cross blood drives at GSU if you can spare just a moment of your time.

Someone out there needs you to share the gift of life.

Attendance policies have no place in college

MARCUS BENSON

COLUMNIST

With winter quarter underway, students are desperate to get to their first classes to pick up their mystery syllabus.

The first thing I look for on my syllabus, for any class, is an attendance policy, because that is one thing that really bothers me. Attendance policies have no use in higher education academics.

Students should be graded on their abilities as intellectuals and as learners. What should not be punished, or rewarded for that matter, is their attendance.

Students are adults, and they should come and go as they please. Some might say that an attendance policy builds good habits for future employment for students. That isn't even relevant. The students pay the teachers — not the other way around.

Out in the world, when you have to be on time for work to feed your family, it's a completely different scenario than being on time or present in class.

If you can handle missing lectures and discussions and still know your material very well, then you deserve an A or a B, not a D or an F.

Attendance policies can be detrimental to the aspiring student who happens not to be punctual. Students who are not punctual are not necessarily dummies, granted some of them are very ignorant. And those students who are at every class and every lab on time the entire quarter aren't always the brightest people in the world.

In a class with a harsh attendance policy, two students with these attributes might end the quarter with two totally different grades. The first might get a D, while the latter might receive a B, even when the first knows more about the subject.

Which brings me to my main argument: students here at GSU, as well as many other higher learning institutions, should be graded and evaluated on their intelligence, improvement and merit, not simply on their merit and punctuality.

Some students need to be in class every day to do well — not all, just some. And those who need to go to class and don't are at fault. If a student has a specialty in one subject and doesn't need to make class every day, then he shouldn't be forced to go. That can cause a severe burnout due to boredom.

I should know; it happened to me last quarter. I made excellent grades in my English composition class the first few weeks. I started missing a few classes here and there, but still made the same level of grades. Because of the attendance policy I wound up with a C in the class. I made two Cs on my weekly papers, and the rest As and Bs. I wasn't rewarded for my writing; I was punished for my seemingly bad punctuality.

Some of the greatest thinkers in the world are also the wildest, craziest, and even laziest people in the world.

Albert Einstein wasn't the most punctual person in the world. I don't think he judged people by their punctuality. He judged them and pondered on them by watching their actions and by evaluating their intelligence. It is safe to say that he was one of the smartest men ever to walk on Earth, so why don't we follow his example?

Steven Hawking, another astounding intellectual, got into a lot of trouble when he was a young man, but his priority was learning and opening his mind to the nature and powers of the cosmos. He partied and had fun a lot, but he also knew where his priorities stood, and science was above punctuality by light years. No pun intended.

If Albert Einstein or Steven Hawking were enrolled in a physics class with a harsh attendance policy at Southern this quarter, do you think they would make every class? And if they didn't, what kind of grade do you think they would make, given that they would obviously learn all the material and make As on all their tests? You decide.

What kind of grade would you give to a lazy genius?

Your Opinion

Conservative arguments lacked sophistication

Editor,

I am writing in response to Dr. Sabia's participation in GSU's fall quarter Homeless and Hunger Awareness Week and the subsequent "conservative" outcry it has inspired.

In the ensuing delirium, a number of GSU conservatives found it necessary to "take issue" with the good doctor concerning her arguably well-intentioned, though misguided efforts on behalf of our nation's downtrodden.

Speaking as a conservative (although I cannot claim to speak for all conservatives), I would like to take this time to voice my concern over these arguments.

In my opinion, the use of intellectually shallow or ad hominem attacks against Dr. Sabia by elements of the conservative student movement have served to stifle any legitimate and meaningful dialectic over this issue. The recent student criticisms (i.e. Clint Murphy's Nov. 21 letter to the editor) have left much to be desired.

My qualm is not indispensably connected to what my fellow "Bergerons" have said (as trite and hackneyed as it may have been), but the lack of substance with which they have managed to say it. For example, Mr. Murphy harangues Dr. Sabia for clinging to what he views as her "failed liberal ideology." He attempts to debunk her system, without defining it or offering anything meaningful to put in its place.

Mr. Murphy would have done better had he endeavored to explain the motivation behind Dr. Sabia's affinity toward our nation's vagrant population. For example, he may have wanted to explain to the reader that Dr. Sabia believes poverty and destitution to be the fault of productive members of our society — therefore making it the responsibility of the government to rectify the situation.

Mr. Murphy might have also pointed out the fallacy of Dr. Sabia's assumption that America's homeless population consists of people similar to ourselves. Like other activists, she attempts to present the majority of the homeless, not as mentally ill or as substance abusers, but as normal citizens victimized by an inherently unjust capitalist system.

By characterizing the homeless as helpless victims of circumstance, Dr. Sabia negates the role of individual responsibility and decision-making in a human being's life. For her, the homeless are excused from any and all blame. That is, the individual is never to be held accountable for his plight. He is always the victim. Dr. Sabia, instead of promoting the tried-and-true ideal of "rational self-interest," continues to promote the tried-and-failed policy of the mindless selflessness of the "bee swarm."

I do not wish to give the impression that I am sympathetic to the cause for which Dr. Sabia has seemingly sacrificed so much time and effort.

Dr. Sabia's Nov. 14 anecdotal remonstrance, including her lamentations over "governmental laws and policies" which she believes to have caused "unacceptable levels of unemployment and inadequate wage standards" is reminiscent of the old adage "from each according to his ability, to each according to his need."

Let me need to remind the reader that in Stalin's paradise and on "Air Strip One" all members of society were guaranteed — among other things — lifelong housing and lifetime employment.

Outraged at racism letter

Editor,

Outrage. It's the best description of emotion that I felt after reading Demetrius Freeman's ("Leave blacks alone on the African issue") in the Nov. 16 issue of the G-A. Mr. Freeman made it sound as though he wanted the prejudice, bias and hatred vanished not only from his life, but the lives of all others. So why is the issue of race, hatred and prejudice "a black thing?" To quote Stephanie Ray, "It's a people thing; we all need to understand."

Mr. Freeman followed up his "it's a black thing; you wouldn't understand" statement by saying "so stop trying," and that it saddens him to see such hatred in the hearts of his classmates. So if it does indeed "sadden" him so much to see such hatred, then why would he want anyone to stop trying to make a change in the way people think and feel, even if it is just a change in ourselves?

Later he criticized part of the justice system, claiming that the three strikes law is aimed solely at African-Americans. In case he was unaware, that part of the judicial system is indeed colorblind. The law is written to be equal to all citizens.

Later he criticized the fact that child molesters got out earlier than people caught with cocaine. It seems to me that instead of complaining that we incarcerate people caught with cocaine, that he should instead complain that child molesters are not incarcerated long enough.

It seems to me that Mr. Freeman needs to get his priorities in order.

Q: What is Texas A&M's record against Southern Conference men's basketball teams?

A: 3 and 5 with this weekend's win over GSU.

FROM THE FAIRWAY

RONNE SWINFORD

GSU students, basketball teams need your support

Attention GSU fans: you have a unique chance to grow with a basketball team. The GSU men's team is in a position to make some noise in the conference tournament in about two years.

They made an impression on me at the last game when they played a much bigger program, and with only 10 scholarships available, gave Texas A&M all that they wanted.

If the fans of the program will come out and watch and cheer, then the players will grow into a team.

This same thing has happened before; it happened at Georgia Tech. They were not under NCAA probation like GSU is, but they had a program that was pretty low. When Bobby Creimans came to the school, he built a great fan base for a pretty bad team. Time went by and the players matured, Tech became better and better until they were actually a power in the toughest basketball conference in the nation, the ACC.

If the fans at GSU will come out and see this team now, they will see the effort that they put forth now, and they will appreciate the growing that these plucky freshmen are going through.

At the beginning of the season the team looked lost offensively, but in Savannah they looked much better.

GSU also now has the beginning of the conference schedule to worry about. This will be the first conference season for these freshmen, and they will need some support from the fans.

Hanner Fieldhouse is not one of the better facilities in the conference. But the one advantage that it does have over all the rest is that it is loud. With 4,300 of your closest friends in that place it rocks, and that type of Duke-like craziness is what a young team needs.

Coach Polinsky said earlier in the season that young teams play on emotion and experienced teams use emotion, so why not come out and relieve some stress at the games?

This fan support is not just needed at men's games, but at women's games as well. The Lady Eagles play exciting basketball, and are fun to watch. The gym has new lower level seats which are much better than the old bleachers, so it is now possible to sit at a GSU basketball game.

Finally, justice from the NCAA

In breaking news, the NCAA has taken 21 points away from the Florida Gators and given them to the Nebraska Cornhuskers. The points were awarded due to Florida's pitiful play in the Fiesta Bowl.

The new final score:

Nebraska — 83
Florida — 3

GSU Eagles shot in the 'Hart'

By Mike Davis
Staff Writer

Saturday night, the GSU Eagle men's basketball team dropped their seventh game in a row with a 67-63 loss to Texas A&M, a team that entered the game with a three-game winning streak.

With the Savannah Civic Center serving as the GSU home court, the Eagles found themselves behind early when the Aggies, led by junior-guard Derrick Hart, hit a 3-pointer which helped ignite an 8-0 run.

GSU didn't score their first points until almost five minutes into the game when Brian Wallace hit for two of his 12 points to put the Eagles on the board.

The Eagles managed to rally back and tie the game at 12-12 with a quick jumper from Frank Jackson, who saw only 11 minutes of playing time as a result of foul trouble.

Coach Gregg Polinsky's team grabbed its first lead of the game when Duane Goebel hit two free throws midway through the first half, which contributed to a spectacular 12-0 run, giving GSU the 24-16 advantage.

Now finding themselves down nine points, the Aggies battled back with two quick three-pointers from Quinton James and Kyle Kessel. Hart managed to hit another one of his three-point markers, bringing Texas A&M back out of their deficit, and ending the half with the two teams tied 29-29.

Jackson's back-up, freshman Johna Seay, had what Polinsky thought was his best performance of the year in the second half.

Scoring 10 of his team-leading 15 points in the second session, Seay led the Eagles on both ends of the court.

A&M scraped together a five-point lead early, but a quick

James Hill

Johna Seay (52) draws yet another foul.

Wallace jumper, a Ryan Parker steal and lay-up once again evened out the game, which during its course saw five lead changes.

Then, with the Aggies clinging to a three point lead with 11 minutes left in the game, Ryan Parker hit two back-to-back three-pointers, giving GSU the two-point edge.

Fernando Daniel's free throws added to the lead.

Cross Country

Tim Willis, a former GSU cross country runner, broke the world record for blind runners in the 10,000 meters with a time of 32 minutes and 27 seconds. The amazing part of the record is that most world records are broken by hundredths or tenths of seconds, but Willis broke the record by 23 seconds in the Oct. 29th race in Phoenix, Arizona.

Willis has also been featured on billboards for the Olympics/Paralympics to be held in Atlanta this summer. He will appear on 50 billboards to promote the Paralympics.

Women's Basketball

Lady Eagle basketball player Telly Hall earned an all-tournament selection leading the Lady Eagles to a third place finish in the Florida International University Sun and Fun Classic last weekend.

Hall had 49 points and 23 rebounds in the two games of the tournament.

Women's Soccer

Debbie Hensley has been named the female College-Athlete-of-the-Year by the Georgia Sports Hall of Fame. Hensley was selected out of a pool of outstanding student-athletes in the Division 1-A category.

The Jesup resident accepts the honor at the Georgia Sports Hall of Fame Awards Banquet at the Atlanta Marriott Hotel on Feb. 3. Other award recipients include Atlanta Braves manager Bobby Cox and Georgia Tech volleyball coach Shelton Collier.

Lady Eagles trounce Lady Moccasins

By Ronnie Swinford
Sports Editor

The Lady Eagles, led by two 20-point scorers, pushed their record to 7-4 and 1-0 in the conference with a 77-70 win over the UTC

Lady Moccasins Sunday.

The Lady Eagles jumped out early, and led by as many as 13 in the first half. The Lady Eagles were led in the early run by Tarsha Askew who had 11 points. The next highest scorer was Telly Hall who had six in the half, although she only played eight minutes due to early foul trouble.

The score at the half was 37-31 GSU in a game that resembled a track meet more than a basketball game. There were 61 field goal attempts in the first half combined. But the stat of the first half was the 36.4 percent that the Lady Eagles shot from the free-throw line.

Going into the second half GSU tried to feed the ball into Hall in the post. They did a very good job since she had 17 points in the second half.

"They just couldn't match up with Telly," said Tarsha Askew, who had 26 points. "I knew that the person guarding Telly was in foul trouble so our plan was to get her the ball."

The Eagles went through a three-minute lull in the second half; they were outscored eight to zero during that stretch.

The lead was also whittled away to three during that stretch, but the Lady Eagles were able to hold on to get their first conference win of the year: 77-70.

"We were able to hold this team to 70 points," Head Coach Drema Greer said. "This team is nowhere near to where it will be, but they are getting better every time they play."

The Lady Eagles won the war, but the free throw shooting left room for improvement, 15 of 27 for the game.

"We ran the ball early, but for a while we weren't getting back on defense," Greer said.

The win marks the 200th of Greer's career.

She has accomplished the feat in only 307 games which gives her a 65 percent winning percentage for her career.

"I have had a lot of good players since I have been here, and I hope that I have gotten better because of them," Greer said.

Shula retires, Johnson waiting

By Steven Wine
The Associated Press

MIAMI — For the first time in 26 years, the job Jimmy Johnson wants most is vacant—and he is interested.

"I've got to sit down with Wayne Huizenga," Johnson said Saturday on Fox, referring to the owner of the Miami Dolphins. "Obviously I'm interested."

Obviously I love living in South Florida. But until you sit down, you can't say what you might do."

It may take someone of Johnson's stature to succeed Don Shula as coach of the Dolphins.

Johnson tops Huizenga's list of candidates and often has said that if he returns to the NFL, he'd prefe to do it in Miami.

Opportunity knocked Friday when Shula resigned, ending his record-setting reign with the Dolphins that began in 1970.

Johnson said he had yet to visit with Huizenga about the job.

"I have talked to Tampa Bay and some other teams," Johnson said.

"Until I talk to everybody, I don't know what I might do."

According to a source close to the Dolphins, other candidates include Florida coach Steve Spurrier, Kansas City Chiefs coach Marty Schottenheimer and Pittsburgh Steelers coach Bill Cowher.

The biggest obstacle to prevent the Dolphins from hiring Johnson was removed when Shula—who will remain with the team in a figurehead position—pledged to support owner Wayne Huizenga's choice.

The relationship between Shula and Johnson has been strained for several years.

Huizenga will try to have someone in the job by Feb. 8, when the NFL scouting combine begins in Indianapolis.

The free-agent signing period to resign.

Nonetheless, Miami's new coach will be measured against an unmatched standard of success set by Shula, a likely Pro Football Hall of Fame inductee next year.

Shula set NFL records with 347 victories and six Super Bowl appearances while posting only two losing seasons in a 33-year career.

"I don't know who is going to follow the legend," Huizenga said.

"Don is a special guy. Even the people who take shots at him realize he's a special guy."

Succeeding a legend can be a losing proposition. Just ask Les Steckel or Phil Bengston.

Steckel went 3-13 the year after

Bud Grant quit at Minnesota.

Bengston went 6-7-1 the year after Vince Lombardi left Green Bay.

John Driscoll was 7-7 in his first season as George Halas' successor at Chicago.

Johnson went 1-15 the year after Landry left but survived and became the NFL's hottest coaching commodity.

Replacing Shula is the kind of challenge that could lure Johnson back into the business.

The two coaches had a falling out when Johnson fired Shula's son David as the Cowboys' offensive coordinator following the 1990 season.

"THE BEST GUY AVAILABLE SHOULD BE BROUGHT IN TO DO THE JOB. IF HE'S THE BEST GUY, I WOULD RECOMMEND THAT HE BE THE GUY."

—DON SHULA, FORMER MIAMI DOLPHINS HEAD COACH

Chicago Dome...what next, skirts for players?

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — A domed stadium for the Chicago Bears could be a good economic move for the city, and the Bears' owners are in a good position to contribute to its construction, according to a published report.

Supporters of the domed stadium idea, who now have recruited Gov. Jim Edgar to their side, contend a major domed facility could pump $388 million a year into the Illinois economy by attracting large religious conventions, concerts, and such major sporting events as the NCAA Final Four and the NFL's Super Bowl.

"Chicago can't help but benefit from a domed stadium," Greg Roberts, director of marketing and events for the Silverdome in Pontiac, Mich., told the Chicago Tribune.

"It's going to get more shows, better shows. You can do a lot more."

The Bears have said they want future games played in an open-air stadium.

But the possibility of a domed home for the team appeared to gain ground last week.

Until there is more information on the table, however, the Bears say they won't commit to the latest reincarnation of the dome proposal, especially if they are to play a prominent role in generating the revenue for the project.

"We've always said if there's a dome alternative we'd be willing to listen," Bears spokesman Bryan Harlan told The Daily Southtown in reference to a possible multipurpose expansion of McCormick Place.

But Harlan stopped short of saying the Bears would agree to play under a dome.

Edgar last year pushed for a new $340 million domed stadium to keep the Bears from leaving Chicago.

He backed off temporarily to allow Chicago Mayor Richard Daley to pursue a $156 million plan to renovate the pro football team's existing home at Soldier Field.

Bears officials recently informed the city that Daley's plan was deficient, according to Daley.

Daley has said he would support the governor's dome plans if financing can be shared statewide or, at least, construction cost of a domed stadium.

But as of Friday afternoon, there had been no direct contact between Edgar's office and Bears officials, Edgar spokesman Gary Mack said.

"The governor just thinks it would be prudent to take a look at it," Mack said.

Edgar said Thursday that "the Bears might put up a couple hundred million dollars to make this become a reality that we wouldn't otherwise have."

Another Edgar spokesman, Eric Robinson, elaborated Friday on the governor's statement.

"I think the governor may have mentioned $200 million from the Bears, but that was a loose figure."

An analysis published in Sunday's editions of the Chicago Tribune indicates the Bears ownership might be in a good position to contribute to stadium costs.

The Tribune estimated that the team enjoys a pretax profit that jumped from more than $11 million in 1990 to more than $31 million by 1994.

The newspaper calculated that in 1994, the last full year for which information is available, the Bears collected gross revenues of $96.5 million and a pretax profit margin of 32.7 percent.

This is more than 6 1/2 times the profit margin that year of General Motors Corp. or Wal-Mart Stores Inc.

Since the Bears are privately owned, they do not publicly disclose financial information.

The Tribune based its story on an analysis of records of the National Football League and other sources.

ON CAMPUS

GSU soars to new heights

By Renee Hurston
Staff Writer

Who's the most energetic, dependable, and helpful group on campus?

Yes, you've guessed it, the S.O.A.R. Team.

The Southern Orientation Advisement and Registration Team, which is composed of 22 GSU students and directed by Philip Strong, has been on the campus for over 10 years.

The main purpose of the organization is to assist new students with their transition to college during summer orientation.

"We deal with all new students, not just students fresh out of high school, but as well as adults and transfer students," Strong said.

Strong added that GSU is a totally new environment for most new students, but that S.O.A.R. can make that transition to college a little easier.

"We provide special programs for the students, we get them advised and introduce them to the faculty," Strong said.

During orientation, several speakers present information on financial aid, housing, food services, and parking while the

S.O.A.R. Team provides the new students and their parents with other needed information.

The team also tries to answer any questions that a student or parent might have about college life.

"We don't guarantee to know all the information, but we know where to find the information," Strong added.

When looking for a potential S.O.A.R. Team member, Strong says he is looking for a "slice of campus."

"I want to group 22 students that represent GSU. This means different ethnic backgrounds, majors, hometowns, and shoe size," Strong said.

He added that a S.O.A.R. Team member must possess leadership skills and be able to give to others without looking for a reward.

All new team members must enroll in the two credit hour leadership course CED 591. The members then will go to a training retreat during spring quarter.

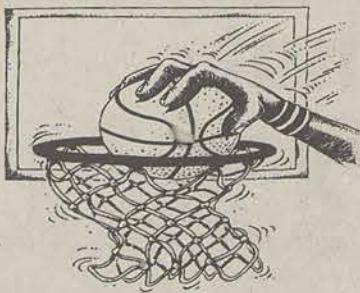

All S.O.A.R. Team members can only participate for two years.

"I want other students to get the same leadership experience," Strong said.

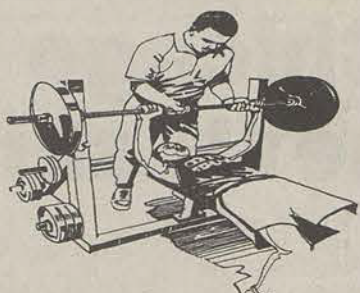

Former S.O.A.R. member Carlton Parks said that being involved with the organization was an experience of a lifetime.

"Being a member of the S.O.A.R. Team was the most rewarding thing that I've done since I've been at GSU," Parks said. "It gave me a chance to help others the same way that I was helped as a freshman."

The S.O.A.R. Team is accepting applications for new members. Students can pick up an application in the Rosenwald Building in room 289 or call 681-5409 for more information.

New year brings more changes

By Stacy Clemons
Features Editor

Well, the long awaited 1996 year is underway and with its arrival comes a lot of high expectations.

Before mid-1995, people had already begun talking about what the new year had in store for GSU and the entire state.

Of course, the main talk was the '96 Summer Olympic Games coming to Atlanta.

The games will bring millions of people from all around the world to Georgia for the '96 Games. Unlike the '95 Goodwill Games, the U.S. is picked as the favorite.

The '96 year will bring a few changes to GSU as well. The political science department was moved from the South Building to the Tech 3 Building.

This year has the potential of bringing a lot of changes and living up to its expectations. Unlike the '95 year, 1996 has started off better for GSU.

The women's basketball team is rebuilding from the lost of three key starters: Janice Johnson, Tara Anderson and Andrea Autry, while the men's basketball team is working on its inaugural season under Gregg Polinsky.

1996 has brought a late Christmas present to GSU dorms.

With the introduction of Sprint being the major carrier of long distance in 1995, there was no call waiting or three-way calling.

Now, dorms are equipped with at least the luxury of call waiting. Thanks Sprint and GSU.

Many groups are forming due to the increase of student involvement and some of the groups from '95 have more interesting events planned to help get the GSU students involved.

1995 brought the collaboration of the Oxford Wash-N-Shop and the Sanford Snack Shop to what is now known as The Pickle Barrel located in the Landrum Center.

On a whole, the 1996 year hopes to bring changes that will help the GSU community in the coming years.

Who knows, present students might even have the chance to benefit from them.

Sorority helps local children at Blitch Street

By Dana Gunter
Staff Writer

On Jan. 6, 1979, GSU chartered the Xi Eta Chapter of Delta Sigma Theta.

Since then, it has grown tremendously.

Its first chapter was established on Jan. 13, 1913, on the campus of Howard University in Washington, D.C. Now there are chapters all over the nation.

"Concern for the welfare of humankind everywhere is what Delta Sigma Theta Sorority, Inc., is all about," said member Maria Grovner.

"We, the sorority, demonstrate a vital concern for the social welfare, academic excellence, and cultural enrichment," she said.

And this was the original plan that the founders had in mind.

On Oct. 21, the members of Delta Sigma Theta and Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity took the children of New Beginnings for Children on a camping expedition for one night. The camping trip was held at Magnolia Springs in Millen, Ga. The children and volunteers enjoyed the experience of the wilderness by doing such activities as setting up tents, cooking over an open fire, telling stories, and roasting marshmallows.

When they aren't on camping trips, the members of Delta Sigma Theta and Phi Beta Sigma volunteer for the New Beginnings for Children, which is a division of the Blitch Street Community Center.

Members of the sorority and fraternity tutor the children in all subjects of education. Every evening, meals are provided for the children by the sorority.

Before the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays came, members of Delta Sigma Theta helped out several local Statesboro families by conducting a canned food drive. They collected over 300 cans to donate to seven families in the Whitesville community, along with a free turkey.

The Deltas proclaimed November 30 as "Thank You GSU Day." The purpose of this was to thank the students and faculty for the support they gave to Delta Sigma Theta. The sorority provided drinks for students and faculty who attended this event.

The sorority's next "Thank You GSU Day" will be Jan. 12, from 12 - 3 p.m. on the Union commons stage.

This past December, the sorority had a Christmas party for the residents of Statesboro Nursing Home.

The residents of the nursing home were entertained by various activities such as Christmas songs, games, food, and prizes.

The ladies of Delta Sigma Theta are looking forward to a very productive winter quarter.

Several events have been planned for the upcoming months. Some of the events are a Founder's Day Ceremony in which they will celebrate Kwanzaa and a Founder's Appreciation Day.

The Kwanzaa ceremony will take place Jan. 10 at 7 p.m. in the Russell Union Theater.

The Founder's Appreciation Day will take place Jan. 12th from 12 - 3 p.m. on the Union commons stage.

On Feb. 1, they start Black Awareness Month off by holding a tribute to the black male. This program will express the talents and accomplishments of black men. This is a way of showing black men that they are appreciated by the sorority. It will be held in the Russell Union Ballroom.

The Deltas also plan to hold the Crimson and Creme Ball on April 6 in the Russell Union Ballroom. It's still in the works, but details will be given out later.

If you aren't convinced by now that Delta Sigma Theta is more than just a sorority, you can stop by the Russell Union Ballroom at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, Jan. 9.

Any young ladies interested in learning how to become a part of Delta Sigma Theta are encouraged to come.

Mayor orders arrest for councilman

The Associated Press

FORT VALLEY, Ga. — A falling out between two lifelong friends resulted in the mayor of this middle Georgia town ordering the arrest of a city councilman.

Councilman Marvin Crafter was arrested Friday for not leaving Mayor Jimmy L. Williams' office when he was asked, according to police. Crafter was charged with disorderly conduct, a misdemeanor.

Crafter, who was released on $240 bond, says he was arrested after questioning Williams' ethics.

Williams did not return phone calls to city hall or his home Friday.

"This is not the first visible sign of friction between the mayor and me," Crafter, 45, said in a telephone interview from his home.

"This has been going on for several months."

Crafter said Williams applied for more than $1 million in Georgia Emergency Management Agency funds for flood relief projects without a resolution from the Council. Crafter says Williams acted "illegally" by not following policy.

"This was an effort to frighten me away from getting to the truth of whether or not the grant money was obtained legally," Crafter said.

The money was received during the summer but hasn't been spent, Crafter said. It is specifically earmarked for use in flood relief, he said.

"I felt like if I went to jail, it would put the spotlight on this. I'm willing to subject myself to the judgment of the people," he said. "We grew up together, and that's the most painful thing to me."

FRICTION BETWEEN THE

The two friends have a history of controversy.

Williams came under fire in 1994 for approving more than $60,000 worth of trailers to house residents in an arsenic-ridden neighborhood undergoing a cleanup.

A group of residents charged

Williams violated the city charter by not following proper channels and filed an injunction to stop the city from paying for the mobile homes.

A superior court judge ruled Williams' actions were in accordance with those of a city leader in an emergency and ordered the city to pay for the trailers.

That same year, Crafter was accused of harassing and threatening officials at the federally supervised arsenic cleanup site in his former neighborhood.

After the allegations were made, Crafter became the target of an unsuccessful recall effort, and later became a plaintiff in a class-action suit against C anadyne and Sureco, the pesticide company operating on the cleanup site.

Williams has gone head-to-head in public at least once with Crafter, who was at one time his campaign spokesman and close political ally.

Williams criticized Crafter in March 1994 when he learned Crafter told city department heads to advise employees not to use a local physician for workers' compensation injuries.

The physician, George Shoup, was heading the effort to recall Crafter.

Dispatcher failed to protect woman

The Associated Press

AUGUSTA, Ga. — The Richmond County sheriff says a 911 dispatcher probably will remain on the job while authorities review her failure to send a deputy to check on a woman who was later shot to death.

The dispatcher received a call early Monday urging her to have someone check on Jacqueline Williams, a 34-year-old mother of three. No officer was dispatched, and Mrs. Williams was gunned down six hours later at her home in front of her 12-year-old son.

Investigators say her estranged husband, Fredrick Williams, a Burke County postal worker, barged into the home and held Mrs. Williams and her three children at gunpoint. He was charged with murder.

"We failed to dispatch someone," Sheriff Charles Webster said Thursday.

"We are not denying that at all. We're supposed to respond no matter what. It was our responsibility to send a car to check out the call."

Dispatcher Valerie Spratlin, who has worked with the sheriff's department for a little more than a year, faces a review

AS AN EMERGENCY
911 CALL. IT CAME IN ON AS A REGULAR CALL."

— CHARLES WEBSTER

by a five-member board. The sheriff will either act on its recommendations or decide on other actions.

"She will probably continue to work (during the review). I'm not going to suspend her,"

Webster said.

Mrs. Williams was a registered nurse at the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in Augusta. The call to 911 came from a concerned VA security officer, who said he had called Mrs. Williams and she sounded nervous.

"This didn't come in as an emergency 911 call. It came in on as a regular call," the sheriff said.

Despite several assurances from the dispatcher that a deputy could be sent in an hour or so, no officer was ever sent.

A final call to dispatchers came at about 8:10 a.m., after the shooting.

Mrs. Williams' father, the Rev. Ralph Blair, was pleased that the sheriff admitted responsibility but said he still plans to pursue the case legally.

"It was a traumatic experience for them to be held hostage. Her son never left the living room and witnessed his mother's execution. Is there any price tag you can put on that?" Blair said.

IN POLITICS

Voters might blame Democrats for shutdown

By David Pace

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Georgia Sen. Sam Nunn warned Democrats and Republicans on Thursday that the day is fast approaching when voters will hold them both accountable for the continuing government shutdown.

Nunn, a Democrat who is retiring this year after four terms in the Senate, said in a speech on the Senate floor he's convinced that House Republican leaders have made a tactical decision to keep the government closed in order to force President Clinton to agree to a balanced budget plan.

The shutdown not only is disrupting the lives of federal workers, Nunn said.

It's also threatening the health of all Americans because vital agencies like the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta have furloughed many of their employees, he said.

About two-thirds of the 6,000 CDC employees are on furlough.

"Diseases, viruses, bacterial infections and cancers do not stop because of a government furlough or a partisan political and budget debate," Nunn said.

Nunn said the House GOP plan to use the shutdown to pressure Clinton defies logic because it suggests Clinton cares more than Congress does about the

"IF IT IS NOT
LEVERAGE, THEN WHY DO IT?"

SENATOR

welfare of the American people deprived of government services and the federal workers deprived of their jobs.

"Is it leverage for you to hold somebody hostage if both have an equal stake in returning that innocent victim without being harmed?" he asked.

"If it is not leverage, then why do it?"

Nunn urged both parties to put aside "the harsh and unreasonable rhetoric," end the shutdown that already has given federal workers 20 additional paid holidays this year, and then work out a compromise to balance the budget.

Such a compromise is possible if Democrats will accept additional cuts in Medicare and Medicaid and Republicans will agree to reduce the $245 billion tax cut in their budget proposal, Nunn said.

"In the final analysis," he said, "there is a right of the president to veto and there is a right of Congress not to appropriate. There also is a right of the American people to say, 'We have had enough; a plague on both your houses...'"

"At some point the American people are going to come to that conclusion," he said. "...I hope everyone recognizes that because that day, if it has not already arrived, is fast approaching."

New secretary of state fights Republicans to keep job

By Russ Bynum

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Lewis Massey assured Democrats that he's prepared to fight to keep his new job as secretary of state after he was sworn in Friday by Gov. Zell Miller.

And he may need to.

Two Republicans have already indicated an interest in running against Massey.

Miller said he appointed Massey to succeed Max Cleland as secretary of state because Massey has the best chance of keeping the office in Democratic hands.

Massey, 33, told the crowd gathered for Friday's ceremony that he's already raised $170,000 for his campaign.

"This great start will give our family a tremendous advantage and a lot of momentum as we begin traveling across Georgia," he said.

Cleland stepped down after 13 years as secretary of state to run for the seat vacated by retiring U.S. Sen. Sam Nunn. As he left Friday's ceremony, Cleland said he's ready to hit the campaign trail.

"I was real pleased to serve for 13 years. I think we did some good.

But I'm also glad to take on a new challenge," Cleland said.

"I'm real pleased that there's no other Democrat running at this time and I feel like I've pretty much wrapped up the Democratic nomination."

Five Republicans also are seeking Nunn's seat.

Massey, a former chief of staff for Lt. Gov. Pierre Howard, must seek re-election in the Democratic primary this summer and the general election this fall for the unexpired two years of Cleland's term.

He has managed campaigns for Howard and former Gov. Joe Frank Harris.

"He comes to this office having already run nine statewide campaigns for other people. Now he's going to have a chance to run one for himself," Miller said. "He is a remarkable young man — mature, wise and savvy beyond his years."

Two Republicans have stepped out as potential challengers to Massey.

David Shafer, currently Insurance Commissioner John Oxendine's chief deputy, said Thursday he is considering the race and will resign his state job Jan. 26.

Woodrow Lovett, who ran unsuccessfully against Democratic U.S. Rep. Cynthia McKinney in 1992 and 1994, said Friday he will run for secretary of state.

university figure" after resigning in the middle of his term.

"I'm wary of being accused of having a personal political agenda," Hyer said. "The claim is false."

"There was an outpouring of people that wished me luck in the future," Hyer said. "I don't feel like the criticism was warranted. I did more in six months than the previous administration accomplished in 12."

"I know that during my administration you didn't see the George-Anne editorial board writing editorials titled, 'Students not being represented effectively,'" Hyer said. "If he [Kalicak] can say the same, I welcome him to do so, because I know he can't."

Hyer said he would offer input to the new SGA president, to be appointed Jan. 10, and that he wants to have "a long phone conversation" with the president-designee to discuss SGA's plans.

"I can't hope to set the agenda," Hyer said. "But I'd like to think I can help in any way possible."

He said he has begun his final classes in cultural anthropology and research methods as a transient student at Mercer, and that he would like to walk at GSU graduation when he receives his diploma.

He also said he would be willing to help GSU students in their own search for internships and jobs.

"I'm happy to help anybody I can," he said.

"GSU has been a great institution for me ... I'll never forget the people at Georgia Southern who have helped me along the way," Hyer said. "A lot of my friends and especially people I love dearly are still students."

still under design.

"The expansion will be on the south side of the building, behind the Union," Hodge said. There are projected no dates as of yet, he said.

A new campus entry on the by-pass between Lanier Drive and Old Register Road is being constructed. The entrance will run all the way to the new College of Education Building.

Bids for the Center for Wildlife Eagle Raptor Center were taken last November. This will be located to the right of the Family Life Center.

"It is kind of like a small zoo," Hodge said. "All injured animals can't live alone in the wild."

The start of construction depends on the bids, Hodges said.

Facilities Planning has a five-year plan to get rid of all the modular buildings on campus.

"There are two problems with these types of buildings," Hodge said. "They are unsightly, and the rent is expensive."

The South Building is the first one of these buildings to be removed. A removal date is set for the summer of this year, but that is not an exact date, Hodge said.

"We are trying to get rid of it," he said. "It is in bad shape, has poor ventilation, the foundation is bad, and it is not in good condition."

election to the council, everyone has been very supportive and that Statesboro residents "can look forward to a council that is by large unified."

"We want to be accessible to the people who put us here and have a deep sense of responsibility of why we're elected," he said.

Wendell Hagins.

Mayor Hal Averitt said he thinks it is good to have GSU involved and that he hopes it will help the "town and gown" relationship.

"We're always proud of GSU," he said. "They are a major part of Statesboro."

Andrews said that since his been a good process working with the other council members because they "have a love for Bulloch County and Statesboro."

Hagins said he wants to let the students at GSU know that he will be around on campus, and wants students to feel free to come and vent their frustrations and thoughts to him about the local government.

"I hope I can fit in there and represent GSU and the residents of the city," he said.

*Hey, you wouldn't give your money away to just anyone, would you? Neither can we. Offers expire January 15, 1996. No payment of principal or interest will be required for 90 days. Interest accruing during this 90-day period will be added to the principal and will bear interest which will be included in the repayment schedule. *The monthly payment quoted above is an estimate based on a total loan amount of $3,087.23 which includes a sample purchase price of $2,902 for the PowerBook 5300 system shown above. The total loan amount also includes a 6.0% loan origination fee. Interest is variable based on the Commercial Paper Rate plus a spread of 6.35%. For example, the month of October 1995 had an interest rate of 12.17% with an annual percentage rate (APR) of 13.95%. Monthly payment for the total loan amount described above would be $53.01. Monthly payment and APR shown assumes no deferral of principal and does not include state or local sales tax. Monthly payments may vary depending on actual computer system prices, total loan amounts, state and local sales taxes, and a change in the monthly variable interest rate.
