'ER' to film at GSU Health Center in late April

By Aztrid-Dimples Ratdica
Staff Speller

"ER," the popular NBC series, is bringing the show to GSU's very own student Health Center next month.

Creator Michael Crichton said that they wanted to do a show dealing with college health problems.

"Georgia Southern seemed to have an abundance of stupid alcohol-related injuries," Crichton said. "We think that (ER) needs a little more excitement. GSU seemed like just the place to get it."

"ER" has been filming in Los Angeles for the past two years, but Crichton said that "ER: The Tour," will begin in late April. He said that he and the cast are very excited about the move. In addition to Statesboro, "ER" will also be filming in other rural towns, such as Meridian, Miss. and Deerlick, Tenn.

A source close to George Clooney, who plays pediatrician Doug Ross on the series, let us in on a shocking secret: Clooney is an alumni of GSU and may have had a strong influence on NBC's decision to film here.

Clooney refused to comment.

GSU Health Center employees are greatly anticipating the May filming.

"They [NBC officials] told me that I will get a part in the show," said Dr. Drake Ramoray, Health Center physician. "I might even get to use my stethoscope."

The episode filmed at GSU is expected to show the doctors in such emergency situations as brain contusions caused by coins hitting the heads of students playing Quarters, and dorm housecalls.

"We can't wait to film at GSU," Crichton said. "Who knows? We may never leave."

GSU professors to serve liquor during core classes

By Bud E. Welser
Staff Drunk

GSU officials, in conjunction with the Board of Regents, have officially okayed a plan to serve liquor in all classes that are a part of the core curriculum.

The plan passed yesterday with a unanimous vote.

The new program will be implemented next fall, or as soon as GSU can get stocked up. The plan is being sponsored by SGA.

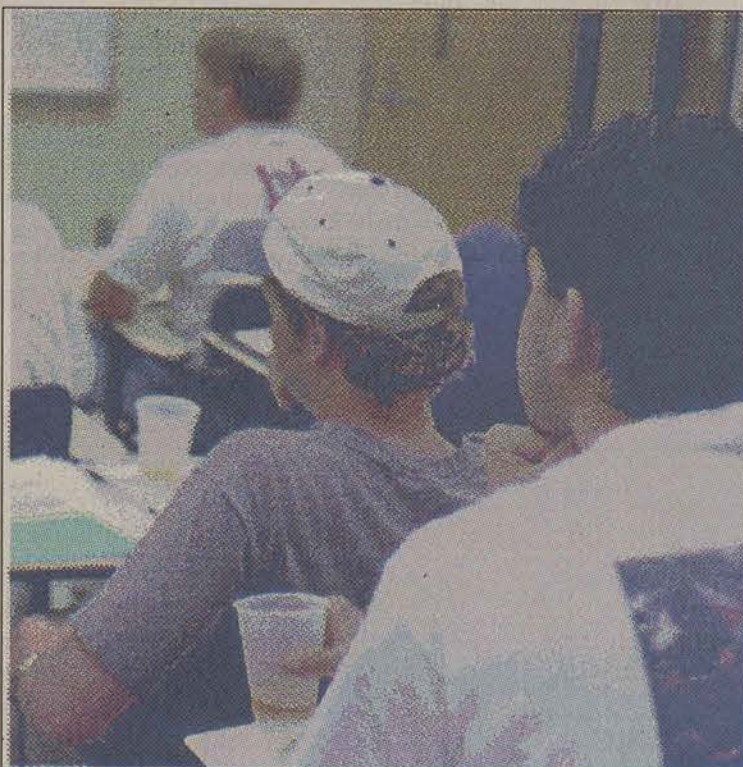

SGA President John Walraven said they are sponsoring this in the hopes of boosting attendance in core classes. Originally, their idea was to set up a grievance board whereby students who got low grades because of their professor's attendance policy could appeal their grade. However, this is not the answer, Walraven said.

"We are hoping this new liquor-in-the-classroom policy will boost attendance, making a grievance board unnecessary," he said.

The original plan was considered ineffective by many faculty as well, but the new one "brings back some of the tradition GSU is known for," said a biology professor who wished to remain anonymous.

A pilot class has been experimenting with this since last quarter. The class, taught by professor James Beam, experimented first with beer and wine, then moved up to liquor, and decided to use liquor exclusively.

The Board of Regents decided that all classroom data indicates that using liquor exclusively is the best way to go, because "GSU does not have the restroom facilities to support a program involving beer,"

Roland Rock

Students toast one another and drink up in a journalism class.

according to a press release issued late Monday afternoon.

The students involved in the program said it was great.

"Instead of taking roll at the beginning of class, Professor Beam took it near the end, during last call. Believe me, we were all present for that," said sixth-year sophomore Phil Debon from Margaritaville.

The only downside to the program was that every student in the test classroom failed, but "there is not sufficient evidence to correlate this with the fact that alcohol was present," said Harry Carter, vice president for academic affairs.

The students said that all agreed that they didn't mind taking the class over even if it meant retaking it several times.

"This is a new era for Georgia Southern," said Jack Nolen, vice president of student affairs. "Not only is it the first time there has been 100 percent attendance 100 percent of the quarter in a class, but this new program may finally establish GSU back on 'Playboy's' 'Top Ten Party Schools in the Nation' list. It has always been a goal of mine to put us back on top of that prestigious list."

School officials said they had been consuming alcohol for years during athletic and alumni events and have never encountered a problem in the past, and couldn't foresee one in the future.

The program is expected to bring in an additional $5 million per quarter. Students will not be forced to show I.D., nor will there be a cover charge, but there will be a $500 added fee per class for those students

Lee Hyer files suit over his presidency

By Bicke Plann
Staff Nuisance

Former SGA president Lee Hyer has filed a lawsuit against the Board of Regents, claiming GSU officials broke the law when they refused to let him return his presidency last month.

"This is the insult of insults," Hyer said Monday. "You try to be a positive leader on campus, and you return to find yourself unwelcome and your former supporters ungrateful."

Hyer informed GSU President Nicholas Henry by letter in March that he would be returning to his post after quitting his job in the office of U.S. Rep. Saxby Chambliss (R-Ga.). Hyer said that even though he resigned the SGA presidency in December, he fully had the right to claim it back.

When Henry responded with a letter telling Hyer the school would not allow his return, Hyer contacted the Board of Regents for an explanation. A spokesman there said he told Hyer that "once you resign from a job, you don't have an unquestionable right to return to it."

The Board of Regents response amounts to a ruling against Hyer's plea. On March 30, Hyer's lawyers filed suit against the Board of Regents, citing Article VI, Section 8, Title 14, Clause D of the Georgia Code.

State Attorney General Mike Bowers has looked at the case and determined that under the Georgia Code, Hyer's demand is valid.

"Mr. Hyer has a legitimate complaint," Bowers said in a released statement. "He was elected to serve a full year's term and is entitled to serve out that term unless removed from office for a conduct violation."

Hyer has publicly stated that he wants to return to his post because he is "dreadfully unhappy with the current state of affairs at Georgia Southern."

He has hinted that after returning to the presidency, he would like to run again for the office and serve another full term until May of 1997.

"I have good reasons for wanting to come back into the fold," Hyer said. "First of all, I have little or no confidence in the current slate of students running for SGA offices next year. They will need my leadership to keep SGA on a steady course."

But Jack Nolen, vice president of student affairs, said Hyer had his chance to serve as president.

"Lee made a decision to leave Georgia Southern," he said. "We are not willing to accept his request to relieve the current president, John Walraven, of his duties."

Walraven said Monday he is outraged at Hyer's decision to sue the university system.

"I am Lee's successor, fair and square, according to the SGA constitution," Walraven said. "This is truly a frivolous lawsuit."

Hyer has said he intends to pursue the case to the highest level, especially considering he has seen an influx of far too many Democrats at GSU.

The case will go before the courts next week, and a decision is expected soon.

Fast food chains to replace eateries in the Russell Union

By Colonel Sanders
Staff Porker

GSU has signed a 50-year contract with Greseman International to bring fast food restaurants like McDonald's and Wendy's to the GSU campus. The restaurants will comprise the first floor of the University Union and will replace Union Station, Spud's Doghouse and The Educated Palate.

Greseman International, a corporation based in Atlanta, will build a Hardee's, McDonald's, Wendy's, Burger King, KFC, Chic-Fil-A and even a Taco Bell in the first floor of the Union.

"We are excited to finally be able to bring the students the type of food they want," said Earl Cashon, director of the Union.

Cashon and GSU President Nicholas Henry met yesterday with Greseman president Donald McDonald to sign the contract.

GSU alumni McDonald was excited to be working with his alma mater.

"I love GSU, and I am so glad that I am able to give them something they have been wanting for years: decent food," he said.

Greseman is expected to begin bringing the fast food places in next fall. To make room for the eating places, Books Plus, Union Station, Spud's Doghouse and The Educated Palate will be closed down.

Greseman International, founded 15 years ago by former fast food manager Wendell Greseman, makes contracts with franchised fast food operations around the country to bring them to schools and college campuses across the United States. McDonald took over as president of the corporation two years ago after Greseman was killed in a plane crash.

McDonald's and Wendy's will be the first fast food restaurants to come to GSU, and are expected to be ready for business sometime in October. Chic-Fil-A and Burger King are expected to be here by Christmas. Other fast food places will follow.

The idea for fast food franchises coming to GSU has been in circulation for some time. But it wasn't until last year that Henry actually began to consider the idea of fast food restaurants at GSU.

"I never really thought it would be an option for us," Henry said.

"But then I thought that it would be a better attraction for us and that it would please the students."

From there, Henry said he contacted Greseman International after reading an article about them in Time magazine.

After nearly a year of negotiations, in which Greseman received 35 percent of profits, a 50-year renewable contract was signed.

The fast food restaurants will collect 50 percent of the profits and GSU will receive only 15 percent.

Overall, Henry said he believes it will be a success at GSU.

"This is what students wanted," he said.

"Now they will have more choices and will want to eat on campus."

GSU students were being poisoned and animals were malformed by radiation from the campus lake until EPA officials stepped in to remove the hazardous material.

Hazardous material found in lake

By Cher Noble
Staff Environmentalist

An emergency radioactive waste team from Fort Stewart has been called in by GSU to investigate the recent discovery of radiation from a lake located near Lakeside Café.

The team was first alerted to this problem when several students were reported to have been suffering symptoms often associated with radiation sickness.

"Several students over a short period of time came here to the health center complaining of migraine headaches and had begun suffering from massive hair loss," said Dr. Irwin Quacker of the Health Center. "The students were pale white and nauseous. Also, the nurses had to sweep up a lot of hair from the floor that day."

The EPA arrived on campus last Thursday to begin its investigation. The researchers outfitted themselves in white radiation suits and had to be supplied air while surveying the scene.

"Upon first beginning our investigation, we were struck by the extreme deformities of the ducks around the lake," said Walter Peck of the

EPA. "That definitely led us to believe that something was wrong here."

Water samples were taken and flown to Atlanta for testing. Large amounts of radioactive contamination were discovered in the water.

Acting quickly, the emergency team shut down the operations of Lakeside Café Friday in order to protect the students who regularly eat there.

Beginning Saturday, a state of emergency has been declared and the trucks will be brought in to begin draining the lake.

"Yeah, we've pumped out a lot of water in our time, but I ain't never seen none that color before," said Bubba Johnson, the supervisor in charge of draining the lake. "Hell, my boys about couldn't take their usual 30-minute smoke break because of the smell alone."

A problem arose after the lake water was drained. The bottom of the lake was covered "in what appeared to be some sort of radioactive sludge," Peck said.

Several GSU maintenance men were called

Hooters to come to GSU; angry female students protest

By Henry Stiffy
Staff Perv

GSU announced last Friday that Oxford Hall will be closing in order to make room for one of the country's leading theme restaurants. At the beginning of winter quarter '97, Hooters will move into the old Oxford Hall building.

"We believe that bringing a Hooters restaurant to campus will greatly increase enrollment and also add more campus entertainment," said Nicholas Finger, director of campus development.

The Hooters restaurant will accept meal plans and Eagle Express, while also catering to non-students.

A GSU official announced that the prices will be comparable to those of Lakeside Cafe.

"Like, ah, I really think that the job is, like, going to be really rad," said Wendy Biggens, a Hooters waitress. "Because, like, um, guys tip real well when I, like, bend over for them."

Several buildings were considered for the project, but the size and the recent crime rate at Oxford made it the final choice for closure.

"We don't believe that Oxford is a necessarily dangerous place to live," said Erica Shelter, a housing employee. "But since the correlation between sex and violence has been proven, we felt that Hooters and Oxford Hall complimented each other well."

Hooters restaurants have quickly grown to be one of the most popular restaurants in the country, even under protest from many feminists.

"I do feel that women should not be exploited in this manner," said Stephanie Butch, a self-proclaimed feminist and GSU freshman. "All Hooters does is cater to pathetic, balding men who are only interested in looking at women's breasts."

Several protests have erupted since the announcement of that Hooters will come to GSU.

A peaceful demonstration turned violent last Saturday as a group of 20 women gathered in bras as he drove around the circle.

"He looked like the type that would visit a place like Hooters," said Henrietta Millen, one of the protesters.

The organization also said that they will petition for a restaurant for women, Peckers, to come to GSU.

Late Sunday night, a small band of women smashed windows in Oxford Hall and sprayed the parking lot and walls with graffiti.

The graffiti ranged from pictures of breast implants to severed penises.

On several places, the name of the organization, Bitches With Attitudes, had been spray painted on the building.

Finger said the university plans to keep working on the project regardless of all the protests.

"We will not bend to pressure to cancel the project," Finger said. "This project will continue and will be open at the beginning of Winter Quarter 1996."

Rabbits found to be the cause of two laundry room fires in Hanner

By I.M. Hott
Staff Arsonist

The cause of two Hanner Fieldhouse fires earlier this year have been established, and it wasn't what school officials thought.

Occurring in the laundry room of the 50-year old gymnasium, it was thought that a dryer-malfunction caused the explosions.

But the recent investigation of Fire Marshall Bill Neville uncovered that both blazes were caused by rabbits that were caught in the fuse-box in the laundry facilities.

"It's a frightening situation," W.S. Hanner, who was the main constructor of the building, said. "We knew the water drainage was going to be a problem when we built this, but we never thought about Statesboro's problem with rabbits being a factor."

After the autopsy, it was found that the rabbit's home was around the Landrum Cafeteria area, but the reason for its coming to Hanner is still unknown.

"I can't figure out what he was doing here," Ronnie Satterfield, a Hanner custodian, said. "We clean this damn place every day, and we ain't ever seen no damn rabbits. But it sure scares the hell outta me."

GSU officials plan to keep this problem from happening again.

"This is a learning experience for us," Hanner said. "We thought we had enough problems with the men's basketball team alone, but it's obvious that there's more. I suspect we'll increase security around the fieldhouse and put in new alarms so this won't happen again. I'm just glad no human got hurt."

This discovery caught the attention of the officials at Landrum, where the rabbits were thought to come from.

"We knew we had them here," Bertha Boggs, a lunch-server of 57 years, said. "I see them running around all the time. I even took one home for a pet. I don't see what the problem is because they're not causing any harm. They don't even bite."

Despite their apparent harmlessness, a petition has been started by GSU students to remove the rabbits from Landrum. GSU officials are closely observing the situation and are expected to make a decision by the end of the week.

One GSU official, who chose to keep his identity secret, said the decision is taking longer due to animal-rights activists trying to keep the rabbits where they are.

"There is a lot of controversy about the matter," he said. "But the good thing that evolved is that we found the cause of the fires."

GSU officials are scheduled to meet with representatives from PETA, People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, on Friday and will decide what to do about the rabbits.

Boggs said she estimates that there are at least eight rabbits living in the Landrum area, but said that she has only seen three.

She also said that she would like to take the rabbits home with her to her farm where her

BRIEFLY...*Voter registration drive planned for Freaknik

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — The Rev. Benjamin E. Chavis Jr., national director of the Million Man March, says he will lead a massive voter registration drive next month during Freaknik, the annual three-day street party that attracts tens of thousands of black college students.

Chavis, in town to address the Million Man March local organizing committee, said he will attend Freaknik to focus a positive light on the April 19-21 event.

The voter registration drive, in conjunction with Big Vote, a national voter registration organization, and hip-hop concerts are scheduled to be held April 20 in Grant Park, where a permit was been requested by Nation of Islam activist Steven Muhammad.

"We need to reach out to youth and embrace them," Chavis said. "We will make (Freaknik) into a positive and constructive program."

Chavis and local march organizers are calling on participants of the Million Man March to discourage the lewd and rowdy behavior that has plagued Freaknik in past years. Chavis said he plans to hold a mass meeting with students in the park to encourage them to obey the laws and to socialize with dignity.

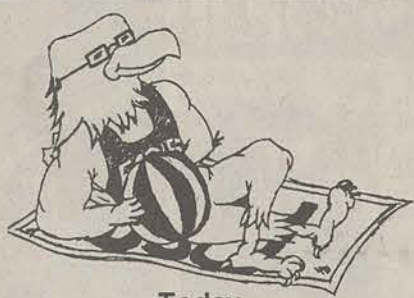

Muhammad said Nation of Islam leaders and Million Man March organizers had sought to bring Louis Farrakhan to Atlanta to speak to students, but scheduling conflicts could not be resolved.

Chavis also announced plans for a 10-city, two-month national tour with Farrakhan beginning in April to highlight activities accomplished since the Million Man March in Washington. He said the group plans a black political summit and a conference on hip hop music later this spring.

Stowers dismissed; Ellwood now interim coach

By Ronnie Swinford
Sports Editor

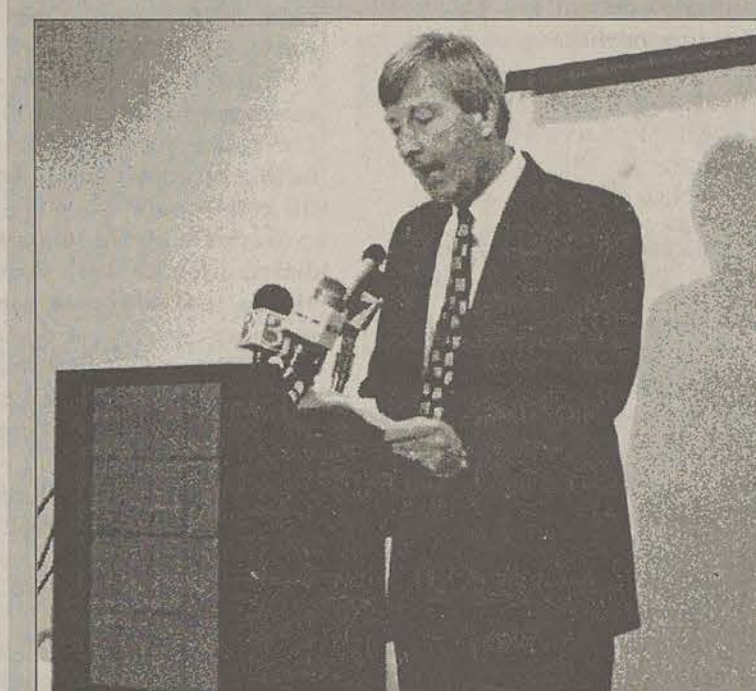

GSU announced Saturday that the contract of Tim Stowers would not be renewed. The interim coach for spring practice, as well as the 1996 season, will be former Marshall head coach and current GSU Senior Associate Athletic Director Frank Ellwood.

"We felt that it was time to go in another direction," Athletic Director Sam Baker said. "I did not enter this job with the intent of making a football change."

"The move had nothing to do with winning and losing, it came down to perceptions," Baker said. "I think that it came down to personalities, the perception of the fans, it is hard to follow the program that was here, success and the public relations that were already in place."

"Our season tickets sales have dropped," Baker said. "I think that anyone in college athletics today has to realize that there are business aspects to this. I have to look at what's underneath internally, and look at the program as a whole. I think that our fans, right or wrong, have voiced their opinions by walking away to the tune of 3,000 season tickets."

"I hope I never face a tougher decision. Tim Stowers is a good man. He has worked very hard for Georgia Southern," Baker said.

The buyout of Stowers' contract will be discussed with Stowers at a later date. He has two contracts to be discussed, one with GSU and one with the Southern Boosters.

"We will discuss Stowers' contracts at a later time," Baker said.

Baker, while never saying what perception problems were evident, said that most fans that he talked to said that the program needed to go in a "new direction."

The new role for Ellwood for the upcoming season is a familiar one. He coached Marshall from 1975-78, compiling a record of 10-34. He also was an assistant at Ohio State, Ohio University and Air Force from 1958-74.

with the team, but not as familiar as I would like to be, but once I see the talent that we have, I will know what I will do with the team."

"All the assistants, as far as we know, will be back next year," Ellwood said. "I might open the offense up a little more this year, but it will be the same basic team."

The search committee will consist of Baker, Dr. Richard Armstrong, faculty athletic representative Lane Van Tassel, former football coach Erskine Russell and Southern Boosters chairman Don Aaron.

"My choices were to resign or be fired," Stowers said. "The only reason that was given to me for the change was Booster apathy."

"I have for 12 years done everything I could for GSU," Stowers said. "Since I was only notified of the decision and my options on Friday, my situation has not been clarified. I feel that they have violated my contract."

Stowers in his six years of coaching at GSU compiled a record of 51-23. He won a national championship in 1990, but advanced to the playoffs only two more times, 1993 and 1995.

In 1993 his team won the Southern Conference regular season title, and advanced into

Dean Orr discusses highlights of his career at GSU

By Justin Miller
Assistant News Editor

James D. Orr, associate dean of student affairs, is retiring at the end of August this year. His retirement does not come as a surprise as it was announced two years ago.

Orr began his career at GSU as a counselor in 1970. The George-Anne had the opportunity to sit down with Orr last week and asked him to reflect back on his years of service at GSU.

G-A: Over the years you have seen many changes take place on our campus. What are some of the highlights?

Orr: "There have been a lot of highlights. When I came here in 1970 [GSU] was a very exciting place to be, and certainly in the 80s it was exciting to be here during all the growth GSU experienced."

It was exciting to be here during [Coach Erk Russell's] reign. Georgia Southern's football team wasn't supposed to be that good, but then again, we've accomplished lots of things over the years that many people didn't think we could.

There are so many things I can look back on with pride, but the best moments come when I get a phone call from a student from five, 10, or 15 years ago who calls me up just to say

"hi" and talk. It feels good to know that I made a positive impact on someone's life."

G-A: What's it been like working for GSU over the years? What sticks out most in your mind about working for the different administrations?

Orr: "There is a familial feeling amongst the administrative staff that I have never heard of anywhere else.

G-A: Have there been any disappointments over the years or is there anything that you didn't accomplish that you wished you had?

Orr: "Sure there are some disappointments. Nothing happens overnight, and nothing comes easy. I've gotten where I am by doing what's best have never heard of anywhere else. GSU as a whole [has] a different atmosphere, it is very open and family-like.

"IT IS MY PHILOSOPHY, AND I THINK I'VE INSTILLED THIS IN THE GREEKS I'VE WORKED WITH, THAT THE STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE GREEKS ARE RECOGNIZED FOR HAS NOTHING TO DO WITH DAD'S WALLET."

— JAMES D. ORR, ASSOCIATE DEAN OF STUDENT AFFAIRS

We get more out of our money in what we provide for our students than I have ever heard of on any other campus. You can really tell, too. Here you can walk across campus and say, "hi" to five students and at least four of them will stop to have a friendly conversation with you. You try that at [the University of Georgia] and you'll be for the biggest amount of people. It's impossible to be in my position and try to make everyone happy all the time. If I tried to do that I wouldn't get anything done.

Take [GSU's] Greek village for example. We began planning it in 1978, but it wasn't until eight years later, in 1985, that we began building. However, now I have college administrators from campuses all over the country with housing problems calling me and asking how we accomplished it."

G-A: One of your main tasks as associate dean of student affairs is being in charge of GSU's Greek system. What's that been like over the years? How hard has it been maintaining the level of excellence that many of the fraternities and sororities have been nationally known for?

Orr: "The Greek community at GSU has been for many years a very important part on this campus, not only for Greeks, but for independents as well. Certainly homecoming wouldn't be what it is if it wasn't for [GSU's] Greek community."

We have a very different Greek community here than what you'll find at most other campuses. It is my philosophy, and I think I've instilled this in the Greeks I've worked with, that the standard of excellence Greeks are recognized for has nothing to do with dad's wallet. If you compare what it costs to be a Greek here and what it costs to be a Greek at other schools, 50 percent of our Greeks could not afford to be Greeks on other campuses.

Greek organizations are valid organizations. Alumni love to come back and visit not just GSU but the Greek organization they were a part of during

Two arrested for thefts near campus

By Joshua Edmonson
Senior Staff Writer

Two suspects have been arrested in connection to a series of thefts at several apartment complexes at GSU.

Taurus Johns, 20, of Savannah, and Earl Rouse, 24, of University Pointe, have been charged with the burglary.

In the early morning of March 24, Officer Shawn Haralson observed a suspicious vehicle during his patrol of University Pointe Apartments.

Officer Haralson was preparing to conduct a walking patrol of the area and spotted the vehicle. Haralson then approached the car that also made an attempt to evade him, Detective Robert Seamans said.

The driver of the 1981 4-door Buick, Johns, tried to evade Haralson by ducking down in the car and driving away.

Haralson then pulled him over, stopped the vehicle and ended up taking Johns and Rouse into custody, he said.

The vehicle was also searched by the officers.

The officers found multiple television sets, pieces of stereo equipment, CD changers, computers, an ironing board and various other household items inside the back of the car.

During further investigation, more stolen property was recovered and led to the additional arrest.

Several of the items recovered were found to be in connection with the apartment complex burglaries. In all, 94 items of stolen goods were recovered.

Several pieces of stolen goods have not yet been identified or claimed, Seamans said.

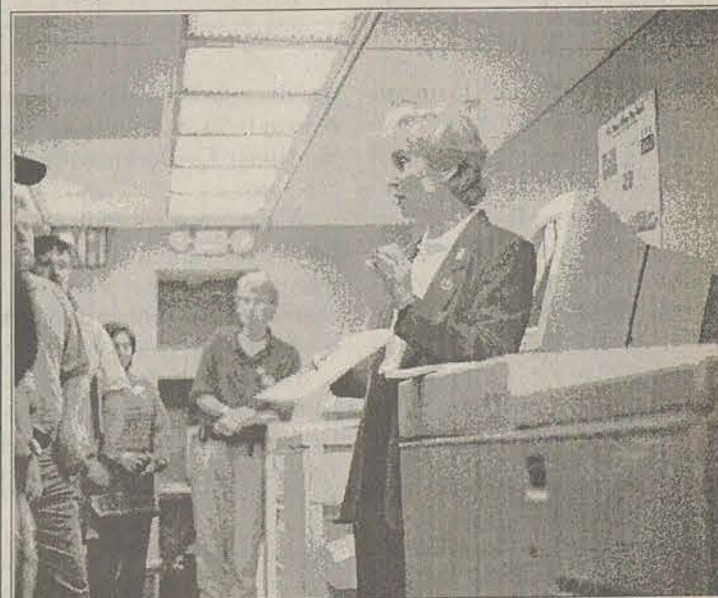

He also have that 12 known burglaries have been discovered as a result of the arrest. Seamans said that he also expect several more burglaries to be solved.

Both suspects are still being held in the Bulloch County Jail.

Johns was also charged with possession of cocaine and driving with a suspended license.

The investigation is still continuing and Seamans said he expects more arrests to come.

the second round before losing to Youngstown State.

In 1995 Stowers went 8-3 in the regular season. GSU was seeded 14 for the playoffs. They went to Troy State and pulled off the upset. But the next week they were hammered by Montana, the eventual National Champion.

Stowers was named the Division 1-AA coach of the year in 1990 by Kodak, Chevrolet, and the Georgia Sports Hall of Fame. Also in 1993, Stowers was named Southern Conference Coach of the year.

When Stowers took over the head coaching job in 1990, he was the youngest division one coach in the country at 31 years of age.

Stowers, before taking the head job, was an assistant for Erk Russell at GSU for five years. Three of those years were spent as offensive line coach; the last two were as offensive coordinator.

Stowers may eventually be remembered for producing All-Americans at GSU.

He produced at least one every year from 1985-89 on the offensive line. He also saw 13 players advance to All-American status during his term as head coach.

Workers protest over Kmart wages

The Associated Press

GREENSBORO, N.C. — A protest that Kmart officials have described as futile and misguided has spread from Greensboro to at least five other cities including Atlanta.

Protests concerning wages paid to workers at Kmart's distribution center in Greensboro were staged over the weekend in Atlanta, Houston, Cleveland, Norfolk and Memphis.

The protests by Kmart workers began in Greensboro before Christmas with demonstrations calling on customers to boycott the retail chain.

Workers at the Greensboro distribution center, primarily blacks and other minorities, make an average of $4.60 per hour less and receive fewer benefits than employees at 12 other Kmart distribution centers across the country.

Kmart officials have said that wages paid at the Greensboro distribution center are commensurate with those paid by other area companies.

Regular demonstrations held at the Super Kmart in Greensboro have drawn as many as 125 protesters at a time.

About 15 people protested Saturday.

Meanwhile, more than 1,000 protesters in Atlanta and more than 100 in Houston marched on Kmart stores Saturday to support the Greensboro workers.

"It was an important step in escalating the boycott to a national level, and getting the support of clergy and community leaders around the nation," said Phil Cohen, Central North Carolina District Manager of the Union of Needletrades, Industrial and Textile Employees, which represents the Kmart workers.

In Atlanta, more than 1,000 ministers, community supporters and union members gathered at a local union hall before marching on a Kmart in the heart of Atlanta, the News & Record of Greensboro reported.

Fifty protesters were arrested when they went into the Atlanta Kmart and blocked the cash registers in a peaceful demonstration, said UNITE's Anthony Romano, who organized the Atlanta rally.

"This injustice really resonates with other people around the nation. People in huge numbers vowed to stand by the Kmart workers until they were treated fairly," Romano said.

Man shot at for stealing Ritz cracker

The Associated Press

MADISON HEIGHTS — A Detroit man shot at a co-worker who had helped himself to one of his Ritz crackers, police said.

Both shots missed and no one was injured in the incident.

"It's senseless," said Madison Heights Lt. Robert Walls. "People are so prone to violence over the most remote things. A look, a glance or a word is sometimes all it takes to get someone fired up."

The 26-year-old Detroit man, a temporary employee at the Wolpac Inc. factory in this Detroit suburb, was eating lunch when the 22-year-old co-worker walked by and took the cracker.

The Detroit man argued and verbally threatened the co-worker before leaving the plant, police said. He returned an hour later, allegedly armed with a handgun, and confronted the co-worker before firing twice.

The suspect left the factory and was arrested about a quarter-mile away. He was expected to be arraigned today on felonious assault charges. Police did not immediately recover the gun.

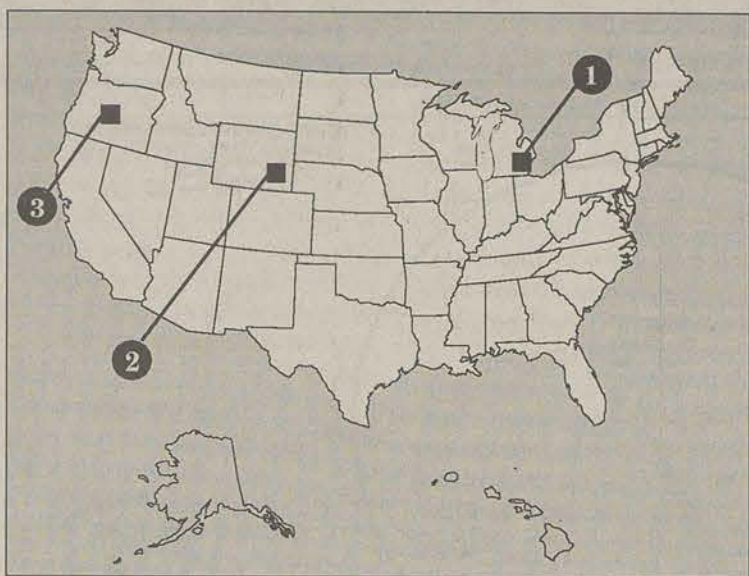

"It's a shame," said another Wolpac employee, Jim Waun. "It all happened over an argument at lunch — it wasn't even over work. This is a nice place to work. Everyone gets along. At least, until now."

Bride charged after drinking at wedding

The Associated Press

WHEATLAND — One of Jennifer Windmeier's wedding presents is helping her to battle a less welcome present she received shortly after she was married in February.

A Wheatland attorney is helping Windmeier fight a charge of being a minor in possession of an alcoholic beverage in a public place, a charge stemming from a drink she had at the age of 20 during her wedding reception.

Off-duty Deputy Sheriff John Matthews saw Windmeier drink a glass of wine with her husband at their wedding reception on Feb. 3, he said in an affidavit. Windmeier was 20 years and seven months old at the time.

On Feb. 21, about 18 days after her wedding, Windmeier was charged by Platte County Attorney John Robinson with being a minor in possession of an alcoholic beverage in a public place, a misdemeanor.

Windmeier, whose stepfather is Platte County Sheriff Tim Hoffman, said the charge stemmed from political disputes between Hoffman and other county officials, including Robinson.

Windmeier's attorney Eric Alden, who said he is representing the woman as a wedding present, said the case represented unrealistic enforcement of the law.

"What harm did my client pose by taking a few sips of wine," he said.

Woman dies in freak
dancing accident

The Associated Press

REDMOND — A country swing dance ended in a woman's death after she landed on her head when her partner tried to flip her.

Sherry Renn of Redmond, 37, was dancing with a friend following a Waylon Jennings concert when the accident occurred.

"I'm still in shock over it," said Rhonda Grijalva, Renn's sister.

"She was a tiny thing, about 110 pounds and only 5-foot-2. The guy was about twice her size. She really came down hard."

Renn, an avid country music fan, had gone to the March 21 concert in nearby Prineville with a female friend who had won a pair of tickets. Both women had posed backstage for a photograph with Jennings, and went dancing immediately after the show, Grijalva said.

"Sherry was an outgoing, fun-loving person and a very caring wife and mother, loved by many people," Fred Renn said.

GEORGIA SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY CONGRATULATES ITS ALL AMERICAN SCHOLARS

Georgia Southern University would like to congratulate the nominees for All American Scholar. The United States Achievement Academy has established the All-American Scholar Award Program to offer deserved recognition to superior students who excel in the academic disciplines, and to afford Academic Officials the opportunity to encourage students in areas other than sports or extra-curricular activities.

All American Scholars are chosen by the nominating Academic Official as among his or her students who have excellent academic records, and must be selected by a college or university Academic Official. They will receive an official congratulatory letter from the United States Achievement Academy crediting the nominating educator as the originator of the award, recognition in the All-American Scholar Collegiate Program Directory, the opportunity to compete for cash scholarships, awards by the council exclusively to All-American Scholars, and a news release to be used by local media announcing the All-American Scholar Award.

Georgia Southern University is proud to nominate the following students for this prestigious award, all of who have earned 150 hours while maintaining a 4.0 GPA:

Our Opinion

Decision to fire Stowers needs more explanation

Athletic Director Sam Baker's decision last week not to renew head football coach Tim Stowers' contract did not come as a surprise, but we expected more details about why the decision was made.

Instead we have been offered only vague, generalized statements about the "perceptions" of our football program.

As it stands now, we do not have a clear idea of why Coach Stowers was removed from his job. At the same time we know that GSU will have to buy out the remaining two years of his contract at considerable expense to the university.

For a decision of this magnitude, we have every right to expect the administration to justify its actions.

It is true that GSU's football program has been getting a bad reputation lately, even though Coach Stowers took us to the second round of this year's playoffs. He also won 70 percent of the games during his time as coach, although that doesn't seem to have made much difference in evaluating his record.

The fact is that many GSU fans have been somewhat spoiled by our record of national championships. Winning games is no longer enough, according to the message this decision sends out to our fans.

If that is going to be our attitude at GSU, we at The George-Anne aren't going to question it. But we do question what may be behind the decision, and students are demanding some answers.

Perhaps GSU has made a bold move that will benefit our program in the long run. But in the short run, let's have some explanation.

I have reflected on what I shared with my father, and he with me, during the 21 years we

It is best during the period following a personal loss to analyze every positive you can think of. So in the past few months I have reminded myself time and again of whatever lessons I remember him teaching me.

I have also found it helpful to listen to lyrics or read poetry or prose that seems directly to speak to your situation. There are some artists who are amazingly adept at soothing the pain of an anonymous listener.

For example, I have found a few lines from Walt Whitman's poem, "O Captain! My Captain!" (a eulogy to President Lincoln) describe the feelings I experienced after my father passed. As a memorial to him, I would like to share them with you:

*Here Captain! dear father!
This arm beneath your head;
It is some dream that on the deck,
you've fallen cold and dead.
My Captain does not answer,
his lips are pale and still;
My father does not feel my arm,
he has no pulse nor will;
The ship is anchor'd safe and sound,
its voyage closed and done.*

For those who have experienced a loss of this kind, you know exactly what I mean when I say that beautiful words like these offer a chance for deep reflection and a chance to give closure to your loved one's life.

The other advice I can give is even more serious. Do not allow grief to be all-consuming, because it has that capacity. Death can be a crippling thing for the survivors, and it takes its toll in a variety of ways.

You have to keep your chin up and keep going strong. In the end, as tragic as it seems, you will eventually be strengthened from the experience. In the meantime, remain steadfast in every goal you had before your loss. The pain will weigh on you for years, but that can't be helped.

What you can still do is make your loved one proud.

You've gotta love political correctness

JUSTIN MILLER

COLUMNIST

I love political correctness. In fact, I would go so far as to say that it is the best thing to ever hit our nation.

First off, it has turned me into an ultra-sensitive man, er, I mean "child-bearing challenged" being. I no longer judge books by their covers. Actually I have no time to judge, because I'm busy making sure I have the right label to place on people without becoming offensive.

Secondly, it is my belief that political correctness came about to help equal things out and to make people feel less put upon. It has achieved this and more!

Today, instead of actually worrying about or trying to solve a problem, we ignore it, talk around it, baby it, and generally do everything, but solve it, and this is okay (only in America!).

Take race relations for example. We're no better off than we were thirty years ago, yet we don't care. Instead we argue over what we should call each other. Really, this is great, it allows us to live in a constant state of water treading while giving ourselves the illusion that we are actually doing something.

Thirdly, while it has sensitized us to each other it has desensitized us to large groups in our effort to be equal. We have finally gotten to the point where people think equality and respect are given or demanded. This is a much needed change, the whole idea of people having to prove themselves equal or respectable through their work is horrible, people in those situations are forced to grow as beings and work hard, an obvious act of discrimination towards lazy and ignorant people.

What it comes down to is the destruction of elitism, a tyrannical concept begat by our Founding Fathers. Many of those men came from extremely poor backgrounds and worked and scratched their way to the top. They educated themselves day and night until they were the brightest, most educated people of their generation. They worked, invented and innovated industries until they were the best and richest. How dare they!

Abraham Lincoln grew up in extreme poverty in rural Kentucky. He worked his heart out until he became president, all the way overcoming adversity after adversity, sacrificing and dedicating himself to the concept of truth, what's that all about? And what did he do when he became president, he tried to keep the nation together and abolish slavery. What kind of example is he for our children?

Or take Benjamin Franklin, a man who invented about everything and even discovered electricity. He was the youngest son of his family and pretty much left out of the family inheritance/business, so he became a self-made man of extreme discipline.

And what about Thomas Jefferson, who taught himself how to play the violin, speak three languages, math, science, and did all this while trying to work his way through law school. Or what about Frederick Douglas who literally fought his way through slavery and educated himself by learning to read and write, and became one of the best orators of his time. Or even Washington Carver, who overcame adversity in the form of racial prejudice to be one of our nation's brightest inventors and scientists. Do we want a nation made up of beings like these, I think not!

Political correctness is moving us in the right direction, finally. We finally have a common dream, a dream where people live equally. Where poor kid and rich kid can have the same chance at rotting their brains through Nintendos, Segas, and Saturday morning cartoons. Where married people, excuse me, "swingin'- single challenged" beings of all colors, races, economic persuasions, and sexual orientation have as easy of a time of getting divorced as anybody else.

Adversity is bad, we should have none of it, so we don't have to worry about overcoming it. And if we dare to dream big enough and reach high enough, we may eventually reach the point where we are totally non-thinking, non-doing animals who do nothing but relieve bodily waste, eat, and grunt. What a glorious day that will be.

But most importantly, we are striding to the point where people no longer have to take responsibility for their actions. We, the public, pay for the mistakes of others through taxes, as it should be. Rapists, murderers, child molesters, terrorists are all products of a dysfunctional home or upbringing. They are all products of their environment.

Name one person who is famous and does or did something worth while for their community, state, or nation that came from a poor background or a broken home.

And we should definitely not thin the herd. Everyone should be welcome and given, not just a seat at the same table, but the same seat at the same table.

Of course, this might just lead to some over-crowding, and more than just a few fights, but hey, don't worry about it, be happy.

College guys get one thing, then they're out the door

Editor,

This is my first year on campus, and the search is going strong. Where the hell is Mr. Do Right? My objective was not to go to school to find a man, but to prove there are some decent ones out there.

I grew up in a military family. I have had the blessing to be able to travel to distant countries: Germany, Paris and Italy, and meet people of many different colors and nationalities.

What intrigued me the most was the actions of the black male (and yes, I will be a little prejudiced and discriminate in colors, because I am a black woman, and I can only draw from my own personal experiences and the experiences of my friends).

It seemed as though no matter how far I traveled I found some distinguishing "canine" traits. But I chalked that all up to age and education.

When I began GSU fall quarter of the 95-96 school year I made it my job to meet and get to know as many people as possible, and learn more about their relationships with the opposite sex.

I wanted to know if campus relationships actually survive. This experiment got boring fast. I began hearing different versions of the same tired stories; guys were leaving girls after a couple of weeks or months into the relationship.

They got what they wanted, so it was time to move on or maybe college opened their noses and they thought they could have anyone they wanted. Now this phenomenon is classic in the freshman world.

I'm not trying to dog guys or anything, but I would just like to know for future reference: When you're rejected, why do the women you were just coming on to suddenly become unattractive female dogs or garden utensils?

Sometimes it seems as though the word "no" is more of a turn-on to some men, and they begin pursuing even more. This pursuit then becomes harassment.

Now, this doesn't apply to all men because there have been reports of good men sightings. It's just all in what you're looking for. There are guys on this campus who are excellent students and good friends. They can be compassionate, understanding and loving. They may have also been burned in relationships like you. But anything worth having is worth waiting for.

That, I think, is one of women's greatest mistakes — not waiting in order to make more conscious and valid decisions. Women are so consumed with wanting to be loved and wanting to have a relationship that they forget the recipe for healthy relationships. The biggest ingredient is to love yourself.

This is a time in your life when the world is at your fingertips. Relax, enjoy and stop hunting. You'll find him in due time.

Legalizing liquor would help city

Editor,

I have been at GSU for almost two years now and there is one big problem I find holding Statesboro back; it's the fact that this county is dry. High-proof liquor cannot be legally sold here in Statesboro.

Now I know there are a lot of people in this town that don't want this law to be passed or even talked about, but I feel that it would bring more restaurants and hotels to Statesboro. I am tired of eating at the same old restaurants. My friends and I have big discussions about where to eat around here.

I also feel that Statesboro is losing a lot of tax dollars to this law. For example, I found an article on this issue in The Atlanta Journal and Constitution. Jarrell Jones, spokesman for a group called Citizens for a Progressive Statesboro, says that "Georgia's 5.5 million residents each consumed an average of 1.4 gallons of distilled liquors each year, according to the Wine and Spirit Wholesalers Association of Georgia. Bulloch County's prohibition has failed to stem that flow locally, according to Jones, but has succeeded in transferring financial benefits to other communities."

These dollars that Bulloch County is losing would help bring in more restaurants and businesses. Fred Kitchens, the executive director of the Wholesaler's Association, said "package sales generate 22 cents in local taxes for each liter of distilled spirits. By-the-drink sales produce another 10 cents in local taxes for each mixed drink, and liquor licenses generate an additional $1,000 to $2,000 apiece."

I believe if the liquor law was passed in Statesboro more restaurants and bars would come in here and the prices of drinks would go up. This would make people drink more socially and carefully because it's more expensive. Statesboro would benefit with more business and more money to the town. This would help the town break out of the shell it's in. Also, this would be another step to the growth and development of this university.

I am concerned with the issue of the university's growth and the politics that have been used to keep this law from being passed. This university is going to grow, but it would grow a lot faster if this law were passed because of the business opportunities in this town.

I think this is the key to more restaurants and bars. This, in turn, will create more jobs for the students and more money for the town and university to grow on.

Cold War myths

Editor,

In current mythology, the Cold War was a titanic struggle of good versus evil, of democracy and freedom against godless Communism.

Reality is quite different. How can the United States' support of brutal right-wing dictators like Somoza, the Shah, Mobutu, Marcos, Trujillo, Pinochet, Suharto and others be equated with democracy and freedom?

I have a different theory. The Cold War was a struggle of the corporations to retain control of the cheap labor and natural resources of the world and to prevent Socialism from succeeding anywhere because it is a threat to their tremendous wealth and power.

Since the dissolution of the Soviet Union and the passage of NAFTA and GATT, these corporations are more powerful than ever.

How were the American people so easily deceived? Simple — the corporations own the media and can promulgate the fairy tales of the ruling elite 24 hours a day if necessary. The greatest propaganda achievement of human history was convincing the American people that believers in a utopian ideology like Communism were evil devils.

Blacks already have respect; Cole is ignorant

Editor,

I would like to take this time to respond to what Christopher Cole said Thursday ("No apologies, but here's what I meant"):

"That's the best way to bring this minority some desperately-needed respect." First of all, respect is not desperately needed. As an African-American and a human being, I was born with respect, therefore I demand respect.

It's not an issue of you being misunderstood; you personally are misinformed (and you call yourself a journalist).

You also stated that as usual your column brought out the worst in us. No, it brought out the ignorance in you.

Hey I want to be a coach too

GSU has defiantly made some changes in its coaching staff.

In the past year and a half GSU has added a new coach in men's and women's basketball, softball, golf, cross country and men's soccer.

In football and swimming recent changes have left voids in those positions.

The only coach that looks safe is Jack Stallings, amazing what happens when you have over 1,100 wins for a career.

But what is happening, first it was Bill Speith in softball being replaced by Debbie Williamson, and then by current coach Kelly Kirkland.

The next change was Jim Vargo stepping down as Cross Country coach.

He was replaced by Brad Simmons, a former GSU runner.

Then Doug Gorden left as head golf coach, and he was replaced by Drew Pittman, a former GSU player.

The next change was men's basketball.

Well at least GSU had a reason to change this staff. NCAA violations forced out Frank Kerns.

Gregg Polinsky was the beneficiary of this change.

The next major change came when Drama Greer resigned, and Rusty Cram was named as the new women's basketball coach.

But this last week has been active in transactions.

Scott Farmer the GSU swimming coach resigned from that job to advance himself in athletic administration.

That is great for him, but he does have this eight year winning streak to defend with the women's team.

Also this week, Tom Norton moved from both men's and women's head coach in soccer, to women's coach and director of soccer at GSU.

The recipient of this change is former GSU player Kevin Chambers.

Now Tim Stowers has been told that his services are no longer needed, but who will take over for Tim.

Their are names flowing around, but the most interesting and unfortunately the most believable is Ray Goff.

No I don't want Goff here either, but with the timing of the football change, he looks like the choice.

First of all he could not openly take the job yet because he is still under contract to UGA.

Secondly by making Frank Ellwood interim head coach, if at any time Goff becomes available, then the athletic department will be able to drop Ellwood and put Goff in place.

Even if Goff would not become able to take the job until July, he could still be put in place at that time, that is what interim means.

This may be a deluded fantasy.

But given GSU's track record, it may also be its intended plan.

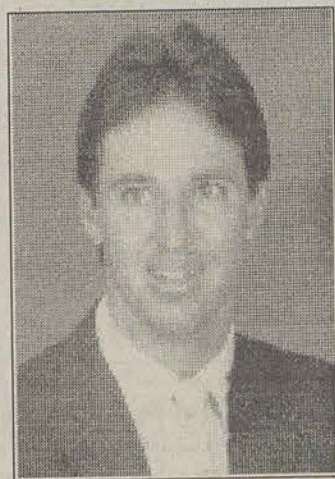

The only coach that most people will be happy with here is a guy who has three national championships, and can be found every morning at Snooky's swapping stories over a cup of coffee.

Coaches changing places, and jobs

By Ronnie Swinford
Sports Editor

Coaches seem to be dropping like flies as GSU announced two more changes in coaching positions Friday.

GSU assistant athletic director and swimming coach Scott Farmer will step down as coach to pursue his career in administration.

"The hardest thing that I have ever had to do was stand in front of my swimmers and tell them my decision," Farmer said. "We are going to be offering more services to the student-athletes, and that is what I like to do the most, work with the kids."

No replacement has been named for the swimming job so far.

Also in coaching news, Tom Norton, the head men's and women's soccer coach, will assume new responsibilities as director of soccer at GSU.

Because of these added responsibilities Norton will turn over the men's team to longtime assistant Kevin Chambers.

"I hate to give up coaching the men," Norton said. "I've worked long and hard for several years to improve the program, but I am excited about the opportunity to spend more time with the women's team. Having a 100 percent commitment from their coach will benefit them."

Chambers, before becoming an assistant in 1992, was a four-year starter for GSU at goal keeper. He holds the career record for saves with 312, and for shutouts with 11.

"I'm excited about being named the men's coach at GSU," Chambers said. "I've learned a great deal from Tom as a player and assistant. I feel he's prepared me well for this position."

Players split over change

By Mike Davis
Senior Staff Writer

The wakening call came at about 9:30 a.m. Free safety Eric Thigpen ceased the annoying ring and answered the phone. He was informed that a meeting had been called for reasons beyond the Fort Walton Beach native's knowing. All he knew was that something was up, and by the way it sounded, it wasn't good.

Athletic Director Sam Baker had called the team together to inform them that there were going to be some changes — big changes. The contract of Tim Stowers was not going to be renewed. In more specific words, their head coach was getting fired.

Coach Frank Ellwood, who has served at GSU as senior associate athletics director since Baker took over as athletic director three months ago, was named the interim head coach for the 1996 season.

"It came as a total shock," Thigpen said. "We knew when they called us that something was coming. We didn't know what it was, but it was definitely important. When they told us the news, there were a lot of mixed emotions, some sad and some glad."

It was after the announcement that the team discussed the situation among themselves. They talked about spring practice that starts April 8, and they discussed the team's unity, which was definitely at stake.

"We started discussing what we need to do," Thigpen said. "We needed to pull together as a team. If there is no unity, then it will be trouble from the start, no matter who the coach is. We will get over this, because we all have worked too hard in the off-season to get to where we want to be."

But questions quickly started looming. Is winning 70 percent of your games not good enough anymore? Does Baker have the authority to fire a coach since he's only been here three months? And what about the players who recently signed to play football for Coach Stowers?

Baker said in the mid-afternoon press conference on Saturday that most players sign for schools, not for coaches.

It's true that GSU football holds rich tradition that not all schools can take pride in, but did Stowers really have nothing to do with these players' decisions to play football here?

"Coach Stowers had a lot to do with me coming to GSU," full-back Roderick Russell said. "He talked to me, and I liked what he said and how he presented it. He really impressed me."

"I don't think Coach did anything wrong," junior splitend Tristram Belser said. "He's a great coach. But there is so much politics in football now that sometimes, your best job isn't good enough."

Ellwood, who compiled a head-coaching record of 10-34 (.227) over four seasons at Marshall University, will temporarily take charge of the Eagles until a new coach is found.

Sometime after the end of the 1996 season.

But it was his willingness to take the job on such short notice and his already-existing relationship with the players that led to the interim position.

"This is a total shock to us," freshman center Grant Chesnut said. "We had not heard anything about it, except that some alumni weren't happy, but you always hear stuff like that."

"But I think Coach Ellwood is a straight-forward guy. He has traveled with us and a lot of the guys know him. I think he'll do a good job," Chesnut said.

"Hopefully, the coaching change won't be a big problem," he said. "I have all the confidence in the world that the seniors will step up. We've all worked hard, we have depth, we're hungry, and we are going to make a run for the National Championship."

Eagles sweep Davidson in weekend series

By Ronnie Swinford
Sports Editor

GSU used a blowout, a near no-hitter and a late inning comeback to sweep the Davidson Wildcats and push its overall record to 23-7 for the year.

Sunday's game

GSU led by 11 strikeouts by Ryan Cummings and outlasted the Wildcats 7-2.

GSU trailed 2-1 going into the bottom of the sixth inning.

Tommy Peterman, GSU's first baseman, led off the inning with a hot shot to first base. The ball was fumbled and then the pitcher, Rhett Ingerick, dropped the throw while covering first. Peterman had to wait on base for two pitches before Eagle designated hitter, Steve Walson, hit a low slicing line drive down the left field line. The ball cleared the fence and GSU had the lead for the rest of the game.

GSU would score one more run in the inning. After the homer, Mark Hamlin walked and he advanced to second on a force out by Sy Jones. Hamlin would get to third and score compliments of Wildcat pitcher Ingerick. Two wild pitches moved Hamlin to the plate.

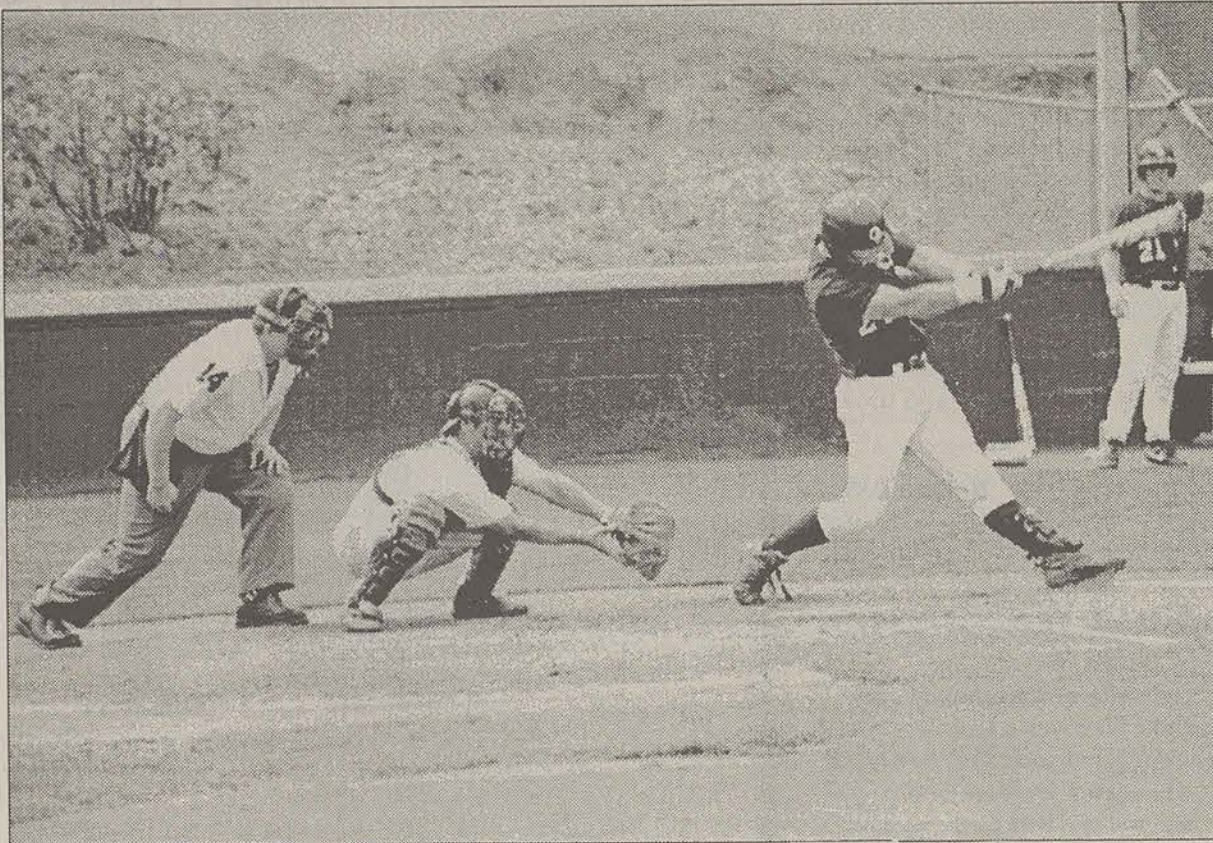

GSU would strike for two more runs in the home half of the seventh inning. Tyson Whitley walked to start the inning. The next pitch proceeded to scream over the right field wall compliments of Peterman.

And the last GSU score would come in the eighth inning. Steve Wilson hit a solo homerun to end the GSU scoring.

But the scoring was just the side story. GSU dominated Davidson from the mound. Cummings' 11 k's in seven innings were impressive, but the finale came compliments of Tod Lee. Lee came into the game in the top of the ninth replacing Danny Washburn who pitched an inning of scoreless ball. Lee got the first batter to fly to center. He then used seven pitches to strikeout the next two Wildcats for the win.

Saturday first game

GSU, powered by 13 runs and

Heather Lyall

Mark Hamlin swings for the fences against Davidson. He hit one homerun in the Eagles three games.

a seven inning stint by starting pitcher Julio Ayala, cruised to the easy 13-3 win.

GSU opened the game with a bang. After Antoine Moran flied to the warning track in centerfield for the first out, GSU had six straight hits, four for extra bases.

The carnage started with a double by Tyson Whitley. Then Tommy Peterman slammed a two-run homer for the 2-0 lead. Steve Walson then doubled, followed by a Mark Hamlin single. Hamlin was then caught stealing second for the second out of the inning. Sy Jones then singled to score Walson. Jones would then steal second, and score on a double by Steve Wilson GSU led 4-0.

Davidson clawed its way back into the game with a run in the second, and two in the third to cut GSU's lead to only one.

But in the bottom of the fourth inning, GSU opened up the offense and knocked out the Wildcats. GSU scored five runs on four hits in the inning. The big shot of the inning was a three-run homerun by Walson.

GSU scored two more in the fifth inning, and one more run in the seventh and eighth innings, to get the total to 13 for the game.

Saturday nightcap

The second game Saturday night was a contrast to the first game. In the first game GSU had 21 hits; in the second game they had none until the bottom of the sixth inning.

Davidson, led by Chris Pollard, jumped out to a 3-0 lead.

Pollard was no-hitting the most powerful lineup in the Southern Conference until the sixth inning.

But after the second out in the sixth inning, the clock struck midnight for the Wildcats. Pollard lost both the shutout and the no-hitter on one swing by Steve Walson.

The homerun was to left centerfield, and marked the second time in the week that GSU would come close to being no-hit, and comeback late to win the game. Pollard then made his second mistake of the game on the next pitch to Mark Hamlin who deposited the ball over the left field wall and GSU trailed only 3-2.

Tod Lee, the Eagle closer, was brought in to stop Davidson from scoring in the seventh. He gave up a hit and a stolen base, but he shut the door.

But GSU still trailed by one, and would need to get that run in the seventh inning, because the second game of doubleheaders only go seven innings.

Pollard, though tiring, still looked as if he could get the Eagles out.

But two walks and a hit batsman loaded the bases with two outs for Tommy Peterman.

Peterman hit two balls foul. So with the count 0-2 Peterman took advantage of a high fastball and ended the game with a GSU win on a two-run double to right centerfield. GSU's three-game sweep will give them a 23-7 record for the year. GSU is second in the conference behind Western Carolina. Both teams have three losses, but GSU lost two of three to Western, which gives them the tie breaker for first.

GSU will next play at home Tuesday, April 2 against Charleston Southern at 7 p.m.

Mets now have pitching

By Ben Walker
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Dallas Green has spent enough time in sports to know it's never a good idea to get too excited about the future, mostly because it can fall apart so quickly.

No, it's always better to poor mouth, to play down the prospects and praise the opposition. That way, there won't too many expectations or disappointments.

So, skip, what about those young pitchers on the New York Mets?

Are Jason Isringhausen, Bill Pulsipher and Paul Wilson the next coming of Tom Seaver, Jerry Koosman and Nolan Ryan, or is it way too early to tell?

"I've been in baseball 41 years and have seen a lot of guys hyped as the next superstars," the Mets manager said, "but I think these kids deserve the hype."

"I'm not leery of the buildup because these kids have talent, a great work ethic and great motivation," he said.

"They're outstanding young talent, three power-type pitchers, strikeout guys who love to compete. So I don't think you can talk enough about them."

Well, no wonder the telephone lines in the ticket office at Shea Stadium have been ringing since last season ended.

Because at last, after some of the darkest days in franchise history, the future is finally here.

All over the field despite a couple of minor injuries this spring the Mets and their fans like what they see.

Actually, they started liking it when, following a 25-44 start, New York went 44-31 after the All-Star break and won 28 of its last 41 games.

That turnaround was the second-biggest improvement in the majors in 55 years, trailing only the 1979 Los Angeles Dodgers.

"When the season was over, we wanted to play 20 more games," Pulsipher said.

Maddux pitches best to the best

The Associated Press

Greg Maddux has made a habit of handling hitters and even breaking their bats, as he did to five Cleveland Indians in Game 1 of the World Series.

A few hitters, however, have had their way with Maddux since he made his major league debut in 1986. No surprise, six-time NL batting champion Tony Gwynn is among the best against the four-time Cy Young winner.

Gwynn is a .431 career hitter (25-for-58) against the Atlanta ace. He's also drawn eight walks and what's more, is the only active batter who's faced Maddux more than a dozen times without ever striking out.

Not that Gwynn enjoys facing him.

"You never feel like you're getting in a real good swing, a swing you're happy with, a swing with follow-through," the San Diego star said.

Maddux returns the compliment.

"He gets more of the bat on the ball on some pitches than anyone else," Maddux said.

Eric Karros, though, hasn't been so fortunate. The Los Angeles slugger is 0-for-17 lifetime against Maddux.

How other hitters have done in the regular season with Maddux, according to STATS, Inc.:

Barry Bonds has hit six home runs, the most against Maddux. Bonds is batting .313 (25-for-80) with 13 walks and 13 strikeouts. Those 13 walks are the most anyone has drawn.

Andres Galarrraga (61 at-bats) and Howard Johnson (74 at-bats, five home runs) have struck out the most, 18 times each.

Andy Van Slyke, now an ESPN announcer, batted .343 (23-for-67) with four home runs and 11 walks.

Bip Roberts, now in Kansas City, hit .471 (16-for-34) with seven walks. Marquis Grissom, now Maddux's teammate, batted .405 (17-for-42).

Dante Bichette is 1-for-9 and Colorado teammate Vinny Castilla is 0-for-8.

Four 'Aces' ready for new season

By Paul Newberry
The Associated Press

ATLANTA—Through all the recent changes in baseball, there has been one constant: the Atlanta Braves.

A trade here, a free-agent acquisition there, the Braves never seem to do more than a little fine-tuning each year to ensure their inevitable spot in the playoffs.

Atlanta has been a part of the postseason every year since 1991 (except for the strike-shortened 1994 season, of course), culminating last year with the city's first World Series title.

"There's a lot of pressure that goes with showing up from day one of spring training and your only goal is to win the world championship," said Tom Glavine, one of the pitchers who makes the Braves well armed to do just that. "Obviously, every team comes in with that goal, but for this team we know that, realistically, if we don't win a world championship, it's a bad year."

After losing the World Series in 1991 and '92 and the NL playoffs in '93, the Braves were starting to look like the Buffalo Bills of baseball.

Then came 1995. The Braves recovered from a slow start to win the East by 21 games, then swept Cincinnati for the NL pennant and beat 100-game winner

Cleveland in a six-game World Series.

Now that the Braves have won a championship, they have to deal with the inevitable questions about complacency. But if the fire is still burning, they are healthy. Avery (7-13, 4.67) struggled most of last season but is still only 25 years old.

While starting pitching has been a constant strength for the Braves, the bullpen was a perennial problem until last season.

"THERE'S A LOT OF PRESSURE THAT GOES WITH SHOWING UP FROM DAY ONE OF SPRING TRAINING AND YOUR ONLY GOAL IS TO WIN THE WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP."

— ATLANTA BRAVES PITCHER TOM GLAVINE

clearly the best team in the National League.

As has been the case since 1991, Atlanta's success revolves around the starting rotation. Tom Glavine is baseball's winningest pitcher over the past five years (16-7, 3.08 ERA last season) but is only the second-best pitcher on his own team.

That's the way it is when one of your teammates is Greg Maddux. There's not much left to say about Maddux, who has won an unprecedented four straight Cy Young Awards and is coming off the two best statistical seasons in pitching history (19-2, 1.63 ERA in '95).

After Maddux and Glavine, the Braves have John Smoltz and Steve Avery. Smoltz (12-7, 3.18) finally could win 20 games now that his right elbow is fully Mark Wohlers (7-3, 2.09, 25 saves) finally harnessed his enormous talent and became one of the best relievers in baseball.

"It used to be Mark would go into the game and say, 'Oh my, look who's hitting,'" said Leo Mazzone, the Braves pitching coach. "Now he goes into a game and the hitter says, 'Oh my, look who's pitching.'"

Offensively, the Braves ranked next-to-last in the league with a .250 batting average and only ninth in runs scored (645), but they had a knack of getting key hits. Atlanta won 25 games in its final at-bat; David Justice's homer provided the only run in the Game 6 clincher over Cleveland in the World Series.

General manager John Schuerholz decided to keep the core of his offense intact, re-signing first baseman Fred McGriff (team-high 27 homers and 93 RBIs) and centerfielder Marquis Grissom to multi-year contracts.

Grissom, acquired in a pre-season trade with Montreal to give Atlanta a true leadoff hitter, had his worst year since 1990, hitting .258 with 12 homers and 29 stolen bases. They Braves expect him to look more like the player who stole more than 70 bases in both 1991 and '92.

Third baseball Chipper Jones, runner-up to Hideo Nomo for the NL Rookie of the Year award, is on the verge of stardom after hitting .265 with 23 homers and 86 RBIs.

The only concern is Jones' health. He missed all of the 1994 season after hurting his left knee and will miss this season's opener while recovering from arthroscopic surgery on his right knee. He shouldn't miss more than a few games.

The city of Atlanta, which chopped itself silly during the Braves worst-to-first pennant in 1991, has reacted to the World Series championship with a ho-hum attitude. The season opener Monday against San Francisco was not a sellout as of last week.

Most attention has turned toward the Olympics, which will give the Braves a new stadium in 1997 but forces them to take a 17-game road trip in late July.

Braves get rings opening day

By Tom Saladino
The Associated Press

ATLANTA — The World Series championship rings, to be presented to the Atlanta Braves players and coaches during opening day ceremonies on Monday, were unveiled Friday night during a preview for the media.

The rings, made by Jostens Recognition, the nation's lead-

The Atlanta Braves will host a World Series celebration luncheon April 4 at the Georgia World Congress Center beginning at 11 a.m. The public is invited.

All the players and coaches, club owner Ted Turner and the broadcasters will attend.

Individual tickets are $75. Tables will cost between $1,500 and $5,000 and a Braves player will be at each table.

Atlanta manager Bobby Cox may have given a hint as to who will be in the second spot in the batting order in the season-opener when he inserted shortstop Jeff Blauser into the No. 2 spot in Friday's exhibition against Cleveland.

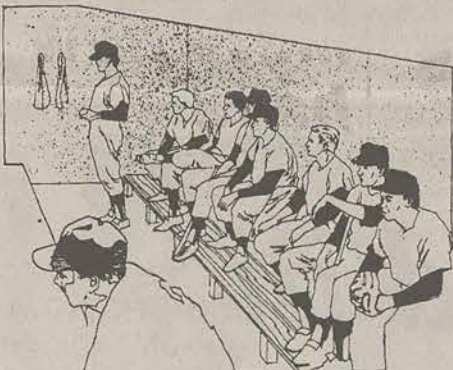

Mark Lemke, who shared the spot with Blauser last season, hit seventh with Mike Mordecai hitting eighth and playing third for the injured Chipper Jones.

When Jones returns to the lineup later next week from arthroscopic surgery to his right knee, he will play third and bat third. Blauser and Lemke will be the No. 2 and 8 hitters.

"They'll probably alternate," Cox said. "I really haven't decided. Lemmer's a great 8th-place hitter and Blauser has always been a No. 2 hitter."

"It really doesn't make a whole lot of difference," he said.

During the Florida exhibition season, Braves catchers combined to throw out 9-of-25 base runners in 25 games. Javier Lopez threw out five, Tyler Houston two and Eduardo Perez two.

ing producers of championship rings and awards, were shown off before the Braves exhibition game with the Cleveland Indians.

Stan Kasten, Braves president, and John Schuerholz, the club's general manager, designed the rings along with Dave Johnson and Charlie Anderson of Jostens.

The Braves' World Series ring is made of 10-karat yellow gold. The top of the ring features a three-quarter karat diamond set in a square white-gold collet on a blue sapphire.

A double-bevel bezel set with 18 diamonds surrounds the stone. Inscriptions include "Atlanta Braves World Champions 1995," the player's name and number or position and the Braves' logo.

Giants lack pitching, have power and defense

By Rob Gloster
The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — There may be times this summer when fans at Candlestick Park wonder whether they're watching the Giants or the 49ers.

With a powerful lineup featuring Barry Bonds and Matt Williams, and a poor pitching staff that led the NL in homers allowed last season, many Giants games this season could have football-like scores.

And pitching is not the Giants' only major problem. They're slow, they were third-to-last in the NL with a .253 batting average last season and they led the league by striking out 1,060 times.

San Francisco made several big offseason moves, but there's been little indication during spring training those changes have solved the Giants' problems.

After releasing Deion Sanders, the Giants signed free agent Stan Javier from Oakland to take over in center field and as the leadoff hitter. Javier's a better fielder and has a better on-base percentage, but lacks Sanders' speed and power.

The Giants signed Shawon Dunston, who reluctantly left the Cubs as a free agent after 11 seasons in Chicago, to take over at shortstop after they traded Royce Clayton to St. Louis for three pitchers.

Dunston is a better hitter than Clayton, but lacks his predecessor's speed or range.

And the Giants signed Cuban defector Osvaldo Fernandez to a three-year contract, hoping he'd immediately strengthen the pitching staff.

General manager Bob Quinn called Fernandez' arrival "one of the most significant days in the history of the Giants' franchise."

But Fernandez has struggled during spring training, leading manager Dusty Baker to question whether he even belongs in the starting rotation.

Pitching is by far the Giants' biggest concern.

No matter who fills the No. 5 spot in the rotation, San Francisco begins the season with only one pitcher who's ever thrown a shutout in the major leagues — Mark Leiter got his first in 1995.

Leiter has a major-league record of 38-38, yet has as many career wins as the four other probable starters — combined.

William VanLandingham is the No. 2 starter.

Though he's only in his third season, Baker predicts he'll eventually be one of the NL's top pitchers.

Bonds is not as patient with his teammate.

"VanLandingham, he should be ready by now," Bonds said. "How many more years do you need?"

The third starter is lefty Allen Watson, obtained in the trade for Clayton.

The fourth starter is Fernandez. Jamie Brewington came into training camp as the fifth starter, but has had trouble with his control all spring and may lose his job to Jeff Juden.

An informational meeting for the Sporting Clay Shooting Tournament will be held on Wednesday, April 3rd, in the Russell Union Room 252, for interested students.

Gill leads TNN Country Music Award ballot

The Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. -- Vince Gill leads all contenders for the TNN Music City News Country Awards: He grabbed seven nominations.

Gill, who won a Grammy last month for his hit song "Go Rest High on That Mountain," got the nod Friday from readers of the Music City News as a nominee for best entertainer, male vocalist and video.

Fans also gave him two nominations a piece in the categories of vocal collaboration and best single.

Gill's competition for the top award includes Billy Ray Cyrus, Alan Jackson, Reba McEntire and George Strait.

Fans will vote on ballots to be printed in the magazine, and also through a toll telephone number.

The Music City News awards are the only major ones in which country music fans pick the winners.

The June 10 awards ceremony will be broadcast live on cable's The Nashville Network.

PALMETTO, Fla.-- Longtime punksters Bad Religion got the plug pulled on an April 10 concert after a flap over seating arrangements.

Fire Chief Michael Johnson had threatened to padlock the doors on the civic center because the band's contract with the county called for "festival seating," or no seats. Johnson said that arrangement could be dangerous.

The county attorney was prepared to argue in court that the show should go on as planned but decided there wasn't enough time to get a ruling.

So county commissioners voted Thursday to cancel the show.

"It came down to time," said Elliott Falcione, the civic center's operations manager. "It would cause too many problems to too many people."

Bad Religion's songs include "Handshake" and "Recipe for Hate."

LOS ANGELES --Bonnie Pointer's husband was jailed for violating probation after his conviction for punching his wife and breaking his sister-in-law's nose.

A judge on Friday sentenced Jeffrey Bownes, 43, to spend 60 days in jail, beginning immediately.

The court said Bownes failed to prove he had enrolled in a domestic violence counseling program, attended Narcotics Anonymous meetings or performed any of his 280 hours of community service.

Another hearing was scheduled for April 30.

Bownes was convicted Feb. 13 of two misdemeanors for hitting his wife in the face and breaking his sister-in-law June Pointer's nose during an argument about when to leave a Christmas Eve party at her house.

Bonnie Pointer, who had asked prosecutors to drop the charges, left the Pointer Sisters for a solo career about 10 years ago. Sisters June, Anita and Ruth have since had hits including "I'm So Excited" and "Neutron Dance."

LAS VEGAS --Lola Falana, who has multiple sclerosis, fell ill at a friends' house and was hospitalized for a few days.

Ms. Falana, 53, had trouble breathing and swallowing while she was visiting Drs. Theodore and Parvin Modaber Jacobs, a spokesman for the couple said.

The former entertainer was admitted to a hospital's intensive care unit Sunday and was released on Thursday.

Ms. Falana, who lives in Philadelphia where she is a minister, remained in Las Vegas on Friday, the spokesman said.

In the 1970s and 1980s, Ms. Falana was a Las Vegas headliner known for her sizzling acts.

A singer and dancer since age 14, she got her big break when the late Sammy Davis Jr. picked her out of a New Jersey chorus line.

In 1983, she nearly died from complications from abdominal surgery. She was diagnosed with MS, a disorder of the central nervous system, four years later.

NEWCASTLE, Pa.--A rookie police officer's admission that he lied about his notes apparently swayed jurors who cleared Rodney King of a drunken-driving charge.

King, who gained prominence in 1991 when an amateur photographer videotaped police beating him after a traffic arrest, made a "No. 1" sign with his finger. The jury on Friday found him innocent of driving drunk last May in a rented car that became stuck in a muddy yard about 45 miles northwest of Pittsburgh.

The arrest of King was the first for Union Township Police Officer Clint Garver, who had been on the force two months. Garver admitted in court that he never saw King driving and never asked him what he had been drinking.

He said that a judge typed the arrest notes for him.

"The big question was, 'Why did he lie about it for a year?'" jury forewoman Tasha Anzalone said.

United States Postal Service releases stamp for Breast Cancer Awareness

By Syd Kronish
The Associated Press

The U.S. Postal Service has put on its best running shoes with the coming issuance of a new 32-cent release - the Breast Cancer Awareness Stamp-in conjunction with the 1996 National Race For The Cure on June 15.

The race is the largest 5 kilometer (3.1 mile) competition in the country. Last year 26,412 runners and walkers took part in the Washington, D.C., race that raises money to fund breast cancer research, education, treatment and screening.

Other "Race For The Cure" events will take place in 65 American cities this year.

The new stamp depicts a stylized female form with a pink ribbon on her right shoulder. It was designed by Tom Mann of Virginia who illustrated the AIDS Awareness Stamp in 1993.

The Breast Cancer Awareness Stamp will go on sale June 15, launching a four-month public service and publicity campaign. Dates and places of first-day cancellations will be provided soon.

In addition to the stamps, the Postal Service has developed a Breast Cancer Awareness brochure which features the personal stories of people affected by the disease.

The brochures will be available in major post offices throughout the country in conjunction with the stamp issuance. One hundred million Breast Cancer Awareness stamps will be issued.

The National Cancer Institute's Information Service toll-free number (800-4-Cancer) will be printed on the top border of each sheet of 20 stamps.

Recently the U.S. Postal Service issued a new version of its variable-rate Postage Mailing Center (PMC) stamps.

Here's how you can obtain first day of issue postmarks by mail:

The Philatelic Fulfillment Service Center offers First Day Covers (available in the 32-cent denomination) for the PMC stamp. These are blank covers with the new stamps affixed and postmarked with the official first day of issue cancellation.

You can place your order or request a catalog from the Philatelic Fulfillment Service Center by calling (800)-STAMP-24, or by writing to the Philatelic Fulfillment Center, U.S. Postal Service, P.O. Box 419424, Kansas City, Mo. 64141-6424.

If you would like to order just the PMC stamps, 32-cent denomination, you can write to the Service Center, U.S. Postal Service, P.O. Box 419636, Kansas City, Mo. 64141-6636.

The USPS says that currently only 11 post offices in northern Virginia are equipped to dispense the new stamps.

Glover unhappy with lack of black Oscar nominees

The Associated Press

ELLENBURG, Wash. -- Add actor Danny Glover to list of Hollywood veterans unhappy with the movie industry's depictions of blacks.

Blacks "are all not just gangbangers," said the star of the "Lethal Weapon" movies.

Glover visited Central Washington University on Tuesday to fulfill a canceled February speaking engagement for Black History Month.

Glover said many of his characters represent a push for change, an attempt to recast traditional roles.

Although some blacks protested this year's Academy Awards ceremony for what they perceived as an inattention to the contributions of blacks in the movie industry, Glover said it isn't right to blame the Oscars.

"It's not the academy," Glover said. "The academy is made up of writers and directors and actors and technicians- people that don't make decisions."

"Who green lights the film?" he said.

Historically, that green light has been given to movies that put whites on pedestals but placed blacks in roles of subordination, Glover said.

Glover's heroes are black men who fought abuse with action-perceived to be a "dangerous" topic by the movie makers, he said.

Glover won acclaim as a brutal husband in Steven Spielberg's "The Color Purple." But he is also proud of his role in "Predator 2," when he waged war with an invisible space creature.

"Not too many black characters" are cast as a film's protagonist, he noted.

Officials examine new ways to use the now-vacant Lewis Hall

By Feel N. Good
Staff Shrink

Students no longer will have the excuse that there is nothing to do on campus.

Local nightclub such as Level One and other Statesboro clubs will have to compete with GSU's own nightclub next year.

GSU's Club Unique will open its doors Sept. 26.

The club has schedule three opening acts it thinks the students will enjoy.

Statesboro's local group of Pulse, a pop sextet with heavy gothic overtones, will be on hand opening night.

The second act, D-Roc (featuring Diamond), will perform their latest hit "Bounce Shorty Bounce."

The third act, 95 South, will perform their latest hit "Rodeo II, on our way down I-95."

95 South returns to GSU after performing to a sell-out crowd at GSU's '93 Homecoming.

"We wanted to come back to Statesboro and do another show to let everyone know we love to do small town shows in the south," said Daddy Black, a member of the Jacksonville, Florida based group.

The department of special programs, along with Union Productions, are in charge of the event and believe it is long overdue.

"We feel this is what the students have wanted for years and now they have it," said Edward Bayens, assistant director of special programs.

Amanda Huginkiss

The home of GSU's Club Unique now located at the site formerly known as Lewis Hall.

Club Unique will be located on Sweetheart Circle at the site formerly known as Lewis Hall.

"Since the building was vacant, we decided to ask the university to allow us to use it and provide us with a small amount of financial support," Bayens said.

GSU re-evaluated its '96 budget and gave $10,000 to assist in small remodeling and security measures.

"We don't think there will be any major problems once the nightclub opens," said Ken Brown, GSU police chief.

"The students have wanted this for too long to cause any serious problems," said Brown.

With the passing of the new liquor referendum in Bulloch County, Club Unique will be allowed to sell alcoholic beverages, but students have to be 21 or older to drink.

The club will house two performing stages, a huge dance floor, a small restaurant and a lounge area. The lounge area will be located on the second floor of the establishment.

"The walls and doors on the second level have been removed to allow for more room for the lounges area as well as for emergency situations such as fires," Bayens said.

Club Unique will give GSU a distinct advantage over other Georgia schools and student enrollment is estimated to rapidly increase.

YEAH RIGHT?

University Store lowers textbook prices on April 1

By Jezzibel Horowitz
Staff Trolop

The University Bookstore is lowering prices after years of selling students supplies, clothes and books at high prices.

Ben Dover, GSU freshman, noticed the change that occurred on Monday, April 1.

"It was unbelievable," said Dover. "I was buying a couple of textbooks for my classes when I saw the sign 'Buy one text book get one free' caught my eye. I thought it was a joke, but in fact it was the truth! I went to buy a sweatshirt for my dad, the price tag read nin dollars! I ended up saving over $30!"

The low prices have caused the bookstore to buy back certain books for next quarter at full price. Art supplies will be reduced to 60 percent off and

YOU GOTTA BE KIDDING

GSU decides future of unused Union space

By Hern Sneed
Returning Staffer

Starting Fall Quarter '96, GSU will open a tanning salon on campus to respond to student needs.

The Hot Spot will be located in the Russell Union and has received a lot of support since the university added it in early January.

"We have been listening to what the students say they wanted and having a tanning salon on campus was at the top of the list," said Earl Cashon, Russell Union director.

Since the salon is a total tanning salon, it will include two parts: the tanning salon, which will be located next to Spud's Doghouse and the a beauty shop located in room 284 of the Union.

The salon will be in operation between the hours of 8 a.m. and 6 p.m. everyday.

Cashon does not know how many tanning beds will be put into the area.

"We have figured that possibly eight or nine tanning beds can be put in the area, but we will not know until the Wolff Company lets us know," Cashon said.

Both students and faculty members will have to set up appointments to use the salon as well as provide a physical examination from a GSU health center doctor.

"The physical will be mandatory for the person's first use," Cashon said. "After that, IDs will be used to keep records. The salon staff will know who has turned in a physical."

The Hot Spot will be a full-service tanning salon and cost will be $2 for both faculty and students.

"Because of the large amount of students that we know will use the salon, everyone will be limited to one hour of tanning time," said Curtis Hames, staff physician in health services. "We have checked and found that this is the longest period an individual should be exposed to tanning lights."

All beds will be equipped with air conditioning, built-in AM/FM stereo cassette and 30 bulbs.

Students believe GSU is finally listening to their wants and that the tanning salon is just the beginning of things to come.

"This will give me something fun and interesting to do in my spare time and on the weekends without having to spend a lot of money," said Denise Jackson, a GSU sophomore.

GSU'S NOT THAT STUPID!

Students to enjoy second Spring Break

By Mr. Potato Head
Staff Fry Guy

Yes, spring break is just around the corner for the second time this year and students are looking forward to yet another vacation.

Rather than going to the usual vacation spots such as Panama City Beach, Daytona, or even home, GSU students can stay right here at GSU and have a great time.

The GSU administration, along with Union Productions, has planned a week of events it feels the students will enjoy.

awhile as well as give them the chance to analyze how they are doing in the quarter.

"Students need a break in late April or early May to let them relax and see how they can change and improve in their studies if so needed," Henry said.

Patricia Burkett, director of housing, said this event will allow students the opportunity to stay in their dorms and save money at the same time.

"Students can take advantage of their housing contracts by remaining on campus during the vacation period," Burkett said.

— PATRICIA BURKETT DIRECTOR OF HOUSING

Spring Break II, Fun in the 'Boro will include appearances from Hootie and the Blowfish, the 69 Boyz (featuring the Quad City family), Garth Brooks, the Goodie Mob, Kilo and Amy Grant.

"Spring Break II will be even better than the first spring break," said Angela Thomas, a GSU sophomore.

"This will give students who can't afford to go home or to Panama City the opportunity to stay here and have fun for a week."

Although it is entitled Spring Break II, this is the first year GSU has hosted such an event.

The event will take place starting April 19 and will conclude April 30.

"My staff and I have analyzed the event and the school calendar thoroughly," said GSU president Nicholas Henry. "We found that it will not disrupt the flow of the quarter at all."

Henry said the second break will give students the chance to get their minds off of school for

"Since they have to pay for their living quarters anyway, why not give the students a choice to stay in them instead of being forced to go home?"

All events, which include musical guests and other activities, are free to all GSU students and faculty with a valid ID.

Teddy Jordan, a junior majoring in recreation and leisure, will be spending the second break participating in a GSU discovery program.

"The program is new and it will be an exciting part of Spring Break II," Jordan said. "I will be part of a group that will be trying to come up with new ways of getting students to enroll at GSU. It will give me the chance to show my creative side as well as meet many different people."

No matter how you decide to spend Spring Break II, GSU wants the students to take advantage of Fun in the 'Boro to help them prepare for the remaining part of the quarter.

COOL CLASSES (IS THAT AN OXYMORON?)

Twister added as new PE elective

By Hern Sneed
Staff Writer

Beginning next quarter, Twister will be offered as a physical education class by the department of Kinesiology.

"Twister provides great physical exercise not only because it is a low impact activity, but also involves group effort and togetherness," said L. E. Phant, an instructor for the course.

The game has been an honored tradition in the U.S. and has now made its way to GSU.

"Other colleges and universities have tried Twister classes before and it seems to draw lots of support. In many cases there has been an overload of students," Phant said.

"If the class gains a lot of interest, then more Twister classes will be added to the curriculum in future years."

The object of the game is to move to the appropriate colored dot and be the last person not to have fallen down. This feat is accomplished by out-maneuvering the other players. One person is in charge of the spinner, which tells the other players where to place their hands and feet.

"I would sign up for that class because it would teach me team effort and flexibility," said Pat McCrotch, a GSU junior.

LAKE

in to shovel out the sludge. Also 12 tons of sludge were removed from the bottom of the lake.

"I've never shoveled so much in my life, man," said Jason Gatt, a GSU maintenance worker.

While removing the radioactive material from the lake, several items were discovered. Several stale hamburger buns, what has been proven to be the bones of Jimmy Hoffa, 22 barrels from the GSU Chemistry Department and a Yugo were uncovered during the removal.

The EPA discussed the possibilities these items brought up and decided that the Yugo held the best lead.

"We believe that several rebels from the old Yugoslavian Republic planted the car filled with radioactive waste in the lake as a warning to Americans," Peck said.

"With the recent slate of terrorist attacks on the United States, this Yugo presents the best lead we have to catch the person responsible for this."

However, Dr. Kalcium Oxide turned himself into the University Police Monday, claiming responsibility for the radiation.

Oxide is a professor of chemistry at GSU.

He was hired here at GSU two years ago after working independently as a self-proclaimed mad scientist.

"I was working on an experiment involving genetic cloning," Oxide said.

"All I wanted to do was to make a clone of David Letterman as a party novelty."

Oxide said the experiment went drastically wrong, and the unfinished clone lit a cigar and subsequently caught itself on fire.

Oxide said he then proceeded to place the remains of his experiment into barrels and deposited them into the lake.

"I just wanted to make the world a better place," Oxide said.

The EPA said that even though Oxide turned himself in, they will still proceed to investigate the possibility of Yugoslavian terrorists.

"An opportunity like this to discover and arrest terrorists can't go uninvestigated," Peck said.

"We will find some Yugoslavian terrorists somewhere."

LIQUOR

under 21. Drinks and shots will be sold for three to five dollars and specialty drinks, like "Harvey Wall Bangers" will be sold for $7.50.

According to the plan, SGA senators will act as bartenders, and off-duty parking attendants will act as "runners."

"There is no reason why a student should have to serve himself; besides, making trips to the bar could disrupt the flow of the class. Using [the parking attendants] as runners will cut down on all the confusion," Walraven said.

The liquor will be stored in GSU's Club Unique, which was formerly Lewis Hall. Both the senators and the parking attendants will be working at Club Unique for tips only.

School officials said they will use the money to "tear up parking places and roads, and then build a lot of stuff."

"Not having any parking shouldn't be a problem," Nolen said. "The parking and transportation department is working on a busing system to run from Macon to Savannah and from Augusta to Jesup, as well as implementing a designated driver system for all students taking core curriculum classes next year."

This new plan is considered by many academics around the country to be the wave of the future in American collegiate education. All eyes and ears will be on GSU next year to see if the plan is a success or failure.
