More parking changes expected this summer

By Kevin Bonsor
Staff Writer

Several parking projects will be taking place this summer that will affect students, faculty and staff. Construction begins Saturday.

The front portion of the commuter parking lot directly across from the Forest Drive building will close on Saturday, June 1. The lot will be merged with the big lot on Forest Drive that was closed winter quarter.

The new combined lot will create approximately 300 spaces and is tentatively scheduled to open in July, barring any delays. While this construction is going on students will still have access to the big dirt lot behind the Forest Drive parking lot.

Also on June 1, the remainder of the old portion of Forest Drive will be closed along with the faculty and staff parking lot off that road. The school rerouted Forest Drive because a new College of Education building is going to be built where Forest Drive used to run. The scheduled opening date for that building is January 1998.

July is also the scheduled opening date of the new lot off of the new section of Forest Drive, which will be located where the new road coming in from the bypass will meet Forest Drive. This new lot will contain approximately 300 spaces.

In August the big dirt lot behind the Forest Drive parking lot will close for the Southern Center expansion. Bob Chambers, director of parking and transportation, said the new Forest Drive parking lot will be opened before the dirt lot is closed.

Chambers said parking may be added to the Johnson Hall parking lot to balance the closing of the Forest Drive lot. He also suggested the west commuter lot, which contains 890 parking places, as an alternative for summer students.

CLEC investigation to begin

By Joshua Edmonson
Senior Staff Writer

A meeting was held Friday by members of the student activities budget panel who are investigating the Campus Life Enrichment Committee.

The committee will print a list of questions to ask all the members of CLEC.

"John (Walraven) said that he was going to print up some generic questions to ask every student and all the faculty members on CLEC," said Tim Young, member of the student activities budget committee. "The questions will be the same for everyone so that there won't be any discrepancies. He will give us a list of the people to call and interview them. We will contact them and ask them the questions. From that, we will have a final meeting and then file a report on CLEC."

Theresa Beebe, member of the subcommittee, said that she had a conversation with Walraven about what the investigation would involve.

"John and I met and we discussed how to go about the process," Beebe said. "We have certain questions about how the money is allocated. It isn't that student government or the student activities budget committee doesn't want to fund CLEC, it is that they have certain questions that they need clarification on."

Some of the questions will include budgeting, the difference between Southern Arts and CLEC, allocation of money between Southern Arts and CLEC, and a definition of what departmental lectures involve. The board will be investigating the violation of faculty senate by-laws by CLEC director Maria Cahill.

Cahill is currently on maternity leave and neither she nor her assistant returned phone calls as of press time.

Each subcommittee member will receive two student members of CLEC to interview.

Several allegations arose last quarter, including that SGA representatives on CLEC were not able to vote at times and that CLEC meeting times were scheduled when the two SGA representatives could not attend.

Young said that he was concerned about the scheduling of the CLEC meeting times when the two SGA representatives had class conflicts.

"Was it coincidental or was it deliberate?" Young said. "I want to ask the members that went to the meetings on a regular basis what went on. Most of the members are in the music and arts department, so the likelihood of us getting a real story out of them is pretty slim."

Once the interviews are held, the subcommittee will meet again to discuss what they will bring up in front of Cahill. The committee will then discuss the responses to the interviews with Cahill. An activities budget meeting will then be held to determine whether or not to grant a budget increase to CLEC.

The investigation will begin when Walraven finishes printing the questionnaires and will last approximately one week.

"The activities budget committee is waiting to hear from John," said Jack Nolen, vice president of student affairs. "We will meet this summer or early next fall to see about the funds increase that CLEC is requesting."

Student critically injured in fight near Level One

By Carolyn Wynn
Staff Writer

One former GSU football player lies in Savannah's Memorial Medical Center fighting for his life while three others were injured during a fight across the street from Level One early Saturday morning.

Tareem Kioka Lowery, 21, was found at 1:10 a.m. lying on the ground across the street from Level One. Lowery was airlifted to the Memorial Medical Center trauma center where he remains in the intensive care unit, listed in critical condition.

GSU student Danquel Sims has been arrested and charged with aggravated assault.

The altercation is said to have begun brewing at a house party earlier that evening. After the party, some players went to Level One.

While at the club the tension escalated into a physical attack outside the club where the three young men were jumped and a fight ensued.

Witnesses said Lowery was hit repeatedly until Marco Bradham, former GSU cornerback, threw his body over Lowery in order to prevent him from being hit again.

During the altercation, other GSU football players were injured.

One player receiving a minor injury was Ronald Logan, a defensive tackle, who was hit on the head with an unidentified object.

Another player injured was Jevon Sullivan. Sullivan, a fullback, reportedly received several cuts on his right arm and had been hit on the head with a bottle.

Sullivan, who was not originally at the house party, said he was unsure of the exact reason for the start of the fight but admitted he was probably targeted because he is a member of the team.

Eagle Head Coach Frank Elwood was surprised by the incident.

"It is a tragedy anytime this type of thing happens. Everyone involved is in some way harmed and the event itself tarnishes the image of the school," Ellwood said.

Lowery, a native of Summerville, S.C., previously played for the Eagles after transferring from North Greenville Jr. College. Lowery left the football team during spring practice.

Statesboro police are still investigating the case.

Battle of the Blood today in Union

By Erika Anderson
Staff Writer

GSU student organizations will have a chance to compete against each other in the Battle of the Blood today.

Campus organizations and dorm residents are encouraged to compete with other organizations in order to have the most donors.

The organization with the most donors will receive a plaque from the American Red Cross, as well as a citation from GSU President Nicholas Henry.

The blood drive, which is sponsored by the Red Cross and the Public Relations Student Society of America, will be held in the Russell Union Ballroom from noon until 6 p.m.

Nancy Martin of the American Red Cross said that she is very hopeful that students will turn out for this drive.

"We're coming in and out of Memorial Day, where we really need increases," Martin said. "We're also approaching summer, where the need is always critical."

PRSSA's theme of the Battle of the Blood is an idea that Martin said she hopes will work.

"This is the first time that we've done this; it's just getting off the ground," Martin said. "I've already heard from groups wanting to get involved."

Martin said she is also "toying" with the idea of a competition between GSU and another school.

"We've done school competitions before," she said. "The students really come out and support those drives. We need input from GSU students as to a rival."

"I'VE ALREADY HEARD FROM GROUPS WANTING TO GET INVOLVED."

people. Having the blood drive in the ballroom, she said, will alleviate that problem.

"Having the drive in the ballroom, we can have as many as 15 or 16 beds, whereas a self-contained unit can only hold about 5 beds," she said.

The American Red Cross has been the single largest blood supplier in the United States for more than 50 years.

The organization is responsible for collecting six million pints of blood each year through blood drives at churches, community groups, schools and other groups and meetings.

This Battle of the Blood will aid in making GSU a crucial part of the blood donating process, enabling students to help those in need, Martin said.

A single unit of blood can save as many as five lives.

Union robbery results in upgraded security

By Joshua Edmonson
Senior Staff Writer

Last Wednesday night, a man armed with a chrome-plated pistol robbed the Russell Union game room.

"From what we can understand, a person entered the Union building and came in the game room double doors," said Ken Brown, director of public safety. "The victim was counting money behind the counter. He saw the individual walk in and he immediately fell to the floor. The suspect fired one shot in his direction."

The shot went wide right of the victim and struck the door behind the game room counter. The suspect took $187 from the cash register and fled the Union.

The university police have composite drawings of the suspect and have contacted all local law enforcement agencies to assist in the search for the assailant.

"The search continues to be on the top of our list as far as investigations go," Brown said. "We are following a few leads, but they are too preliminary to talk about at this time."

There were several individuals in the Union at the time of the robbery. The university police have contacted and received statements from the individuals in the Union during the robbery.

The Union and university police are planning to step up the amount of security during hours when robberies are more likely to occur in the Union.

"We have had officers on foot patrol in and around the Union for some time now," Brown said. "We are going to continue to do this. We will pay special emphasis to the times that robberies are more likely to occur."

Officers on foot patrol check the Union on an average of four times each night.

Earl Cashon, director of the Union, is planning three additional steps in protecting the Union against further robberies.

"We are going to have the police come around between the times of 10 and 11," Cashon said. "We are also going to put in more security cameras and install taping machines so, if a robbery happens again, we will have a picture of the suspect. We are changing the procedure in the way we count money in the Union at night. So, we have three plans on making the Union a more secure place."

The game room currently has a security camera to monitor the pool tables, but it is not connected to a taping machine.

Statesboro to welcome BRAG cyclists

By Rusty McGuire
Staff Writer

Statesboro is scheduled to welcome a group of approximately 2,600 bicycle riders in this year's Bicycle Ride Across Georgia. The annual event, which helps to raise money for the Multiple Sclerosis Society, begins in Atlanta and terminates in Savannah.

Marissa Marchitello, marketing assistant for the Statesboro Convention and Visitors Bureau, said they are excited about the event.

"The Chamber of Commerce and the Convention and Visitors Bureau are really excited about welcoming and sponsoring the riders," she said.

Cyclists, ranging in age from preschoolers (riding on the backs of their parents' bikes) to senior citizens, will average about 60 miles a day during their 412-mile trek.

BRAG arranges for the cyclists to camp out in designated areas of the small communities through which they will travel. Though they are all given this option, many choose to stay in hotel rooms.

She also said that an average day sees the riders contributing $75,000. This could mean big business for local hotel owners.

The riders will roll into Statesboro June 13 after riding 62 miles from Swainsboro. They will be escorted by a team of Harley Davidson riders to Sweetheart Circle, where they will be greeted with a host of activities.

"Statesboro is a desirable location for the riders because it has adequate facilities and an enjoyable atmosphere," she said.

The cyclists will begin their 48-mile trek to Fort Stewart June 14.

They are scheduled to arrive in Savannah for the conclusion of the ride June 15.

Police find missing
200-pound chicken

The Associated Press

SALISBURY — This chicken's back in its coop. It's a little worse for the wear though.

Police have recovered a 200-pound lead chicken stolen from a Salisbury front yard last week.

But the 35-year-old monument to the poultry industry acquired a different color during its time away from its familiar home.

The chicken was found on a playground near the unidentified owner's home after the owner received an anonymous tip, said Sgt. Mike Elliott, of the Wicomico County Sheriff's office.

"Whoever took it painted it red and white, put a cigarette in its mouth and placed a beer can beside it," Elliott said.

The 2-foot-tall chicken may not have its dignified gray-blue sheen anymore, but its owner was happy to have it the chicken back in the coop where it belonged.

"This has really upset me, but I'm certainly glad to have the chicken back," said the owner, who requested his name not be disclosed.

"Other than the paint job, he doesn't seem to be harmed."

Two 11-year-olds
cook up some napalm

The Associated Press

BOTHELL — Two 11-year-old Bothell boys, working from a recipe found on the Internet, cooked up a batch of potentially explosive napalm, fire officials say.

They heated the ingredients on a kitchen stove at one boy's home over the weekend, Bothell Fire Marshal Denny Wright said.

Sue Aahl, mother of one of the boys, discovered a jar of the mixture and called the fire department.

She also contacted officials at Maywood Hills Elementary School, where the two boys attend class.

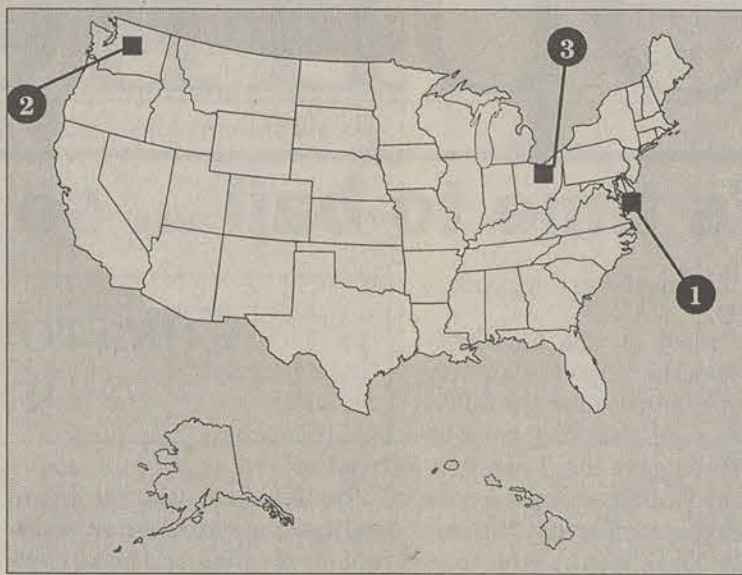

Wright said another boy at school downloaded the recipe from the Internet, then gave it to the boys who did the mixing.

The two boys could face criminal charges, if what they did is deemed to be illegal manufacture of explosives, Wright said.

Napalm, used widely during the Vietnam War, is a gasoline-based gel used in explosives and flame throwers.

Wright said the boys apparently mixed the napalm out of curiosity, and there's no evidence they intended to put it to dangerous use.

"They hadn't thought that far ahead," Wright said.

Mother, baby fine
after in-flight delivery

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Nancy Connie Nguyet didn't need a stork to bring her into the world: She had her mother and a Continental Airlines plane.

The baby, whose middle name comes from Continental, was born on Flight 1435 from Chicago's Midway Airport.

A flight attendant found the mother, Pham Nguyet, just after the woman gave birth in the airplane's bathroom. The attendant opened the door when Nguyet, who is Vietnamese and does not speak English, did not answer repeated knocks.

A doctor on board helped care for the baby and mother until the plane landed as scheduled at Cleveland Hopkins International Airport, Continental spokeswoman Karla Villalona said.

Nguyet, 22, of Hobart, Ind., was headed for Washington.

Nancy and her mother were released from Southwest General Hospital in the suburb of Middleburg Heights.

An interpreter was called to the hospital to translate for Nguyet, hospital spokeswoman Kelly Stanford said.

She has been in the United States for only two months.

Nguyet was joined at the hospital by the baby's father, Hoang Nguyen, their 10-month-old son and Nguyen's mother, Stanford said.

The couple is not married.

Wisconsin girl is saved by pig's liver

By Richard Eggleston
The Associated Press

MADISON, Wis. — A 17-year-old Dodge County girl is recuperating from a liver transplant she wouldn't have lived to receive, except for doctors who circulated her blood through a pig's liver when she lapsed into a coma.

Rebecca Draeger of Iron Ridge was in critical but stable condition Friday night after a donor organ became available and she finally received the transplant at University of Wisconsin Children's Hospital.

The physician who helped keep her alive said he expected her to recover.

"She is not nearly the sickest person we've dealt with," Dr. Allan Kirk said. "I think we'll be able to get her through."

Draeger had already lapsed into a coma because liver failure was causing swelling in her brain, and was only hours from death when her doctors opted to use the pig liver to cleanse toxic biological waste from her blood.

Kirk and his assistants pumped her blood from a vein in her leg, through an oxygenator and a warmer, into the pig's liver and back into a vein in her chest. She received the treatment twice, and revived each time.

After the second treatment, a transplant team led by Drs. Anthony D'Alessandro and Munci Kalayoglu removed her diseased liver and replaced it with a donated organ.

The pig, killed by a veterinary surgeon, had been raised specially to be free of anything that could cause human disease. But it was the first time a pig's liver had been used in Wisconsin to keep a human patient alive.

Kirk said liver disease often strikes young, otherwise healthy people, so transplant patients often are able to return to completely normal lives.

But unlike people whose kidneys or hearts have failed, there are no mechanical devices to keep them functioning until a donor organ becomes available.

Before coming to Madison, Kirk led a team at Duke University that kept a 22-year-old man alive for 10 days before a human liver became available.

"We have to make difficult decisions in our business," he said. "But if there's anybody who deserves a chance at life, it's a previously healthy 17-year-old with her whole life in front of her."

Draeger is expected to remain in intensive care for at least a week and in the hospital for two to three weeks.

Man posing as pregnant woman cons elderly man out of his Social Security

The Associated Press

LINCOLN, Neb. — An older Lincoln man gave another man $3,500, believing he was a pregnant woman who needed an abortion, according to Lancaster County officials.

Calvin D. Washington, 31, was charged with theft by deception by the Lancaster County attorney's office. Bond was set at $25,000.

Washington, in a phone call to The Associated Press from jail, denied he had done anything wrong.

According to an arrest warrant affidavit signed by Deputy County Attorney Jan Lipovsky, the victim was a man in his 60s who is hearing-impaired, suffers from diabetes and multiple sclerosis. The man's only income is less than $1,000 monthly from Social Security.

In the affidavit, Lipovsky described Washington as a man "who does masquerade as a female and currently has no permanent address."

Lipovsky said Washington used the name "Tee Washington" in dealings with the victim.

The affidavit indicated the victim wrote several checks on his personal bank account to Washington, the first for $200 on Feb. 27, which was for an abortion because "she" was pregnant.

Washington denied telling the victim that he was pregnant. He said another man did that.

A couple of days later, the affidavit alleges, Washington requested an additional $500, explaining that the abortion cost triple because the pregnancy involved triplets.

Washington allegedly returned on March 1 and first told the victim the Feb. 29 check had been lost, then that it had been torn up, obtaining an additional $500 check. On March 4, Washington convinced the victim to provide a check for $800 on the pretext it would help hold a used car and would never be cashed. It was cashed the same day, according to Lincoln Police Investigator Dennis Duckworth.

According to the court documents, the alleged scam ended on May 1, when the victim went to the bank to obtain a $2,500 loan to again pay over for a "bond" to release "Tee" Washington from jail. Bank officials became suspicious and then contacted the Lincoln Police Department.

Woman locks 84-year-old boss in trunk

The Associated Press

ROANOKE — A housekeeper who locked an 84-year-old widower in the trunk of his car for two days and drove around while he begged for his freedom has been sentenced to 25 years in prison.

Mitzi Jean Horton, 31, pleaded guilty to charges of abduction and robbery in the November incident.

She had worked as Vernon Laughon's chauffeur and housekeeper.

They had gone out to buy a bottle of liquor Nov. 16, when Ms. Horton snatched a $20 bill from his hand, stopped the car and put him in a choke hold that caused him to pass out.

She then stuffed him in the trunk of his car, only opening the trunk once to check if she had adequately forged his signature on a check. Despite Laughon's pleas and warnings, Ms. Horton refused to free him as she drove around town pawning his VCR, ring and watch and spending $140 in cash stolen from his apartment.

Cramped, cold and soaked in his bodily wastes, Laughon was discovered after two days by police.

Our Opinion

Investigation into CLEC deserves cooperation

The panel appointed to investigate the Campus Life Enrichment Committee has begun a comprehensive review of the program and the activities of CLEC Director Maria Cahill.

We do not know what kind of results will be obtained through this investigation, but it is a commendable effort to shed some public light on this committee that has worked for so long under a shroud of suspicion.

The Student Activities Budget Committee has so far taken the appropriate steps to ensure that CLEC operates as it was intended — not as a slice of the budget pie to be greedily controlled by bureaucrats, but as a campus-wide committee open to a variety of people, for the good of everyone.

The budget committee has tabled a request for a CLEC funding increase and has initiated the investigation. We are hopeful that if too many discrepancies are discovered in the recent history of CLEC, a budget increase will continue to be denied until this organization can get its act together.

Those who are now investigating CLEC are under an obligation to provide GSU with some definitive answers about what has transpired over the past couple of years under Mrs. Cahill's supervision. It would also be helpful, though not necessarily critical, for the public to know just how long CLEC has been improperly spending its money.

A few cautionary words should, however, be directed to the investigating panel.

It will not be easy to scrutinize CLEC. The experience of the press can be described as facing a stone wall when it came to asking too many questions — or the wrong ones.

One of the most effective tactics employed by bureaucrats whose programs come under fire is to keep as many people as possible in the dark about it. While some members of CLEC have received questions with open arms, Mrs. Cahill and her allies have not been so cooperative.

The response of the budget committee to the CLEC scandal should be an eye-opener for those who wish to stonewall an investigation. They should pay particularly close attention to the attitude of John Nolen, vice president of student affairs, who has always stood for public scrutiny and operating committees according to their by-laws.

CLEC, however, is not without its allies on the budget committee, and they are likely to defend the committee in its time of crisis.

Whichever way the pendulum swings, we are glad that at least the issues are being discussed.

Year's end has arrived for the G-A

It's been a good year for The George-Anne. We hope you have enjoyed reading the G-A whether the articles were controversial, informative or just plain entertaining. This was an eventful year for the students of GSU. We covered everything from a student election to the city council to an SGA president's resignation. We have worked diligently to bring as much news to you. It's been fun, but now it's time to move on.

We have done this year's duty to the public. Now it's time to say, not goodbye, but see you next year.

I will be brief in saying goodbye to GSU.

My years at this university have been the most enlightening of my life, and despite the roller-coaster ride that my time in Statesboro gave me, I can honestly say I am a better person for having chosen this institution.

There have been positives and negatives throughout my college career. The positives have been truly exhilarating, and the negatives have been the pits.

At the risk of seeming to feed you my résumé, I should outline exactly where the roller coaster carried me over the past four years, in the hopes that it may inspire, disgust or simply inform.

I began my George-Anne work as a staff reporter covering SGA. That was an exciting first year. Back then student government was positively corrupt without even intending to be. They broke their own rules, appointing senators at whim and holding elections when they felt like it. It was a good year to be the SGA

CHRISTOPHER COLE

The following year, as a general assignment reporter, assistant news editor, and later, news editor, I really got my feet wet with campus politics. I was only just beginning to offend people with my columns, and life was busy as ever.

My junior year I took a less prominent, though more demanding, role as managing editor. This job requires little interaction with the general public, but it was the busiest I had ever been in my life. The managing editor of The George-Anne is almost never recognized in the public eye, but it is one of the most time-consuming and difficult jobs at this entire university — including those of faculty and staff.

You all know the story of my senior year as editor. I am afraid it has been shaped by only a small handful of major events, but much more has been going on than many people think.

Throughout this year, events have taken place that molded the campus agenda and provided a new direction for the student body, and for the first time at this school I believe that students are experiencing a backlash against apathy.

But what has troubled me as a continual irritant is the narrow focus of campus debate, and the disposition of many people to become petty and personal.

I have been the target of numerous personal attacks over the years at GSU, and I have taken them each in stride because I understand that some people do not have the intellectual prowess to argue a point on its own merit. It is incidents such as these that make me disappointed with some people in my community.

I have been harassed by administrators, professors, news sources, fellow students, and an array of other people in the line of duty. In many ways I have felt like a martyr, though I've never pinned that title on myself. There are others at GSU who are in the "martyrdom" category at times themselves.

It is the truth that I have been one of the more acerbic and outspoken editors of memory. In this I take pride, however, because it is my strong belief that an editor has done an inadequate job if he (or she) fails to incite controversy. That's because there are so many issues that ought to be controversial.

If I hope to have accomplished anything — and here is the thesis of my term as editor — it is that we should openly discuss topics that many people believe are not debatable.

With that, I say "Au revoir."

Progress in education more important than tradition

"Why are you doing this? You shouldn't rock the boat, especially when you're in it."

If I had a nickel for every time I heard that phrase over the last couple of weeks, I'd have a lot of nickels, probably enough to build a new building for the English and philosophy department.

I must admit I was a bit surprised to hear such a phrase from people who claim to be educators. It seems obvious that such a foolhardy ideology not only is a dead-end road, but spits in the face of everything education is supposed to be, so it was shocking to hear such a phrase so many times.

Allegations have flown over the last few weeks, and have touched on almost every department at GSU. All of them merit looking into, if only so that they can be blown out of the water, and the people accused given a clean slate.

Anyone who says the allegations being hurled lately aren't newsworthy needs to just go ahead and crawl back under the rock they came from, and I pray they don't consider themselves intelligent, because statements like that scream of ignorance.

And anyone who says that a newspaper isn't a watchdog for society has their head buried in the sand. A newspaper's job is to report to the common citizen what is going on around them.

In the past, newspapers have brought down corrupt world leaders, business scandals and criminals of all sort. They have been one of the few resources Americans have of knowing what's going on behind the scenes. Only in recent years have we drifted away from this premise, and begun inhabiting what should be a deserted island, known as "sensationalism." I hope I never see the day, where shows like "A Current Affair" or papers like "The National Enquirer" are the only media sources we have.

Above all, a newspaper should convey the truth, from every angle.

It's understandable that the corrupt despise reporters, and everything newspapers stand for, but why do so many of GSU's very own professors? Are they in fact corrupt? Surely not. But why, then, do they abhor the only screwing with my future, but the future of thousands before me, the thousands who are here now, and the thousands who will surely follow.

How things are done need to always be checked, to ensure that there aren't anything that could be getting done more efficiently. In the case of education that means that we need to figure out if how we are doing the educating is really the most efficient way of educating. We should always ask ourselves, "Is there anything I can do to further my something's wrong. It's not GSU's problem alone to solve, but GSU does play a part in it.

And since the ability to write and communicate well is diminishing in our country so rapidly, shouldn't we double-check everything we're doing and see if we can't come up with a way of doing better?

Sure, students come here handicapped because they had a poor writing instructor in high school, and this leads to many of GSU's best English professors concentrating on undoing bad habits and re-teaching things that students should have already mastered. But isn't there some way we can start to eradicate such problems? Surely at an educational mecca such as GSU there are professors and deans who are innovative enough and far-sighted enough to look into solving these problems.

The allegations raise some important points, but unfortunately there are some who are empowered with the ability to look into or maybe solve them who do nothing. Instead they talk about politics ("What the @#$*!?! is that about?") and would prefer to sweep it all under the carpet. To those who feel this way, and you know who you are, I pray that your days in education are numbered, because you surely don't belong.

We are getting to a turning point in America's educational system. It's high time we turn the thing around, and if need be, push the tab-reset button and start from scratch.

It's times like these when tradition should be thrown out the window and replaced by a little something leaders refer to as progress.

idea of being put under the microscope for examination? If they have done nothing wrong, then there should be nothing to worry about, right? I was told that by doing so I was rocking the boat and messing with tradition.

It seems that there are people who actually believe in the idea of status quo, on a university campus. Can you believe it? It seems that some of our most beloved professors believe that as long as they're getting "the job done" everything's okay. They think they shouldn't tamper with a system, even when its not doing the best possible job it could be doing. I find this to be highly insulting, because they are not own education, and the education of those around me, that I'm not already doing?" Especially when it's your job!

Take for example the College of Education. Perhaps they don't inflate grades. Perhaps the students in there really are all A and B students. Since they are so bright, and most of them go on to teach in Georgia schools, then it stands to reason that Georgia students would be likewise as well educated, because they are being educated by some of the country's best and brightest teachers.

Why is it, then, that Georgia ranks at the bottom of the nation in education? It obviously means

Grades in College of Education are not inflated, they are earned

Editor,
I am writing in response to Tuesday's article titled "Professors defend English department." Within this article a statement was made that the most inflated grades had come from the School of Education and less than 2 percent of the grades in this department were D's and F's. This statement implied that it is thought that grades are being raised or "given away."

I would like to offer a bit of personal information. I would hope, that because the students in the School of Education may some day be teaching your child, the grades coming from that department would be quite above average. Do people really want teachers for their children who struggle to become certified to teach? I would hope not.

This is why the College of Education requires students to have a grade point average of 2.5 in order to be admitted and stay in the Teacher Education Program. There is also a policy that students must earn a grade of C or better in all classes or else the class is repeated. I am a senior in the Exceptional Child program and have looked at many "curves." I can understand how it may be suspicious to look at consistently higher than average grades.

However, looking at a range of grades on just paper for this department can be deceiving. In the majority of the classes I have taken, the cut-off to receive an A reflects an effort of 93 percent or better.

I know there have been teachers who have had students ask to do anything to raise their grade a few hundredths of a point in order to have an A.

These students earned a B and that is what the professors have given.

No grades change at the last minute due to sympathy for a student.

I have been on the Dean's List three times in the past year and am proud to say that I have earned every grade that I have received.

I have worked extremely hard to earn the grades I have received and can vouch for the efforts of my peers who have earned grades that are above average.

If I have misinterpreted your article, I apologize. I am among many who feel that our efforts have been degraded, and are being misrepresented in the article. I hope these explanations demonstrate how the grades in the College of Education may appear to be inflated, when in reality the grades reflect the standard that is required in this department.

Senses discrimination in treatment of blacks at GSU social events

Editor,
Every student at GSU has the right to participate in any activity he or she chooses as long as this activity does not violate the rules and regulations governing the university or Bulloch County.

I am a freshman from Atlanta. I have been at GSU since last fall. During my short stay here, I have noticed that black students are not treated fairly when it comes to socializing.

I am not a racist. I have as many white friends as black friends, and I respect all of them. I am only trying to elaborate on the incident that took place May 18 at my apartment complex.

On May 18, an estimate of 40 black students gathered at the clubhouse at Willow Bend to socialize.

Before this social, the management of Willow Bend was informed, and gave the authority for this social to be held at the clubhouse.

The party began at 11:30 p.m. Everything was calm; there was no fighting; the music was not too loud, and I did not see anybody doing anything against the law.

Ten minutes after the party started, both Statesboro police and university police came asking us to leave, and told us that if we did not leave, we would be arrested for failure to disperse. One of the university police had tear gas in his hand as if to say we had started a riot and they had come to stop us. This is not the only occasion of this sort; there have been numerous other occasions.

I wanted to know why these police officers were asking us to leave, so I asked Officer Chappel of the Statesboro Police, and he told me that we were disturbing our neighbors. How could we possibly have been disturbing anyone when the party had just begun?

I then told him about one incident on a Thursday night about the houses across from Willow Bend. These white students had been partying for more than four hours; they even had a live band playing, and I had classes on Friday morning at 8 a.m. I could not sleep.

I did see the police there, but not to tell these students they were disturbing their neighbors, but instead to direct traffic.

Officer Chappel told me the Statesboro police did not have authority over Fraternity Row. I then asked Officer Platt of the University Police for confirmation, and he told me that they did not have authority over Fraternity Row either. Who has authority over these students?

Does this mean that they can do anything they want to do, even if they invade the rights of other students?

Officer Platt then told me that the next time I am disturbed by students on Fraternity Row, I should file a complaint at Rosenwald. I asked him why I have to go to Rosenwald and not the University Police to file a complaint, and he said the GSU administration is afraid that if they try to interfere with the activities of these students, they will be offended and they might leave GSU and the enrollment will decrease.

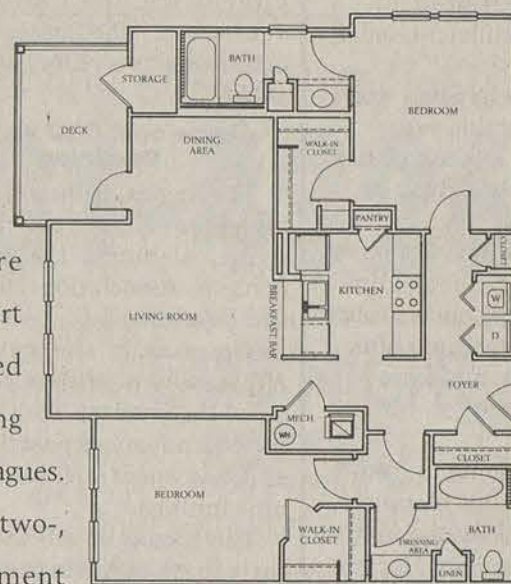

Does this mean that our social events are always disturbed and cut off because GSU does not care if we get offended and leave GSU?

Are you tired of Shaq too?

How 'bout the Magic? Not that I am a Magic fan, I just find myself entertained by watching them embarrassed by the Bulls.

Let's just face it: Shaq won't be getting a ring this year. This might be a Reebok planet, but it is definitely a Bulls series.

I can honestly say I am beginning to tire of Shaq. I am tired of seeing his on-the-court antics, tired of watching him miss free throws, and I am tired of his larger-than-life attitude.

I'm not even going to mention that little stunt blatantly intended for Scottie Pippin that landed teammate Horace Grant out with an injury last week. Or Saturday's incident: grabbing Rodman's foot, tripping him up getting him a file by the referees.

Everybody says Shaq is just young. The guy is 24 years old, an expectant father, and has been in the league, what, four years now. It's about time to at least start growing up.

However, just as my feelings have changed for Shaq, they have also changed for Penny. This is a positive one though. Anfernee Hardaway has impressed me with both his skill and his drive. He seems to be a team player who is handling fame significantly better than his teammate.

While we're talking about changes, have you seen the new Pistons uniforms? No, they are not as bad as the Raptor's nightmare, but it will take some getting use to.

For all you Grant Hill fans, you can forget the red, white and blue. The new colors are turquoise, yellow, and black. The main color seems to be turquoise. It has yellow and black stripes down the side with the new Pistons logo on the front. Like I said, it will have to grow on you.

But while people are changing uniforms, why doesn't someone do something about the uniforms on the Jazz? Their uniforms are like some hellish flashback in basketball history. You can't help but think of those high socks, small shorts, and Chuck Taylor Converse.

Speaking of "hellish" Dennis Rodman's book has found incredible success in the bookstores lately. As a matter of fact, it is number one on the non-fiction bestsellers list. Local bookstores can't keep it in stock. It seems everyone is interested in the inner workings of the NBA's most colorful player.

Admittedly, I am even planning on grabbing a copy myself. Taking nothing away from Rodman's proven skills on the court, anybody that dyes his hair 12 different colors, wasn't afraid to sleep with Madonna, and admits to wearing women's clothes, must have a heck of a story behind him.

As far as real women go, this is the first year the ladies Olympic team seems to be outshining the men's Dream Team. With ladies like Cheryl Swoops, Rebecca Lobo, and Lisa Leslie, the world can finally begin to appreciate talents long unnoticed.

Hey this might just prove to be perfect timing for the upcoming professional women's basketball league.

Eagles end baseball season, eliminated from Regionals

By Ronnie Swinford
Sports Editor

CLEMSON S.C. — GSU's hot-hitting baseball team finally met its match here in the NCAA Regionals over the weekend. The Eagles won their first game against Old Dominion, but lost their next two games to West Virginia and the University of Tennessee. The losses brings GSU's final record for the year to 46-14.

Game one: GSU vs. Old Dominion

The Eagles, behind the pitching game of the year for Julio Ayala, slammed the Colonial Athletic Association champion Old Dominion 6-0.

The star of the game was Ayala, who pitched a complete game three-hitter. No ODU hitter even advanced past first base as Ayala would strikeout 10 over nine innings.

The Eagles on offense struck early to stake Ayala to a lead. In the first inning Donnie Coe singled with one out to right field. Tommy Peterman then walked. Steve Walson singled in Coe from second to give GSU the lead.

The Eagles would strike again in the fourth inning with three more runs. Walson opened the inning with a single to left field. Mark Hamlin then doubled to right.

Sy Jones was then hit by a pitch to load the bases with no outs.

Steve Wilson then scored Walson on a fielder's choice to short.

Tyson Whitley then doubled to deep right field, scoring two, but was thrown out at third trying to stretch the double into a triple.

GSU would go on to score two more runs — one in the sixth inning, and one in the eighth.

"I have to give credit to him (Ayala); he was in complete control of his game," Old Dominion head coach Tony Guzzo said.

"They have great pitching, but we were just happy to keep them in the park."

Jack Stallings had little to say after the win.

"We are just happy to stay in scoring in the second inning when Kirk Taylor doubled with one out. Two singles then scored Taylor from second.

In the fourth inning the Mountaineers pieced together four

"We were a little impatient at the plate, but they pitched well and we didn't," Stallings said.

Game three: GSU vs. Tennessee

GSU started the third game off well, but the offense would not be able to carry the load for the Eagles in the 6-1 loss.

In the first inning, Tommy Peterman slammed his 27th homerun of the year in the first inning. Unfortunately the solo shot would be all the Eagles could muster against Tennessee starter Mike Lincoln.

Lincoln went nine innings, giving up nine hits, but stopping the Eagles time and time again.

Tennessee answered the Eagles in the first inning when leadoff hitter Chad Greene walked and stole second. He moved to third on a groundout to first, and scored on a sacrifice fly to left.

In the fifth inning Tennessee pushed two more runs across. A leadoff homerun, a hit batsman and a double gave Tennessee its runs.

The Volunteers would push one run across in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings to get their total to six.

"This game was like the last one, they pitched well," Jack Stallings said. "Clint Sauls pitched well enough to win, we should have done better than we did."

Although the Eagles lost in the regionals, two individuals were given awards this weekend. Peterman, was named third team all-American, and Tod Lee was named second team all-American by Collegiate Baseball.

Peterman's numbers for the year were astonishing. He hit .373 with 27 homeruns and 82 RBIs. His homerun total was one shy of the school record of 28 held by Ben Abner.

Lee was also impressive with his 7-4 record with 11 saves and a miniscule 1.20 ERA.

GSU's regional hero Tommy Peterman before his grand slam.

the winners bracket," Stallings said. "Julio pitched a great game."

Ayala said he was happy with his performance.

"The key for me today was to keep the ball down," Ayala said. "I just tried to get ahead of their hitters."

Game two: GSU vs. West Virginia

The West Virginia game was a complete 180-degree turn from the first one against Old Dominion. It was GSU being dominated by good pitching for eight innings.

Chris Enochs, the Mountaineer starting pitcher, went eight innings giving up four runs, all in the eighth inning.

Unfortunately for the Eagles, they trailed 9-0 before the grand slam by Tommy Peterman in the eighth inning.

The Mountaineers started the more runs. It all started with an error by Tyson Whitley. A sacrifice bunt moved the runner to second, and a double scored him. Two more singles and two more doubles scored three more runs.

In the fifth inning, West Virginia scored four more runs on three hits and a walk. In the process they chased GSU starting pitcher Ryan Cummings from the game. Cummings gave up 10 hits and six runs, but only three were earned.

The Eagles only offense came in the eighth inning. Enochs gave up two singles to Tyson Whitley and Jason Andrews, and then walked Donnie Coe.

Tommy Peterman then took the third pitch from Enochs and deposited it over the right center field wall for a grand slam.

The homer closed the gap to 9-4, but the Eagles could not get any closer.

BASKETBALL

Will Pitino jump back to the NBA?

By Tom Canavan
The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — If Rick Pitino decides to turn down a multiyear offer from the New Jersey Nets, it won't be because the deal wasn't good enough.

Nets president Michael Rowe on Friday night said Pitino was offered a contract that would make the University of Kentucky coach the NBA's best paid coach.

He also would be general manager and part-owner.

"I know the situation at Kentucky is an absolutely wonderful situation, and he's made it that way because of his abilities," Rowe said. "If his drive is to stay there, that is fine, but it won't be because of any deficiencies in the Nets' offer."

Rowe and Nets board chairman Henry Taub met with Pitino and his agent, Rick Avare, for three hours Friday near the Cincinnati airport area.

"The offer that was discussed today was complete enough that no further negotiations were scheduled or necessary," Rowe said. "The coach can make up his mind based on today's meeting. It will be a matter of whether he stays in Kentucky or comes to the Nets. I do not believe there is another position, college or pro, that will come into consideration."

Rowe said the meeting with Pitino wasn't scheduled until late Thursday night, but he was now excited about the possibility of Pitino coming to New Jersey.

However, Rowe also added that the Nets will continue interviews with potential coaching candidates if Pitino says no to the offer.

"I want to make it clear we are not waiting for him to decide about our coaching vacancy," Rowe said. "If our process moves along more quickly than his return, then we will conclude our process independent of an answer."

— NEW JERSEY NETS PRESIDENT MIKE ROWE

Rowe said Pitino sees the Nets' job as the perfect challenge, and the team is ripe for a turnaround.

"Rick Pitino is looking for a perfect basketball situation in the NBA that could take advantage of his talent," Rowe said. "He is looking for an ownership committed to supporting him, winning, and we believe today that Rick Pitino and the Nets fit that combination."

Giving Pitino any Nets job would be a major step toward righting one of the NBA's weakest franchises, veteran Armon Gilliam said.

"I think it brings a lot of credibility and respect to the organization," Gilliam said of Pitino's interest in coming to New Jersey.

"I think the players will instantly respect a guy who has had a track record like Pitino," Gilliam added. "I think it also stabilizes things in New Jersey, that's a key piece to put in place. You definitely want to do it before the draft. So the sooner, the better."

After making the playoffs under Chuck Daly in 1993 and 1994, the Nets stumbled the past two seasons under Butch Beard, missing the postseason with 30-52 records.

This past season was particularly tough, with Rowe cleaning house by trading unhappy stars Kenny Anderson and Derrick Coleman.

The Pitino talks were hush-hush, with some of the Nets' seven owners kept in the dark.

One of the minority owners, Don Unger, acknowledged he didn't know anything about talks with Pitino.

However, Gilliam said he was encouraged by what Pitino said earlier Friday at a news conference in Lexington, Ky.

"It seems like he is leaning in this direction and that he will be a part of the organization," Gilliam said.

"You have to go on that. He's made a lot of comments that are favorable toward New Jersey over the past week."

If Pitino does come to the Nets as coach and general manager that will cost current GM Willis Reed his job.

Although Rowe recently said Reed would be the team's general manager next year, the former Knicks center upset owners with some recent decisions, including the hiring of Beard two years ago.

One thing that might have cleared the way for Pitino to come to New Jersey was a reorganization by the seven owners in which Henry Taub was made the board chairman.

Taub has stayed in the background in recent years, but the team's seven owners are trying to speak with one voice now that he is in charge.

That's something Pitino likes and it seemingly has him on the verge of joining the Nets.

"It's kind of early to make a reaction," Gilliam said.

"It's still up in the air. But I think that the sooner it can be resolved the better off everyone will be. I think he's a great coach."

Sports ... the year in review

A memorable year is certainly an understatement for the GSU athletic program.

The first big news was the announcement of Sam Baker as athletic director, replacing interim AD Frank Ellwood. Ellwood eventually became the interim football coach for the 1996 season.

The GSU football team finished the 1995 campaign with a 9-4 record and partook in post-season play, where they scraped by Troy State before suffering defeat to Montana, the eventual champions.

Many thought a second-round playoff appearance would most definitely secure the job of Coach Tim Stowers, who had been under fire since his second year at the football helm. But as we found out in early April, it wasn't enough.

On the basketball courts, first-year head coach Gregg Polinsky learned the lessons of head coaching the hard way, as his team, consisting of seven freshmen, managed to win just three games all season.

Polinsky, replacing the departed Doug Durham, entered GSU after a nine-year assistant coaching stint at Alabama.

The women's basketball team, on the other hand, did exactly what was expected of them by going 15-13 under Coach Drema Greer, who to the surprise of everybody, including her team, resigned after the season for personal reasons. Greer left GSU after recording 162 wins in nine years as head coach.

Coach Kelly Kirkland's second year of heading the GSU softball team proved to be better than most coach's second go-round. With a superb finish in the regular season to secure the top seed in the Southern Conference tournament, the Lady Eagles fought to the championship game, until suffering a final blow from UT-Chattanooga, a team they had beaten to win the regular season a week earlier. Kirkland, like other coaches this year, was plagued by youth and inexperience. But that youth became an efficient contributor to the wins, when catcher McCaine Lowder was named the conference's Freshmen of the Year.

Both the men's and women's swimming team won the Southern States Championship, but the most amazing thing was that it was the women's eighth straight title, while it was the first ever for the men.

Both the men and women's tennis teams also won the conference this year, but GSU tennis player Elizabeth Nieto made it an extra-memorable season. She joined 63 of the nation's best tennis players at the NCAA National Championship in Tallahassee after compiling a 17-1 record. She was named the conference's player of the year for the third time.

This year's pride of GSU athletics was certainly found on the diamond ... the baseball diamond that is. After winning the Southern Conference and winning the first game in the NCAA regional against Old Dominion, the Eagles' season was put to rest after losing to West Virginia and Tennessee at Clemson, S.C. Tommy Peterman led the Eagles with 27 homeruns for the season, which left him third in the nation.

ATLANTA—The orthopedist for the Atlanta Braves doesn't believe David Justice would have required season-ending shoulder surgery had it not been for earlier injuries.

"With the shoulder already loosened up from that pre-existing damage, it was just the wrong angle, the wrong time and the wrong force," Dr. Joe Chandler said Thursday after completing three hours of reconstructive surgery on Justice's right shoulder.

The three wrongs arose in a game against the Pittsburgh Pirates on May 15, when Justice swung at a pitch from Denny Neagle. Justice bent over in pain with a dislocated shoulder.

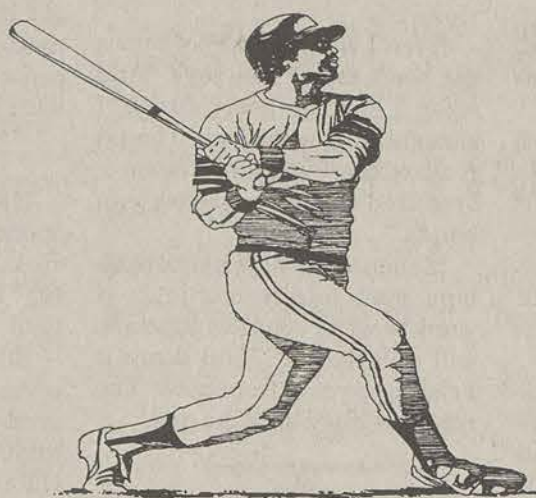

Justice went on the 15-day disabled list the next day and eventually decided to have the surgery he knew would bring an end to what started as an exceptional season for the National League's 1990 Rookie of the Year.

Justice, who entered the season with a .273 lifetime batting average, was hitting .321 with six home runs and 25 RBIs.

"I think the start of this was one year ago when he dove for the ball in the outfield and he sustained some damage then," Chandler said.

"Not enough to allow for a complete dislocation, but at that time it was a partial dislocation. He had multiple episodes through last year where the joints tried to fly a little too far forward, and he would experience pain."

Chandler said the surgery was successful. The operation repaired the ligament in two places in the socket where last year's injury partially detached cartilage and on the ball where the ligaments and capsular tissues completely tore away from the bone in last week's injury.

Braves general manager John Schuerholz said during a news conference at Piedmont Hospital that Justice was on an All-Star pace.

"You can't ever replace anybody like that," he said. "We're fortunate that the rest of our ball club is strong enough and deep enough that we feel like we'll continue to be competitive in our charge back to a world's championship."

The Braves plan to platoon a pair of veteran players in Justice's right field spot—Dwight Smith and Jerome Walton. They also brought up one of their prize prospects in the minor leagues, Jermaine Dye. He could see some spot duty.

"They feel confident they can carry on, even without David," Schuerholz said of the team.

Chandler said Justice should be able to take part in spring training next year after rehabilitation throughout the winter.

"I do not anticipate the full recovery to occur for about a year. I would expect him to come back and be the same player he was before," Chandler said.

Justice was the hero of Atlanta's World Series-clinching victory last year, when his lead-off homer in the sixth inning of Game 6 gave the Braves a 1-0 victory over the Cleveland Indians.

Chandler said he expected Justice to be released from the hospital today.

He said he'd have to wear a sling for three to four weeks.

"We'll start him with some very protected motions starting tomorrow, several times a day," Chandler said.

After six weeks, Justice will start using weights.

BASEBALL BRIEFS

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Andy Ashby hit a two-run double and scattered nine hits in 5 2-3 innings, leading the San Diego Padres over the New York Mets 7-2 Saturday.

Steve Finley hit a bases-loaded triple, and four Mets errors led to four unearned runs as the Padres won their fourth straight. New York has lost nine of 13.

Ashby (6-2) allowed two runs and nine hits, and went 2-for-3 at the plate.

Paul Wilson (1-5) lost his fourth consecutive decision. He allowed seven runs just three earned and seven hits in 4 2-3 innings.

SAN FRANCISCO — Mark Gardner won his fourth consecutive start and Kirt Manwaring doubled off Mike Williams (0-4) to break a 2-2 tie in the sixth.

Gardner (6-1) gave up two runs and four hits in six innings. Rod Beck pitched the ninth for his 13th save in 14 chances.

It was Manwaring's first game since he was placed on the disabled list April 9 with a broken bone in his left hand. He was hit by a pitch from Houston's Doug Drabek. Pirates 6, Braves 2.

PITTSBURGH — Denny Neagle struck out 10 in seven innings as Pittsburgh stopped a five-game losing streak.

The Pirates led 3-2 when Neagle (6-2) slipped a called third strike past Chipper Jones with the bases loaded to end the seventh.

Ethiopian exhibit will remain on display at GSU museum during final exam week

By Stacy Clemons
Features Editor

Ethiopia: Cradle of Civilization featuring authentic jewelry, dress, religion and art, is currently on display at the GSU Museum until June 2.

The exhibit was brought to GSU as part of International Week.

"The exhibit is on loan from Mrs. Lomi Belay, educator and wife of former Ethiopian ambassador to Sudan," said Del Presley, museum director. "It is part of an annual exhibit sponsored by students during GSU's International Week."

Visitors to the museum have given the exhibit excellent reviews.

Several of the area's schools have taken the opportunity to visit the museum to take part in this one-time experience.

"We have had approximately 13 schools to visit the exhibit," said Cyndi Humphrey, museum educator. "We have a group visiting on May 26 to see the exhibit."

The exhibit has been at GSU since May 9 and will remain on display through June 2.

"We don't know how many GSU students have come in to see the exhibit," Humphrey said. "They can just come in during the museum's hours and look at the exhibit."

"This gives students the opportunity to visit the exhibit at their convenience," Humphrey said.

student office.

Mark Tubbeh, coordinator of international student programs said exhibits like this give GSU students a better understanding of other cultures.

"This exhibit gives the students a chance to see different artifacts, which are used on a daily basis," Tubbeh said. "They can also learn about the native customs of Ethiopia and the country's religion."

On display are various pieces of hand-crafted jewelry, paintings, Ethiopian outfits and the Ethiopian calendar.

"All questions about the exhibit were answered except for one," Humphrey said. "There is a rug made of some kind of wild animal skin and visitors have been curious from what animal. Even Mrs. Belay didn't have that answer."

The Ethiopian exhibit is only one of many exhibits the museum presents each year.

"This exhibit was chosen because we wanted an exhibit from Africa," Tubbeh said. "We have already covered Europe, the Middle East and Southeast Asia, so we decided to get the Ethiopian exhibit on the campus."

Woody Allen and ex-wife, Mia Farrow go back to court over visitation rights of their three children

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Woody Allen and Mia Farrow are back in court, this time fighting over how much time Allen can spend with his kids.

Allen, 60, and Farrow, 51, clammed up when they dashed from the State Supreme Court building in Manhattan Thursday after a closed-door, all-day session with Justice Elliott Wilk. The pair returned to court for more talks on Friday.

A source speaking on condition of anonymity said that discussions centered on Allen spending more time with their children.

He and Farrow have an adopted son, Moses, 17; an adopted daughter, Dylan, 10; and a biological son, Satchel, 8.

Farrow was granted custody of the children after a bitter trial in 1993, allowing Allen limited visitation with Satchel and no visitation with Dylan. Moses was given the choice whether to visit Allen and chose not to see him.

Farrow starred in the director-writer-actor's films for a dozen years while the two were companions.

They broke up in 1992 after Allen got involved with one of Farrow's adopted daughters, 24-year-old Soon-Yi Previn.

NEW YORK — Songs from the heart have a whole new meaning for John Mellencamp.

The Indiana rocker, whose new album is titled "Mr. Happy Go Lucky," says his heart attack in the summer of 1994 affected his approach to work.

"There were many dark moments when you confront what heart disease means," Mellencamp says in the June 12 issue of Rolling Stone. "These songs come out of that."

The 44-year-old Mellencamp, who still smokes, said his brush with death changed the way he views life.

"I felt I was bulletproof before the heart attack," he says. "And when I had the heart attack, I thought life was over. Then I realized there was life afterward; I realized destiny was in my own hands."

Mellencamp says his new album isn't totally mordant: "I want to write songs that people will still dance ... and throw a Frisbee to years from now." The record is due out in August.

NEW YORK — Lou Diamond Phillips doesn't want to follow too closely in the late Yul Brynner's footsteps in the Broadway revival of "The King and I." So the latest king of Siam chose to keep his hair.

"That would have fed into the whole Yul Brynner image," Phillips, 34, told People magazine in explaining why he didn't go bald to play the king.

Phillips has shaved the sides of his head in a Mohawk-like haircut he says is an ancient Thai coiffe once worn by the king.

"There are etchings and paintings of him with this haircut," says Phillips.

"I felt a little strange walking around New York when I first got it cut. But the truth of the matter is, it's kind of hip. There are a lot of teen-agers out there with this haircut."

NEW YORK — Andrew Shue spent the summer off from the steamy "Melrose Place" sweating on a different set a soccer field.

Shue, who played professional soccer in Zimbabwe after graduating college, has been a midfielder for the Los Angeles Galaxy since the spring, People magazine reported in its June 3 issue.

"It doesn't seem real," says Shue, 29, who signed a one-year contract with the team and will play even when "Melrose" resumes shooting in July.

"Playing before 69,000 people at the Rose Bowl is like a 'Forrest Gump' moment, hearing the crowd chant, 'Shue, Shue,'" he says.

The actor will also begin the "Melrose" season with an addition to his family; Shue and his wife, ex-agent Jennifer Hageney, expect their first baby in July.

And hopefully, the baby will have a taste for soccer, he says.

Good Luck on Final Exams

- Find out what kind of exam it will be: objective essay, short answer, matching, true-false or all above.
- Go over previous tests in order to determine your strengths and weaknesses and the professor's "test style".
- Make a schedule for review.
- Divide material into logical sections and tackle one area at a time.
- Study by an outline.
- Review "sticks" better if done a little each day.
- Study the hardest material first so you leave that behind you.

- Write down a list of important laws, principles, theories, ideas and word definitions.

- Think about the questions and answers, not about yourself or your grades.
- Get enough sleep before the exam.
- Take ten slow breaths. This speeds oxygen supply to the brain.
- Glance over entire exam before you begin.
- Read directions.

GSU prepares for Summer Break

By Stacy Clemons
Features Editor

This is time of the year that every college student all across the country, including GSU, waits for Summertime.

We have approximately 10 days left in this quarter before most of us take off to our summer havens of the beach, other vacation spots, or the cheapest yet, home.

Some students have decided to postpone their summer to attend GSU's summer quarter classes.

According to the registrar's office, there are approximately 4,185 students registered for summer classes.

Most students just can't let all those long, hot summer days go to waste.

Although he won't be spending every moment outside in the sun's scorching rays, Ty Hubbard, a GSU sophomore, will be spending his summer working.

"I'm going home to make some money," Hubbard said. "I have major bills to pay and this will be the best time I will have to get the money to pay them."

To a lot of students, going to

"SUMMER SCHOOL WAS NEVER AN OPTION TO ME BECAUSE IT WON'T PAY MY BILLS."

— Ty HUBBARD,

school for summer classes was never an option.

"Summer school was never an option to me because it won't pay my bills," Hubbard said.

Students not going to summer school to catch up on credits or going home to work, have planned vacations that will take them away from a college environment totally.

Rickey Weston, a GSU senior, said after June 8, he will probably visit Nevada for his summer vacation.

"I am going to Las Vegas with my aunt June 30," Weston said. "My mind will be off GSU totally. Because I will have graduated, the only thing on my mind will be finding a job since I will be out in the real world."

Whatever students' plans are for the summer, safety is a number one priority among them.

Statistics show that the summer months are the dangerous months of the year.

Swimming accidents, heat exposure and driving drunk are ranked among the highest problems college students encounter during the summer.

GSU and The George-Anne wish you a great summer and hope to see all of you in the fall.

Tom Smothers discusses sibling rivalry

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The Smothers Brothers have made a career out of sibling rivalry, but was it always an act?

"My brother and I love each other dearly, but we've argued from the time we've been kids," said Tom Smothers, 60, who with his brother Dick, 59, make up the singing-comedy duo that has lasted 38 years.

"In fact, we went to a counse-

A joke? Since the brothers' heyday in the 1950s, audiences have been trying to figure them out.

This weekend, the pair will perform with singer Neil Sedaka at the Cerritos Center for the Performing Arts.

"We've been as good as we've ever been," Tom Smothers said. "We're not as hot as we were in the '60s, but we're just as good as we were or even a little better."

April Biechler brings experience to "Little Murders"

By April Goode
Guest Writer

and Ashley Hunt
News Editor

Throughout the performance of "Little Murders," the audience had the chance to watch some of GSU's performing arts students at their finest.

One such student capturing the audience's attention is April Biechler, who plays Patsy.

Every day, Biechler goes to the GSU Biology Building where she is working to earn a bachelor's degree in oceanography.

She spends her afternoons and evenings picking up a script and becoming a different woman.

Biechler, a GSU sophomore, said she enjoys playing the role of Patsy Newquist because the character is a lot like her.

"She is an independent and strong person; she's not petite and neither am I," Biechler said. "It was easy to get into her character. Her family loves each other, and I could identify with that."

Since her sophomore year of high school, Biechler has acted in numerous productions.

What began as a class requirement has become a hobby and a love of Biechler.

She has performed in "Arsenic and Old Lace," "You Can't Take It With You," and twice in "Bye, Bye Birdie."

She has continued her work with the theater since coming to

— APRIL BIECHLER,

GSU.

From her role as Mrs. Fezziwig in the 1994 production of "A Christmas Carol," she has played parts in various productions on and off the stage.

While admitting that she enjoys acting, Biechler emphasized the importance of working backstage.

"You get more respect from the backstage people when you've worked there," Biechler said.

Biechler's backstage experience includes: assistant stage manager in the 1995 production of "A Christmas Carol," and props and backstage manager in "Cloud Nine."

Her first break into a larger role was as Madame Volanges in "Les Liaisons Dangereuse."

Her other roles with Theatre and Performance were in "Pillar of Fire" and "Oedipus."

The role of Patsy takes her from one extreme to another, and challenges her skills constantly.

But Biechler is used to challenges by going from Biology classes to theater practices and performances every day.

Biechler said when graduation roles around, she won't have a hard decision of what she wants to do.

"I will always be involved in the theater in some way, but I'd rather be a starving marine biologist than a starving actress."

Dennis Rodman rebounds after bankruptcy scare

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — Dennis Rodman, man of many hair colors, tattoos and body piercings, was nearly bankrupt before he joined the Chicago Bulls last year, a magazine reports.

Rodman was more than $1 million in debt because his spending sprees and forays to Las Vegas had gobbled up his $2.5 million salary, according to the June issue of SmartMoney magazine.

Rodman had trouble covering his $9,000 monthly alimony payment, had a $3,800 payment on a Ferrari overdue and had not made a payment on a half-million dollar house loan for five years, swelling the debt to $745,000.

Now Rodman is solvent again, thanks to numerous investments and commercial ventures in Chicago, where he's become one of the most popular figures on a team aiming for a fourth NBA championship.

Rodman's agent Dwight Manley told the magazine he got Rodman out of debt initially by intercepting his paychecks, putting him on a $1,000 weekly budget, extending payments on his debt and sending his client to autograph shows for $50 a signature.

Now Rodman can be seen on billboards for a clothing store and in fast food commercials. He commands a $50,000 personal appearance fee and received a seven-figure contract for his new book, "Bad As I Wanna Be," which has made the best-seller list.

Manley says Rodman will have $1 million in the bank by the end of the NBA playoffs and twice that much by the end of the year.

- GSU Lady Eagles Soccer team won the first annual Eagle Invitational over Appalachian State and Wofford.
- President Nicholas Henry gave his annual State of the University address, stating "you're all cool."

October

- Statesboro prepared for Hurricane Opal but escaped the brunt of the storm with only rain and wind.
- SGA President Lee Hyer and graduate student Cory Andrews convinced James Hood to remove his protest display on Fair Road.
- The electronic message boards proposed by former athletic director Bucky Wagner finally went on-line.
- SGA proposed the publication of "The Student Guide to Faculty."
- Habitat for Humanity's Georgia premiere of "Now and Then," a movie partially filmed in Statesboro, raised approximately $10,000.
- Entrance gates to In-the-Pines were installed for security.
- The Atlanta Braves brought home the city's first world championship. GSU students rejoiced.

November

- Fire erupted in Hanner Fieldhouse for the second time in a month. Both fires began in the dryers of the laundry room.
- Kelly McElheny and Martin Taylor II were crowned as the 1995 Homecoming Queen and King.
- Graduate student Cory Andrews and GSU's Director of Stores and Shops Wendell Hagins were elected to seats on Statesboro's City Council.
- SGA President Lee Hyer announced his resignation, which would become effective January 1.
- Sam Baker was named GSU's new athletic director.
- The Eagles beat the Troy State Trojans 24-21 in the first round of the playoffs. The team lost to Montana in the second round.
- Students held a candlelight vigil for the assassinated Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

January

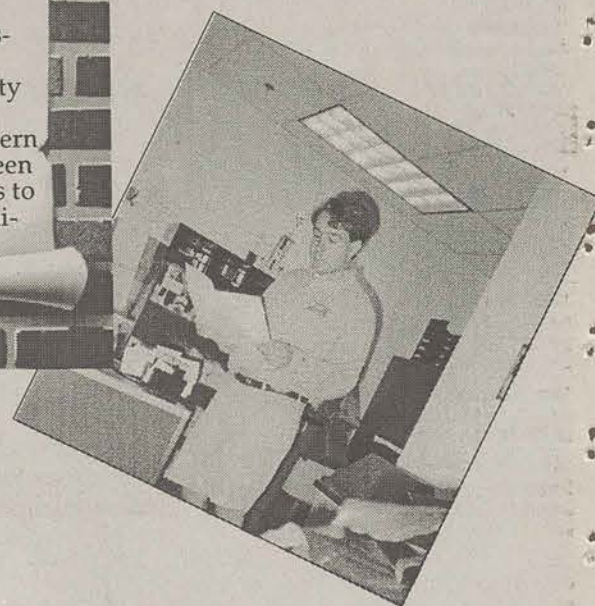

- The men's basketball program was placed on two years' probation by the NCAA in response to the violations reported by GSU in November 1994.
- John Walraven, SGA's vice president of finance, was chosen to fill the presidency vacated by Lee Hyer.
- Students for Statesboro, GSU's only political action committee, called it quits after only six months because of a lack of cooperation and funds.
- A ground breaking ceremony was held for the new GSU Intramural and Physical Education Center.
- Union Productions organized a fashion show to heighten AIDS awareness. The benefit raised almost $400 for local AIDS charities.
- The library installed GALILEO, Georgia Library Learning On-line, which connected GSU with all 34 colleges and universities within the system.

February

- H. Perk Robins, vice president of development and university relations, announced his retirement, effective May 1.
- CLEC violated student membership regulations under Faculty Senate by-laws when the committee failed to include its mandated share of SGA-appointed members since the fall of 1994.
- Jana Thompson, of Glennville, Ga., was crowned Miss GSU.
- The president's cabinet approved a plan to install bike paths on campus as a means to avoid a bike ban on the pedestrian.
- Tawana Collins was crowned Miss African-American GSU.
- Two students were charged in the Feb. 15 fire at the Kappa Alpha fraternity house.
- Bulloch County kicked off its year-long bicentennial celebration with the reading of the County charter.

March

- Over 300 students marched in protest of an opinion column concerning Black Awareness Month written by G-A editor Christopher Cole.
- Beverly Williams, secretary to Dean of Student Affairs James Orr, was arrested on theft charges.
- She allegedly stole funds from campus fraternities and sororities.

01-Announcements

AD PLACEMENT (For Commercial Enterprises) -- Classified ads in the George-Anne cost 15¢ per word with a $3 minimum per insertion. Please add $1 per ad for mailing and handling for tearsheet service. The customer is responsible for proofing the ad immediately upon publication. Pre-payment with your ad is appreciated. Call 681-5418 for more information. The George-Anne reserves the right to refuse any advertisement.

AD PLACEMENT (For Students, Faculty & Staff) -- The George-Anne publishes ads for students, faculty and staff which are non-commercial in nature. Submit your ads, 25 words or less, either in person at Room 223 Williams Center during normal business hours (9am to 4pm), or via mail at Landrum Box 8001. Please do not attempt to place free ads via telephone -- at these prices we don't take dictation.

ATTENTION: The George-Anne screens all classified ads prior to publication. The newspaper strives to accept ads for legitimate products & services only. Students are urged to exercise caution when replying to ads, particularly those which ask for money or a credit card number in advance of delivery of products or services. Students are also urged to report to the newspaper (at 681-5418) any suspicious offers they might see in the classifieds. Remember, if an offer seems too good to be true, it probably is.

IMPORTANT!!!!!!IMPORTANT!!!!!! PLEASE REMEMBER THAT EVERY AD NEEDS A NAME AND A LB NUMBER. IF THE AD DOES NOT HAVE BOTH OF THESE, THEN IT WILL NOT BE PRINTED!!!!!!

Jan Kennedy, PhD, John Murray, PhD, & Elisabeth Sherwin, PhD, cordially invite you to a poster session summarizing the research of the experimental developmental, cognitive & social classes to be held Wednesday, May 29 at 4pm in the Hallway near the computer lab (Rm 136) in Psychology Bldg. Refreshments will be served.

BE LESS PRODUCTIVE AT THE OFFICE.

The office has always been a place to get ahead. Unfortunately, it's also a place where a lot of natural resources start to fall behind. Take a look around the next time you're at work. See how many lights are left on when people leave. See how much paper is being wasted. How much electricity is being used to run computers that are left on. Look at how much water is being wasted in the restrooms. And how much solid waste is being thrown out in the trash cans. We bet it's a lot. Now, here it's a connected world. Do your share.

are some simple ways you can produce less waste at work. When you're at the copier, only make the copies you need. Use both sides of the paper when writing a memo. Turn off your light when you leave. Use a lower watt bulb in your lamps. Drink your coffee or tea out of mugs instead of throwaway cups. Set up a recycling bin for aluminum cans and one for bottles. And when you're in the bathroom brushing your teeth or washing your face, don't let the faucet run. Remember, if we use fewer resources today, we'll save more for tomorrow. Which would truly be a job well done.

FOR MORE INFORMATION AND TIPS CALL 1-800-MY-SHARE

It takes 95% less energy to manufacture products from recycled materials.

Use both sides of the paper when writing a memo.

Every ton of paper not landfilled saves 3 cubic yards of space.

BROUGHT TO YOU BY TWO BEERS AND SOME COLD MEDICINE.

To your body, alcohol and medicine can seem very similar. Both can affect your balance, coordination, and ability to see accurately. Skills that are essential to riding. After drinking or taking medication, don't ride. That's the best prescription for your safety. MOTORCYCLE SAFETY FOUNDATION

SPIN-OFF MANIA

Name the spin-offs for each of the shows listed below. The number of lines below the show indicates the number of spin-offs. For shows with more than one spin-off, please list the spin-offs in chronological order. Please note that continuations of the original shows, like Archie Bunker's Place and Sanford Arms, and animated versions are not considered spin-offs. Also note that #5 is a spin-off of a spin-off.
