UGA fraternity members and advisor charged

The Associated Press

ATHENS, Ga.—Two fraternity members and their adviser were arrested on simple battery and hazing charges in the Sept. 8 paddling of a University of Georgia football player.

Clarke County Magistrate Michael Coleman approved arrest warrants for Phi Beta Sigma members Zatarra Howard and Kevin Welch and adviser Thomas Stevens after a hearing that lasted half the day.

They were released on their own recognizance after being booked.

Fraternity pledge Roderick Perrymond, a reserve running back on the Georgia football team, testified at the hearing that the men paddled him at an off-campus apartment. According to a police report, Perrymond suffered bruising on his buttocks from about 70 blows.

The criminal charges, both misdemeanors, carry punishment of up to a year in jail and/or a fine of $1,000.

Howard, Welch and Stevens also face charges from the university's student judiciary.

The Office of Judicial Programs charged Howard, Welch and the fraternity with violating the university's hazing and disorderly conduct policies.

University officials said at the time that Stevens, a 1994 graduate, could not be sanctioned by the student judiciary because he was no longer a student.

But after checking university records, Student Affairs Adviser Dan Pugh said Stevens is enrolled in classes. He declined to provide details.

Stevens now will face an Oct. 20 judiciary hearing along with Howard and Welch.

Liquor referendum not on ballot in November

By Kevin Bonsor
Assistant News Editor

When Bulloch County residents go to the polls in November for the general election, they will not be able to vote on a referendum for liquor by the drink.

Both the Bulloch County Commission and the Statesboro City Council have decided not to put the issue on the ballot.

In August, the Statesboro City Council voted to hold a referendum only if the county commission voted to put the issue on the ballot.

According to Councilman Cory Andrews, the county commission, under pressure from local citizens opposed to the referendum, voted 5-1 not to put the issue on the ballot in November.

Tom Lee was the only commissioner who voted in favor of putting the liquor referendum on the ballot.

That vote marked the county that the General Assembly allows for another referendum is March.

The city council could have held a its own separate referendum, Andrews said, is that there are three voting precincts in Bulloch County, but only one inside the city limits.

This would mean city residents registered to vote in precincts outside the city limits would have to vote at those precincts for the general election and then come back into the city to cast their votes for the liquor referendum at the precinct within the city limits.

The city council was advised by Superintendent of Elections Lee Deloach not to put the issue on the ballot in November.

Asked if he thought a November referendum would pass, Andrews said, "I think clearly the fact that people who are opposed to liquor by the drink are worried about a referendum on the ballot indicates their opinion is not the popular one."

GSU adds two new degree programs

By Farrah Senn
Staff Writer

Two new degree programs were approved for GSU by the Board of Regents at its September meeting in Atlanta.

The board approved a bachelor of arts degree in international studies and an education specialist degree in art education.

The B.S. degree provides a comprehensive understanding of various languages and cultures, valuable in the areas of government service, education and business.

The Ed.S. prepares those with a master's degree to be art supervisors or curriculum directors in school systems.

A.B.S. in kinesiology with a major in exercise science was approved this summer.

New faculty join GSU

By Jennifer Hall
Staff Writer

Seventy-four professionals from all areas of the world, including China, England, Japan, Germany and France joined GSU's faculty this fall.

The new faculty members replaced retiring faculty members or were needed as additional help. This increased the number of GSU's full-time faculty to 630 members.

The 74 new faculty members met for a day-long orientation session upon their arrival at GSU.

Harry Carter, vice president for academic affairs, familiarized them with the university system and the organization and policies of GSU.

Charlene Black, associate vice president for academic affairs, shared important characteristics of the student body with them, such as the male/female ratio, the number of freshmen, and the number of out-of-state students. Black also informed them of different opportunities for faculty development support and the availability of money for research and instruction.

Pam Watkins of the math department demonstrated techniques for new faculty to incorporate writing into their teaching to help students learn.

The highlight of the orientation was a presentation entitled, "When the Roll is Called I Wonder" given by Bobby Smith. Smith is a retired professor of economics and winner of an Award for Excellence. He stressed the importance of teachers doing their best for

Diversity seminar teaches teachers

By Sara Clark
Staff Writer

Teaching teachers how to teach ethnically and culturally diverse students was the goal of a workshop conducted last Friday by Marion F. Gooding.

In this all-day seminar, Gooding, who has been heavily involved in educational research since 1978, showed teachers and graduate students how to tune into the diverse nature of their students.

"Just as different students learn different things in different ways and at different rates, so do different teachers teach different things in different ways under different circumstances," Gooding said.

She used an interactive approach, going through lesson plans and working with the participants to creatively meet

There are more than 234 organizations for a student-oriented organizations at GSU.

This past Thursday GSU students had an opportunity to learn about many of these clubs, groups and organizations at the annual student organizational fair held around the Rotunda.

There were more than 35 organizations that participated in the fair. This year's participants included Greek organizations, club sports, career-related organizations and activism organization.

The various organizations set up informational displays, handed out literature and answered questions.

More than 35 organizations were on hand for students at last Thursday's organizational fair.

"I was looking for an organization I could participate in," said one freshman picking up information at Thursday's fair. "Now after this fair I know I have several options."

"The organizational fair gives students a chance to find out what our organization is about. It also shows student all of the positive things, such as the NAACP, they can become involved with around campus," the President of the NAACP said.

Teacher drinks beer in faculty lounge

The Associated Press

TUCSON — Drinking a beer in the Pima Community College faculty lounge not only will get you fired, it also can lead to a criminal record.

Lee Thorn, an adjunct instructor at the college for 22 years, was convicted Wednesday by a Pima County Justice Court judge for public drinking and sentenced to six months' unsupervised probation.

"As a person who has taught for 20-odd years, you should know the college's policy," Judge Emojean Girard told Thorn.

The judge also ordered Thorn not to contact the worker who reported him and urged him to take an alcohol screening test to see if he might have a drinking problem.

Thorn was found innocent of disturbing an educational institution and disorderly conduct, but that didn't do much to soothe his anger.

"We're living in a time where there's no sense of humor. Everyone is a politically correct Puritan," Thorn said.

A college worker spotted Thorn downing a bottled beer April 3 in the downtown campus's faculty lounge.

After finishing, Thorn went to teach his early-evening Philosophy 101 class.

But campus police soon interrupted, pulling Thorn from his class and slapping him with three misdemeanor charges. Thorn was fired a few days later.

Thorn argued during his short trial that he had a right to imbibe in the lounge.

But Miguel Palacios, president of the downtown campus, said Thorn violated a college policy that prohibits students or faculty from consuming or bringing alcohol on campus.

Letter arrives three decades late

The Associated Press

TULSA — Lola and Lyle Montgomery's reply to a letter from old friends should arrive in Houston in three decades, if it travels as fast as the first.

The couple suspected nothing unusual this week when a letter from George and Alleen

Willis arrived with the rest of the mail.

Then they noticed the envelope's 1965 postmark and the eight cents worth of stamps.

"I wonder what could have happened to it all these years?" Mrs. Montgomery said after receiving the letter dated Aug. 1, 1965.

No one at the northeast Tulsa branch post office could explain the delay.

"I sure wish that letter could talk," said post office spokeswoman Jane Elbon. "We may never really know for sure what happened."

Toddler spared during lightning storm

The Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. — Talk about a charmed existence. Call 21-month-old Damion Veninga fortunate.

His great-grandmother was about to buckle him into his car seat but wasn't touching him during a thunderstorm when lightning shot through her body.

The bolt hit the child's mother first, shocked both women and knocked them to the ground. The boy was unhurt.

"They said if it would have hit my son, he would have been dead. He's real lucky," said Laura Veninga, 19.

—LAURA VENINGA,

She was on metal crutches at the time because of leg injuries from a soccer tournament.

Ruth Veninga, her grandmother, who had a penny in one shoe, had just put Damion in his car seat in front of her southwest side home as a late-afternoon thunderstorm struck.

Lightning whacked a tree in the Veningas' front yard, splitting it down the middle, then skittered along the ground about 30 feet toward the car.

"I got hit first and felt a shock all the way through my body," Laura Veninga said.

Ruth Veninga, 62, lay unconscious for about two minutes, but her granddaughter remained awake. "I started crying, 'My baby! My baby!'" she said.

Our Opinion

Allowing liquor would benefit the community

Once again, the Bulloch County Commission and the City Council have decided not to put the liquor referendum on the ballot in November.

The fact that Bulloch County adamantly refuses to pass a liquor referendum does not prevent students and residents from drinking but only hurts the community. By passing the referendum, Statesboro would attract more restaurants and businesses.

Thus, more money would be coming into the community and more jobs would be available. More money in the community means more improvements.

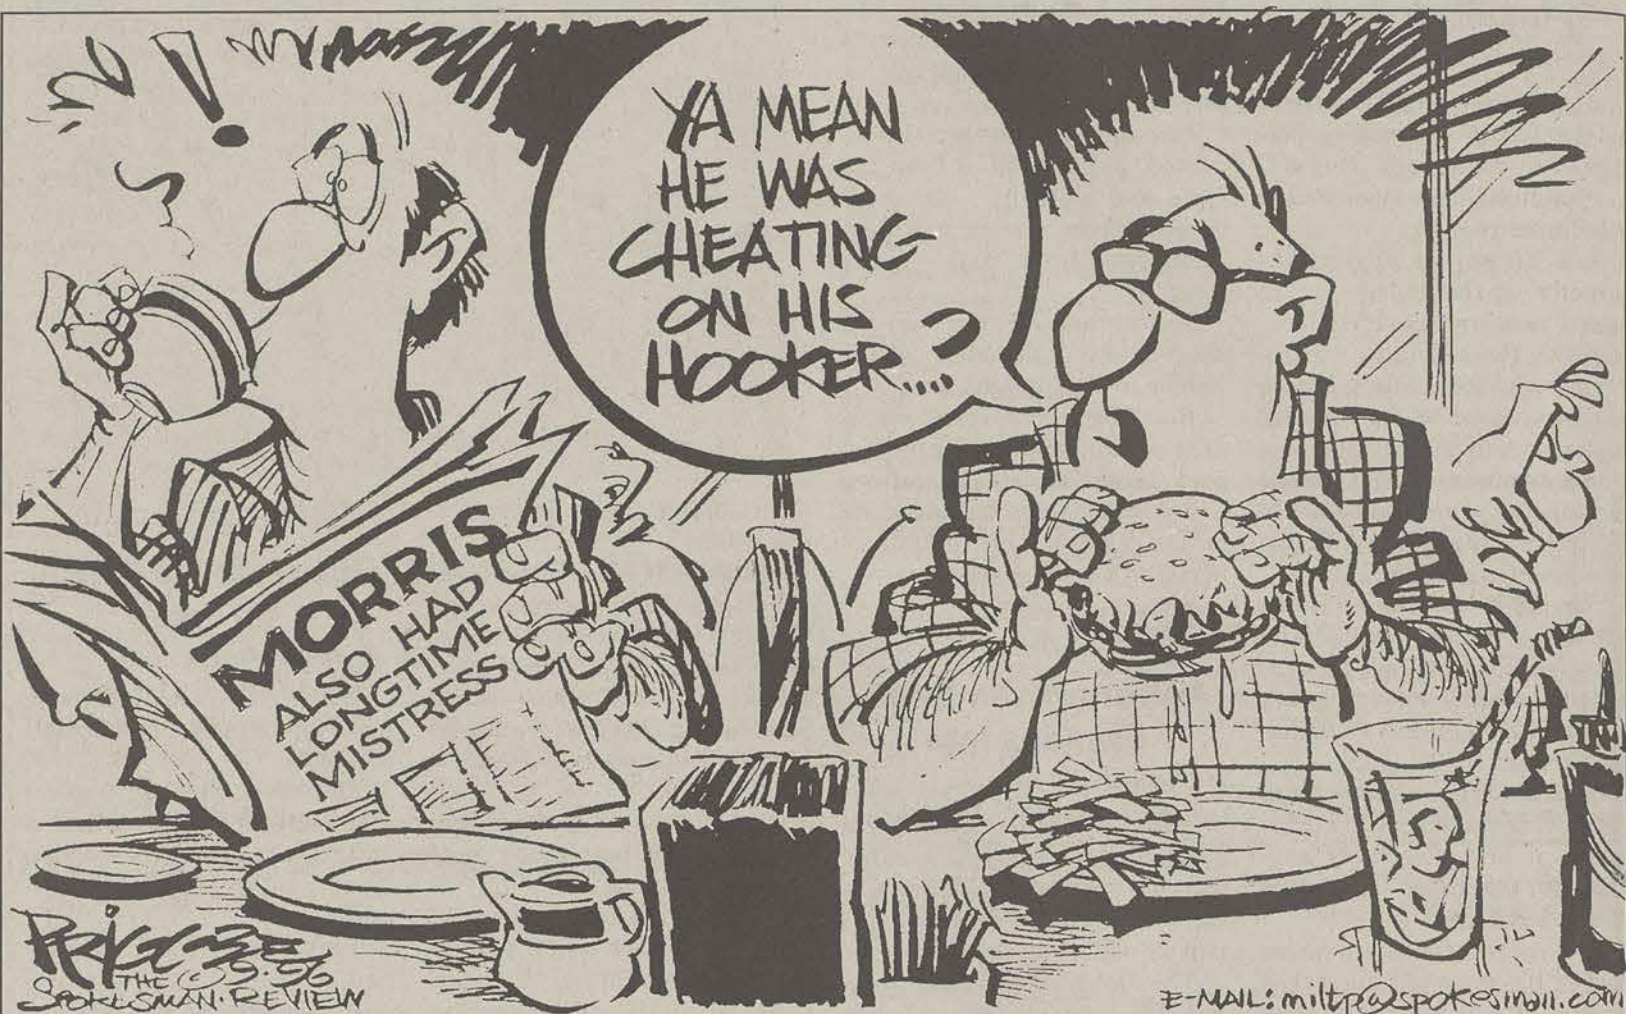

Obviously, the County Commission and the City Council believes that it is more important to force people to drive out of the county to buy liquor than to bring in businesses and make much needed improvements in the community.

There is no need to treat students like children. GSU students are adults. Let us decide if we want to drink or not.

Yet, as always, the commissioners and councilmen fold to pressure from the local citizens and decide to grasp the final little bit of control they have over the students of GSU.

Perhaps one day, the commissioners and councilmen will climb down from their great ivory tower and realize that liquor will be in this community.

The question is whether Bulloch County is going to receive money from it or will some other county get it?

Tupac's positive side must not be ignored

By now, everyone has heard about the tragic death of rap superstar, Tupac Shakur. The most disturbing thing about his death was that it happened at what seems the be the wrong time.

The 25-year-old Shakur was at the peak of his rap career. In June of 1995, he signed with Death Row Records and his songs were at the top of every music chart across the country.

Shakur was about to journey around the country on a 15-city tour. Ironically, one stop on his tour was Las Vegas, the site where his life came to an abrupt end.

It seems that most people don't or won't remember Tupac for any of the positive things he did in his lifetime, but will rather remember him for the negative things that seemed to somehow always put him in the limelight.

For instance, he won't be remembered for his songs, "Brenda's Got A Baby," "Dear Mama," or "Keep Ya Head Up." No, most people will like to remember him for "F*** the

STACY CLEMONS

MANAGING EDITOR

World," or "High Til I Die."

Everyone seems to remember the trouble Tupac got into with the two off-duty suburban policeman in Atlanta in 1993.

For those who have this outlook on his death, maybe you need to leave the good 'ole city of Statesboro or the rest of these small towns and venture out to

EVERYTHING TUPAC RAPPED ABOUT AND ALL THE FANS HE HAS GAINED OVER THE YEARS SHOULD SHOW THIS COUNTRY THAT RAP IS MORE THAN JUST LYRICS ABOUT MONEY, DRUGS AND SEX.

People won't remember that Shakur was not charged in the incident because he did not do the shooting. He was the one being shot at when the cop was struck with the bullet.

I believe Tupac's death will be looked upon by many as a sign that if you live the life he lived, then something like this is bound to happen.

places like South Central Los Angeles or Brooklyn, New York. Then maybe you will see why some people live their lives the way they do.

For those who have not followed Tupac's career since leaving the streets of New York to find his new home in Los Angeles, you have no right to judge him for anything that he has done.

Like he said in one of his latest songs just released off his "All Eyez On Me" album, "...only God can judge me now." No one on this planet has the right to judge anyone. No matter what a person has done in the past, only God has the right to judge what is right or wrong.

Everything Tupac rapped about and all the fans he has gained over the years should show this country that rap is more than just lyrics about money, drugs and sex. Rap is about reality of what the artist has lived through growing up in those situations.

I honestly feel that Tupac is in a better place. I hate that the rap world has lost yet another talented lyricist, but yes, I feel Tupac is better off in "Thug-Heaven."

I didn't know him personally, but I now feel he will finally be at peace, apart from all of the madness that we will have to continue facing.

Rest in peace Tupac Amaru Shakur. Thug-life will live on.

How can America stop violence against women?

I'm sure most of you have heard about the six-year-old boy who was punished for violating his school's sexual harassment policy when he kissed one of his classmates.

The story has ignited debates all over the country. Many have labeled the principal's actions as extreme, unjust or just downright ridiculous. Boys will be boys, they say. An innocent kiss is just that, innocent.

I agree that the principal went too far in this case. And I know if I were the mother of this little boy, I would be outraged. To accuse a six-year-old of sexual harassment is just ludicrous.

But then, I started to ponder the issue. I wondered why the principal felt he had to go to such an extreme. He must have had some reason for his decision, especially since it seems to be so absurd. Was he trying to make an example of the boy? If so, what was he trying to say?

Perhaps because I had just watched a TV movie about a freshman who was raped at her first college party I began wondering if the principal wanted to teach this boy to have respect for females. Maybe this particular principal is so fed up with the fact that at least one woman is raped every minute in the United States that he has decided he must do something. Perhaps he believed that he should be educating the young boys in his charge about responsible sexual behavior, and possibly with such noble intentions, he just went a step too far.

What if every educator in America discussed the brutal truth about rape with their students? Would it change the fact that an estimated 15 to 40 percent of women are victims of attempted or completed rapes during their lifetimes?

I was discussing this issue with a friend of mine. He assured me that more education is not the answer. He said that guys are choosing not to respect other females in the same way.

Scaring them with possible jail sentences has not worked, either. This tactic may not work because only one out of eight cases that go to court actually ends in conviction.

The friend of mine who maintains that education won't work know all about rape, what constitutes rape and the possible consequences, yet many have not modified their behavior. I maintained that many guys do not understand that rapes do not just occur in dark alleys with strangers. Getting a girl drunk at a party and having sex with her is also rape. But perhaps my friend is right. We have been trying to educate, and still 16 rapes are attempted and 10 women are raped every hour, according to police reports.

So, if education is not the answer, what is?

Telling guys to treat all females with the same respect they grant their mothers and sisters has not worked. I'm not sure if this is a reflection of a lack of respect for their mothers and sisters or an indication that they offered another solution: castration. He said if you don't know how to use it, you shouldn't have it. I believe castration is a bit extreme. I have just a bit more faith in the male species. I believe all men can learn to control themselves. I'm just not sure how.

I have begun to notice a trend that offers some glimmer of hope. Many men who have watched a girlfriend, wife, sister or friend cope with the aftermath of rape have made changes in their own lives. Yet, this does not seem like a plausible solution. More women would have to be raped to prevent women from being raped.

Perhaps there is something in our culture which encourages rape. While rape is a worldwide problem, a woman in America is 20 times more likely to be raped than a woman in Japan, 13 times more likely than a woman in England and four times more likely than a woman in Germany. That leads me to believe that something in the American culture may be part of the problem.

Perhaps the way women are portrayed in the media adds to the problem. Maybe men began to believe women are there simply to be dominated. Or they might believe that women want sex but are just afraid to admit it. Or they may even believe that saying no is all part of the game and that the man's role in the game is to convince her otherwise.

I personally hate to point the finger at the media for any problem in America. Ultimately, I believe the media reflects what we as a society value. If we don't want to see violence against women, we should make that known to the executives who run the networks. Threaten to stop watching. If they lose viewers, they lose advertisers. If they lose advertisers, they lose money. Money usually talks.

The rules of column writing say that I should describe a problem and then offer a solution. Well, I don't have the solution. I don't have the power to change the situation.

I can only encourage women to make your signals clear, be careful and report any assault against you to the police. And I can only encourage the men who are responsible for the problem to follow the examples of the men out there who respect women and their wishes. The ball is in your court.

South Building to be removed from campus

By Gin Starling
Staff Writer

The vacant South Building will soon be removed from the GSU campus.

Officials are currently negotiating the removal of the South Building, which has officially been closed to classes since June 30.

The building was leased by GSU from Spacemaster International Inc. beginning in 1988.

GSU held the lease until this past summer when the current lease for the facility ran out.

With all of the new buildings being constructed on campus, the South Building was no longer needed for additional classroom space.

Because the land in which the building sits belongs to the university, Spacemaster International will have to remove the building from the premises.

The tentative date for the removal of the South Building has been scheduled for mid-October of this year.

According to Phil Hodge, director of facilities planning, due to the size and complexity of the building's structure, it may take up to 30 days to completely clear the South Building from its location.

"The building is made up of a series of 12 to 14 foot wide sections that must be cut apart and taken out separately causing it to take some time," he said.

Officials say that several plans are underway regarding the space left after the South Building is removed.

Hodge said that a plan has been submitted for a new parking facility for faculty and staff, but the plan has not yet been approved.

If the South Building lot is approved for a new parking lot, approximately 120 new spaces can be added. Additional funding is needed to move this project along.

Plans are underway however, which include reducing the size of the Marvin Pittman playground, located directly across from the South Building, to allow for additional parking.

By removing the fence and narrowing the play area, that space can be used to build a parking lot which would add 125 new parking spaces. This project is scheduled for completion by mid-November.

To ensure the safety of the children, most construction on this project will be done on weekends and late in the afternoons when the children aren't in school.

Computer chip prices increase

The Associated Press

BOISE, Idaho —Computer chip prices are inching up, causing stock in Micron Technology Inc. to jump by 83 percent the last two months.

That is good news for state government officials and investors.

"We have seen some stabilization in the market for dynamic random access memory chips," said Julie Nash, spokeswoman for Micron Technology Inc.

"There's also been an up-tick in demand for 16-megabit four-by-four DRAMs."

Prices for the DRAMs have increased from $8 to the mid-$9 range, Nash said.

If computer chip prices rise, it means more revenues for Micron.

That in turn means more tax money for the state.

Gov. Phil Batt recently ordered across-the-board budget cuts at state agencies of 2.5 percent, largely because of Micron's dwindling profits.

Micron paid as much as half the state's corporate taxes during fiscal 1996.

But the chip prices dropped by up as 80 percent last year, causing Micron's net profits to fall as much as 74 percent.

Women making their mark in sports

Will women ever get the chance to participate in all the sports that men do? How will the fans see womens sports? Do you think it will take away from the market of mens sports?

It does not take a rocket scientist to know that men clearly dominate the world of sports. But, there should be some type of change because women have every right to make an impact in the sports arena.

But that should entitle them to play sports with the exception of rugby, football and hockey.

As a male who simply adores sports and women, I would not particularly care to see women in pads and cleats throwing a 40-yard touchdown. Although this would be entertaining, it just doesn't seem it will fit the sports market.

Women's roles in sports have come a long way. This indeed is a successful story, but it has yet to reach its successful ending.

Watching old films of those prosperous women athletes who have made their mark in sports history sets some kind of precedents for other women athletes who choose to travel this road. This is not about women making a mark in history and then vanishing, but rather gaining some type of respect.

With the emergence of the WNBA (Women National Basketball Association), setting new heights for women will also gain them respect.

This association has the potential to be as competitive as the NBA, of course, with the help of those many enthusiastic marketing teams around the country. Some may feel as though the WNBA will take the audience away from the NBA. This is certainly not possible, especially the way Dennis Rodman has contributed to the Chicago Bulls unprecedented season last year.

However, future athletic women should not be overlooked, especially the young ones. As a matter of fact, the young athletes should be a targeted audience source. It's common to hear a boy say that he would like to be the next Michael Jordan or Cal Ripkin. But what if a girl has the same desire and love for a particular sport yet has no one to look up to.

The 1996 Centennial Olympics Games were a clear example of how much impact women have in sports.

At some point during the games, we said to ourselves that these girls are gifted.

The U.S. women's basketball team, as well as the womens gymnastic and swim teams, were completely dominating and began to receive the support from around the world.

Besides those individuals who have made their triumphant mark in womens history, women as a whole, as well as everyone else, are soon awaiting the day when women will have their own branch of sports.

When these women athletes hit the courts and fields, they will make every kind of record you can think of.

Let's give each woman a chance and make them feel like one of the guys!

UTC pulls shocker, downs Eagles 23-21

By Mike Davis
Sports Editor

CHATTANOOGA, Tn. — The GSU Eagles ran out onto a water-logged Chamberlain Field Saturday evening looking to extend a nine-game win streak over UT-Chattanooga dating back to 1984.

But after three interceptions, one fumble and a crucial fourth-quarter personal foul penalty, the only streak of GSU's that stayed intact was its three-game losing skid on the '96 season, as the Mocs upset 23rd-ranked GSU, 23-21, giving UTC its first win ever against the Eagles.

"The three interceptions added to the penalties just kills a team," GSU coach Frank Ellwood said. "You can't point fingers to anybody but yourself. When a team does that, it just leads to disaster."

In sorts, GSU took its first blow hours prior to the game, as thunderstorms played its part by not only dampening spirits, but also leaving a muddy running surface for the Eagle flexbone-option offense.

On their opening drive, UTC paraded 62 yards on 12 plays to take the early lead, and they used a bit of trickery in doing it.

On fourth and goal from the one, the Mocs lined up in field-goal formation before immediately shifting to the split-backfield, which resulted in a Frahn D'Anjou touchdown run.

After GSU's second punt in two possessions, the Mocs again left the Eagles standing in the dust after Tyrone Coleman took the hand-off on the first play and bolted 45 yards to the GSU 30, which eventually set UTC up for a Scot Kielblock, 31-yard field goal.

GSU's first scoring drive came after the sloppy first quarter, when GSU took its first possession of the second to compile an 81-yard drive on seven plays.

Kenny Robinson capped off the drive with a 19-yard touchdown strike to Jevon Sullivan, forcing a three-point game and leaving fans wondering if UTC had just seen the beginning of what was to come.

But unfortunately for the Eagles, the dry second half didn't result in a cutback of mistakes.

UTC started the second half by taking its game to the air, as quarterback Brian Hampton hurled a 69-yard touchdown pass to Malcolm Robinson, and after the PAT, the Mocs had regained a 10-point lead.

GSU did respond by driving 69 yards on 10 plays, highlighted by a gutsy fourth down call by Ellwood and later a two-yard touchdown run by Corey Joyner, cutting the score to 17-14.

After another impressive drive, UTC saw a bit of unfortunate circumstances when their attempt on fourth and goal from the one yard line was halted by an illegal procedure penalty, backing them up five yards for the easy chip-shot from 23 yards.

GSU then took the lead at the end of the third on a drive that highlighted Maurice Bing. After catching a crucial third down pass, Bing broke free and caught his first touchdown pass of the game when Joyner took the pitch from Robinson and threw it 40 yards for the score to Bing, putting GSU up 21-20.

But after the GSU defense had backed the Mocs up to second down and 27, a personal foul penalty was called on GSU when Lee Brooks hit quarterback Hampton out of bounds, giving the Mocs another breath of life with the automatic first down, which led to a 30-yard field goal, giving the Mocs the 23-21 lead and win.

"I'm extremely disappointed that we didn't show up in the first quarter," Ellwood said. "I can only point the finger at myself for that. It took 15 minutes of us getting pushed around to finally get going."

Robinson finished with a career-high 208 yards passing on 13 completions and three interceptions.

Entering the game ninth nationally in rushing, the total yards on the ground for GSU was 135, with Robinson leading the way with 66. Roderick Russell added 30 more.

Bing finished his impressive game with 7 catches for 123 yards, with his long coming on the 40-yard touchdown pass from Joyner.

"We just didn't have a good showing in the first quarter," said senior Derrick Treadwell. "We just have to try and understand what we did wrong and correct it."

FOOTBALL NOTEBOOK

Are playoffs for GSU still reality with three losses?

By Mike Davis
Sports Editor

Does GSU still have a shot at the playoffs?

That is the question being asked now that GSU has suffered its second Southern Conference loss in two conference matchups, with the schedule not getting any easier.

"I don't think the playoffs are out of the question," GSU head coach Frank Ellwood said. "But the scheme has changed now. We are sitting 1-3 overall, and we just lost to a team with about the same record. That's a downer, especially in the polls."

The Eagles managed the playoffs last season with conference losses to Marshall, Appalachian State and East Tennessee State, the unforgivable one.

Only in week five of the season, GSU is faced with VMI this weekend at Paulson Stadium before traveling to Western Carolina before returning home for a crucial game with Appy.

"Our goal and objective hasn't changed just because we are 1-3," said senior quarterback Derrick Treadwell after the loss to UT-Chattanooga. "We need to step up now. Just because we lost this game doesn't mean this is the end of the season."

THROWING A CAREER FIRST: After scoring his first touchdown against Marshall a week earlier, Corey Joyner had another first in his career when he took the pitch on the option from Kenny Robinson and then hurled it to a wide-open Maurice Bing for the easy six, giving Joyner his first career touchdown pass.

"We had been practicing that play all week," Joyner said with a laugh. "But I never threw the ball good in practice, so I wasn't really expecting to get a chance in the game."

LONG DISTANCE: UTC's 69-yard touchdown pass from Brian Hampton to Malcolm Robinson was the longest touchdown pass since former Moc quarterback Kenyon Earl connected on a 76-yard strike to Terrell Owens, who is currently playing for the San Francisco 49ers, back in 1993.

LET'S HEAR IT FOR THE BAND: Everybody says the bands play just as big a part of college football games as anything else. Well, the UTC marching band proved it.

After their performance at halftime, the band apparently took too much time in exiting the playing field, resulting in a delay-of-game penalty against the Mocs, which was applied when GSU kicked off to the Mocs for the beginning of the second half.

MAKING AN IMPACT: Freshman Recio Tutt, a 5-foot, 10-inch, 170 pound freshman wide-receiver, played his first game for GSU Saturday after sustaining an injury that prohibited him to play the first three of the season. He finished with a respectable performance of three catches for 71 yards, with the longest coming on a 52-yard bomb from Kenny Robinson.

EAGLE SOCCER

GSU, Soderstrom escape Bucs

By Scott Bates
Staff Writer

The GSU men's soccer team won their second game in a row Wednesday with a 2-1 victory over Charleston Southern, and they hope this is a streak that will continue into conference play.

The Eagles started the first half with a great amount of ball control, as they seemed relaxed and focused on the goal at hand in sending Charleston Southern home with the loss.

Despite their domination, it wasn't until midway through the first half that they put their first scores on the board.

Sophomore midfielder Jason Russell chalked up his seventh score of the year from a long assist from senior striker Johan Soderstrom. The pass from Soderstrom resulted in a one-on-one match-up for Russell and the Charleston goalkeeper. With finesse, Russell chipped the ball into the lower left corner for the first goal of the day.

Just under 10 minutes later, Soderstrom found himself on the other end of a goal with the co-assist from Russell and Pat Parris.

This allowed Soderstrom to get his second goal of the season, and the second score of the day for the Eagles.

Temper on the field grew hot as a total of six cautions were handed out, three yellow cards for each team. Play was stopped at one point in the game as an official had to separate Eagle Chris Starks and CSU's Sheron Simmons after Simmons spit in the face of Starks. GSU's Starks received the caution.

GSU maintained the shutout late into the second half, until CSU's Pat Burnette put the Buccaneers on the board with just under 10 minutes remaining in the game.

Despite looking a little fatigued, the Eagles managed to hold off the Bucs' comeback hopes. They continued to use good ball control to run the clock out, thwarting any attempt of a CSU rally.

GSU outshot the Buccaneers 16-13 as they improved their overall record to 4-5-1.

"Heading into this conference weekend, we needed a win here at home," Eagles' head coach Kevin Chambers said. "Hopefully this will be a key for the games ahead."

The Eagles now open a three-game homestand when they tangle with Virginia Military Institute on Oct. 5 at the Eagle Soccer Complex.

VOLLEYBALL

GSU volleyball continues to struggle

By Jennifer Holloway
Staff Writer

Coming off a disappointing loss the night before to Marshall, last season's second-place finisher in the conference, the 0-12 Lady Eagles volleyball team faced Davidson on Saturday afternoon.

Although looking stronger and more together than the night before, the team gave up another loss to the Wildcats, 15-9, 15-7, 15-8.

Leading the Wildcats to victory, freshman Gina Lawrence had 10 kills.

Leslie Carborne, also a freshman, had two kills.

Senior Stacey Lewis led the Eagles with nine kills.

The Wildcats finished with a total of 34 kills, while the Lady Eagles finished with 23.

Even though his team lost, Coach Eddie Matthews saw much improvement during this match.

"After a very disappointing loss last night, this afternoon the team had more effort and showed more physical play," Matthews said. "I will be stressing more mental preparation in the future. I think that stepping up our mental preparation will be a big advantage for us to focus on."

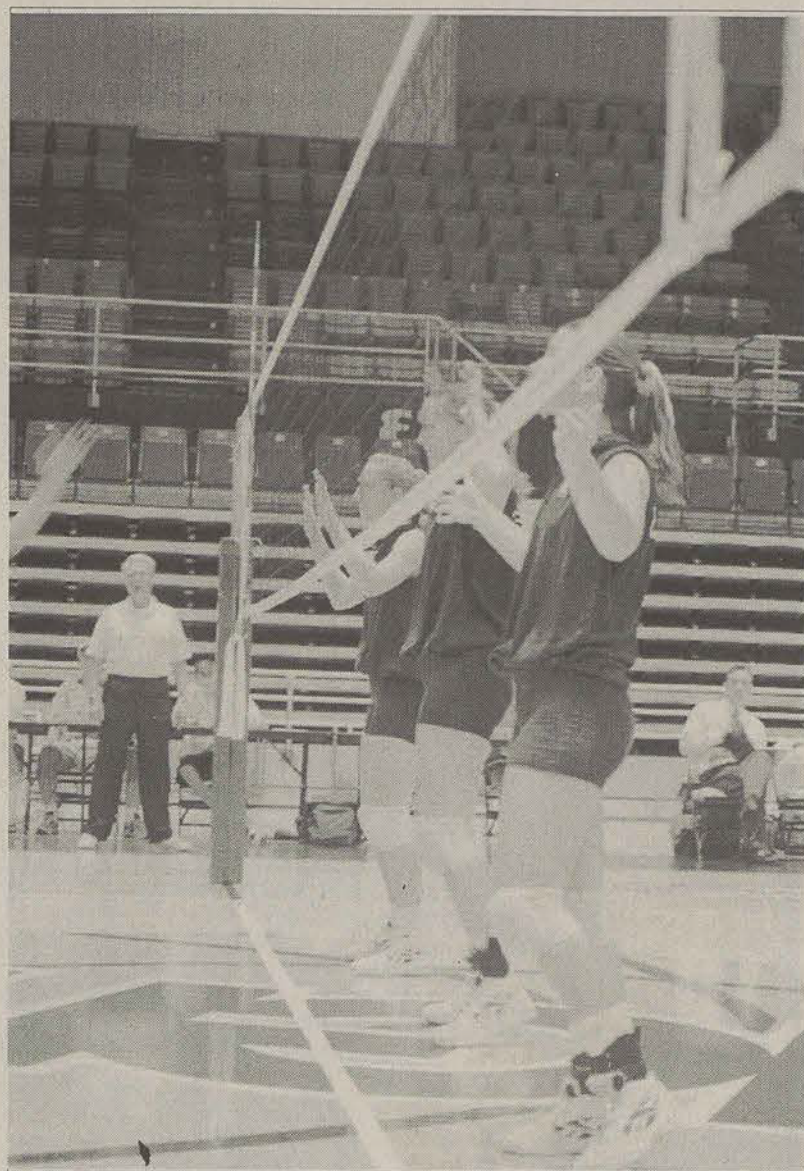

Last season the Catamounts finished sixth in the Southern Conference with a 4-10 record and a total record of 10-24.

The lack of depth continued to take its toll on the GSU volleyball team Friday night, as they dropped its 12th consecutive match of the season, this time at the hands of Marshall, 15-2, 15-4, 15-6.

Jessica Downs led the way for the Lady Thundering Herd by smashing down 11 kills while snagging 23 take-aways. She also led the team in digs with seven.

Juanita Venable and Jenni Corbin both contributed nine more kills apiece in the win.

Leading the way for the Lady

Mike Spilker

THE DEFENSE: GSU's Jenn Lett, Megan Pfeiffer and April Rhodes prepare to return Davidson's serve on Saturday in the Wildcats' win.

Eagles (0-12) were seniors Stacey Lewis and Megan Pfeiffer.

Lewis led GSU with seven kills, while Pfeiffer added six.

"This win makes us feel real good," Marshall's Venable said. "It's our first conference win and our heads are high."

The Herd set the pace early with a strong defensive scheme, blocking everything the Lady Eagles sent their way.

Marshall jumped out to a 7-0 lead before GSU put up its first point of the match.

Outmanned and outplayed, the Lady Eagles' two points in the first game were just a glimpse of what was to come, as the Herd toppled the Eagles by smashing 46 team kills to GSU's 21.

"We just have to keep working on our mental game," GSU coach Eddie Matthews said. "We have to work on it more than the physical part. We only have seven players right now and we have to focus mentally."

The Lady Eagles leave to face their next opponent, the Western Carolina Catamounts, on Friday. Their next home match will be on Tuesday, Oct. 8, versus Jacksonville at 6 p.m.

CROSS COUNTRY

GSU harriers improving with time

By Yolanda Gunn
Staff Writer

The 1996-97 GSU cross country team has already taken off full speed ahead.

They have competed in three meets thus far: the Western Carolina Invitational, University of Florida Invitational and Winthrop Classic in Rock Hill, S.C.

And so far, Coach Brad Simmons is optimistic about his team.

"I'm very happy that we defeated Florida State for the first time," Simmons said. "Yet our GSU team has six more competitions to go."

The Eagle cross country team has gained three freshmen girls with Stacey Synon, Avallina Anderson and April Sapp all coming on this season.

"Currently, Stacey Synon and Avallina Anderson are our top runners on the women's team," Simmons said. "The women's program is also Goal A-1. We want to move forward in the Southern Conference. We are preparing and looking better everyday."

But the participation does not end there. The Eagle runners have also welcomed freshmen to the men's team, like Mike Maleski, a valuable asset to the squad.

"The extensive training has paid off tremendously," Simmons said. "As a team, one of our goals is to not lose any ground to Virginia Military, nor Marshall."

So far this running season, it seems that GSU cross country hasn't engaged in a "most challenging" meet, as every one has been a struggle for them in competing against big schools with an abundance of talent.

They have met with tough competitors such as Clemson University, Virginia Tech and the University of South Florida.

The next meet will be held on Oct. 5 at the University of Florida.

The Eagles will then host the "Gate Petroleum/Georgia Southern Cross Country Invitational" here in Statesboro on Oct. 12. This invitational, the largest meet in Georgia, will feature 35 high schools and 20 colleges in the collegiate division. Later, GSU will go on to the Southern Conference Championship in November.

The GSU rugby club is enjoying its most productive preseason recruiting campaign in its 20-year history.

"Our playing membership is now at 53," said Coach Greame Kelly. "This makes us one of the biggest collegiate rugby clubs in the southeast."

The practice sessions are now so large that they have enlisted the help of Riaan Katze, an experienced South African player, to coach the backs and Scott Davis to help with the forwards.

Statesboro to honor three athletes with keys to the city

By Lakiesha Fair
Staff Writer

Three GSU alumni will be honored with keys to the city for their participation in the 1996 Paralympic or Olympic Games in Atlanta.

"I'm very excited to be honored in this capacity," Darin Van Tassel said.

Darin Van Tassel, along with his brother, Dwight Van Tassel, and Tim Willis, will be honored as athletes who participated in the Games.

The three alumni each participated in the Paralympics or Olympics in a different capacity.

Tim Willis, who lost his eyesight at a very young age, currently holds 13 U.S. national records.

Willis' awards include a title for spokesperson for the 1996 Paralympic Games and U.S. Olympic Committee athlete of the month.

"I'M VERY EXCITED TO BE HONORED IN THIS CAPACITY."

-- DARIN VAN TASSEL, GSU PITCHING COACH

He was also inducted into the Georgia Sports Hall of Fame.

Darin Van Tassel, a pitching coach for GSU, was GSU student athlete of the year three times.

Van Tassel was also a Rhodes Scholar Finalist.

He was also the head coach of the Nicaraguan National Olympic Team in 1994 and the 1996

Nicaraguan Olympic head coach during the Atlanta games. He is the youngest head coach in Olympic history.

"I can't think of anything nicer than being honored with my brother," Darin Van Tassel said.

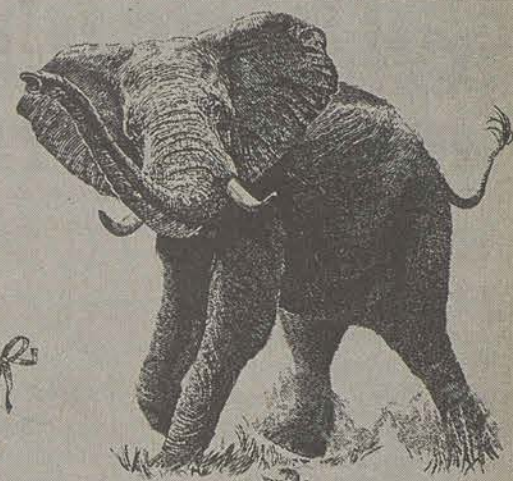

Dwight Van Tassel was a member of the U.S. Paralympic volleyball team that placed fourth in the 1996 Games.

The GSU alumni association and the Statesboro Convention and Visitor's Bureau will host GSU faculty/staff in the GSU museum for the honorees.

The community will be host to a reception and "autograph party" in the Lupton Building courtyard after Saturday's football game against VMI.

Everyone is invited to attend the reception.

Some GSU students juggle marriage, classes

By Renee Hurston
Staff Writer

While most GSU students are attending classes, studying in the library or hanging out with friends, many students are trying to adjust to married life.

Several GSU students decided not to wait until after graduation to not the knot.

Senior Robert Moore and his wife Julie have been married for one year, and Seniors Renee and Joseph Smith have been married for a month.

Both newly-wedded couples said that being married and going to school has its advantages and disadvantages.

The couples admit that they are still adjusting to married life.

Both Renee and Joseph Smith said that the best advantage of being married is spending more time with one another.

"Now that we are married, we are around each other all the time," Renee said.

The couple also said that another advantage is sharing household duties.

But the couples also said that marriage also has its disadvantages.

"Two disadvantages of being married while in college are having to budget your money and living in a college town," Julie said.

Both couples agree that it is difficult to balance their school work and personal life.

Julie said that she doesn't get to see much of her husband Rob-

CHANGE IT, BUT DELAY
IT."

— JULIE MOORE.
GSU STUDENT

ert, who plays football for GSU.

"Because of football and school I don't see him much," Moore said.

"We only spend about two hours a day with each other."

The Smiths said that they try not to let their relationship interfere with their school work.

"We both allow each other study time," Renee said.

Although being a married college student can be stressful, neither couple regrets walking down the aisle.

Julie and Robert said that they have no regrets about getting married.

Spend the weekends in the 'Boro

THROUGH THE GRAPEVINE

ERIKA ANDERSON

Today we are going to take everyone's favorite subject and break it down, bit by bit.

I am talking about the weekend. Yes, you know, those two too-short days that come after Friday? For most of you, it is probably the time when you are sitting in your hometown with your parents. Why??

One of the main complaints about GSU is that there is nothing to do on the weekends around here. Thursday night rocks, and the weekend proves to be a big downer. This would not happen if more people stayed in the 'Boro.

Okay. I can hear the replies now. Statesboro is boring. We have no clubs. We have no liquor. But if students would actually take advantage of the bars we do have, our city may be a little more exciting come Saturday night.

The way I see it, it is a vicious cycle. There is nothing to do on the weekends, because people go home, and as a result, there is even less to do on the weekends.

Believe it or not, Statesboro really does have a lot to offer on the weekends. Sure, it's not Atlanta, Athens, or even Savannah, but it's where we live during the week, and we should try and make the best of it during the weekends, rather than take the easy way out and run home to mom and dad.

The weekends in this city almost always feature a cool band at Blind Willie's or a good flick at Mugs and Movies. Students should really take advantage of what we do have.

So, the next time you are fighting the Atlanta traffic after three hours of drive time. Think about what you may be missing in the 'Boro. It's probably more than you think, and a lot of memories that you are missing out on.

Kirk Douglas' son faces drug charges

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Eric Douglas, actor Kirk Douglas' youngest son, pleaded innocent Wednesday to an indictment that charges him with drug possession.

Acting State Supreme Court Justice Brenda Soloff allowed Douglas to remain free on $5,000 bail. She scheduled his next court appearance for Nov. 13 before Justice Harold Rothwax.

Douglas, 37, was arrested on drug charges May 21 at his West 43rd Street apartment building after he allegedly signed for a Federal Express package from France that held 1,085 pills of the antidepressant Xanax.

The man delivering the package was actually an undercover detective who allegedly found 11 vials of crack on the actor's person, police said.

They said the package was initially intercepted by Customs agents.

Douglas' lawyer, Joshua Dratel, said he will challenge the propriety of the arrest and search of his client.

In March, he faced federal charges for disrupting a flight from Los Angeles to Newark. Douglas was released on $10,000 bail in that case.

Student spends summer vacation catching fugitive

By Kelley McGonnell
Staff Writer

Last spring all Nate Mercer wanted was to go home for the summer. The last thing he expected was to catch a fugitive.

Mercer was finishing his first year as a transfer student at GSU, when he decided he wanted his summer internship to be close to home. As a Justice Studies major, he discussed his options with Florence Ferguson, an assistant professor of political science. She found him a job he will never forget.

Mercer was accepted as an intern at the Columbia County Sheriff's Department in his hometown of Augusta.

"It was a two and a half week program and these guys were hard core," Mercer said.

Mercer passed the course on a Friday and the next Thursday he was chasing fugitives.

A prisoner, in jail for bank robbery, escaped from the brand new Columbia County Detention Center. This was his second escape and the first was featured on America's Most Wanted. The show participated in this search also.

Four days after the breakout, while Mercer was talking with an investigator, they received a tip as to the man's whereabouts. "We thought it was probably a prank call," Mercer said.

Mercer and the investigator

"JUST BEING ABLE TO DO THAT WAS SOMETHING ELSE AND I LEARNED A LOT ABOUT POLICE WORK."

— NATE MERCER, GSU STUDENT

followed the lead and found the fugitive. While he did not actually catch the man, he helped in the chase and assisted in the actual capture.

"I was this close to being the guy who caught him," Mercer said.

Mercer is not disappointed though. He realizes most students spend their internships pushing papers.

"It wasn't exactly a college-type situation. It was fun though, man. Real intense," Mercer said.

Mercer thanks Ferguson for her help in getting him the internship.

He may use his coming justice studies degree to go into law enforcement. Thanks to this summer, he could go back to the Columbia County Sheriff's Department.

"Just being able to do that was something else and I learned a lot about police work," Mercer said.

In addition to having his associates degree from Georgia Military Institute, Mercer is also on the Dean's List at GSU.

Along with the clubs in which he is involved, he is also actively involved with St. Matthew Catholic Church in Statesboro.

"I think that's pretty cool," Mercer said.

A summer internship turned into a potential job, an adventure and a sense of pride.

Mercer proved college students can make a difference. They can even be heroes.

JFK Jr. and new wife honeymoon in Turkey

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — John F. Kennedy Jr. and his bride gave the tabloids the slip during the wedding, but the photographers tracked down the honeymooners in Turkey.

Rumor had it Kennedy and his bride, Carolyn Bessette-Kennedy, had secluded themselves on a yacht. But the Globe said it found the lovebirds in Istanbul and plans to run 15 pictures of them next week.

The Kennedys reportedly stayed at a luxury hotel jammed with soccer fans who were too worked up over a big game to notice them.

Globe editor Tony Frost said he instructed his two photographers to follow the couple but not to disturb them as they enjoyed their honeymoon, touring a mosque, a palace and a bazaar.

The wedding Sept. 21 was kept secret by using a small church on Georgia's remote Cumberland Island.

LONDON — This time, Naomi Campbell swears, she will turn up for the occasional bite to eat.

The supermodel appeared at the opening of London's Fashion Cafe, a theme restaurant she owns with fellow models Claudia Schiffer, Elle Macpherson and Christy Turlington.

"There's a corner spot that I can call my table," she said. "I can have my meetings there."

Yeah, right. When the first Fashion Cafe opened last year in New York's Rockefeller Center, there were similar pledges, but nary a noticeable nosh.

The opening in a crowded, noisy Piccadilly Circus locale was timed to coincide with London Fashion Week.

Fashionably monochromatic, Turlington wore a black satin gown, Campbell was in figure-hugging gray and Schiffer all in white with flared pants. Macpherson was unable to make it.

Thousands of fans, who had waited hours, burst into cheers when the three arrived.

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — The next time Maya Angelou recites her best-known poem in public, she'll have some serious musical accompaniment.

A new symphonic piece, "Since Dawn (A Tone Poem for Narrator, Chorus and Orchestra based on Maya Angelou's 'On the Pulse of Morning')", premieres

Saturday night at the Wake Forest University chapel.

Angelou, 67, will be the narrator, with the Winston-Salem Piedmont Triad Symphony performing the music written by Dan Locklair, the university's composer-in-residence.

Angelou has been a poet, author, dancer, actress, playwright, civil rights activist and educator for more than four decades. But some Americans got their first exposure to her work when she read the poem at President Clinton's inauguration in 1992.

Library assistants lend helping hand

By Shanika N. Glynn
Assist. Features Editor

Do you know the difference between a bit and a byte? Can you format a diskette or download a file from the Internet?

If you answered no to any of these questions than you are among the many GSU students who are computer illiterate.

But, don't panic, the Henderson Library is equipped with a staff that is always ready to assist you.

Herman Middlebrooks is a graduate student with a bachelor's degree in political science, and he is also the library's head computer assistant.

After six years as a computer assistant, he is very aware of the many students who are clueless when it comes to computers.

"The most common questions asked are how to do e-mail, how to get Netscape on a computer and is it free," Middlebrooks said.

Middlebrooks also notices that the longer students stay at GSU the more computer knowledge they seem to gain.

"More upperclassmen are literate than lowerclassmen," he said.

Middlebrooks, as well as other members of the library staff, are aware of the need for better computer skills and have tried to make the library's computers more accessible to students.

"We recently color-coded everything to help direct people to different areas of the computers a little better," Middlebrooks said.

The library staff is also aware of the large numbers of students who need help developing basic computer skills.

"We are teaching more workshops and more classes," Middlebrooks said.

"We have a lot more computers with more applications, and we have added more variety."

Computers in Henderson Library are available 24 hours a day from noon on Sunday until midnight Friday, and are available 8 a.m. until 12 p.m. on Saturdays.

Upcoming computer workshops include Introduction to Lexis/Nexis on Oct. 4, Using GALILEO on Oct. 6, and Using Pine (E-Mail) on Oct. 8.

Leach: life not glamorous

The Associated Press

AKRON, Ohio — Even with a home in Antigua and a love for the high life, Robin Leach says he's just a regular guy trying to make a living.

"I think there are really two Robin Leaches," Leach said. "There's the guy I send out and who talks in that funny voice. And there's the guy who kicks back and is very happy drinking out of a Styrofoam cup at 3 in the morning in an editing booth."

Leach, host of the syndicated program "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous," came to Akron on Thursday to promote cable TV's Food Network and his two cookbooks. He spoke in a British accent much softer than the one he uses when showcasing celebrity homes across the globe.

As much as he enjoys caviar and champagne, Leach says being on the road 290 days a year leaves him little time to enjoy the good life. He went from Akron to Los Angeles, then it was on to San Diego, Denver and Dallas before heading to Malaysia and Australia.

Amendments may be confusing

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — The list of constitutional amendments on the Georgia ballot is mercifully short this year, but voters who haven't done their homework may be clueless on Nov. 5 when they read the ballots.

A few are fairly easy to understand, such as measures to repeal the state's tax on stocks and bonds, and to allow school boards to seek voter approval for a 1 percent local option school tax.

But then there's this nugget: "Shall the Constitution be amended so as to allow agricultural processing industries, after approval in a referendum, to impose a fee upon members of the industry based on the amount of agricultural products processed and, without placing such moneys in the state treasury, to use such funds to promote those agricultural processing industries?"

In plain English, Amendment 4 allows people who run cotton gins to assess themselves to promote the industry, which is enjoying a resurgence in Georgia after the successful taming of the boll weevil.

"The language never seems to improve in the amendments. I don't know why it's so convoluted, but it is," said Martha Ann Saunders, president of the Georgia League of Women Voters. And there is this little jewel:

"THE LANGUAGE NEVER SEEMS TO IMPROVE IN THE AMENDMENTS. I DON'T KNOW WHY IT'S SO CONVOLUTED, BUT IT IS."

— MARTHA ANN SAUNDERS, GEORGIA LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

"Shall the Constitution be amended so as to allow the owner of island property located within a constitutional industrial area voluntarily to remove the property from the industrial area?"

Amendment 5 is for Chatham County's Hutchinson Island, where the partly state-funded Maritime International Trade Center is expected to spur explosive development.

Much of the island was designated as an industrial area under an old state law that severely limited the amount of taxes that could be imposed. The amendment removes that restriction, and allows local governments to levy higher taxes to help pay for the government services that will be required.

For voters with a cynical bent and no knowledge of the issue, the ballot language might suggest some sort of nefarious deal.

"We're worried about that, and appreciate the publicity," said Sen. Eric Johnson, R-Savannah. "It was defeated once before because people didn't know what it was... We want to make sure the rest of the state knows it doesn't affect them. It affects one area of Chatham County, and everybody here wants it."

"If this is what's going on the ballot, then we need to have it in clear language so the average voter will have no difficulty," said Rep. Bob Holmes, D-Atlanta, chairman of the House Governmental Affairs Committee.

He said he will convene meetings on improving ballot language when the Legislature meets again in January.

Millner focuses on blue-collar roots

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Guy Millner is using a series of new TV ads in his campaign for the U.S. Senate to shift the focus away from his wealth and toward his blue-collar roots.

In one of the ads, which began airing Tuesday, Millner says, "I believe the very best education is like the sign that hung over my dad's service station: 'Locally owned and locally operated.'"

In another ad, he appears dressed in a blue work shirt and says, "Taxes are choking Georgia families. They pay an average of 40 cents out of every dollar earned. That's absolutely crazy."

In a third ad, Millner is shown walking in front of an okra patch with his 2-year-old granddaughter.

He says the baby, over her lifetime, will pay $200,000 in interest on the federal debt.

The ads began running the same day Millner, founder of the Norrell temporary employment agency, campaigned with millionaire publisher Steve Forbes, a former GOP presidential candidate who is even richer than Millner.

The pairing invited fresh attention to his wealth.

Millner's fortune is estimated at $250 million and Forbes' at $450 million. The two emphasized Millner's plan to reduce taxes for working families.

Millner also continued to struggle with questions over his membership in an exclusive club on Palm Beach Island that bars Jews and blacks. Millner has said he will resign his membership in the Everglades Club, despite having purchased a $2.85 million home within walking distance of the club.

He and his aides refused to answer questions about other residences and club memberships he and his wife own — those which he is not required to disclose under federal rules for candidates.

One political scientist says it's unclear how attention to Millner's wealth will shape the race with Democratic opponent Max Cleland, who lives in an Atlanta apartment and holds no expensive club memberships.

"Most Georgia voters don't have vacation homes. They certainly don't have $2.8 million vacation homes," said Michael Binford of Georgia State University.

"A country club membership that costs $35,000 is so foreign to most voters that they can't even grasp it."

students.

GSU President Nicholas Henry then joined the members for a luncheon sponsored by the five local banks.

"The orientation session is vital to the success of the new faculty, because it stresses the focus on teaching here at GSU and the importance of the undergraduate program," Black said.

In addition to the orientation, the individual departments have their own ways to help the new faculty adjust. They are encouraged to assign mentors from their department to help the new faculty become familiar with the university.

The number of new faculty members has steadily decreased each year since the early nineties, a time of major expansion for the university.

DIVERSITY

tween varied ethnic cultures through one teacher.

One perspective Gooding used showed the different responses to the same teachings throughout different cultures. By knowing and understanding these responses, teachers can tailor their lesson plans accordingly.

A sample indicator was used as a way to find out what type personality the students have, followed by a summation of the traits normally found in these different personality types.

Gooding even designed a "road map," consisting of six main parts: knowledge, comprehension, application, analysis, synthesis and evaluation. This map helped to guide the participants.

Achievement is to be had only when teachers can reach each student as an individual with specific needs. To do that teachers must continue to expose themselves to and learning about diverse cultures, Gooding said.

FAIR

their respective organizations and lists of upcoming events.

On hand at the fair were several professional organizations such as the Public Relations Student Society of America, the National Society of Black Engineers, and one of the school of business fraternal organizations, Delta Sigma Pi.

All of these organizations provide critical resumé building activities including leadership experience and networking opportunities.

For those who are looking for an escape from the stresses of student life there were clubs such as the martial arts club that stressed the importance of learning "learn to channel your chi energy" and performance groups such as the Theater Club, and Umoja.

Also included in the fair were several religious organizations for those looking for a spiritual outlet.

There were also groups such as The Triangle Club that serve not only as social organizations, but as a support group as well.

Contribution and active participation in extra curricular events are not only important socially, but can prove to be beneficial later when trying to enter the work force.
