Mitnick accuses McKinney of supporting Farrakhan

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Rep. Cynthia McKinney, Georgia's first black congresswoman trying to win re-election in a newly drawn majority white district, was accused by her Republican opponent on Sunday of supporting "the bigotry of Louis Farrakhan."

McKinney, D-Lithonia, denied the charge by 4th District challenger John Mitnick, who is white, and said she was defending free speech when she voted against a popular resolution in 1994 denouncing a lieutenant of the fiery Nation of Islam leader for making anti-Semitic statements.

"That speech was indeed a horrid speech," she said. "But I voted against that resolution because not in the history of our country has Congress passed a resolution to condemn speech."

Mitnick, a Decatur business lawyer, pushed the issue, saying "Mrs. McKinney has buddied up with Louis Farrakhan and his cronies on many occasions. She supported the bigotry of Louis Farrakhan and his senior lieutenant."

Mitnick, a self-described moderate Republican, tried to distance himself from the publicly unpopular House Speaker Newt Gingrich by stating up front his support for gun control and a woman's right to choose an abortion.

An accusation by McKinney that Mitnick is "cut from the same cloth as Newt Gingrich" drew jeers and laughter from the audience.

The candidates squared off over a national school voucher program in which children would receive government money to attend private schools if they choose.

GSU plans to implement BANNER system

By Emily Rollison
Staff Writer

GSU is currently working with a new computer record system that will be complete at the end of this month.

BANNER will detail information concerning students from recruitment to graduation, including every grade, late payment and parking ticket. There are also plans to include an alumni file so that graduates can be followed after graduation.

"This information is not for everybody in the world to see," said Charlene Black, associate vice president for academic affairs. "There is privacy in the system."

The purpose of the BANNER system is to make an overall improvement in student services.

BANNER incorporates qualities such as on-line transcripts, enrollment verifications, duplicate grade reports and on-line transfer credit evaluation system.

In addition, BANNER will also allow students to register for classes through the World Wide Web or by telephone. Plans are already set to begin this process by the 1997-98 academic year.

Presently, the computer systems at GSU are independent for each department, but with the new program, all the departments will have access to the Students will not receive an invoice at this registration. It will later be mailed to students' post office boxes.

Also, the schedule and invoice will be on two separate documents and the contents of the invoice will be more detailed.

It will show the individual charges and payments on the account for both the present and past quarters.

Within the financial aid office, students will be able to call into a voice response system which allows them to find out their financial aid application and check status.

They will also be using BANNER to produce and distribute financial aid award letters.

Plans are already being made to adapt BANNER to the new semester system, which will be instituted in the fall of 1998.

"We are still only in phase one," Black said. "There are yet endless possibilities left within this system to be experienced with either education or regulation, possibly a little bit of both."

"THIS INFORMATION IS NOT FOR EVERYBODY IN THE WORLD TO SEE. THERE IS PRIVACY IN THE SYSTEM."

— CHARLENE BLACK,
ASSOCIATE VICE PRESIDENT FOR ACADEMIC AFFAIRS

Nearly 300 other educational institutions are already using the BANNER system with success.

Another feature of BANNER is that it contains a degree audit program that allows students to check their transcripts on their own.

BANNER produces the transcript which list the classes the student has taken and the grades received.

Also, the classes needed to fulfill specific degree requirements will be listed.

same database of information.

This feature will make records more accessible to students and faculty while allowing the staff to perform their tasks in a more efficient manner.

The faculty is continuing to explore the many new advancements offered by BANNER, including interactively with other universities within Georgia.

Students will first notice the BANNER system when they pre-register for winter quarter on Oct. 28.

Akins Boulevard ribbon cutting scheduled for Friday

By Gin Starling
Staff Writer

GSU will dedicate a new entrance to the university Friday, Oct. 4, at 11 a.m.

Akins Boulevard is the latest project GSU will be opening for use.

Akins Boulevard's 1.1 mile route is located just off of Veterans Memorial Parkway, and it allows for easier access to many buildings on campus.

It will traverse 107 acres and connects Statesboro's perimeter parkway to the fastest growing area of the campus.

The end of the boulevard will present an unobstructed view of the entire length of the brick-paved pedestrian.

The road is being named in honor of the Akins family of Bulloch County.

The ownership of the land where the parkway is located can be traced to this family as far back as 1840.

In fact, the late Matthew Wilson Akins helped in providing the land on which the original GSU campus was founded.

His great-granddaughter, Emily Akins Malecki, sold the university the land on which the new boulevard is located.

President Nicholas Henry said he is anxiously awaiting the dedication.

"We're very excited about the ribbon cutting because it's one of the most inexpensive projects we've done, but yet one of the most visible," Henry said.

Formal gates are planned for the parkway's entrance. Landscaping along the boulevard is planned for the upcoming months also.

Live oaks will be planted along the road and full lighting will also be installed.

Savannah Avenue becomes historic site

By Laura Owens
Staff Writer

Savannah Avenue may sound as if it's in the wrong county, but it will soon become one of Statesboro's historic sections.

The Historical Neighborhood District Association has decided to make Savannah Avenue, located off Highway 80 near Bulloch Memorial Hospital, a historic site.

The idea was initiated by the State Historical Preservation Society, and it will be officially approved as a historical site by the state board before the end of December this year.

The avenue is being recognized for its unique architectural designs and for its community planning.

It was the first neighborhood to be formed outside of the downtown Statesboro area.

John Tucker, a resident of the avenue who has been instrumental in getting his neighborhood recognized, described Savannah Avenue as "...a mish-mash, not just a row of big expensive mansions."

He said the homes, which date back to the early 1900s, include Greek and Queen Anne designs as well as two Sears and Roebuck prefabricated homes.

Tucker and others have worked for nearly five years to make the avenue a historic district.

After approval by the board, Savannah Avenue's recognition went to Washington, D.C., where it is now being considered for placement on the national register.

Residents and businesses located on the historical avenue have little to gain from this, other than being locally and nationally recognized, unless benefits are granted and protected by a local ordinance.

Property values are not expected to change.

SGA to sponsor voter registration rally

By Farrah Senn
Staff Writer

SGA is sponsoring a Voter Registration Rally today from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. outside the rotunda.

The rally is organized by SGA Executive Vice President Lameisha Hunter.

Students who register today will be able to vote in the 1996 national election. The national registration deadline is Tuesday, Oct. 7.

The goal of the rally is to register students to vote and to encourage them to cast their ballots at election time, organizers said.

"It is going to be a great event," SGA President Derek Burns said.

Several local officials and candidates will be on hand to present their platforms, discuss current issues and answer questions.

GSU's African American Gospel Choir will perform and various campus organizations will be represented.

"We hope that all students will come out and participate. I would love for every person on campus to meet the candidates," Burns said.

Burns said if 10 percent of the school population participates, the rally will have been a success.

WVGS headed in new direction

By Sara Clark
Staff Writer

WVGS is turning its image around with new programs, better planning and an optimistic, enthusiastic staff.

Despite the accusations of drug use, profanity and other improper station conduct, WVGS has made changes to secure a solid, professional nature.

The first order of new business has been an attempt to replace equipment. WVGS's transmitter has been in use since the 1950s and, at that time, was only a back-up unit.

According to Russell Dewey, the WVGS advisor, if the transmitter should malfunction, the station would be "shut down completely until it can be replaced."

In order to avoid a possible malfunction, a series of meetings were held over the summer to discuss funding for a new transmitter. The funding for the project is still pending.

As shown on the schedule, WVGS is now on continuously, 24 hours a day.

The station now has a web site, created by Scott Morris, which provides all the information about WVGS.

DJs have begun to incorporate radio call-in contests giving away passes to see bands playing in Statesboro, along with live band interviews before the shows.

Last Friday, WVGS had an interview with Spider Monkey to promote their show and gave away five pair of passes to see the band at Blind Willie's.

Newt Gingrich under ethics committee investigation

The Associated Press

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — Speaker Newt Gingrich says the top Democrat on the ethics committee broke House rules by claiming Republicans are stalling an investigation of Gingrich.

Rep. James McDermott last week said Republican committee matter should go to the full House unless there is a resolution this week.

But Gingrich, in Alabama raising money for three GOP congressional candidates Monday, said it was McDermott who broke the rules "by saying anything when he's on the committee."

Gingrich denied any wrongdoing.

He said he had been cleared of 66 previous ethics charges.

The question of whether Gingrich's course was educational or partisan in nature is before an investigative subcommittee of two Republicans and of stalling includes a yearlong delay in appointing an outside lawyer and the approaching adjournment of Congress.

Gingrich said he has turned over 46,000 pages of documents to investigators.

Gingrich also spent 11 hours with an attorney as part of the Can't afford to save for retirement? The truth is, you can't afford not to. Not when you realize that your retirement can last 20 to 30 years or more. You'll want to live at least as comfortably then as you do now. And that takes planning.

By starting to save now, you can take advantage of tax deferral and give your money time to compound and grow. Consider this: Set aside just $100 each month beginning at age 30 and you can accumulate over $172,109* by the time you reach age 65. But wait ten years and you'll have to budget $219 each month to reach the same goal.

Catherine Clinton speaks during the annual Averitt Lecture Series

By Jennifer Hall
Staff Writer

Catherine Clinton presented a study on the role of women in the Civil War South during the Jack and Addie Averitt Lecture Series Oct. 1-2.

Clinton, a well-known historian who specializes in American women's and Southern history, was chosen as this year's guest speaker because her study of this area would be of interest to the people of Statesboro.

Clinton is a fellow of the W.E.B. Dubois Institute of Harvard University, a program that recognizes scholars who conduct individual research in a variety of fields within African and African American studies for a period of time.

Three lectures, "Legendary Valor: South Carolina Woman Reconstruct the War," "Sister Against Sister: Fanny Kemble's Divided Daughters," and "Orphans in the Storm: Set Adrift By War" were free and open to the public in the Russell Union Ballroom.

Clinton is the author of several books based on these subjects including "Women, War, and the Plantation," "Plantation Mistress," "Tara Revisited," and co-author of "Divided Houses."

She was educated at Harvard University, the University of Sussex and Princeton University, where she received her Ph.D. in American History. Clinton has taught at Harvard University, Brown University, Brandeis University, Union College and the University of Benghazi, Libyan Arab Republic.

The Averitt Lecture Series was established in 1990 by John Averitt, a former professor and dean at GSU, and his wife Addie.

The series was given to the history department and the English and philosophy department. The two departments alternate choosing the speaker each year.

McDonald named new director of graduate studies for College of Business

By Farrah Senn
Staff Writer

Mike McDonald was named the new director of graduate studies in the college of business administration this September.

He was selected by a search committee composed of all department heads, chaired by Linda Blicken, associate dean of the College of Business.

McDonald succeeds John Gutknecht and will try to continue building the master's in business administration program.

"We would like to expand the MBA program to reach more and more people throughout southeast Georgia. That is our target area," McDonald said.

"My main goal is high quality practitioner involvement in the program," he said.

In the past seven years, the MBA program, which started in 1970, has grown from 32 to 180 students. The program was recently re-accredited by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business, making it comparable to programs at the University of Georgia, the Georgia Institute of Technology and Georgia State University.

The MBA program is diversified, involving students from various parts of the country, as well as China, Taiwan, Japan, Indonesia, Finland, Germany, Belgium, India, the Republic of Georgia, Pakistan, Thailand, Ecuador and the Philippines.

McDonald said what he enjoys most about his job is "the involvement with the graduate students."

He has over 20 years of experience in working with graduate students, both here and at Clemson University.

He graduated from Glynn Academy in Brunswick, Ga., earned a bachelor's degree at Georgia Tech, and earned a Ph.D. at the University of Georgia.

He has received numerous teaching awards while at GSU, including the university-wide Excellence Award, the College of Business Teacher of the Year, and GSU Professor of the Year.

McDonald and wife Bonny, who works in Auxiliary Services, have two sons, Patrick and Jason.

STATE NEWS

Campbell suspicious over plan to allocate Chattahoochee water

The Associated Press

LAGRANGE, Ga. — The mayor of Atlanta has his doubts about the three-state plan for use of the Chattahoochee River waters.

"I don't know if there is a viable solution with Alabama and Florida" over allocating the Chattahoochee's waters, Mayor Bill Campbell said.

"I'm very uneasy about the whole issue."

Speaking at a meeting of the West Point Lake Water Quality Task Force called by Rep. Bob Barr, R-Ga., Campbell said he is concerned that if Alabama and Florida force Georgia to limit water withdrawals from the Chattahoochee, it could have an adverse impact on metro Atlanta's development.

Saying the plan would rob their states of water needed for growth, officials in Alabama and Florida filed suit to stop the plan.

The lawsuit was put on hold in 1992 after the governors from the three states agreed to wait on the results of a comprehensive study of two river basins that flow through the tri-state region. The tri-state region includes the Apalachicola-Chattahoochee-Flint basin and the Alabama-Tallapoosa-Coosa basin.

The $15 million study is supposed to determine what the demands for agriculture, hydro-power, economic development and environmental protection will be for the rivers' waters.

Congress and the three state legislatures would have to ratify the interstate compact. Johnson said the compact will allow Georgia to maintain control over its share of the waters after the states have decided how the waters should be divided up.

BANNER system will make GSU more efficient

The new BANNER system which will be adopted by the end of this month may cause confusion and even chaos in the beginning but should ultimately make life easier for students at GSU.

Since nearly 300 other educational institutions are currently using BANNER, the system must offer universities the opportunity to become more efficient.

First, having one centralized database containing information about each student ought to improve the communication between various offices on campus. If the financial aid office and the financial accounting office are on the same page, so to speak, students may face fewer hassles when either paying fees or receiving refunds.

Probably the most obvious way the BANNER system will improve students' lives will be the increased ease in registering for classes. Students have been complaining about the notoriously long lines on registration and drop-add day for years. Many believe that on-line or telephone registration, a system other colleges and universities already employ, would be the perfect solution.

By adopting the BANNER system, GSU has taken a step toward making on-line registration a reality.

However, we must keep in mind that this system will not be mastered overnight. While all the kinks are being worked out, students may be tempted to complain about the mass chaos. But just remember the light at the end of the tunnel.

Hey GSU, green means go in Statesboro

Attention all of you motorists out there who obtained your licenses from Toys 'R' Us, be on the lookout for a 5-foot-5-inch brunette who is out to stamp out ignorant driving in the Statesboro area.

Lately, my friends and I have noticed that Statesboro has been invaded by more cars. Everywhere you go there are lines of cars. In the past, many have been able to drive to campus, find a parking space and make it to class in five minutes. Here is a news flash folks: this is no longer a reality. But the inordinate amount of traffic in Statesboro does not mean people can drive their vehicles like they do on the bumper car rides at amusement parks.

People who stop in the middle of the road to have social hour drive me crazy. If what you have to say is so important, pull your car off on the side of the road. Does a ten-minute conversation about the blonde you just saw jogging in a sports bra take priority over my trip to Wal-Mart? The answer for today is NO! So, get out of my way.

This is a lesson for all of you who seem to lose track of time at traffic lights. I have a philosophy that I think we all should repeat until we are sure we have mastered its meaning: Green means go in America! Don't chat on your cellular phone for thirty seconds after the light has turned green. There are other people behind you who would like to be on their way within the next century. Chance has it that by the time you decide go, you have already caused the twenty car pile-up behind you to miss the light.

I know that the speed limits around Statesboro are incredibly low. That doesn't give you the right to drive five miles per hour. I understand that the pedestrians around GSU are awesome sights to see, so my advice to all of you who like to stare at other people is that Kodak moments last a lifetime.

For those of you who have cars which were made before turn signals were invented, you can skip to the next paragraph. For the rest of you, here is a little lesson on turn signals: Use them! I don't have the time or the money to call the Psychic Friends Network to find out if you are turning right, left or going straight. And for those of you who do make an effort to use them, do this quick little exercise. Hold your hands straight out in front of you, point your index fingers toward the sky and your thumbs inward. The hand that is making an "L" is your left. I know many of you learned this in kindergarten, but some obviously haven't mastered this skill yet. So, when turning left, remember the "L," turn the signal on and turn.

I do not intend to sound like the world's best driver. In fact, I have received my fair share of obscene gestures during the years that I have been driving. The point of this column, however, is to express the groans and moans that I have heard these past two weeks. Maybe it will make people more aware of their driving.

I concede that I am a little bitter. In fact, I have had to spend the last month without my car because of drivers similar to the ones I have just complained about. So, for those of you at GSU with driver's licenses from the Cracker Jack boxes, watch out for me. And don't be surprised if you see me behind you blowing my horn.

Election year thoughts on Dole, Clinton and religion

As the 104th Congress comes to a close and with the election looming over our heads, I think we should talk about politics. And since debates on abortion, drugs, finances and family values have been flung across our televisions and newspapers all year, I'd like to talk about the thrust behind these debates — religion.

Let's start with the Christian Coalition. They have done a great job of getting their message out, but maybe that's their biggest problem. They have been so anti-abortion, anti-gun control, anti-gay marriages, anti-drugs, anti-Hollywood and anti-budget deficit reduction that they have forgotten that the basis for the New Testament (their alleged text) is love. In fact, the only highly visible message in our popular culture that deals with love is the "I Love You Man" Budweiser commercials. Uh, leaders of the Christian Coalition, wake up.

The banter of the Christian Coalition is so in tune with the platform issues of the Republican party that I have a hard time distinguishing between the two, and quite frankly, that scares me. Forget for a moment that our Constitution prohibits the union of church and state. Instead, open your Bibles and point to the section where Jesus ran for or endorsed anyone for public office. Better yet, show me any section in the New Testament where Jesus or His disciples take on ANY political issues or get involved in the political process. Unless my Bible is the only one of its kind, I'm pretty sure Jesus said specifically that He did not come to reform government, let alone wage war against Rome and erect His own form of government. Maybe, just maybe, the Christian Coalition needs to check the Bible, or at the very least, answer one question: Do you not "love thy neighbors as thyself" because you don't love your "neighbors" or because you don't love "thyself?"

for kickball, and being down to the last two guys. Neither one can catch "The Big Red Ball," but Bobby couldn't make it around the bases without falling, that is if he got lucky enough to make contact. At least young William has managed to not only make contact, but get back around home, once.

Also, I'm really sick of these commercials. Instead of telling threatened by a woman in power. Heck, I think it's great that women are grabbing the ball us men fumbled in leadership and running with it. Somebody's got to. But I want to rant at her because she's wrong about something: family values.

Read my line: It does NOT take a village to raise a child. It would be great if we could get the whole neighborhood helping little Johnny, the six-year-old crack dealer, but let's concentrate on getting Johnny's parents, both of them, involved in the raising. Saying it takes a whole village to raise a child is like saying Picasso was a masterful artist because he used great paints. I'm pretty sure he was a masterful artist simply because he was a masterful artist. And parents need to be parents simply because they have children. There shouldn't be this much confusion as to who is responsible for a child's welfare.

When you get to the bare bones of the issues, our country's future stability has nothing to do with abortion or crime or drugs or family values. Our most pressing need is responsibility, or our lack of it, really. We need to accept responsibility for our actions. In other words, we need to start solving the problems, instead of treating the symptoms.

This will take real leadership from our government and real honesty from us, the people who REALLY make or break this nation. Quite frankly, I don't know if we're up for the task.

That's just my two cents worth. I hope I'm wrong.

MR. BOB "I'VE FALLEN AND I CAN'T GET UP" DOLE, WHO CARES IF CLINTON SAYS HE WOULD INHALE IF THE JOINT EVER GOT BACK AROUND TO HIM?

Wait, here's a thought, instead of giving money to any campaign fund, why don't you start erecting shelters or start some schools or take some homeless people into your homes? I remember reading in my Bible somewhere about a camel and a needle, go check it out.

Now, lest you Democrats get too cozy and smug, I'd like to talk about the Clintons. I'm pretty sure that Clinton will get re-elected, and I'm equally sure that he will make a better president than Dole. However, it seems to me we're scraping from the bottom of the barrel. It's like being in second grade, picking teams us what the other guy does wrong, tell us what YOU are going to do right. Mr. Bob "I've fallen and I can't get up" Dole, who cares if Clinton says he would inhale if the joint ever got back around to him? I doubt that would cause our children to turn to drugs (if so, where are their parents?).

But Mr. President, don't think for a minute that you're really fooling us. We all know you inhaled, just be honest. You had a Rhode Scholar-sized bong with the Oxford University seal on it, didn't you?

Now, if I may, I'd like to jump on the "let's bash Hillary Clinton" bandwagon but not because I'm

Only time will tell

It's over! GSU has just won the I-AA national championship for the fifth time in school history. Has this team come back from adversity or what? After losing three of their first four, the Eagles fought back to win the remainder of their games, including a win here over Montana for the I-AA national championship. Listen to these Eagle fans go crazy.

And then you wake up. Boy, now that was a good dream... Hearing GSU radio announcer Nate Hirsch after the Eagles had just won it all.

But now that you've cleared your head from the rough night before, it's not hard to realize that yes, it was, in fact, just a dream.

Two reasons: First, even if GSU did find itself playing in the national championship, there wouldn't be any Eagle fans in attendance.

Yeah, you would find a few parents and some coaches' wives. But wouldn't it be too much to ask of these true and loyal Eagle fans to actually go to a football game in the middle of December? Or November? Or October?

Second, GSU has lost three straight games. One to national powerhouse, Florida. The other to a good, yet beatable Marshall. And the third to a UT-Chattanooga team that should be finding itself towards the south end of the conference standings.

Instead, the Mocs are fifth, while GSU is sitting eighth out of nine teams, with that ninth team being Virginia Military Institute. What all this means is that this weekend's game with VMI can now be touted as the most crucial of the season.

Yes, that's right. VMI. Crucial.

An Eagle win over VMI would assure them, for now anyway, not a place in the Southern Conference cellar. And if they lose. Oh, let's not bring up that scenario.

GSU is 3-0 against the Keydets, but we saw last week that series records mean nothing, nor should they.

The scary thing, though, if we do look at history, is the trend of the decreasing margin of victory in this series.

The Eagles won the first game between the two schools, 57-0. The following year, it was 49-0. A little closer.

But last year, it was a little closer, as the Eagles topped the Keydets, 31-13, in what was called The Oyster Bowl, because it was played in Norfolk, Va. I guess they have oysters there or something.

Not only will this meeting have some importance to it, but so will the rest of the conference games, such as Western Carolina, the huge game with last year's conference winner Appalachian State, then The Citadel, East Tennessee State and Furman.

If GSU can turn things around and win these games, plus the season finale with Liberty at Paulson Stadium, maybe, just maybe, that playoff call might lean more to reality.

But it will require help, of course, and it wouldn't hurt for that relief to start this weekend with UTC continuing its luck with a win over Marshall in Huntington, W.Va.

And you're thinking, "UTC, win? Yeah, right."

Of course, we were thinking the same thing last week.

GSU to battle with VMI Saturday

By Carolyn Wynn
Staff Writer

After a surprising, 21-23, fourth quarter loss to UT-Chattanooga last weekend, the Eagles return home to face the Keydets of Virginia Military Institute, currently at the bottom of the Southern Conference standings.

The 157-year-old institution has been in the news all summer for the court-ordered admittance of female cadets for the first time in the history of the school. The court's decision to admit women was credited from another Southern Conference school, The Citadel, who admitted three female cadets.

The Keydets are coming off a Homecoming loss to Furman, making their overall record 0-2 and 0-4 in the conference. This matchup could clearly shape up to be a battle for ranking. The Keydets are currently ranked ninth in the conference while GSU is ranked eighth.

Last year the Keydets lost to GSU, 31-13. However, the Keydets are looking this year to return the favor.

VMI's All-Star candidates are senior tailback Thomas Haskins, senior tight end Greg Harris, junior quarterback Al Lester and junior linebacker Kelly Cook.

The 5-foot-8-inch, 172-pound Haskins was last year's offensive Player-of-the-Year and received all-American honors. He was ranked 18th in rushing, sixth in all-purpose yards and eighth in scoring. Last year alone, Haskins gained 1,548 yards, scored 17 touchdowns on 248 carries, and broke the school rushing record of 266 yards against UTC. In addition to his exploits on the field, Haskins is a history major.

Harris is a 6-foot-5-inch, 240-pound economics and business major. He is a second-year starter who is listed as the Keydets leading rusher. He is credited with catching 13 passes for 141 yards and one touchdown.

Lester is a familiar face to south Georgia football. The 6-foot-3-inch, 205-pound junior formerly played for the Tigers of Bradwell Institute, located in nearby Hinesville, Ga.

Lester, a mechanical engineering major, started 22 consecutive games and was the first freshman quarterback to start a season opener. Last year, Lester threw for 1,159 yards, completing 100 of 207 passes.

Bradwell is also credited with two former GSU athletes, Raymond Gross former GSU quarterback and Hughie Hunt, former defensive lineman.

The 6-foot-1-inch, 230-pound Cook was named second team all-conference last year. He had 121 tackles, forced three fumbles and broke up two passes.

Cook also shared an honor similar to GSU defensive lineman Derrick Reeves in being named Defensive Player-of-the-Week after last year's Sept. 16, game against East Tennessee State.

If the Eagles hope to stay in contention for post-season play, they must win the remainder of their games. Currently the Eagles are ranked 25th overall.

PLAYER PROFILE

Offense gleaming with Joyner, Moore and Thornton

By Carolyn Wynn
Staff Writer

The Eagle offense has long been a catalyst to victory. In addition to talented "young gun" Corey Joyner, there are two Eagle seniors who often find themselves in the "center" of it all: senior centers Robert Moore and Cedric Thornton.

Joyner, forging a place as an offensive playmaker, is a computer information systems major who says his personal goals are to use his education to help him to become successful after college.

Corey Joyner

Joyner admits that even though sports are his first love, he enjoys spending time with his friends, using his free time to simply hang out and to get in a few games of Sega.

Joyner, one of six children, attributes the majority of his success to his parents, who to him represent hard work and determination.

In addition to his parents, Joyner says there are three other people who have served as role models for him. One is his high school head coach.

"He supported and encouraged me and allowed my talent to develop," Joyner said.

Other influences include former L.A. Laker Magic Johnson and San Francisco 49er Jerry Rice.

"Both of these men are models of hard work, courage and determination, in and out of their respective sports."

When asked to describe himself, the bashful Joyner described himself as hardworking, fun-loving and confident.

On the field Joyner demonstrated his ability in last week's game versus the Moccasins of UT-Chattanooga. After taking a pitch from Eagle quarterback Kenny Robinson, Joyner threw a forty-yard touchdown pass to Maurice Bing.

"I only want to help the team. I would like to win a Southern Conference Championship and to return to the National Championship."

Two other offensive Eagle players are Robert Moore and Cedric Thornton.

Moore is a native of Lawrenceville, Ga., where he attended South Gwinnett High School. He is a criminal justice major but admits, like many other college athletes, he would like a shot at playing professionally. However, he says right now he is only concerned with here and now. And for Moore, the here and now is helping the Eagles to another Southern Conference championship.

Moore is the strongest of the Eagle squad. During winter workouts, the 6-foot-2-inch, 275-pound Moore squatted 575 pounds, power cleaned 330, and bench pressed 510.

As the starting center, Moore has been described as "a tough competitor with good quickness." Off the field Moore juggles not only the life of being a student athlete but also the duties of father and husband. Moore was married last December, and the couple celebrated the birth of their first child, Alexis Moore, earlier this summer.

When he's free, he enjoys spending time with his family and listening to music.

"I mainly listen to hip hop," Moore said.

Moore credits his father with being his biggest influence.

"I do not believe in having role models outside of the family," he said. "After all, it was my father who taught me how to handle adversity early in life. He always stressed remaining positive."

The youngest of three, Moore stresses that his upbringing added to his view of what family means.

"I am very family-oriented," Moore said. "They are the ones who have stood by me through it all."

His closeness to his family is also another reason why Moore feels it is important not to bring the "office" home.

"I enjoy playing football, but after I go home, I try to expand my energies on things other than watching football," Moore said. "Hopefully, when my daughter is older, people will be able to say I was an athlete who put his all into his sport, but I would more importantly want to be known to her as a good father."

Another Eagle center is Cedric "Ced" Thornton, who was originally a walk-on transfer from Georgia Military College. He is from Greensboro, Ga.

He has been praised for both his determination and persistence on the field, but off the field, Thornton is best known for his dynamic personality and warm spirit.

The 6-foot, 260-pound criminal justice major is a gentle giant. He describes himself as an "easy-going and respectable person." Those who know Thornton would agree.

In today's world, many of the negative attention associated with college football stems from offenses against women. This negative stereotype portrays football players as violent or womanizers. Despite the stereotype of football players, Thornton maintains that it's important to respect everyone.

"I was always taught to have a great respect for women," Thornton said. "I believe you have to give what you expect to get in return."

Last year, Thornton sat out. However, he still supported his teammates by travelling to Virginia to support them during last year's Virginia Military Institute game.

Southern Conference schools in the Top 25

The same four Southern Conference teams that have occupied the Top 25 polls all season managed to fill spots for yet another week.

Marshall held down the top spot of the I-AA Top 25 for the fourth consecutive week after stepping away from conference action and hauling in a convincing win over Western Kentucky, 34-3.

The win runs the Thundering Herd's record to a perfect 4-0, with UT-Chattanooga traveling to Huntington, W. Va., next to accept Marshall's next challenge.

Appalachian State had little problem with The Citadel as they stayed at the fourth position of the poll behind Montana, the reigning I-AA national champions, and Troy State. The Mountaineers took the win, 34-20.

Furman is now holding down the respectable 14th spot after manhandling conference foe Virginia Military Institute, 31-14.

In one of the biggest upsets in the Southern Conference this season, GSU fell to UT-Chattanooga, 23-21, knocking them from 23 to 25 in the poll.

High school coach leads team in prayer

By Steve Hanlon
The Associated Press

MUNSTER, Ind. — He's walked the sidelines for 31 years under dimming autumn skies. Don Howell — the legendary coach at Hobart — has guided the Brickies to four Class 4A state titles.

His blue-collar resume includes six state runner-up trophies and 287 wins.

His strident sideline steps and stony glares in the night give an impression of a chilly complexion.

High school football fields have been Don Howell's domain.

But it almost wasn't so. As an altar boy at St. Bridget in Hobart, he saw another light he wanted to follow: the priesthood.

"I think every Catholic boy early in their parochial school education thinks about being a priest," said Valparaiso coach Mark Hoffman, who went to Catholic schools for 12 years.

"And then after that, they think about playing football at Notre Dame," Hoffman continued.

Howell's passion for the gridiron won out. But his fiery faith burns to this day.

Even though it is against the law, Howell leads his Brickies in The Lord's Prayer before each game.

He is not alone.

In many football programs across the Region, the close connection between faith and football is more than about the pregame prayer and pass-blocking.

It's about the coaches' determination to mold unassured boys into confident young men, and to do it the best way they know the practice, that doesn't make it constitutional. It's a real sensitive issue because religion is at the core of people's beliefs."

One local coach who said he has shied away from a team prayer was Lake Station's Mike

"IT'S TRADITION, AND IT WILL CONTINUE TO BE AS LONG AS I'M HERE. WE'VE LOST A LOT IN SOCIETY BECAUSE WE'VE LEFT OUT GOD, THE POWER GREATER THAN US."

how.

According to the law of the land, any prayer led by an employee of the public schools in an controlled educational setting is unconstitutional.

Although there has never been a ruling on pregame prayer, it generally has fallen under the same U.S. Supreme Court ruling that declared unconstitutional prayer at public school graduation ceremonies.

The American Civil Liberties Union works to protect that constitutional right, among others, and protect against state-sponsored worship of any kind.

"A coach should not be leading a prayer, that's the ACLU's position," said

Rick Busse, president of the Calumet Chapter of the ACLU. "Even if all the students accept Hepp. The Eagles used to recite The Lord's Prayer, but a couple of years ago, Hepp stopped the practice.

"I didn't want to force anything on anyone," Hepp said. "I used to look around (during the prayer) and some kids were doing it, some weren't. They seemed uncomfortable. We now just take a moment to collect our thoughts."

Howell doesn't follow that logic.

"Like the game of football, life is tough. At Hobart we've always prayed before and after every game," Howell said. "It's tradition, and it will continue to be as long as I'm here. We've lost a lot in society because we've left out God, the power greater than us."

"We've got to get it back. I've always believed it's important to teach right and wrong."

Like toughness and a steel mill, faith and football are inseparable, in Howell's view.

He has preached his blue-collar approach to the game, but faith is his cornerstone. Faith is as important as the weight room and the Purple and Gold.

"Coach (Tom) Kerr always leads the team in The Lord's Prayer before each game," Howell said. "Our prayer is always the same. We pray to play our hardest, to keep both teams safe from injury and to play with class. These things are important."

In cross-country or volleyball or swimming, seldom does a team get together to break spiritual bread.

But on the gridiron, a team prayer almost always precedes the hostilities.

As Calumet coach Ivan Zimmer says, "There are no atheists in foxholes."

"I think faith and football has a historical precedent," Clark coach Gary Ridgley said.

"It goes back to the early days of wars. Soldiers had a prayer before going into battle. They prayed for safety. They prayed for peace of mind."

GSU rugby beats UFC

GSU News Service

The GSU rugby team finished its preseason in high spirits after this weekend's win over the University of Central Florida, 39-14.

"We are all much happier with this week's game," captain Denny Godwin said. "Everyone showed a lot of improvement from last week."

Rick Stevens opened up the scoring for the Eagles in the first half. Stevens, after another scoring drive, assisted Scott Wirth in contributing to the victory.

Also scoring for GSU was Alfredo Rowland and Billy Doughty. Rowland had one try while also gaining points on a penalty kick.

"This game was played with an entire team effort," Rob Barrett said.

The B-team played a game against Golden Isles, a men's club out of St. Simons. Despite being shut out, the newer players gained valuable game experience which will help them to start the season successfully.

The regular season will begin on Oct. 5, at Emory University. GSU won the last time the two schools met.

The team is looking forward to the game and plans on making this week's win a tradition throughout the season.

The home opener will be Oct. 12, versus Georgia College.

Down Syndrome man to play football

The Associated Press

GREELEY, Colo. — Gabriel Lane, the 20-year-old man with Down Syndrome who was banned from high school football by a state education committee because of his age, has been given the go-ahead to play.

The Colorado High School Activities Association Executive Committee on Friday voted 11-0 to accept a recommendation by its commissioner Bob Ottewill that Lane be granted eligibility to play interscholastic football and swimming during the 1996-97 school year.

Lane is expected to take the field Monday when Greeley Central High School's junior varsity team meets Broomfield High School.

Lane was smiling broadly as he left school Friday. He said the decision means he is "really a Wildcat."

"Monday's going to be a big game," Lane said.

"I think the rulings suits Gabe," said Greeley Central athletic director John Borman. "I'm glad he finally has the opportunity to play."

He said Lane found out about the ruling mid-morning and appeared to be excited he would soon be playing the game he loves so much.

Borman said the 5-foot-3, 215-pound Lane, a lineman, will definitely be on the field Monday, although he will not start.

"The situation will be treated with as much integrity as possible," said Borman. "There are kids who are better players. (But Lane) will play. It may only be a play or two. It's completely at the coach's discretion."

— JOHN BORMAN,
ATHLETIC DIRECTOR

Neither Greeley Central coach Jeff Priestly nor Lane and his family could be reached for reaction to the association's decision.

The CHSAA earlier had denied Lane the right to play because he is too old under the agency's rules, drawing protests from school officials, Lane's family and supporters that included Denver Broncos owner Pat Bowlen.

Colorado Senate President Tom Norton, a Greeley Republican, even vowed to introduce a bill stripping CHSAA of its authority to oversee athletics over the controversy.

CHSAA rules permit high school athletes to play only until they are 19.

Exceptions can be made for students with disabilities, but only until they turn 20.

Ottewill earlier said the school failed to apply for a waiver for Lane last year and that the young man was ineligible under three different rules.

Wednesday, the CHSAA board of control voted 26-20 to allow the commissioner and board to waive the age limits for disabled students in individual cases.

Ottewill said he made his recommendation based on information provided in a meeting with Lane, his family, members of the administration and teaching staff of Weld County School District 6 and members of the Greeley Central High School coaching staff.

"I feel confident that the school and coaching staff will structure Gabe's participation so that it meets the spirit of the very limited exception to our rules," Ottewill said in a prepared statement.

Umpire charges spitting Alomar in clubhouse

By David Ginsburg
The Associated Press

TORONTO — The rift between Orioles second baseman Roberto Alomar and U.S. Major League Baseball umpire John Hirschbeck escalated Saturday when the umpire charged into the Baltimore clubhouse in an effort to attack the second baseman.

Alomar was suspended for five games by the American League for spitting in Hirschbeck's face Friday night after the umpire ejected him for arguing a called third strike.

Alomar immediately appealed the suspension, meaning he would play in the final two games of the regular season at Toronto.

The suspension was not supposed to include the playoffs.

The All-Star infielder hit a 10th-inning home run a few hours after the suspension was announced to put the Orioles into the playoffs with a 3-2 victory over the Blue Jays, his former team. Alomar was 0-for-4 before hitting his 22nd homer and propelling Baltimore into the postseason for the first time since 1983.

Alomar had been jeered by the Toronto fans throughout the game, but as the ball soared over the fence, he lifted both arms in triumph.

"I just had to come today and battle," Alomar said. "It was a difficult situation for me."

The victory clinched the AL wild-card berth for the Orioles, who will face Cleveland in the first round of the best-of-5 playoffs starting Tuesday night at Camden Yards.

An attorney for the players union, Michael Weiner, said that Alomar's appeal means he can continue playing until the appeals hearing. Weiner said that hearing probably would be during spring training next year.

After Friday's game, Alomar said of Hirschbeck, "I used to respect him a lot. He had a problem with his family when his son died — I know that's something real tough in life — but after that he just changed, personality-wise. He just got real bitter."

Hirschbeck's 8-year-old son died of a rare brain condition three years ago.

The umpire's 9-year-old son is also afflicted with the malady, umpire Jim Joyce said.

Hirschbeck was told by reporters of the comment in the umpire's dressing room Saturday morning, and immediately went into a profanity-laced tirade.

"He brings up my son? I see him on street and I'll ...," Hirschbeck said before calling Alomar a series of names.

At that point, Jim McKean, head of the umpire crew, wrapped his arms around Hirschbeck and asked reporters to leave the room.

The incident didn't end there. Moments later, Hirschbeck charged into the Orioles clubhouse, yelling that he would "kill" Alomar. Joyce, another member of the umpire crew, chased after him and grabbed the umpire before he could reach Alomar.

Joyce had Hirschbeck in a bear hug as he pulled him from the clubhouse.

Alomar, who was not in the clubhouse at the time, said, "I apologize to him. We didn't understand each other. What happened last night was the heat of the moment, and we'll just leave it at that."

Alomar did, however, claim that he should not have received the suspension, claiming "nobody knows my side."

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL

Baseball gears up for post-season play

By Ben Walker
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — At least the Atlanta Braves were able to leave Detroit, albeit a bit later than they expected.

The National League East champion Braves left Montreal after their last regular-season game Sunday, not knowing where they would wind up. They planned to fly to Detroit for refueling, then remain on the ground until they found out who they'd be facing in the playoffs.

The answer came a little later when the San Diego Padres beat Los Angeles 2-0 in 11 innings to win the NL West title.

That sent the Braves to Los Angeles to meet the wild-card Dodgers, while the Padres will go to St. Louis to play the NL Central champion Cardinals.

Joey Hamilton will start for the Padres against Todd Stottlemyre on Tuesday in Game 1 of the best-of-5 first round. The Cardinals went 8-4 against San Diego this season.

"I think you've got to throw the records out," Cardinals reliever Rick Honeycutt said. "That just shows at that time we played well against them. You definitely can't say because we beat them in the regular season we should beat them now."

Then again, look at what happened in the 1995 playoffs. In all six matchups, the team that won the head-to-head series in the regular season also won when they played in the postseason.

The defending World Series champion Braves will begin their series Wednesday in Los Angeles. John Smoltz pitches for Atlanta against Ramon Martinez.

The Braves are playing in their fifth consecutive postseason. They were just 5-7 against Los Angeles, however.

"I think we all like our chances," said Tom Glavine, Atlanta's starter in Game 3. "Pitching and defense are supposed to win games for you in the playoffs and we feel as though we're real good in those areas."

In the AL, the matchups were set Saturday.

The AL East champion New York Yankees will be at home Tuesday night against the Texas Rangers, making their first-ever playoff appearance.

David Cone starts for New York while John Burkett pitches for the AL West champion Rangers, who were 7-5 against the Yankees.

"We've gone farther than most people expected us to go but not as far as we want to go," Texas manager Johnny Oates said. "But it's been a great season. As far as I'm concerned the pressure is off of us."

The AL Central champion

Cleveland Indians will be in Baltimore for Game 1 Tuesday. The Indians were 7-5 against the Orioles this year.

Charles Nagy will start the opener for Cleveland.

Taking Care of Business

By
Melanie J. Weinberg

I used to be ashamed for not being a fan of the NBC, Thursday night line-up. However, after watching the oh-so-famous sitcom "Friends" last Thursday night, for the first time ever might I add, I am now proud to admit that I will never watch it again. I will not deny that I smiled during the show, and what the hey, I even laughed a bit. Unfortunately, the amount of laughter was surpassed by the amount of disgust.

Throughout the whole episode, two of the guys (I don't know names) fought continuously over a chair. Granted, it was funny, but how can any intelligent being sit for 30 minutes and watch two morons battle it out for a damn chair.

Meanwhile, another guy emphasizes to the women in this script that it doesn't matter what you wear, just get dressed and stop worrying about how you will look—and hurry up. I interpreted this scene as a message saying women take a long time to get ready. However, he just simply tells his guy friends to please get dressed.

Now, my qualm is why does a show, supposedly trying to appeal to the younger generation, insult everything we have fought so hard to change?

For example, the treatment and portrayal of the modern day, young woman is appalling. One girl spills food on her dress and covers it with a tacky Christmas bow. Another is running around rampant in her underwear worrying about her ex-boyfriend, and the other is trying to figure out what to wear so her boyfriend will be pleased.

The majority of young women today aren't like this. And the fact that this show stereotypes today's woman as inferior, stupid, helpless, and basically all-beauty and no brains is despicable.

It's scary to think that young men who watch this show might actually think that this is what women are like, and that women are here on earth to be ridiculed. And young women could get the idea that men are here to be served, and that when a man says to get dressed, they better do it fast and look good.

Although it serves as entertainment, if young, or old people, are watching this invalid portrayal of a group of "Friends," the consequences could be dangerous.

LOCAL BAND PREVIEW

Wallace Green: 'They're Okay'

and they will hit the stage Wednesday at Blind Willies

By Melanie J. Weinberg
Arts and Entertainment Editor

Hailing from the small town of Claxton, Ga., these three GSU students are rocking their way throughout the southeast with their debut CD, "Wonderllamasoup."

Chris Mitchell, Brian Hendrix, and Larry Summerlin hooked up while in high school and have been playing together ever since.

The three like to attribute some of their local success to GSU because otherwise they would have gone their separate ways.

"Part of what kept us going was the fact that the university is so close and that allows us to stay together and remain friends," Mitchell, a senior music education major and lead guitarist and vocalist for the band, said.

Surfacing in their local scene only a year ago, Wallace Green is noted not only for their ambition and musical talent, but also for the strong lyrical content of their music.

Mitchell, who takes credit for the lyrics, said that he is inspired by personal situations and everyday occurrences.

"You have to listen to what other people are saying," Mitchell said. "You have to pay attention to your environment and only write about what you know."

Mitchell adds that their song "Ten Dimes from John" was created when a friend of his said those words in a mundane sentence.

In February of 1995, the band traveled the distance to the Skip Bryant Studio in Atlanta, where they recorded "Wonderllamasoup." The CD, which was produced by the band, exhibits a raw mixture of what each member individually offers in order to create impressive music.

With Summerlin's rigorous drum style, Hendrix's alluring bass lines and Mitchell's guitar mixed with his dynamic vocals, it is impossible for them to compose parallel songs, which in turn, allows the CD to deliver a range of tunes that varies from soft and melodious to funky jazz to loud and rough.

Because Mitchell, Hendrix and Summerlin carry different musical interests and listen to different types of music, their influences vary.

This allows each member to acquire a different taste for the end result of a song in the making. "The final product is different in each of our minds," Mitchell said. "Eventually, we argue enough or agree enough to where we can play the song comfortably."

Hendrix, a sophomore finance major, adds a reference to their song "Grass," in that he intended it to be one way, and it ended up sounding a different way.

However, Mitchell said humorously, when "Grass" was completed, it was "something they have never done, still haven't done yet and will never do again."

Their song "Underneath the Spreading Chestnut Tree" was recently the most-requested song on I-95 in Savannah for area bands, and the band plans to be shooting a video for the song in the fall.

As of now, Wallace Green is not as well known as they would like. However, with a debut CD, agencies working for them and a Peavey endorsement, they are well on their way and heading in the right direction to where they want to be.

But according to Mitchell, the band's acting manager, it takes a lot of work to get noticed.

But Hendrix and Summerlin sit back and let Mitchell do his thing because they say it's better to have one person spread their name, as opposed to three, so agencies don't get confused. The boys of Wallace Green are extremely positive about their future.

With each member adding all they can to get themselves off the ground, there is no doubt that they will one day soar.

"Now that we have this [Peavey] endorsement, it is going to get a lot better," Mitchell said. "People are noticing us. They know who we are now."

The Nudes bring their 'jazz-inflected folk' to GSU

By Jake Hallman
Staff Writer

The Nudes will be performing under the Rotunda on Oct. 9, at 1 p.m.

Wait just one moment before you start grabbing $5 bills or phoning the Moral Majority; called "the most fun you can have with your clothes on" by "Relix" magazine, The Nudes are musical duo vocalist/guitarist/songwriter Walter Parks and cellist/vocalist Stephanie Winters, touring to support their latest CD, "Velvet Sofa."

The group takes its name from the classic nude paintings and sculptures that "capture sophistication, earthy-sensuality, and simplicity," qualities The Nudes try to express in their music.

"Billboard" deemed The Nudes' self-titled 1993 album one of their "critic's choices."

The magazine called The Nudes' music unique, saying that their songs "don't recall anything on the airwaves... The Nudes are gonna be heard from." "Beautiful, jazz-inflected folk music," said the New York Times of The Nudes.

Parks, a graduate of the University of Georgia, developed a strong following as a jazz guitarist and a young band leader performing at the Florida National Jazz Festival.

After being discovered by the Allman Brothers Band's Butch

Trucks, Parks moved to New York in 1990. Seeking a more "stripped-down" acoustic sound, he placed an ad in the "Village Voice" and he and Winters found each other.

Winters, an alumnus of Juilliard, Purchase College and Columbia University, has been playing cello professionally since the age of 16, and has done studio work for Carly Simon.

The Nudes have appeared at colleges throughout the southeast and northeast, including Georgia State, Georgia Tech, Florida State, Marist and Illinois State.

The group has also performed with artists such as Bela Fleck and the Flecktones, Taj Mahal, Chris Smithers, and Daniel Lanois.

MOVIE REVIEW

'Last Man Standing,' or is that 'Last Man in a Coma'?

By Eric Bray
Staff Writer

Well, the summer's over, and with it went all of the summer blockbusters. Unfortunately we're at that really crappy time of the year for movie-going, which leaves us, for the most part, in a dry spell until Christmas.

As for myself, I intended to savor the last morsel of my must-see list, closing it off with "Last Man Standing." However, I might as well have saved "Highlander 2" for the end because my fevered expectations went unfulfilled.

"Last Man Standing" stars Bruce Willis as a man caught between two bootlegging mobs in a border town during the Prohibition Era. Willis pits the gangs against each other until they finish each other off, making the town safe for everyone else (which apparently consists of about five people).

I gotta admit, this has all the ingredients of a grade-A movie, and, to be honest, if I had seen it five or ten years ago, I probably would have thought it was.

The lack of originality may be explained by the fact that the premise is taken from Akira Kurosawa's 1961 masterpiece "Yojimbo."

If you think "Last Man Standing" still has a fresh angle, keep in mind that Clint Eastwood's 1964 western, "A Fistful of Dollars," was also taken from "Yojimbo."

One of the most disappointing aspects of "Last Man Standing" is that it's too much of an old western to be set in the thirties. From the saloon to the sheriff to the whorehouse, this town is pure cliché.

The ghost town setting is overplayed. You've got to wonder how a town out in the middle of the desert cut off from civilization manages to survive.

There isn't one scene in which the background is not entirely obscured by dust.

Also, the sound editing is poorly managed. An arid, windy sound continuously underscoring the dialogue is too loud and sometimes purely annoying.

Willis performs well, but think of the practice he's had in these thuggish, macho roles. After "Die Hard," he became the definitive action hero.

Before then he had strictly been considered a comedic actor (except for his career as a blues singer, which, though not comedic, was laughable).

After seeing him perform in some films with a bit of artistic integrity, though, ("Pulp Fiction," "Twelve Monkeys") it's a shame to see him return to his old style.

In fact, the silent, brooding tough-guy shtick is overdone in this flick. Willis comes off as heartless (even sinister), especially when he insults women only to have them fall at his feet, fulfilling every testosterone-driven fantasy.

House Democrats urge Clinton to stop funding Army school

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON —New Pentagon disclosures about teaching manuals once used at the School of the Americas have given new life to congressional opponents of the controversial Georgia school.

Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy, D-Mass., led a group of House Democrats in urging President Clinton to cut off all funding for the Army school at Fort Benning now that the Pentagon has admitted the manuals mentioned executions, torture and other human rights abuses.

Rep. Martin Meehan, D-Mass., said the newly release documents demonstrate that the school has been training Latin American soldiers "to commit these atrocities. That is an outrage the United States government should not tolerate."

Kennedy said Clinton would bolster the U.S. image in Latin American and throughout the world "by taking swift and sure action" to cut off all funding for the school.

"It's going to be very difficult to shut down this school within the Congress," Kennedy said. "I think the onus of this now rests squarely on the shoulders of the administration."

The House twice in the past three years has rejected Kennedy-sponsored amendments to defense bills that would have closed the school, which was founded in Panama in 1946 and moved to Fort Benning in 1984.

House GOP leaders have blocked hearings this year on a separate Kennedy bill to close the school.

The Pentagon declassified and released English translations of parts of the Spanish-language training manuals used at the school during the 1980s.

The Pentagon acknowledged in a statement that "two dozen isolated phrases, sentences or short passages, out of 1,100 pages in six of the manuals, were objectionable or dubious" and "appeared to condone practices violating U.S. policy."

Rep. Sanford Bishop, an Albany Democrat whose district includes the school, said it was unfair for opponents to attack it now based on manuals that have not been in use for five years.

"It is certainly fair to criticize a past mistake but it is not accurate nor fair to suggest this has anything to do with the present or the future," he said.

Bishop said recent studies by the General Accounting Office, the investigatory arm of Congress, and an independent consulting firm concluded that the school is "serving the interests of democracy and human rights in Latin America."

Rep. Mac Collins, a Republican from Hampton, praised the school, saying it is critical to expanding democracy in Latin America.

Regarding the criticism, Collins said, "In 1991, the Army discovered a problem in a few training manuals. The Army quickly corrected the problem. There is nothing else to discuss except the school's accomplishments."

The school has been the target of repeated grassroots religious protests over the past five years. Led by Father Roy Bourgeois, a Maryknoll priest, the activists have staged lengthy fasts at the Capitol and nonviolent civil disobedience at the school.

Thirteen protesters, including Bourgeois, were arrested at a protest at Fort Benning last year and were sentenced to two to six months in prison. Bourgeois is still serving his six-month sentence.

Kennedy's legislation would close the school and replace it with a United States Academy for Democracy and Civil-Military Relations.

The academy would welcome both civilian and military leaders in Latin America but would be prohibited from teaching combat or other lethal skills.

Edition 1

Georgia Southern University's Information Source for Banner.

Number 2

The Office of the Registrar is anxiously awaiting the full implementation of the BANNER<sub>®</sub> Student Information System. BANNER<sub>®</sub> will give us advanced technology that will enable our office to move into the next century providing a much better level of support to our students. Among the features of BANNER<sub>®</sub> that will be employed in the Office of the Registrar are on-line transcripts, on-line enrollment verifications, on-line duplicate grade reports, on-line transfer credit evaluation system, and an automated degree audit system. In addition, BANNER<sub>®</sub> will put us on a platform that will allow us to move to telephone registration and/or student access registration through the World Wide Web in the future. With almost 300 educational institutions using the BANNER<sub>®</sub> Student System and a very strong BANNER<sub>®</sub> users group, Georgia Southern will be privy to the latest enhancements in student information systems. Another way Georgia Southern Students will benefit from the BANNER<sub>®</sub> system is that all components of the student system will be working on one database. In the past, the Financial Aid system has been running on a different system from Admissions, Registrar, and the Business Office. This created a lag time for information to be updated between the systems, sometimes causing problems for students. Having all the major student offices on one system will enable staff in those offices to perform their tasks in a much more efficient manner and better serve our students. The advanced features we will get with BANNER<sub>®</sub>, the possibilities of future enhancements, and the benefits of a totally integrated student system make BANNER<sub>®</sub> a very welcome tool in the Registrar's Office.

—Mike Deal, Registrar

Seniors will be the first to use the Banner System in 1996.

October 28 begins preregistration for Winter Quarter using the new Banner system. Watch your campus mailboxes for information and instruction on what you need to do prior to registration.
