Clarification

In the article "Police find no connection among recent rapes" in Tuesday's issue, it was implied that a newsletter distributed by Bermuda Run started the rumors of a serial rapist.

Bermuda Run did distribute a newsletter warning residents that there had been a rape, but we did not intend to imply that Bermuda Run was responsible for starting the rumors.

SGA presidential candidates discuss platforms

By Kevin Bonsor
News Editor

The 1997 SGA Presidential Election in April will pit the current SGA President Derek Burns against Chad Elkins, formerly of the student political action committee Students for a Better Statesboro.

Burns said he believes experience is what separates the two tickets and should be the deciding factor in the election.

"I find it difficult for an individual to carry the responsibility of the students on this campus with no experience," Burns said. "I don't doubt his [Elkins] ability, I doubt his experience."

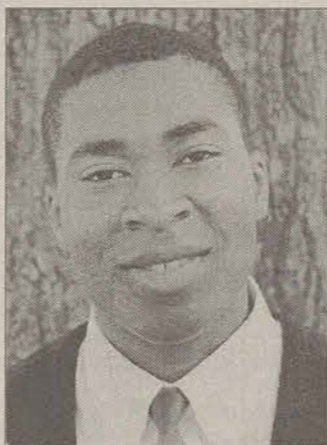

The Elkins ticket does lack experience with only two members of his ticket, Stacy Ganter, who is running for executive vice president and Clint Murphy, who is running for vice president of academic affairs having served on SGA. Elkins said it is time for some new blood on SGA.

"You need fresh ideas, and when you're in the senate long enough you run out of ideas," Elkins said. "Even though we may not have SGA experience we don't lack in leadership."

Both candidates say they plan to attack the issue of student apathy by getting more students involved in on-campus organizations.

Burns said that he is working on implementing a student activity hour.

He said this would free up time for students to have more time to attend organizational meetings and encourage students to get involved.

"I want to challenge them [students] to get involved," Burns said.

The candidates differed on the issue of student fees. Burns says that he wants to halt increasing fees while Elkins says stopping the rise in fees is impossible because of inflation and the need for new staff.

"The fee increases on this campus have been getting outrageous and that is what we've got to halt," Burns said.

Elkins says there is no way halt fee increases, but that if he did have to increase fees, he would try to do so only minimally.

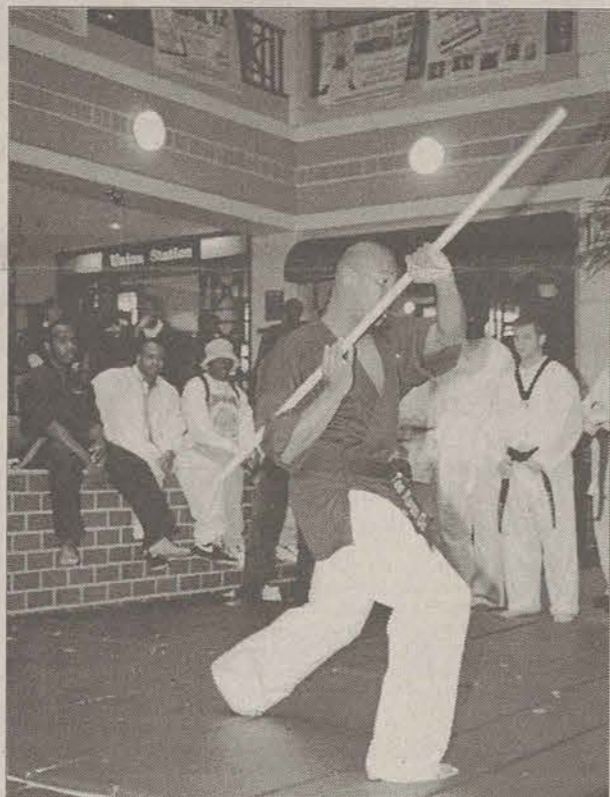

Burns says he wants to continue the progress that the current administration has started.

He points to SGA's accomplishments this year, which he says includes the implementation of emergency loans, setting up a web page and implementing a book-swapping program.

He adds that this administration has a lot

A week for women

A hands-on workshop was held in the Union to provide students with the opportunity to observe and practice self-defense skills.

The office of Multicultural Programs and the Women's Awareness Week Committee are sponsoring Women's Awareness Week this week. Students will have the opportunity to participate in events ranging from the Clothesline Project, self-defense demonstrations and a candlelight vigil. The week will conclude Friday at noon with Divided Sisters, a lecture on racial differences and similarities.

The Clothesline Project is a visual display that gives women an opportunity to break the silence by creating shirts that give voice to their personal experiences.

Take Back the Night March gave GSU and Statesboro women the opportunity to reclaim the right to walk safely at night.

Students watched as performers showed them a few self-defense techniques.

GSU campus to introduce a Peer Leader Program

By Jaimie Edwards
Staff Writer

GSU officials hope the freshman experience at GSU will be improved by the new Peer Leader Program.

The program is an opportunity for upperclassmen to earn two hours of credit through CED 591 by team teaching the freshman seminar GSU 120.

This program is being implemented in fall of 1997 and applications are now being accepted.

The Peer Leader Program offers benefits to freshmen as well as upperclassmen and faculty.

Freshmen will be able to hear first-hand from students, and will learn ways to adjust to the college lifestyle.

Upperclassmen will have the advantage of working closely with professors and they will be able to gain positive leadership experience by helping to teach students.

In addition, education majors will get insight into their future careers.

"We are hoping that this will be an enriching experience," says Michael Moore, director of the First-Year Experience.

Students who have a history of involvement on campus, who are willing to model appropriate behaviors and who show an interest in helping first-year students are needed in order to make this project successful.

Students who are interested in working with both freshmen and professors, who have a 2.5 grade point average and good judicial standing are encouraged to pick up an application at

Officials say SGA elections will concentrate on the issues

By Kevin Bonsor
News Editor

This year's SGA elections will stick closer to the election guidelines and concentrate more on issues than last year's election, which was marred by election violations and fingerprinting, election officials say.

SGA Executive Vice President Lameisha Hunter, who will oversee the elections, said all the candidates have signed statements saying they have read and understand the election guidelines.

Last year there was controversy surrounding the Derek Burns' ticket when a complaint was filed against them for allegedly campaigning within 100 feet of Lakeside Café, a direct violation of campaign rules.

Hunter, who was on the Burns' ticket

"We're going to have it lined off with chalk so there is no question as to what the distance is," Hunter said.

Hunter said anyone running for an executive position or one of the 37 senate seats will not be allowed to go near the polling places unless they are going there to vote.

In a separate incident last year, there was controversy over then SGA President John Walraven's letter to The George-Anne endorsing Burns' opponent Gavin Shook. Since Walraven was involved with the running of the election, some questioned whether he should have publicly endorsed a candidate.

Hunter said that despite the fact that she was on Burns' ticket last year she will oversee the election in a fair manner.

"I'm a neutral, non-bias person running it," Hunter said. "I want to see that the best person wins."

GEORGIA NEWS

Forty percent of freshmen need remedial courses

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Forty percent of all freshmen entering Georgia's public colleges and universities needed remedial courses last fall, statistics from the University System Board of Regents show.

In addition, 30.4 percent of students entering the university system with a college-preparatory diploma needed remedial help, according to figures obtained by Morris News Service.

Remedial classes teach students what they were supposed to learn in high school.

"When you've got 30 percent of college prep graduates having to take remedial classes, I think that's kind of sad," said Rep. Charlie Smith, D-St. Marys. "We are either holding our own or getting worse. We're certainly not getting better."

In the fall of 1995, about 43 percent of all freshmen entering state colleges needed remedial coursework.

The 1996 figure is a slight improvement over that, but Smith said the state cannot expect real improvement until high schools stop handing out college preparatory diplomas to unprepared students.

Remedial education costs the state more than $20 million a year. Part of the Board of Regents' plan for stiffer college admissions requirements by 2001 calls for dramatically reducing the number of students who need remedial coursework.

"I think we've seen some progress on it," said James Muyskens, the university system's senior vice chancellor for academic affairs. "We have a long way to go before we can reach the 2001 goal."

"WE HAVE A LONG WAY TO GO BEFORE WE CAN REACH THE 2001 GOAL."

-- JAMES MUYSKENS, SENIOR VICE CHANCELLOR

Although slightly fewer students needed remedial help at the state's 19 four-year schools last fall, figures show that trend was reversed at the state's 15 two-year colleges.

More than 70 percent of students at DeKalb College needed some type of remedial help, according to the statistics.

Of the state's research institutions, only the University of Georgia saw its percentage of students needing remedial help rise. In the fall of 1995, 15.3 percent of the university's freshmen needed help; last fall it was 16.4 percent.

Georgia Southern University had the steepest decline in freshmen needing remedial coursework, from 52 percent in 1995 to 45.3 percent in 1996.

The university system has been working with the state Department of Education to improve the core curriculum for college-bound high school students, and last month the Board of Education approved new graduation requirements for the college prep diploma.

"The model, the dream, the hope is to have every step, every grade level, be preparation for the next," Muyskens said.

Smith has pushed for legislation to make local school districts pay when their college prep graduates need remedial coursework in college. He said making school districts pay such costs would make them more conscious of what they're doing.

Student Media Positions 1997-1998

The Media Committee of Georgia Southern University announces its selection process to choose student members of the 1997-98 broadcast and editorial boards of the university's official student media (The GEORGE-ANNE, MISCELLANY, SOUTHERN REFLECTOR, and WVGS/FM).

Students interested in applying for an elected position will be expected: (1) to present a letter of application and/or resumé to the chairperson of the Media Committee; and (2) to sign a waiver (included with this advertisement) which gives permission to the chairperson of the Media Committee to validate the candidate's academic standing. Students may indicate the position(s) sought either in their letter of application or on the waiver form. However, a separate letter should be submitted for each medium, if a student wishes to apply for more than one medium.

TERM: The term of office for the editorial and broadcast boards shall be the next four quarters following the spring elections and shall expire at the end of four quarters or at the end of the next spring quarter whichever comes first.

QUALIFICATIONS: Specific qualifications for persons holding board positions are listed below. Prior experience may be considered in lieu of stated qualifications. The media are listed in alphabetical order but the board positions within each medium are listed in ranking order.

House speaker explores payment options

By John King
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — As House Speaker Newt Gingrich weighs how to pay a House ethics penalty, a former colleague has offered this wild card option: establish a legal defense fund to pay the $300,000 fine — plus an additional $1 million.

Several Gingrich associates and advisers said Thursday that they did not believe the speaker was taking the proposal seriously.

But two who vehemently oppose the idea said it had come up in recent discussions about how and when Gingrich should pay the penalty imposed in January when he acknowledged breaking House rules.

The $1.3 million figure is a rough estimate of the two-year House ethics committee investigation of the speaker's political activities.

Gingrich has been warned by House colleagues and his closest political associates that he will create a new political firestorm and perhaps threaten his hold on the speakership — if he does not use personal funds to pay the penalty.

But Gingrich's wife, Marianne, is vehemently opposed, and Gingrich has on several occasions turned testy when advised to convince his wife he has little choice, said two Gingrich associates, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"He seems to have his heels dug in pretty good on this," said one Republican strategist con-in recent deliberations over the political impact of paying most of $300,000 through a legal defense fund after paying $50,000 or so with personal assets, the associates said.

Several GOP sources said the idea came from former Republican Rep. Robert Walker of Penn-has sought legal advice from ethics committee and Federal Election Commission officials.

As of Thursday, the idea of paying more than the $300,000 penalty had not been discussed with either of those bodies.

Gingrich advisers opposed to the idea took solace in that, but nonetheless voiced concern that the proposal had come up in recent deliberations.

When asked Wednesday how he would pay the penalty, Gingrich said: "The reimbursement will be paid in full, and the taxpayers will be totally protected."

Gingrich spokeswoman Christina Martin said there has been "no decision, period" as to how to pay the penalty and, given that, "all options being considered remain equal."

She said Gingrich was reviewing a "great many ideas" from friends and others.

Rich Galen, a top Gingrich lieutenant, declined comment when asked about the $1.3 million scenario. But he did acknowledge a sentiment among House Republicans and other influential Republicans and conservatives that "dealing with this sooner rather than later is probably a good idea."

GINGRICH'S PAYMENT OPTIONS CONSIDERED:

- PAYING OUT OF HIS PERSONAL FUNDS
- ASKING HOUSE REPUBLICANS TO CHIP IN FROM THEIR CAMPAIGN ACCOUNTS
- USING A LEGAL DEFENSE FUND

sulted recently by Gingrich.

The strategist recommended Gingrich borrow the money from a bank, if necessary, and pay the penalty as soon as possible.

Gingrich had been working off a short list of options pulled together two months ago.

They include paying out of personal funds; using his campaign account; asking House Republicans to chip in from their campaign accounts; using a legal defense fund, and a combination of these.

The idea of paying the total cost of the investigation emerged sylvania, a close Gingrich lieutenant in his House days.

Walker's theory, they said, was that criticism from House members, the news media and ultimately the public would be lessened if Gingrich were to pay the entire cost of the investigation.

Joseph Gaylord, Gingrich's closest political adviser, was said to have told the speaker that choosing any option other than using personal funds could prove to be a "career-ending" decision.

As Gingrich has debated other payment options in the past, he

Savannah State students tackle misleading catch phrases in ads for car companies

The Associated Press

SAVANNAH, Ga. — Catch phrases in automobile advertisements caught the eye of 11 Savannah State University students doing field work for a retailing class project.

Their two-page summary of their study last winter offered no statistics on the extent of dishonest advertising. Instead, it listed catch phrases that warrant caution.

Among them were "Zero Down," "We Finance Everyone," "Low Down Payments" and "We'll Match Your Current Car Payment."

Savannah's Better Business Bureau office had asked professor Emily Crawford's class to conduct the survey.

Anieka Major and two friends checked into an ad listing payments of $285 a month and learned that the vehicle was for lease, not for sale.

"It's been a very vivid learning experience," said Brenda Lee Pritchard, the bureau's chief executive officer. "Some of the kids were really aggressive."

An ad must specify if the car is for lease or sale.

"If it's a lease, it needs to be stated as such," said Walter Lewis, a Ford dealer who attended the school's seminar on its findings.

The Federal Trade Commission, cracking down on misleading lease advertising, ruled last fall that the total charges due at lease signing — security deposits, lease acquisition fees and the like — must be disclosed at least as prominently as the amount of the lease down payment.

Among the catch phrases that caught the students' attention, Zero Down often means no payment on a lease agreement, but a security deposit of several thousand dollars may be required.

The "financing everyone" tag may be true, but the terms can include down payments of 50 percent or more and interest payments of 29 percent or more.

Disclaimers on "low down payment" ads may tell the whole story in the fine print. There may be a giant balloon payment at the end of the contract.

Some of those matching a current car payment could involve another old car of similar value.

Lewis advised shoppers to "try to deal with somebody they know, who's reputable, whom they can go back and talk to if they have a problem."

The Governor's Office of Consumer Affairs monitors car advertising statewide.

"We still have an occasional problem with somebody who steps over the line," said spokeswoman Carolyn Mills. "Most of them are slip-ups and not intentional."

Former West Georgia profs sentenced on drug charges

The Associated Press

NEWNAN, Ga. — Two former biology professors at West Georgia College accused of using college supplies and a lab to make methamphetamine were sentenced this month.

Spencer Hamada, 53, of Bowdon and Dwight Romanovicz, 48, of Carrollton were arrested last April after a yearlong investigation by the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, authorities said.

Federal drug agents arrested Hamada after they found him "cooking" methamphetamine at a clandestine laboratory inside a barn on his Bowdon property.

The DEA said that Hamada also cooked methamphetamine in his lab on campus and gave some students a demonstration on making the drugs. Agents, who had seized marijuana from Romanovicz' home, learned that the two men had grown marijuana for more than 15 years.

Hamada, who pleaded guilty to manufacturing methamphetamine in November, was sentenced to 52 months in prison, and was ordered to pay a $10,000 fine and $3,100 in restitution and forfeit his Bowdon property. He had faced up to 40 years in prison and a $250,000 fine.

Romanovicz, who had pleaded guilty to conspiring to manufacture marijuana, was sentenced to four years probation.

He had faced up to five years in prison and a maximum fine of $250,000.

Our Opinion

Stick to the issues alone

With the SGA campaign and election looming before us, the students and candidates can insure that the most capable person is elected by focusing on the issues and the issues alone.

In years past, candidates for SGA elections have often resorted to mudslinging and other disreputable tactics in order to insure victory.

Instead of relying on solid platforms, hard work and old-fashioned, the candidates could lazily resort to tearing each other down in the public eye.

By slinging mud, each candidate hopes to destroy the student body's respect for the opponent. Actually, though, each one achieves just the opposite.

Hopefully, though, the smart voter will be repulsed by a candidate who must make his opponent look bad in order to seem like the best candidate.

Speaking of voters, we as students have also failed in the past to remain focused on the issues alone. Often, students simply vote for the candidate they may know or like. Or worse yet, they may vote simply along racial lines.

Thus, the election becomes a mere popularity contest, not an indicator of the best candidate for the job.

The chances of electing the most qualified candidate will be increased if the candidates remain determined to present the voters with their platforms and realistic plans for their administrations and if the students vote for the candidate who best represents their interests.

After all, a fight won fair and square really reaps the sweetest victory.

Reflections on GSU's plans for a reflecting pool

I was hanging out the other day, sitting in the grass, when suddenly I realized that my life would never be complete without the presence of a reflecting pool here at GSU. I realized, very quickly, that not only would my education suffer, but that I would never have a way to tell if my hair was messed up without the reflecting pool. This was serious!

Immediately, I called up my SGA representative and told her without a reflecting pool, my life would not be complete. The SGA representative (whose name will remain anonymous) told me that the GSU campus was, in fact, soon to be the proud lovely owner of a new reflecting pool. I could not contain myself.

Then the good news came. This pool would only cost $14 million of GSU's hard-earned money. Then the rep paused and said, "there is only one problem..." I screamed in horror, "What?!" What problem could possibly be holding back the construction of my new reflecting pool?

The representative calmed me and informed me that certain members of the GSU student and faculty oppose the construction of the reflecting pool. Of course, I'm sure that you could imagine my surprise. Who would ever protest the building of such an important thing as a reflecting pool, and why? It is such a cheap and important addition to our campus.

TRACEY VARNELL

Then the representative told me the darnedest thing. The rep looked right at me, looked around to each side and leaned in close to whisper, "It's those nature people again. Shhhh!"

I was astounded. Do nature people not like to see their reflections in a reflecting pool? What is wrong with these people, anyway? Then I was told that their reasoning behind this opposition was to save trees that are more than a hundred years old. Well, I looked right at the rep and I said, "What in the hell? These people are so selfish. How can they possibly put the existence of something such as a tree on the same level with the aesthetic appeal of our cherished campus?"

Did these nature people realize how much time I had spent looking into Lakeside, only to see an ugly, murky bottom littered with rubbish? How could I possibly see my reflection at Lakeside?

Well, that was the last straw. Either I would have to go, or those hundred-year-old trees would. So, I acquired a chainsaw from Wal-Mart and headed straight down to the intersection of Forest Drive and Akins Boulevard.

I began wondering how I would know which trees were the ones. Suddenly though, my fears were quieted when I looked to see the largest tree in the vicinity with some weird guy chained in the top.

The guy had the audacity to tell me that MY reflecting pool would be nothing more than a $14 million drainage ditch that would eventually serve to drain the surrounding wetlands so that the administration could continue expansion. He also said that these trees cleanse our air and water, but I knew better. My college directors would never cut down ecosystems they couldn't replace. Surely at the cheap cost of $14 million they we're planning to rebuild an ecosystem that would serve the same purpose, right? Money can build ecosystems, right?

I left the scene frustrated and pissed. All I wanted was for that freak to get down out of the tree, but no, he wouldn't. I went directly to my SGA rep and told my story.

She said, "Well, this may be a little more difficult than we expected, but fear not. As soon as those nature people turn their heads, and as soon as we put that weirdo in jail, our plan will be executed. Besides, GSU would never revise their master plan simply because of some hundred-year-old trees!"

I left that day very satisfied with the outcome of my conversation. I went back to the grass at Lakeside and stared into the teal muck, dreaming of a better day. A day when those damned trees would be gone and I could have my very own reflecting pool to check my hair in.

'I'll just slurp life through my straw,' problems and all

I saw a good band the other night. In fact, I'd say I saw the best darn band that's ever made its way through here in my five-year tenure.

I'm not going to turn this into a music review, but let me indulge for a moment in telling you about this band.

The name of this band is the Vee-Roys, or the V-Roys, or something like that. Really, the name isn't important. They were at Blind Willie's last Wednesday, and they rocked the almost-empty house.

They came down from Knoxville, Tenn., and rumor has it they are going Big Time — supposedly they played a gig (I've always wanted to use that word in a column) on The Conan O'Brien Show.

If you're curious about their sound, I'll give you the best explanation I can, but first you need to get a blender and two beers. Before we begin, go ahead and hook up that blender and down one of those beers.

Now, in that blender you need to put Richie Cunningham and The Fonz (you know, from "Happy Days"). Next put in the movies "The Thing Called Love," "That Thing You Do," and "Last of the Mohicans." Start mixing on low.

As the concoction gets good-n-creamy, grab yourself some existentialism a la Kierkegaard, some Lewis Carroll poetry, a black suit and shimmery solid-colored tie, a "Weezer" album, and Kurt Cobain's shotgun. Now urinate in it, and pour that other beer on in there. Lastly, put the lid on tight, and turn that sucker on high!

In a generation whose motto is, "life/fame/money/poverty/sex/a straw!"

I suggest you listen to these hillbilly lads and grab a straw.

What I want to know is that in a town with the most whiners per capita in the whole universe, especially about the "music scene" (can we say, "yada, yada, yada"), where the heck was everybody?

WE WANT TO BE "FREE," BUT WE ENSLAVE OURSELVES WITH OUR EXCUSES.

mom/dad sucks, and then you die" (usually by a gunshot wound — either self-inflicted or by a gang member/fan), where everyone places blame so they have an excuse to stay the same, the V-Roys are different.

Their music was peppy enough to get those of you on the "make-you-lazy," cheap Statesboro bud, off your keasters and onto a dance floor. These guys made "Phish" look like, well, fish.

Take that blender of yours and pour yourself a nice, tall, heaping glass of the frothy stuff. Their motto? "Life can suck, so go get Oops, I forgot, this is the same town that blew off The Rolling Stones when they came through here 30 or so years ago.

I'm sure Blind Willie's was empty because the student body, known throughout the world for its academic excellence (and its administrators' honesty) were at home diligently pouring themselves over their studies.

Yeah right.

Forget the band for a minute. Think about this: why are popular bands, popular? For that matter, why is anything popular, popular? Because it speaks to us in a way that we have never been spoken to and comes at a time when we want to hear it — although I am still unclear on what "leg warmers" were saying to us.

Regardless, popular culture is made by visionary people, but, and here's the problem, popular culture is defined by the way society views those people.

This band is going to make it to The Show, but they won't make it in this town for another ten years. This town is always a day (or a decade) late and a dollar short — well, maybe it's only the students who are always a dollar short, but you get the point.

We whine and complain. We bitch and moan. You name it, we do it — except for one thing: we never, ever, ever take responsibility for our actions or situation.

We want to be "free," but we enslave ourselves with our excuses.

Whatever your problems, I don't care what they are, how you deal with them is up to you and ONLY YOU. You think life sucks and then you die? Go get a gun — say hi to Kurt for me.

Me, on the other hand, I think life is pretty much the coolest thing going right now. Sure I got problems, lots of 'em in fact, but shoot, I'll deal with it, and when I can't, heck, I'll just slurp life through my straw.

See you on the flip side.

Public Safety chief fights to keep Social Security numbers on driver's licenses

By Joan Kirchner
The Associated Press

ATLANTA—The head of the Department of Public Safety wants the governor to veto a bill that would bar his department from displaying Social Security numbers on Georgia driver's licenses.

Commissioner Sid Miles' position has drawn the ire of lawmakers and the American Civil Liberties Union, who say the bill is needed to protect privacy.

The measure by Rep. George Grindley, R-Marietta, would bar the department from using a motorist's Social Security number as the driver's license number, unless the driver specifically requests that it be used.

Currently, the department uses the Social Security number unless the driver objects. But Grindley said too few drivers are aware they have the right to object.

"You've got to protect that number better. Once somebody has that number, they can have access to every facet of your life," Grindley said.

Miles wrote a letter recently asking Gov. Zell Miller to veto the bill.

He said his department is required by federal law to obtain the Social Security numbers of people seeking commercial driver's licenses and pass the numbers on to the Federal Commercial Driver's License Information System.

Georgia stands to lose federal highway dollars if it fails to comply with that rule, Miles wrote.

He also said he has instructed

GEORGIA STANDS TO LOSE FEDERAL HIGHWAY DOLLARS IF
IT FAILS TO COMPLY WITH THAT RULE.

--SID MILES,
PUBLIC SAFETY

his staff to let all drivers know they now have the option of keeping their Social Security number off the license.

Miller has sent the bill to the attorney general's office seeking a legal opinion but has not decided whether he will sign it, spokesman Rick Dent said.

Lawmakers said Miles can comply with the federal rule on commercial driver's licenses simply by obtaining the driver's Social Security number on the application, then sending it to the federal government. Grindley's bill couldn't bar him from doing that because the federal law supersedes state law, they said.

"You can get a Social Security number and send it to them, but that doesn't mean you have to put it on the license," said Senate Minority Leader Chuck Clay, R-Marietta.

Grindley said neither Miles nor his lobbyists at the Capitol raised objections to the bill as it went through the House and Senate.

"He waited until it passed through the Legislature and is sitting on the governor's desk, then he blindsides me," Grindley said.

Teresa Nelson of the ACLU said Miles' promise to start telling drivers they have the option of keeping the Social Security number off the license isn't good enough.

"You leave too much up to the interpretation of the bureaucrats," she said.

"This bill requires a pro-active step by that driver to consciously put that Social Security number on the license. There's a big difference."

Black students in Thomasville boycott classes

The Associated Press

THOMASVILLE, Ga.—Black students are back at school in Thomasville after about half of them skipped classes, apparently as part of a protest over alleged discrimination at a middle school.

School officials said 1,184 students, roughly half of the black students in the city schools, stayed home Monday. Attendance was back to normal Tuesday in the 3,700-student south Georgia system.

A suit filed Dec. 31 in U.S. District Court in Albany claims discrimination in discipline and class assignment at MacIntyre Park Middle School in Thomasville. It was filed after the school's black principal was transferred to an alternative school.

Last month, school board members were mailed copies of a petition asking them to remove School Superintendent Lee Shiver.

School board member Lucille

Morris suggested that Monday's boycott was tied to the lawsuit and may have been organized by parents who believed the board hasn't paid attention to their concerns.

"The board doesn't listen to parents," she said.

Board Chairman Nathaniel Abrams said he was unaware of any discrimination at MacIntyre Park, which had always had a black principal until a white principal was moved to the school in January.

A dying Cubbies fan's last request

It was just another one of those days.

Me, sitting on my big yellow couch, listening to the sweetest sound of all, the tunes of Harry Caray belting out, "Take me out to the Ballgame."

It was another day and another loss for the Chicago Cubs, a team I'll admit that [sigh] I am a fan of.

And as I sat there watching them give up hit after hit to the Braves four days ago, I remembered the first time I heard that song, "A Dying Cubs Fan's Last Request."

As you might imagine, the song basically makes fun of my Cubbies, and if I remember correctly, there is a line in it that refers to the Cubs as the doormat of the National League.

I saw the humor at the time and think I even cracked a grin, but thinking about it now scares me.

This song was written long before the 0-11 start this year, giving them the new National League mark for the most losses without a win to begin a season.

The only thing I can think of now is what would the writer have to say about them now?

Well, I figured I would write my own "Request List." I know I'm not dying, at least I don't think so, but my Cubbies are, and it's time we get this all off our chest.

- Request 1: May everybody realize the optimism of Cubs fans. In case you haven't heard, Cubs broadcaster Harry Caray has taken matters into his own hands to help the Cubs get over their slow start. Since the Cubs haven't been to a World Series since 1945, the beer sales at Caray's restaurant in down-town Chicago are ... you guessed it, 45 cents. I see many of you heading out the door right now.
- Request 2: Speaking of Harry Caray, may the man live forever and drink his Budweisers every day without people getting on his case. I think it's quite entertaining, and nobody else in broadcasting has the ... well, you know ... to drink during a ball game while on television.
- Request 3: May the Cubs install a fence in front of the dugout, strictly for the sole purpose of protecting the players. I say this in reference to a foul ball darting into the Cubs dugout Sunday afternoon and ending up in Ryne Sandberg's ear. Enough is enough. When does the bleeding stop?
- Request 4: May everybody realize that the Cubs have won a World Series. Now that I think about it, they have won just as many as the Atlanta Braves, meaning you people still have no room to talk.
- In fact, people rag the Cubs for going to 12 World Series and winning only one. Do I see the same trend going with Atlanta? I think so.
- Request 5: May the Cubs be known for their amazing streak _ not the current losing streak but the one when they win the remainder of their games to be the first team to ever lose 11 and win the next 151.
- Who said Cubs fans can't dream a little?

GSU basketball inks first spring signee

By Mike Davis
Sports Editor

Toby Frazier of Jacksonville (Fla.) Paxon High School has signed a national letter-of-intent to play basketball at GSU, head coach Gregg Polinsky announced Monday.

Frazier is the Eagles' first signee of the spring and third overall, joining junior college forward Cedric McGinnis (Butler County CC) and high school forward Tyler Kidd (Las Vegas Durango).

"The thing I like about this player is that he comes from a good basketball background," Polinsky said Tuesday afternoon. "He has really good vision and he is capable of being a leader on the floor, and that's what you look for in a true point guard."

Frazier, a 6-2, 170-pound point guard, averaged 17.1 points, 7.1 assists and 6.1 steals per game as a senior for the Golden Eagles. He twice earned all-city honors (first team as a senior, second team as a junior) from the Florida Times-Union and was a two-time coach's choice for first-team all-conference. Frazier was also an honorable mention 4-A all-state selection. He shot 41 percent from the field and 70 percent from the free throw line.

"We were fortunate to get him," Polinsky said. "Any time you can get a player that lives two or three hours away, it's really good. I really feel Toby will be a good addition to our program."

Paxon, under coach Tony Watson, finished 18-11 in each of the last two seasons. The Golden Eagles were district runners-up in 1996.

Frazier started every game except one (he missed a game due to illness this past season) during his four years with the varsity.

Frazier will join McGinnis and Kidd as the only three signees, plus Quincy Wright, who was recruited last year but failed to qualify due to academic concerns, has also received a scholarship to play next year.

"Quincy is getting situated right now, but he is in school now and he is on scholarship," Polinsky said. "He will have two years of eligibility waiting.

"We wanted to sign players with diversity, and these guys coming in certainly have that. Cedric is very athletic, and Tyler can run the floor real well. Toby is a true point guard who can lead.

"I'm pleased with who we have coming in. We signed some good people with talent and athleticism, and I'm looking forward to mixing the chemistry with the guys coming back."

The Eagles will return every player with the exception of Johna Seay, who missed the last five games of the 1996-97 season due to off-the-court reasons.

The Eagles will return two seniors, six juniors and a sophomore and will be looking to improve on a 10-18 record this past season.

EAGLE BASEBALL

Hans Knoepfel

HOLDER DOES IT AGAIN: Eagle catcher Michael Holder sent a home run over the left field fence in the 11th inning to give GSU the 6-5 win, their 26th of the season. The home run was Holder's 10th this year.

EAGLE BASEBALL NOTEBOOK

- PULLING IT TOGETHER: After a rugged 0-6 start, the GSU baseball team has pulled together to now go to six games over .500 (26-20) for the first time all year. The Eagles have also won seven of the last eight and 10 of the last 12. GSU has four more games remaining until the conference tournament, including its final Southern Conference series this weekend when Marshall comes calling.
- APRIL NO FOOLS: It was in April last year that last season's club made its run, compiling an 18-2 mark which fueled the run into the NCAA Atlantic Regional in May. The 1997 version is 7-7 in February, 11-10 in March and now 8-3 in April.
- TIED FOR FIRST: With a record of 15-6 in Southern Conference play, the Eagles are tied for first with East Tennessee State University, a team GSU took two of three games played earlier this season.
- LEADING LATE: The Eagles are 18-0 this season when leading after the seventh inning and 16-0 when ahead after eight innings. GSU's bullpen has won nine of 11 decisions (9-2) it has been involved in and has contributed seven saves. GSU's pen has also struck out 156 batters in 139.1 innings of work.
- HIT STREAKS: Steve Walson increased his hitting streak to 15 games when he hit a three-run homer in the fifth inning against Georgia State on Tuesay night. Also, Michael Holder increased his hitting streak to seven games.
- MEADOWS ASSISTS: Freshman right fielder Matt Meadows recorded his first collegiate assist when he threw out Georgia State catcher Mark Mortimer in the fifth inning.

CAMPUS SPOTLIGHT

Lady Owls extend streak to 24, sweep GSU

GSU News Service

The Kennesaw State Lady Owls, the number-three ranked team in NCAA Division-II, extended their win streak to 24 games by sweeping the Lady Eagles on Tuesday at Owl Field, 4-2 in the first game and 3-2 in the second.

The two losses leave GSU at 19-25 on the season.

In the first game, Kennesaw bolted out to an early 3-0 lead in the second inning.

GSU answered with two runs in its half of the fourth, sparked by Ashley Flemming's double to left, followed by a two-bagger by McCaine Lowder, scoring Flemming and Mandi Dunn.

That would be all the scoring the Lady Eagles would see in the first game, but the Lady Owls weren't finished, tacking up another marker in the fifth inning to claim the win.

Eagle baseball this weekend

The GSU baseball team will host Marshall this weekend, marking the last conference series. The double-header on Saturday is slated for a 4 p.m. start, and Sunday's game will start at 1 p.m. Look in the G-A sports pages for coverage.

Holder wins game off homer in 11th

By Mike Davis
Sports Editor

GSU catcher Michael Holder probably felt that getting up for his 8 a.m. class in the morning would be a little tougher than usual, considering his Eagles' game with Georgia State was in the 11th inning.

Therefore, with the count 3-and-0, he took the green light and parked the ball over the left-centerfield fence, giving the Eagles the 6-5 win Tuesday night at J.I. Clements Stadium.

"I was just up there looking for a pitch to drive," said a smiling Holder following the game. "They had not thrown me a good pitch the first three times, and I looked at Coach Baker and he didn't give me the take sign, so I just looked for one that I could drive."

And drive it he did, ending the game and finishing his night with by going 2-for-4 from the plate with two runs scored and one RBI.

"It had to end sometime," said GSU skipper Jack Stallings. "Why not end it like that. He hit a 3-and-0 count, and that's not easy to do. You get too anxious. He just took a pitch he could handle."

"I like to let the players with power to swing at a 3-and-0 pitch just to see if they can do it and to see if they have the patience. He saw a pitch he could drive and took it."

But the Eagles had to come from behind to get Holder into position to win the game. In fact, GSU trailed 5-1 until the sixth inning, when Steve Walson hit his 11th homer of the season, a three-run shot cutting the Panther lead to one.

Georgia State jumped to the lead early when a lead-off walk in the first inning to Nathan Knight resulted in a run when clean-up hitter Mark Mortimer knocked him in with an infield hit.

After the Eagles tacked on one to tie, the Panthers struck back with two runs in the fifth and two more in the sixth to take the four-marker advantage.

Walson's long-distance call, which extended his hitting streak to 15 games, then put the Eagles back in business.

"Walson got us back in the ball game," Stallings said. "We got behind early, but fortunately we kept our focus and kept our heads in the game."

The Eagles tied the game in the eighth inning by scoring one run in the oddest of fashions.

With the bases juiced and one out, Jamie Olvey sent a scorcher to third base, which was relayed to the plate for the force out at home.

Catcher Mortimer's attempt to turn the double-play by throwing it down to first failed when a throwing error prevented the play at first, scoring Walson who had come all the way from second.

They would then take the win in the 11th off Holders' 10th home run of the season.

"The fact that we are playing better and are more consistent than we were about eight or nine games ago makes me feel good, especially at this point of the season with the conference tournament approaching," Stallings said.

"Two or three weeks ago, we weren't doing that on a consistent basis. But the guys have battled and have been consistent. That makes you feel good."

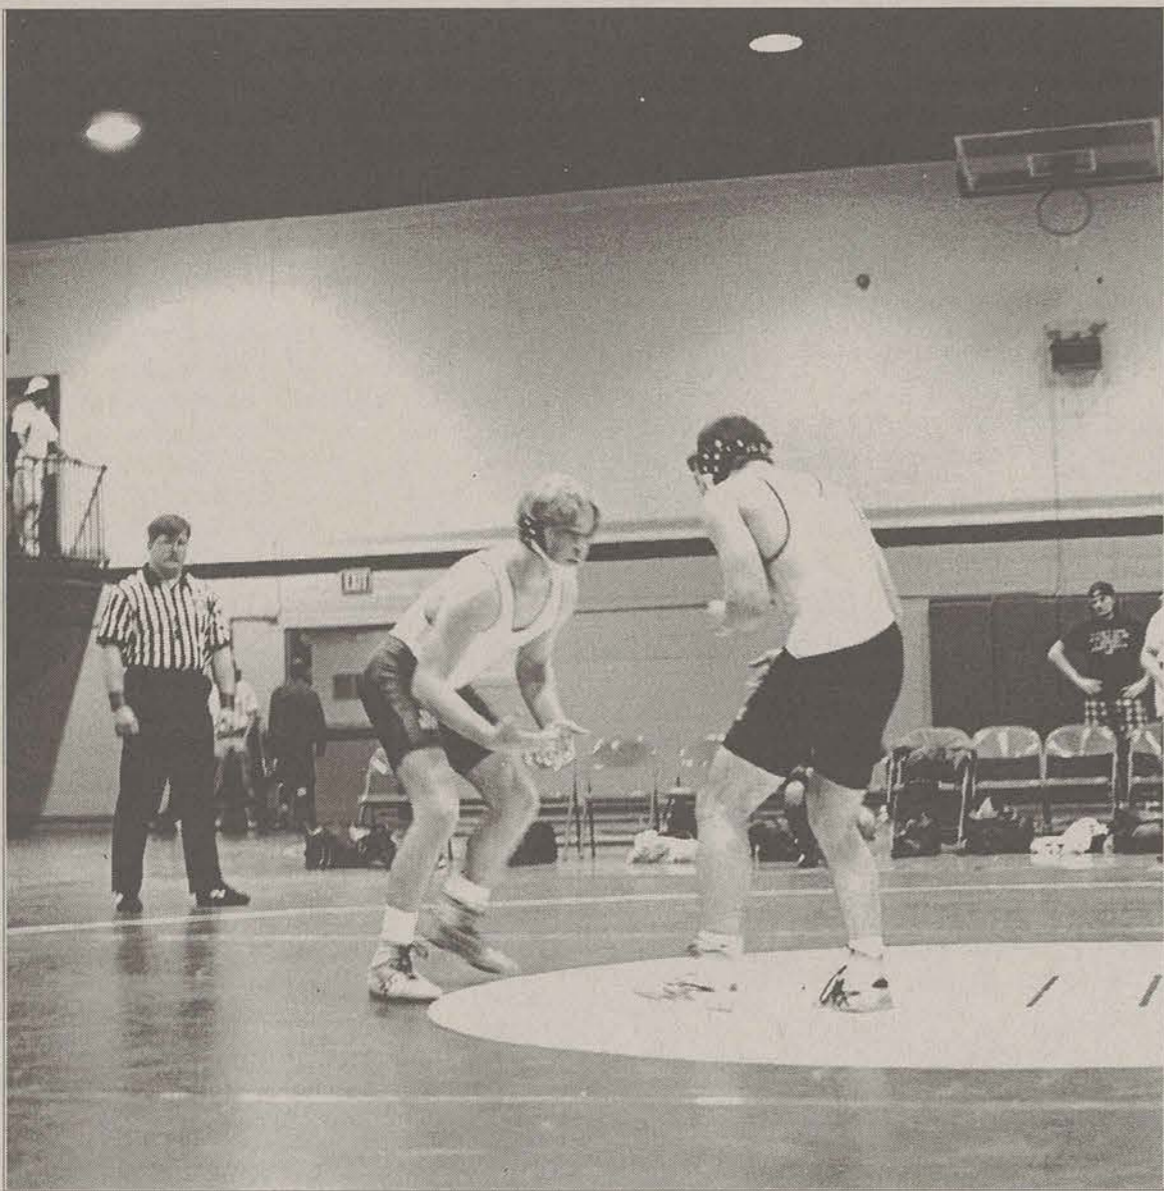

Tod Lee took the win in relief for the Eagles, while Walson's 2-for-5 effort led GSU at the plate.

Parkway named for Robinson

The Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. — In celebration of Jackie Robinson's entry into major league baseball 50 years ago this week, state lawmakers on Monday approved a bill to name a major highway after the Hall of Famer.

Both houses of the Legislature unanimously adopted legislation to name the Interborough Parkway in New York City after Robinson, who broke the color barrier when he became the first black to play for a major league baseball team.

The bill was sponsored in the Assembly by Democrat Jeffrion Aubry and in the Senate by Republican Serphin Maltese.

Both lawmakers are from Queens.

"This bill honors Jackie for changing the mindset of a nation and opening doors to minorities that have previously been closed," Maltese said of the Brooklyn Dodger.

The legislation designates the entire Interborough Parkway, from Jamaica Avenue in Brooklyn to Queens Boulevard in Queens, Jackie Robinson Parkway.

The Interborough Parkway passes by the cemetery in Cypress Hill where Robinson is buried. Robinson played for the Dodgers in Brooklyn.

Sanders' tribute to Robinson results in dispute with NL

By Joe Kay

The Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Deion Sanders' attire started as a tribute to Jackie Robinson and turned into a National League dispute. Ultimately, he wound up changing the Cincinnati Reds' uniforms.

Now, he hopes there's no more ruckus over shirt sleeves.

The Reds have decided to shorten the sleeves on their road jerseys to avoid fines from the league and bruised feelings in the clubhouse. Sanders went to the short-sleeve look to pay tribute to Jackie Robinson, a violation of league rules that require everyone on a team to wear sleeves the same length.

"It's an issue that shouldn't be an issue," Sanders said Friday. "We're not going to blow it out of proportion. We've all gotten together as a team. We're going to rectify it the best way we can."

"One thing we don't want to do is make it out to be a race issue. I'm just trying to pay a tribute to him."

Sanders saw a picture of Robinson on a cereal box in spring training and decided to pull up his pants legs and wear his uniform sleeves short to emulate him.

When NL senior vice president Katy Feeney saw the shortened sleeves during a game in Colorado this week, she warned the club that it would be fined for an improper uniform.

Sanders' teammates urged general manager Jim Bowden to adopt the short-sleeve look for road uniforms, which would satisfy the league's concerns. As long as they all have short sleeves, there is no violation.

"I think if you're going to succeed, you succeed as a team in unity," Bowden said Friday. "The issue over the sleeves is not something I want to divide the clubhouse."

"The intention was to honor Jackie Robinson, and we're happy that the Reds can do it in a way that's going to attract national attention."

The sleeves change got national attention at the start of a season honoring the Brooklyn Dodger who broke baseball's color barrier 50 years ago. Teams are wearing patches commemorating the anniversary.

Sanders decided to take it one step further.

"This is the ultimate way to pay tribute to him. If I go to a park and watch a football game and see kids out there with bandanas and gloves unfastened and the same style of face mask, I would be thrilled," said Sanders, who wears his Dallas Cowboys uniform that way.

"I feel if Jackie Robinson was in the stands or watching TV and saw a guy running around there with a lot of enthusiasm portraying the look he had, I think he'd be thrilled. I'm not doing it for a fashion statement."

The league drew a line at one player altering a uniform.

"The league's concern is what happens next," Bowden said. "They don't want one thing to lead to another. They have a specific rule (on sleeve length) they can point to and if he's in violation, the club can be fined a substantial amount for every game he's in violation. We're not going to test it."

Manager Ray Knight consented to the change after players told him they supported Sanders. The pitchers particularly like the short-sleeve shirt because it gives their arms more freedom of motion.

"I said no problem. I just wanted to make sure that the pitchers would be comfortable with it," Knight said. "I asked Jeff Brantley about it, and he said it was unilateral. So I gave it my blessing."

Woods hits road promoting new restaurant

By Bruce Smith

The Associated Press

MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. — Fresh from his record-breaking Masters victory, Tiger Woods hit the promotional circuit Monday. He cut the ribbon for his new restaurant here, then headed up the coast to do the same thing in Atlantic City.

Woods threw golf balls, T-shirts and hats into the crowd of about 500 people who met him in Myrtle Beach, about 200 miles from where he made history Sunday at Augusta National.

"I'm still on cloud nine from yesterday," he said. "My (green) jacket? I slept with it last night."

Woods, 21, is now the youngest Masters champion. His 270 total broke the Masters record by one stroke. His 12-stroke margin over second place Tom Kite also was a record.

Woods opened the Official All Star Cafe, a theme restaurant he owns with other sports celebrities, and later appeared at the New Jersey restaurant along the Atlantic City Boardwalk.

The world's newest favorite athlete elicited thunderous cheers from the crowd of about 2,000 people as he walked a 320-foot red carpet laid out on the Boardwalk in front of Trump Taj Mahal Casino Resort.

"He's an inspiration to the young black kids. They need that," said construction worker Cliff Flowers, 46, of Atlantic City, who is black.

Woods attributed his success to his parents and their love.

"Parents should take time with their children to earn their trust and respect. And children should do the same. If they do that, I think society will be a better place," he told fans.

In Myrtle Beach, the crowd broke into chants of "Tiger! Tiger!" as they waited outside the restaurant with its giant black-and-white star and two gold torches above its entrance.

A sign taped across the top of the door proclaimed "Congratulations Tiger Woods." Just across the street are Planet Hollywood and the Hard Rock Cafe.

A dozen or so cars stopped along busy U.S. 17 nearby, and fans got out to watch from their car roofs.

"It's exciting to open my own place here in Myrtle Beach, which is probably the golf capital of the world," Woods said.

Mayor Bob Grissom presented Woods with a key to the city.

"You understand that won't unlock the vault. You won that yesterday," Grissom said.

"When I knew I had won the tournament is when I hugged my mom and pop," Woods said.

The Official All Star Cafe, a division of Planet Hollywood Inc., has video displays at which customers can see great plays in sports history.

It includes the Tiger Woods Clubhouse, with trophies and other golf memorabilia.

All right, all right, all right — as the notorious Jim Morrison used to say before he began an important monologue. Well, here is my important monologue.

Such an exciting week coming up. Ooooo, I get chills just thinking about it. Well honestly, I don't think anything coming to Statesboro would give me the chills. Unless, of course, Elvis was going to perform, then we could talk about come goose bumps.

But anyway, Spider Monkey will be at Blind Willie's tomorrow night hosting a CD release party for their new studio album, "Insatiable." I am sure the Spider Monkey junkies just got the chills. Edith's Wish will be opening up.

Next Wednesday, local favorite S.M.O. will hit the stage at Blind Willie's. Support your local music — check them out.

Legends will be holding their spring concert this Saturday with none other than Drivin' n' Cryin'. Yes, the creators of the local anthem, "Straight to Hell," will be on hand to deliver their southern rock. The show starts at 7 p.m. Tickets can be purchased at On Cue in the mall and at the Woodin I strongly urge you to go. Drivin' n' Cryin' puts on such a high energy, sweat-filled show.

At least I can speak from personal experience when I say that the last D'n'C show I went to was an absolute blast. If you consider any of what I say to be worthy, check them out Saturday night.

For those interested in the theater, "The Cave Dwellers," a play based on Saroyan's reaction to the absurdist playwrights, is currently being performed in McCroan Auditorium and will run through Saturday night.

The play, directed by David Addington, starts at 8 p.m. Tickets can be purchased at the door and the prices range as follows: adults, $6; children, seniors and faculty and staff, $4; students (with ID), $2. For more information, call 681-0123.

If you enjoy jazz tunes, the GSU Music Department will be hosting a visiting jazz artist recital tonight in the Foy Recital Hall. The quartet, featuring Pat Hill on piano, Bruce Spradley on brass, Jon Wacker on percussion and Bill Schmid on trumpet, will no doubt impress you.

And finally, Eagle Cinema at the Russell Union, Network Event Theater and HBO will be presenting the HBO original program, "Spawn and Reverb" next Wednesday night at 8 p.m. in the Russell Union Theatre.

The movie is known for its live and exclusive performances. The St. Louis-based grunge band, Wilco, will be appearing in the movie.

That's the scoop, and I am outta here.

ON CAMPUS REVIEW

The Magellan String Quartet performed their Haydn Festival with 'outstanding prowess'

By Patrick Doyle
Staff Writer

The Magellan String Quartet performed the first half of their Haydn Festival Monday night at the Foy Fine Arts Recital Hall.

The festival was the complete presentation of Joseph Haydn's Opus 76, "Erdody," which consists of six separate string quartet works.

The string quartet is comprised of violinists Ryan Kho and Laura Tomlin, Carl Purdy, viola, and Ruth Berry who doubled as the quartet's cellist and the narrator for the evening.

The quartet, which has been together since 1990, has its own concert series in Augusta and has performed extensively throughout the Southeast.

Ruth Berry opened the performance with brief notes about Haydn's work, then followed the first string quartet in G major.

This piece was a work in four movements as were all the compositions. The first being an up tempo movement of great length, followed by a slower movement of equal proportion. The third movement, a shorter work of a medium pace, was followed by a brilliant finale.

The quartet as a whole performed magnificently. Each of Haydn's works required brilliant technique and execution which the players seemed to give with little effort.

Amanda Scott

The Magellan String quartet: Ryan Kho, Laura Tomlin, Carl Purdy and Ruth Berry delivered a stunning performance Monday night.

Some movements were beautiful, harmonious works that presented precise tone quality while others were works of flaming speed and intonation.

The second piece in D minor had a few intonation glitches but, again, was an overall masterpiece.

My only complaint of the evening was the horrific compilation of the program notes. The notes were presented in a nice manner, but the content seemed convoluted and had little cohesiveness.

I know all you grammar gurus who walked out of the recital hall early are laughing your heads off, but let's hear you play.

In the end I'll take the poor English with the amazing performance any day.

The Magellan String Quartet is a group of four folks who do what they do exceptionally well. Those of you who were fortunate enough to experience their performance may not have appreciated its length, but you have to admit, it was a performance of outstanding prowess.

Those of you who weren't in the cultured mood Monday or Tuesday night — you definitely missed out.

CD REVIEW

The 'Sweetness' is back with 'Blue Sky on Mars', providing innovative new tunes

By Robbie Bruce
Staff Writer

Matthew Sweet has finally released his long-awaited album following "100% Fun." And, unlike past albums of Sweet's, this one has more than one or two marketable songs.

"Blue Sky On Mars" is the pinnacle of Sweet's genius. If his past albums showed signs of experimentation at some points, then this one is an experienced, mature Matthew Sweet, exhibiting a brilliance that absolutely no other individual songwriter in the world today can present.

The album begins with a nod to the Beatles' "White" album. "Come To California" is a close cousin to "Why Don't We Do It In the Road." With so many people crying "Beatle rip-off" these days, it's nice that someone can do it and be almost totally discrete about it.

Richard Lloyd does not show up on this album as he has on previous Matthew Sweet albums. His guitar mastery is as much to blame for the success of Sweet's past songs as Sweet is himself. Without his assistance for this album, I became worried about how the bridges and solos would turn out.

Surprisingly, Sweet's sense of songwriting and ever-improving instrumental skills have left no void in Lloyd's absence. "Behind the Smile" shows the jangly

'60s guitar sound that is always apparent in Sweet's better songs. There's a nice solo, too. It's like Lloyd never really left.

"Where You Get Love" is another shrine to Matthew's advancement on the guitar. The shrill 3-note lead-guitar part is like something from "Girlfriend." That's probably why it works so well above the blurry power-chords that drive the song.

"Into Your Drug" is a groovy tribute to Sweet's biggest influence from England, The Ed Hester Band. If you've ever heard Hester's "Third Grade Love," then you are hearing it done again through the '90s technology of Sweet.

Matthew hires great drummers to help him this time. Mellotron parts and synthesizer snatches boldly assume dominance on this album where they have never been used before by Sweet.

But his reliance on simple songwriting around three or four chords is the secret to it all. No matter how awful the songs are mixed (and they are not mixed awfully), one could still find enjoyment from the eleven blend of rhythm and melody, always subtly audible.

Matthew showed up on Regis and Kathie Lee last week. It is not often that an alternative rock star shows up on a show unpopular to most of his consumers, so there must be a reason that he did it. Interpret it how you will. I think Matthew knew that Kathie Lee smells good and he just wanted a big whiff.

MOVIE REVIEW

'Anaconda' proves unvenomous with low-grade special effects, an average plot and basic horror movie tactics

By Eric Bray
Staff Writer

"Anaconda" is the latest in a long string of commercial films to utilize advancements in new special effects technology to convey a not-so-new plot.

Decades ago films like "Jaws" and "Piranha" employed the same theme of man terrorized by the animal kingdom, so you can't expect the story line to be too fresh.

You could, however, expect state-of-the-art special effects to add a new dimension of fear to the horror. But if you do in this case, you'll be sorely disappointed.

Those who are familiar with the films of Peruvian director Luis Llosa should harbor no high expectations for "Anaconda" in the first place, though.

In fact, most people look back on his last film, "The Specialist," as a painful squandering of two hours of their lives.

Nevertheless, considering that "Anaconda" isn't wholly without merit, it can certainly be regarded as a step up for Llosa. For starters, the film sports a strong cast (although how they were lured into this project is baffling).

Jennifer Lopez stars as the director of a documentary film crew in search of a tribe hidden in the Amazon.

Their production runs aground, though, when the local fauna (the snakes in particular) turns hostile.

Lopez is definitely an up-and-coming actress after her performances in "Selena" and "Blood and Wine" earlier this year, and this one reveals her ability to effectively balance sensuality with strength as a female action lead. Rarely do these types of roles exhibit the degree of power and believability that Lopez displays.

Ice Cube, as the film crew's cameraman, plays her partner in battling the forty-foot snakes. After numerous performances in the past few years ("Friday," "Higher Learning") it seems that he's traded his microphone for the acting chair.

Given the film's cast and setting, he may seem to be an odd choice for the role, but he fits in well, and considering performances by most music stars in the film industry, he proves his competence as an actor.

The villainous Jon Voight ("Mission: Impossible," "Rosewood") portrays a snake-poacher who implicates the crew in the dangerous expedition.

For a man whose career has been sparse for the past decade, Voight seems to be on a roll this year.

Unfortunately, this role seems a bit beneath someone whose status as an actor could be thought of as "legendary."

Furthermore, his character comes from Paraguay, which is ludicrous considering the closest Voight comes to a dark complexion is age spots. His ridiculous Latin American accent does little to enhance the plausibility either.

If you noticed Eric Stolz ("Killing Zoe," "Prophecy") in the previews and you're a big fan of his, don't get too excited.

As the anthropologist of the crew, he's incapacitated early on and is forgotten throughout most of the movie.

The supporting cast includes

Kahri Wuhrer (best known from MTV's "Remote Control" and "Sandblast") and Jonathan Hyde ("Jumanji").

"Anaconda" maintains a strong pacing of tension and action throughout but frequently reverts to shock value and cheap horror flick conventions (often involving more gore than the PG-13 rating might suggest).

You can't help but groan through the pseudo-tense low-camera dollies as soon as a young couple sneaks off into the jungle for some hanky-panky.

The biggest let-down of all is the shoddy special-effects sequences, which although visually stimulating, offer no chance to lose the impression that the snakes are anything other than the work of poor animatronics rather than live reptiles.

If you have a fear of snakes, the concept behind the film may seem scary.

But unless you have an intense phobia for cheap computer imaging, "Anaconda" is far from frightening.

Georgia high school student forms club to oppose death penalty

The Associated Press

WARNER ROBINS, Ga. — Matt Stone's classmates don't mind that he's started a club at Houston County High School to oppose the death penalty.

Most don't plan to join, however.

"I want to get other students to question the laws and politics that affect us all," said Stone, 16, who wears a T-shirt reading: "I oppose the death penalty. Don't kill for me."

So far, only six of the school's 1,500 students have expressed an interest in joining.

"I believe in the death penalty," said Christy Stacks, a 16-year-old sophomore. "I think some people convicted of rape should receive the death penalty."

The lack of members doesn't surprise Stone, given that Houston County, a conservative central Georgia community, largely supports the death penalty. Membership will rise as teens learn more about the organization, he said.

The group is believed to be one of the first such high school clubs in the nation, according to the National Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty, a Washington-based clearinghouse for death-penalty information.

"I WANT TO GET
OTHER STUDENTS TO QUESTION THE LAWS
AND POLITICS THAT AFFECT US ALL."

—MATT STONE,
HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT

Principal Sandra Neal said Stone met the requirements to begin the club and she couldn't deny him that right.

But Bibb County District Attorney Charles Weston balked at the club.

"They call themselves 'Students for Life.' What life are they talking about? They're talking about the life of convicted murderers, and that's the wrong message," he said. "The purpose of the death-penalty law is to protect innocent life. How would these students feel if a family member is brutally murdered?"

Stone, who was in favor of the death penalty until reading John Grisham's "The Chamber," said his answer to that question is always the same: "I hope and pray that I'm never in that situation. Hopefully, with education, we will overcome those natural feelings and do what is right and just, and that is to stop state killing."

Ben Jealous, a spokesman for the National Coalition to Abolish the Death Penalty, applauded Stone's efforts.

"You know if you sit around and talk with old folks, they're constantly talking about the dumbing down of youth in this country," Jealous said. "But then you see young people like Matt Stone, who is taking an honest look at the system and taking action, and it's inspiring."

NAACP complaints of racial discrimination in Worth County public schools causes federal investigation

The Associated Press

SYLVESTER, Ga. — Federal officials are investigating complaints by the NAACP of racial discrimination in Worth County public schools.

Representatives of the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights in Atlanta met with Superintendent Alan Kimbro to discuss the district's positions on the complaints.

The representatives met with citizens and Worth County officials of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to document complaints.

The NAACP filed a formal complaint against the school district Jan. 8.

The meeting was closed to the media, but Worth County NAACP chapter President Mary Shipp said about 75 people attended, including parents and school children who voiced claims of discrimination.

Kimbro said he expects to receive written suggestions for resolving the complaints in a week or two.

He said he opted for mediation instead of a formal investigation when the complaints were filed.

"I think the complaints are legitimate issues, true or not," Kimbro said. "For that reason, he complaints won't be taken lightly."

Mrs. Shipp said the black community views the allegations against the district as serious.

"These allegations are true," she said. "Things are really bad for the Afro-American community and the school is a reflection of the community. The problems can't be fixed overnight but they can be fixed."

In the past, Mrs. Shipp said, she has suggested the district form a community advisory committee to represent minorities in dealing with minority concerns in schools. Kimbro said he supports forming a biracial group to serve that purpose.

"The fact is we're working with both parties and we're just trying to effect some kind of resolution," said Roger Murphy, spokesman for the Education Department in Washington. He said department intervention is routine.
