Controversy clouds the SGA election campaign

By Stephen M. Clark
Staff Writer

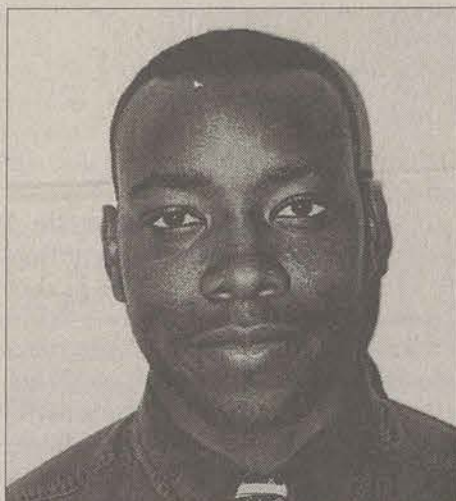

Controversy entered the SGA election campaign last week as two members of the Derek Burns ticket announced they no longer want to be associated with the ticket. Reginald Wade and Tawanna Collins made the decision based on "circumstances that go against their moral and spiritual convictions."

Burns has refused to answer the allegations made by Wade and Collins.

While Wade and Collins say they no longer want to be associated with the Burns ticket, on the ballots their names will appear on the ticket for their desired positions with Wade running for executive vice president and Collins as vice president of finance.

In a written statement, Wade said he no longer wants to be considered a part of the Burns ticket saying that he felt personal agendas had got in the way of teamwork.

"Although my name appears on the ballot as executive vice president, it should appear as president because that is what I set out to do," Wade said.

Wade is asking that when the students vote that they leave the space for the office of president blank or to write his name in.

Wade said that he is not upset with Derek Burns, who is the candidate for president.

"This is not a personal attack on Derek and the other members, yet it is a wake-up call to all students at Georgia Southern University," Wade said.

Collins also turned in a written statement explaining that until the candidates confirmation meeting she believed Burns would not be running for reelection, but only serving as an advisor and that Wade would appear on the ticket as a candidate for president and herself the candidate for executive vice president.

"I am in no way denouncing the ticket, but from this point on I would no longer wish to be considered a part of it. I am a firm believer in honesty and integrity and in this situation I detect hidden agendas," Collins said.

Burns and the other members of his ticket Charles Carroll and Allison Oasis, expressed no hard feelings to Wade's and Collins' decisions.

Burns said he still believes that ticket will work strongly together.

GSU students should prepare for the semester transition

By Farrah Senn
Assistant News Editor

Students need to meet with their advisors during fall 1997 to prepare for the transition to the semester system in fall 1998, Charlene Black, Associate Vice President of Academic Affairs, said.

"If you're going to be taking semester courses, you need to begin planning early and determine the courses you will need to take under the new system," she said.

Advisors will have equivalency charts by fall 1997. The charts will show the semester equivalents of quarter system requirements.

Students will need to meet with their advisors and determine which classes they need to take to satisfy degree requirements under the new system, Black said.

Degree requirements will not change and will still be determined by the catalog

Local restaurants apply for liquor licenses

By Kevin Bonsor
News Editor

Some local restaurants could soon have expanded drink menus as the number of establishments applying for liquor by the drink licenses grows. It's just a matter of the applications for the liquor licenses being processed.

On March 19, the day following the controversial liquor referendum, several Statesboro restaurants began inquiring about applications for the licenses.

A little more than 12 hours after the referendum passed, representatives from both Dingus Magees' and Southern Arcade completed forms to begin the process of acquiring a license.

Archibald's, Buffalo's Cafe, El Sombrero, Woodin Nikel and the new Longhorn Steakhouse soon followed the lead of Dingus Magees' and Southern Arcade in applying for licenses themselves.

Larry Owens, owner of Dingus Magees', said one reason he applied for the liquor license was because he doesn't want to be beat by the competition.

"We got to stay up with everybody else," Owens said. "Because of the competition we would have to have it [liquor by the drink]."

Owens said bigger profits wasn't the sole factor in his decision to apply for a liquor license. He said initial profits from liquor sales may be good, but when it levels out, liquor won't increase profits that much.

"I don't think it will really make that big a difference," Owens said.

City Clerk Judy McCorkle said that the applications will take six to eight weeks because all applicants must be fingerprinted and have background checks run on them by the Georgia Bureau of Investigation, which means that the first applications that were filled out in March won't be approved until at least early May.

Owens said that he felt the application would not be processed and approved before July.

However, restaurants who receive licenses before July and

Mike Spilker

Statesboro restaurants which applied for liquor licenses in March, may be serving liquor buy early July.

begin serving liquor before July 1, which begins the new fiscal year, will be required to pay a half a year's fee of $1,250 on top of the $150 application fee and $625 for a beer and wine license.

The restaurants would then have to turn around and pay $2,500 for a full year's liquor license in July in addition to $1,250 for a beer and wine license.

SGA presidential candidates discuss issues

By Kevin Bonsor
News Editor

This year's SGA presidential race has students deciding between the current SGA president, Derek Burns, and Chad Elkins, who is most commonly associated with Students for a Better Statesboro, a political action committee that campaigned for the passage of the liquor referendum. Both candidates have said they don't want to concentrate on past accomplishments, but rather on the issues that currently concern students.

Here is how the candidates stand on some of the issues.

Attendance policies

Elkins has said he would like to follow the lead a lot of other colleges who do not have attendance policies.

"Professors could still use other incentives to get students in class," Elkins said.

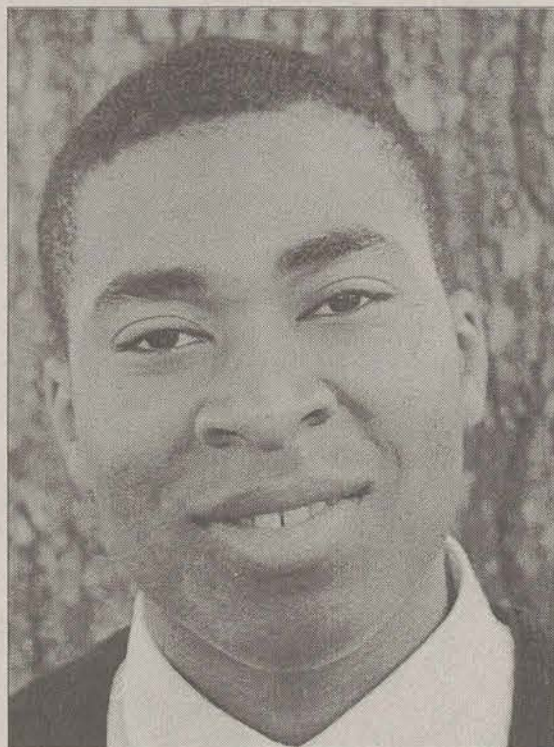

He added he would like to keep attendance policies in PE classes.

"They are in class to learn how to exercise and if they are not in class they won't learn that," Elkins said.

Burns also believes that going to class should be up to the individual students and not required.

"First and foremost it's the students' choice to come to college, it's not mandated," Burns said. "If a student doesn't go to class it's his or her choice."

Proposed change to meal

SGA President Derek Burns has proposed an issue to install parking meters throughout the campus to reduce the amount of parking tickets.

plans to include fast food

The first issue on Elkins platform is establishing GSU meal plan access at local fast food chains.

"Most students don't have meal plans," Elkins said. "Those students possibly eat fast food once a day."

He said that in comparison the price of the meals at most fast food restaurants are about the same as a meal on the meal plan, and that the school wouldn't lose money on the deal.

Burns said that he thinks that allowing students to go to local fast food chains off campus and use their meal plans would wipe out on-campus restaurants.

He instead proposed having fast food chains come on campus, which is being discussed as a possibility for the future. This way, Burns said, the money would be rerouted to the school.

SGA presidential candidate Chad Elkins has proposed to change the current meal plans to include local fast food restaurants.

Tom Palfy, director of food services, said that the idea of establishing GSU meal plan access to local fast food chains is not really feasible.

"We're just not set up with that system," Palfy said. "It's not something we want to consider right now."

Campus security

Elkins said that he would like to increase availability and efficiency of campus security to curb violent crimes by adding call boxes around and on campus.

"They do a fine job, but with the recent crimes they need to beef up a little," Elkins said.

He couldn't say exactly how it would be financed, but that putting up several call boxes on campus and in the surrounding area was a feasible idea.

Capt. Michael Russell, of GSU Public Safety, said there was a call box at one time near Olliff Hall, but it was struck by lightning a year or two ago. Russell said there have been discussions about installing call boxes on campus.

Elkins also said he would also like to see Students Against Campus Crime play a bigger role on campus.

Burns, whose platform last year included reducing campus crime, said that he had tried to do something with Students Against Campus Crime, but it never got off the ground. Burns has proposed the idea of setting up a neighborhood watch program among the apartment complexes.

Housing zones

Currently, there is a city ordinance in Statesboro that prohibits more than three unrelated people living in a house.

Elkins said he wants to begin a campaign to abolish the local ordinance by circulating petitions and collect 10,000 to 12,000 signatures.

Fired teacher of the year files suit to get job back

The Associated Press

SAVANNAH, Ga.—A former Chatham County teacher of the year is asking a federal court to strike down the school system's drug-testing policy and order it to rehire her.

Sherry Hearn, an American history teacher at Windsor Forest High School, was fired last year for refusing to take a drug test, although she later agreed to take it and passed.

In her suit she asked that the Savannah-Chatham County Board of Education be forced to repay legal fees, back pay and unspecified damages for alleged violations of her constitutional rights.

"By nature, I don't like the spotlight," Mrs. Hearn said. "I'm a very private person. But I'm also an outspoken person, and this kind of thing comes with being outspoken."

School officials said Mrs. Hearn was fired because she violated the employment contract requiring her to submit to drug testing when ordered by a supervisor.

"Nobody has said she used drugs," school board member William R. Knight III said. "She was fired because she violated the contract that she signed. If you don't like part of your contract, the time to protest isn't after you've signed the contract."

"I regret that we lost a very good teacher. But the board feels very strongly about its drug-free workplace policy, and we feel equally strongly that we can't pick and choose who gets to follow the rules," said board President Karen Matthews.

Campus police claimed they found a partially smoked marijuana cigarette in Mrs. Hearn's car April 4, 1996, during a random search. She refused to take a urine test, citing a constitutional opposition to random drug searches and tests. The next day she passed a drug test.

Gerry Weber, legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union in Atlanta, said the case warrants national attention.

"We've seen a lot of individual rights struck down as a result of the drug war," Weber said.

Cop tickets vehicle with dead man inside

The Associated Press

PROVIDENCE— As a 44-year-old North Kingstown man lay dead in his pickup truck from a gunshot wound to the head, a Providence patrolman ticketed the vehicle for illegal parking.

The incident occurred about five hours after Joseph Kelley was shot.

His body wasn't discovered earlier because neighbors failed to call police after hearing shots.

Capt. Dennis Simoneau, director of the Police Department's uniformed division, attempted to explain how a patrolman could have missed a bloody body in a vehicle he was ticketing.

"If the guy had been sitting at the wheel, there would have been no excuse (for failing to see him)," he said. "But whereas he was lying across a dark seat and in dark clothes and (in) a dark car, it's understandable that the policeman might have missed him at 4 in the morning."

James Opella said he heard shots and looked out his window to see a man in a hooded jacket run off "like a shot out of a rocket."

"I didn't want to make a report of gunshots fired if it was just someone shooting a gun and running," he said.

Opella said he thought nothing of the pickup, which he had seen in the area before.

Charles Rodriguez said he heard a "loud pop and an echo."

"Once I heard the echo I knew it was a shot," he said.

"Then I heard a pause, about 20 seconds, then I heard another shot. Honestly, I thought it was just someone shooting in the air."

Another man said he knew the victim as "Joe from Olneyville," but said he would not tell that to police because he did not want to endure lengthy questioning.

His attitude angered Antoinette Duarte, who overheard the comment.

"That could be you lying there," she said. "There's too much violence on the streets. Too much violence in the streets because everyone wants to be quiet."

Fire started when reptile knocks over heatlamp

The Associated Press

NAPA— Iggy the Iguana was blamed for starting a three-alarm fire at a high school.

The pesky reptile, named "Iggy," apparently used its tail to knock over a heat lamp in a science classroom, igniting combustible material nearby, Fire Capt. Scott Sedgley said.

A night custodian reported the fire at Vintage High School. Heavy smoke poured from the school building as firefighters arrived.

The blaze damaged six classrooms and caused $750,000 damage to a science building. Principal Stan Smart said portable classrooms would be brought in to replace the lost space.

Iggy, found alive in its cage but slightly injured, was sent to Napa High School for safekeeping.

Sedgley said he knew of three other cases in the past five years in which a reptile caused a fire by knocking over a heat lamp.

Boy must read the diary of Anne Frank as punishment for Anti-Semitic vandalism

The Associated Press

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y.— Education is the aim of a sentence under which a 14-year-old boy who admitted painting swastikas along a Mamaroneck nature trail must read the diary of Anne Frank and visit a Holocaust museum.

"Graffiti is not something to be taken lightly," wrote Westchester Family Court Judge Ingrid Braslow. "Each time a swastika strikes, regardless of the location, it represents a fear and a threat to all of us that what happened in Germany in the 1930s could happen in this country."

The boy, whose name has not been made public, was a native of France whose father worked for the French Consulate in Manhattan. He was arrested in September and admitted juvenile delinquency in January.

In an opinion published last week, Judge Braslow ordered the Mamaroneck teenager to:

Spend four Saturdays cleaning up the graffiti from rocks and trees along the trail.

Undergo counseling.

Spend a year on probation.

Visit a Holocaust exhibit in Manhattan.

Write a book report on "The Diary of a Young Girl" by Anne Frank, a Jewish teen-ager who hid from the Nazis with her family in Amsterdam until being discovered and sent to death camps.

SGA election: choosing between bad and worse

When GSU students vote for SGA president this week, it is unlikely that they will be voting for the best person for the job because the best candidate must not be running.

This year, we are forced to decide which candidate might do less damage, cross our fingers and hope for the best.

On one hand, there is Derek Burns, the current SGA president, but he can't even manage the affairs of his own ticket.

Both Reginald Wade, candidate for executive vice president, and Tawanna Collins, candidate for vice president of finance, have mutinied against him.

Both Wade and Collins say that they were under the impression that Burns was not running for president, and they accuse Burns of having hidden agendas and putting his "personal agendas or political gain" ahead of the good of the team and the university.

Burns, in an act which epitomizes his overall reluctance to take action, has failed to answer the allegations by Wade and Collins.

GSU students should be wary of trusting a candidate whose own ticket members call his actions dishonest and who refuses to accept his obligation to respond publicly to those allegations.

If elected, would he then accept the obligation to respond to any criticisms of his administration? That seems unlikely.

What's the alternative? Most would assume Chad Elkins, but do we want a president with no SGA experience, who takes credit for the work of a whole city in passing a liquor referendum and seems to crave the spotlight more than anything else?

Elkins would have the entire GSU campus believe he single-handedly passed the recent liquor by the drink referendum. In all actuality, the election was a landslide and would have passed even if Elkins had never stepped foot in Statesboro.

This is a man who wants his name in the papers and his face on TV and gets upset when he doesn't receive the media coverage he wants. Recently, Elkins complained to The George-Anne for not reporting on him giving out pizza to students and again complained when we didn't report on a meeting he had with Erk Russell. Both situations were clearly attempts to gain free publicity.

Because an SGA president must serve the student body, any candidate for the office should be more concerned with the issues than whether or not his picture is taken.

Please make your voices heard tomorrow and Thursday at the polls, even if it just amounts to a choice between a bad candidate and an even worse one. We definitely don't want to get stuck with the worst of the two.

Cliffs Notes: to ban or not to ban, that is the question

If the thought of reading Herman Melville's "Moby Dick" in totality terrifies you or if you're the type of student who cannot live without those little yellow and black condensed works known as Cliffs Notes, then don't ever plan on transferring to Villanova University in Pennsylvania.

A petition signed by 90 faculty members prompted the administration to order the bookstore to stop selling Cliffs Notes.

Their reasons for doing so should be obvious to any red-blooded American college student. Reading Cliffs' 96-page rendition of "Moby Dick" is much easier and less time-consuming than reading Melville's 595-page version. And undeniably, many of us are tempted to take this easy way out.

But is banning Cliffs Notes really the answer?

First of all, Villanova officials have said that this decision is more of a "symbolic stand" because they realize that they cannot prevent the local Wal-Mart from stocking the popular paperbacks. Therefore, students will continue to use them, with or without the college's approval.

AMANDA CREWS

Understandably, Cliffs Notes Inc. of Lincoln, Neb., doesn't think this is the answer. They maintain that their guides should be used in addition to, not in lieu of, the reading. When students use these guides as they are intended, the company says, the students' appreciation and understanding of the literature is deepened.

To drive their point home, the company took out a full-page ad in the Villanova student newspaper last week accusing the school of censorship.

Now, I believe the company is on shaky ground in their allegations of censorship, but I do agree that Cliffs Notes do have a valid place in students' study regimens if they are used properly.

For students who have difficulty deciphering the language of Shakespeare, for example, Cliffs Notes can serve as valuable tools in decoding the information. Teachers who are truly concerned about the learning process should encourage students to seek out any help available in understanding the reading assignments, including the dreaded Cliffs Notes.

The issue, then, is not the use of these study guides but rather the use of them to the exclusion of the assigned reading.

What's the solution?

Sad to say, the solution first requires work and diligence on the part of the teachers. If those same 90 faculty members who signed the petition at Villanova to ban Cliffs Notes had exerted just as much time and energy in demanding academic excellence in their classrooms, then the problem would soon disappear.

Tests should require students to have more than the superficial understanding offered by the Cliffs Notes. We would like to hope that teachers are testing for a deeper understanding, but many must not. If they were, the problem of students reading the Cliffs Notes instead of the works would solve itself based on the simple principles of behavior modification.

Even animals, psychologists maintain, learn to modify their behavior in response to positive and negative reinforcements. If we agree that college students are at a higher level than most other animals, then those students who read only the Cliffs Notes should receive a negative reinforcement, in the form of a failing grade, for doing so. Eventually, then, they will learn to modify their behavior by reading the assigned material instead of just the Cliffs Notes.

Therefore, if teachers believe many students are continuing to read the Cliffs Notes instead of the works themselves, that is much more of a statement about their own abilities to test their students' knowledge than it is about the lazy study habits of the students themselves.

Women must empower themselves in order to be successful

Feminine empowerment is the way to the success for women today. Many may ask what is feminine empowerment and how can women use it to improve their quality of life?

According to author Jean Raffa, it involves ways to heighten the awareness about the positive life-enhancing aspects of the feminine principles.

In other words, women need to use their feminine qualities to enhance their lives in a society where equal respect and reverence for the masculine and feminine principles is still being challenged.

When our college careers are over, what are we, as women, going to do about our careers? Will the decision be based on a male companion's career decision?

Women need to become more concerned about self-assertion and less concerned about relationships that are too often dysfunctional.

There is something about relationships and being in love that causes otherwise intelligent, cautious and rational women to act with reckless abandon. Women often wrap themselves within the "artificial needs" of a man and forget or lose sight of their own goals.

Don't get me wrong, having a significant-other is great, but

My fellow women, we need to be capable of taking care of ourselves. We need to be the ones with the assets, the income and the prenuptial agreements.

higher education and financial security have not married but are among the largest group buying houses and participating in single adoptions.

Women's trends are moving toward equal representation and

THERE IS SOMETHING ABOUT RELATIONSHIPS AND BEING IN LOVE THAT CAUSES OTHERWISE INTELLIGENT, CAUTIOUS AND RATIONAL WOMEN TO ACT WITH RECKLESS ABANDON.

Finding men who can appreciate our independence and ambitions is the best path for today's women to take. Don't fear having a life that doesn't include marriage. Don't let the need to be loved impair your judgment in terms of your future success.

The reality of choosing a career over a marriage sometimes is placed on the back burner, especially within the African-American community.

More than half of African-American women between the ages of 25 and 29 and 35 percent of women ages 30 to 34 with independence from male counterparts in social and business relations.

More women are becoming entrepreneurs, increasing ownership of small businesses and firms in the United States.

There are 7.7 million women-owned firms in the United States, and these firms employ 15.5 million people, generating nearly $1.4 trillion in sales.

Feminine empowerment is more than just a profound cultural change for women in society; corporate American has also recognized the need.

Such companies as IBM, Johnson & Johnson, General Motors, Proctor & Gamble and Nations Bank have set up child care programs for its employees that have cost some of these companies more than $25 million.

When you are out job searching, look for companies that offer opportunities for advancement as well as child care and family benefit programs.

Women, especially minority women, need to research corporations before pursuing jobs or focus on owning some type of business to ensure professional advancement.

The glass ceiling isn't gone. It still exist and can really make it hard for women trying to pursue a career in corporate America.

Companies use artificial barriers that can individually hinder the advancement of qualified women and minorities. These barriers include various recruitment practices and the failure to include women and minorities in "corporate developmental exercises," such as key rotational assignments, mentoring and training.

So remember to look into companies before pursuing or accepting jobs because things are not always what they seem, and never let anyone define who you are or what you are capable of becoming.

Wade: vote for a rejuvenation

Editor,
I would like to start by apologizing to the students of GSU for being part of something that was designed to mislead you. You see I am not now nor have I ever been a politician, but what I am is a saved Christian by choice and it is that lifestyle that will not allow me to take part in the Burns ticket ... I have been wrong. I allowed others to change my stance on the matters of SGA president for the wrong reason and I apologize. As a leader, you must sometimes play a team role and that is what I thought I was doing. Unfortunately, personal agendas, lies, dishonesty and other negative things get in the way of teamwork.

... After careful consideration and prayer, I have decided not to be part of the Burns ticket. This is not a personal attack on Derek and the other members, yet it is a wake-up call to all students at GSU.

... No matter what happens, at least now I know in my heart I have done the right thing. Now that I think about it, I do have a platform and that is to give every student here an opportunity to be part of GSU's growth and future. In closing, I would like to ask every student to first participate in this election. Second, if you support my belief and would like to be part of this rejuvenation of our university, support me in this effort. For president, either leave it blank or write my name in for executive vice president. I would like to ask that you support Tawanna Collins, who shares my views and would be an asset to GSU ... Let's see just how well our system works — without politicians.

Collins detects 'hidden agendas'

Editor,
Due to circumstances which go against my moral and spiritual convictions, I hereby resign my position as vice president of finance from the Burns ticket. I am in no way denouncing the ticket, but from this point on, I no longer wish to be considered a part of it.

When I agreed to run for an SGA office, I was under the impression that I would be a part of the Wade ticket: Reginald Wade, president; Tawanna Collins, executive vice president; Tansy Troncuso, vice president of finance; Allison Oasis, vice president of auxiliary affairs; and Charles Carroll, vice president of academic affairs. It was only at the candidacy confirmation meeting that I found out that Derek Burns had decided to run for president. I was under the impression that Mr. Burns was a graduating senior with no hopes of re-election. In my opinion, he served as an "advisor" to the Wade ticket.

I am a firm believer in honesty and integrity, and in this situation, I detect hidden agendas. Please don't get me wrong. I love SGA. If possible, I would still like to run as an independent candidate. I have a lot of respect for the institution of student government, but I love people and my Creator more. This is by no means a publicity stunt on my behalf because I do not need excess publicity, but I feel that it is my duty as a Christian and a student leader to stand up for what I believe is right.

GSU exhibition soccer leaves excitement for upcoming season

I love soccer. I played in high school and was terrible. I played in midget league and was worse.

Heck, a few scrubs even let me play on their intramural team, and guess what ... I was even worse than I was in midget league.

However, I do enjoy watching soccer, and the GSU men's team ranks high on my list of spectator events.

The Eagles return 19 players, eight of which are starters.

With this kind of depth, the Eagles will be in search, once again, for that elusive Southern Conference title.

"We need to stay focused and prepare mentally for one game at a time," head coach Kevin Chambers said.

The Eagles came oh-so close at winning the conference title last season, but Furman squeaked past GSU for the crown.

The Eagles will kick off the 1997 season at South Florida, who is always ranked fairly high nationally, in Tampa on August 30, followed by dates with South Carolina, Furman and Coastal Carolina.

They open their season at home with an exhibition game on Aug. 24 against in-state foe, Augusta State.

"With us playing these four or five top-20 teams early in the season, big wins right away will help us with our national ranking," goalkeeper Mike Burrell said.

Indeed, the Eagle schedule is a hard one for next season, but Chambers and the Eagle squad are anticipating a good season.

The Eagles have been diligently working this spring toward next season's opener.

"We've been working a lot on strength and conditioning this spring, and so far, we've been doing great," Chambers said.

As far as spring exhibition goes, the Eagles started a bit shaky by losing their first three games but have recently bounced back by pounding everyone else by large margins of victory.

Recruiting for the Eagles is over and Chambers says he recruited strongly for defense. The depth for the Eagles shouldn't be a problem, but obviously health is a main concern.

In any case, the soccer games I've been to have been extremely exciting, and from the looks of things, it should be no different next year.

Regardless of the outcome, you can't go wrong on a Saturday afternoon watching a great soccer team kick another team's butt up and down the field while drinking a cold beer.

Next year should be even more fun with the squad Chambers should have on the field contending for the conference title.

If you've never been to a GSU soccer game, then you're missing out on a great game sporting good teams.

And with the players and talent the Eagles should field next season, the men's soccer team should be one to reckon with next fall.

Stallings captures 1,200th

GSU coach reaches milestone while securing SoCon co-champion title

Hans Knoepfel

WHO'S COUNTING?: GSU athletic director Sam Baker awards Jack Stallings a plaque for his 1,200th victory as a head coach.

By Mike Davis
Sports Editor

It was a memorable weekend for a memorable coach.

The GSU baseball team went into the series with Marshall University hoping to sweep the Herd and capture yet another Southern Conference championship for their coach, Jack Stallings.

But on the eve of securing the title as co-champions of the conference, as they did indeed take all three games, the Eagles gave their coach another gift.

A 12-5 win in the first game of Saturday's double-header sent the coach of 37 years his 1,200th victory, placing him on yet another prestigious list of the best all-time coaches in NCAA baseball history.

"I haven't talked too much about winning my 1,200th," Stallings said. "I never really even thought about it. When I went home, the only thing me and my wife talked about was horses. But we didn't talk any baseball. That's probably a good thing."

The Eagles (29-21/18-6) used a three-run seventh to take the second game of the twin-bill on Saturday, 6-5, followed by a Sunday whaloping of the Herd, 12-3.

Despite finishing tied for first in the conference standings, the Eagles will enter Thursday's conference tournament as the number-two seed, due to Western Carolina, the other half of the co-owners, taking the series between the two schools.

"Being co-champs is good for the team," Stallings said. "But we still have a tournament to play. There is no point in worrying about where we are seeded. You just have to go out and do the job."

• GSU 12, Marshall 5: The Eagles made sure that Stallings would get number 1,200 in Saturday's first game, as they pounded the Herd for 12 runs on 12 hits in front of a J.I. Clements crowd.

In only three innings of the nine-inning ball game did the Eagles not score more than two runs.

Tyson Whitley led the Eagles by going 4-for-4 with four RBIs and two runs scored. He connected for a two-run blast in the fourth inning, his second homer of the season. That gave the Eagles a commanding 10-0 lead early in the game.

The Eagles scraped up three runs to open the game, led off by Antoine Moran's triple to right, followed by RBI knocks from Jody Pollock and Whitley.

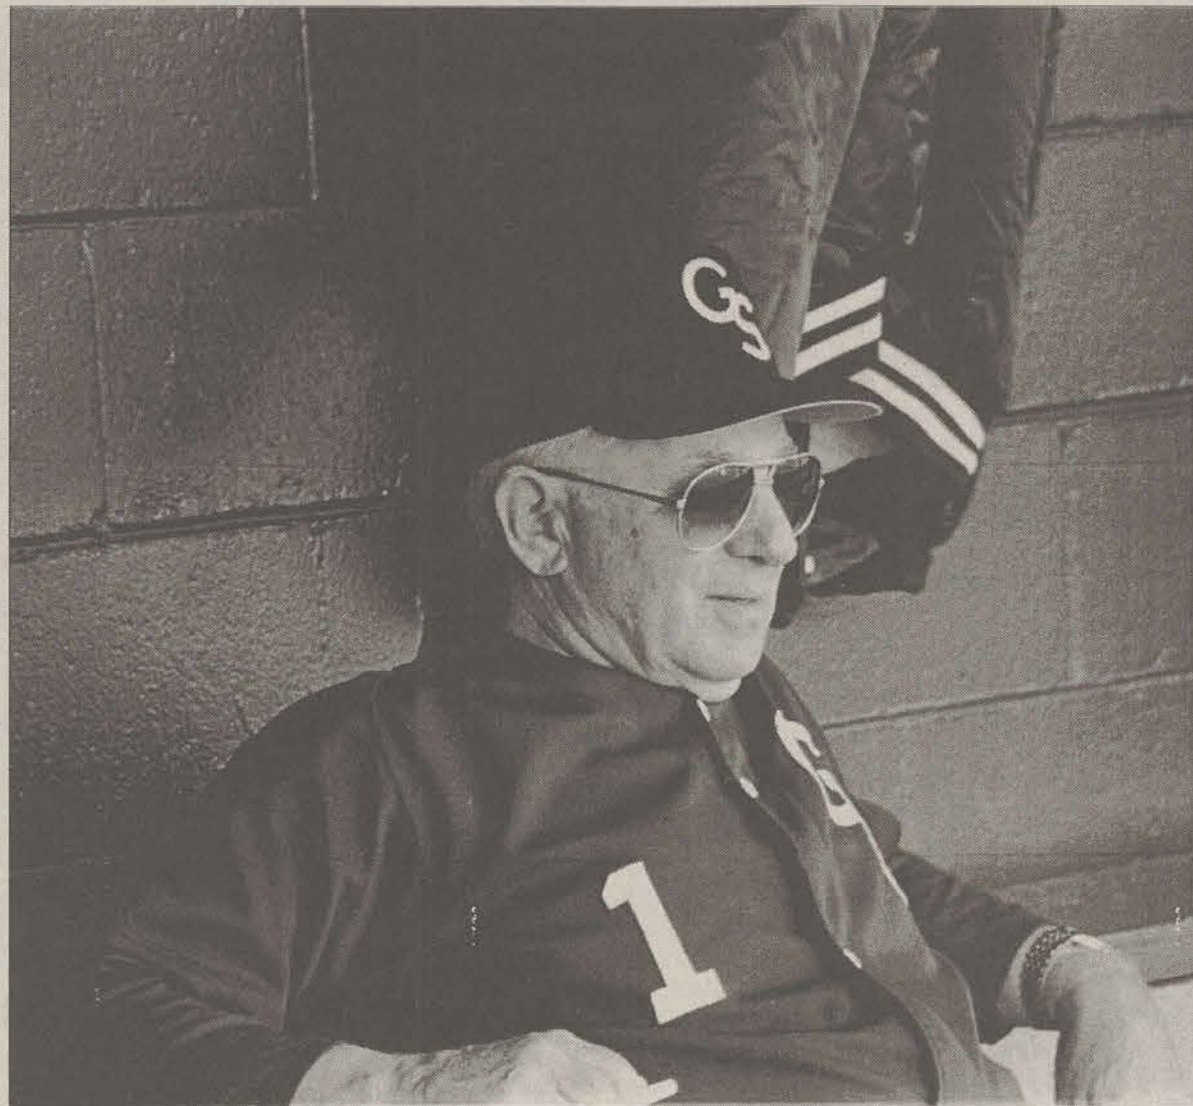

Scoring in the third was done primarily with singles. After a Whitley walk, Shane Marquis, Donnie Coe and Moran all singled to add to the lead.

After Whitley's monster slam in the fourth, the Eagles would tack on two more runs in the sixth to finish out the scoring.

Ryan Cummings grabbed the win for the Eagles, his seventh of the season.

• GSU 6, Marshall 5: In the second game, freshman Matt Meadows came through once again for the Eagles.

Entering the seventh and final inning down two, the Eagles put together a monumental one-out rally to capture the win and stay in the hunt for the SoCon crown.

Whitley continued his hitting clinic by doubling to right-center field, followed by Marquis' RBI single to open the inning.

Marquis would later score the tying run by sliding under the tag at the plate off an Moran grounder to second.

Freshman Matt Meadows then followed up with a game-winning RBI single to center, scoring Donnie Coe, who had reached on an error.

"I was real nervous up there," Meadows said of his game-winning at-bat. "All night I had not seen anything up in the zone, and I finally got something to hit. I didn't hit it hard but I guess it got the job done."

The seventh-inning single was the only hit for Meadows, but both Michael Holder and Jody Pollock collected two hits in three plate appearances.

"Sometimes, you have a freshman who plays like freshmen," Stallings said. "Then sometimes, you have a freshman, and he'll compete and play like one of the older guys. Matt has hit well for us all season."

Tyson Whitley went 1-for-2 in the second game and 5-for-6 with a homer on the day to help lead the Eagles from the plate.

"We should have never had to come back," Stallings said. "Somewhere between the first game and the second game, we lost our focus. The only thing consistent about us is that we're inconsistent."

• GSU 12, Marshall 3: The bottom half of the fourth inning of the third game was a scoring book's worst nightmare, as the Eagles sent up 16 batters, plating 11 runs off nine hits, setting new season marks for most runs and hits in an inning.

In the inning, everybody scored in the GSU starting lineup. Steve Watson started the

The Eagles added one more in the fifth when Jamie Olvey connected for his third homer of the season.

Marshall posted three runs in the ninth inning off reliever Tod Lee, spoiling starter Clint Sauls' shut-out.

"This was one of my better games, as far as control," Sauls said. "I felt strong and was able to control my pitches."

Sauls finished his three-hit performance by pitching seven innings and striking out five.

"We're very confident heading into the tournament now," Sauls said. "We wish ETSU could have helped us out a little today by beating Western Carolina, but we just have to focus on one game at a time now. But I'll say this, you can't pick a better time to start peaking."

The Eagles will now prepare to play Virginia Military Institute as the second seed in the first round of the tournament in Charleston.

"We would like to have gone to the tournament the number-one seed, but that's not much of a problem," said Marquis.

"This goes back to us being inconsistent all year. And though I don't think we are playing our best right now, we have gotten better. We are playing solid ball and that's important going into the tournament."

GSU tennis finishes fifth and eighth at SoCon

Marshall wins, Lady Eagles place fifth GSU men score 15 points, finish last

GSU News Service

The Thundering Herd of Marshall won its first-ever Southern Conference women's tennis tournament Sunday at the Minor Herndon Mickel Tennis Center on the Furman University campus.

The Lady Eagles finished with 43 points, ending in the fifth spot behind Marshall, second-place UT-Chattanooga (56), Furman (52) and Davidson (48).

Behind the Lady Eagles were East Tennessee State (35), Western Carolina (19) and Appalachian State (11).

GSU's Anita Buggins, who was also named Southern Conference Player-of-the-Year, won the tournament's Most Valuable Player Award.

Buggins scored a 6-0, 6-2 win over Chattanooga's Karolina Glowacka to win the flight one title in the singles competition, but she didn't finish there.

The dynamic doubles team of Buggins and Britta Wilms won the number-one doubles flight by earning an 8-3 decision over UTC's Glowacka and Tracy Beard.

In other final round results, Wilms defeated Beard (0-6, 7-5, 6-1) at the number-one spot, Melissa Brown defeated Sabrina Jones of Appalachian State (6-4, 6-1) at the number-four singles and Jill Walker topped Corrine Castay of ETSU (6-4, 6-2) at the six seed. Boulle and Walker also won their doubles match (8-5) over Davidson's Ashley Maner and Creecy Chandler.

GSU News Service

The Furman Paladins won all three of their doubles matches on Sunday to defeat both Davidson and East Tennessee State by just one point, 61-60, for the Southern Conference Men's Tennis Championship at Davidson College.

The Eagles finished in last place with 15 total points behind Furman (61), Davidson (60), East Tennessee State (60), UT-Chattanooga (45), Appalachian State (33), The Citadel (33) and Virginia Military Institute (17).

GSU's number-one seed Christian Singer finished in seventh of the top tennis players, defeating Hayden McQuay of Virginia Military Institute (6-2, 6-2).

Singer's doubles partner, Brett Hollitt, teamed with the number-one Eagle to take fifth place in the first doubles competition, as they defeated VMI's combo of McQuay and Chris Braun (9-7).

No other school other than the top three finishers had an individual champion at any singles or doubles flight. Davidson claimed the most individual championships with four, Furman had three and East Tennessee State, two.

The biggest upset of the tournament was pulled off by Furman's Sam Schroerlucke at number one singles, as he knocked off two-time Southern Conference Player-of-the-Year John Pastel of Davidson in the finals, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3. Pastel had not lost in over two years against a conference opponent.

EAGLE FOOTBALL

Parham a big target, looks to make bigger contributions for GSU

By Mike Davis
Sports Editor

From a distance, GSU receiver Dedric Parham looks a lot like Marshall's stand-out wide receiver Randy Moss. He's a massive target, muscles chiseled into a 6-foot-5 frame, and judging by his performance during the first three weeks of spring practice, his contributions to the Eagles might be just as important as Moss' were to the national champion Thundering Herd.

But don't expect too much too soon. Parham, after being red-shirted two years ago, was basically limited to special teams this past season, when the Eagles went 4-7 under interim head coach Frank Ellwood. But Parham hopes that his performance this spring will earn him one of the top spots in the Eagle receiving corps. "Last season, I was pretty much limited to special teams," Parham said.

"But this season, we've put in more of a passing attack offense and I'm a big target, so hopefully I'll get my chance. We've opened up the offense a lot. "I just come out here with the intentions to contribute a lot to the team." And as Parham has found out, contributing to the team goes a lot further than just hauling in catches. "People see a tall wide receiver, and they think that they should throw the ball to him. But a wide receiver my size is a valuable asset because I can block better and get a better angle on the shorter guys." And as Moss showed many teams this past season, including GSU, a big body is very difficult to cover. Parham agrees. "If I had to guard a wide receiver like myself, I would be threatened," Parham said. "I'd know that I would be picked on all day and wouldn't like that."

• Josh Smithers, Kinte Morgan and Brian Lovett are all still recovering from knee injuries suffered at the start of spring practices. • The annual Blue/White game is slated for a 1 p.m. start Saturday at Paulson Stadium. The game marks the end of spring practice, which is now in its fourth week. There will be a cookout prior to the game.

Eagle defense sparks during third scrimmage

GSU News Service

GSU's defense dominated the third spring scrimmage Saturday morning at Paulson Stadium, limiting the first and second offensive units to only 10 points. Third-team quarterback Chris Johnson, working with the second-unit offense, carried 19 times for 82 yards, while full-back Carl Small added 56 yards on 14 attempts. Johnson completed his performance with a 9-of-12 passing day for 69 yards. Kenny Robinson completed 8-of-12 aerial attempts for 78 yards. Chris Chambers connected on a 42-yard field goal try. The defensive unit also recovered six fumbles (Eric Davis, D.T. Tanner, Anthony Williams, Chad Nighbert, Larry Rogers, Eugene Phillips), while Tanner and Cloise Williams recorded sacks. "We tried to get some of the younger guys in there today," said head coach Paul Johnson. "We wanted to look at some of our younger quarterbacks playing with our number one offensive unit. This week's scrimmage kind of reversed last week's. I thought the offense moved the ball early but the defense really came on strong at the end. It's encouraging because the effort and enthusiasm was good out there today. I'm pleased with the results up to now, so we are making progress."

Local author, Stuart Patray, takes readers on a dangerous trip down 'The Heroin Highway'

By Rodney Reid

There is nothing like settling down to a good book, and Statesboro resident Stuart Patray's "The Heroin Highway" is sure to have you on the edge of your seat. Patray, a GSU graduate, released his debut novel throughout southeast Georgia last month.

"The Heroin Highway" is a fiction novel, which centers around the imprisonment of American prisoners of war in Vietnam and asks why the government is lying about their existence.

The title of the novel originated from a Vietnamese dirt road which is used to transport heroin. The main character Stephen Decatur is dragged into a dangerous underworld, where international conspiracy, political assassination and misappropriation of globe funds threatens to corrupt American and Asian governments. Ironically the fictional novel has a strong factual basis.

"I've taken real events and [woven] them into a fictional novel," Patray said.

The novel makes references to the 1991-92 Committee meetings on issues involving P.O.W existence and the controversy surrounding former Sec. of Commerce Ron Brown's involvement with the Vietnam embargo. These events play a big part in Stephen Decatur's involvement with a vicious narcotics war and his race against the clock to stop the elimination of the trade embargo against Vietnam, while attempting to elude the drug cartels, free the P.O.W.s and reveal the corruption of U.S. officials.

"The novel is a political thrill," Patray said. "If you like good entertaining fiction with a factual theme, then this is the book for you."

The novel is a fast-paced, action-suspense story, which introduces a new theory as to the cause of the Vietnam war. It's approximately 300 pages long and is available in trade paperback form.

Patray will be on hand at Wal-mart on Friday, April 25 for a book signing between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. and then again from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m.. There will be another book signing Saturday, April 26 at On-Cue in the Statesboro Mall between 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. and 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. The books are currently on sale at Wal-mart and On-Cue.

Special Photo
Stuart Patray will be available for book signings this weekend at Wal-Mart and On-Cue Music.

'The Rules' and dating in the 90s

By NiCole Patterson
Staff Writer

Most students would agree that dating in the 90s can be difficult.

Deciding on where to go and what to do, especially in Statesboro, can be hectic.

Relationships for women can also be troublesome if they don't know "the traditional rules."

In conjunction with Women's Awareness Week, a program was presented last Wednesday called, "Dating Rules: Whatever happened to dinner and a movie?" The program was based on the book "The Rules" by Ellen Fein and Sherrie Schneider.

The book gives women guidelines to dating and relationships. Teresa Beebe, the activities coordinator in the Union, introduced audience members to the book and passed out notecards so that everyone can write down their "ideal" date.

A number of audience members chose the traditional dinner and a movie, while others chose to be creative with their dates.

From there it was an open question- and- answer session.

Some of the questions included: What do you think are the rules? Would you call a guy for a date?

"Dinner is a good ice-breaker because you are in a neutral area," Patrick Novotny, a GSU student, said.

"You have to learn to be creative on your dates," David Van Tassell, a GSU student, said. "Playing cards and having a picnic at a park is an example of a Numerous audience members disagreed with a lot of "the rules" because they felt like it was playing games, and that it's rude not to return phone calls.

"Society has put a lot of roles into relationships," Van Tassell said. "The book puts a lot of stereotypes on men. A lot of men do have a sensitive side. I think that the rules are just a bunch of games."

"The program was informative," Kamaria Pennyman said. "But I disagree with some of the rules. For example, not calling the guy as often. I think some of the rules are about playing games."

GSU students Candance Smiley and Taiesha Young enjoyed the program and they both have read "The Rules".

"I have tried to follow the book in my relationships," Smiley said. "I like the book because it gives you rules to set."

Audience members agreed that no one is going to fit our expectations and that we should look at "The Rules" like starting a friendship.

One audience member put it plainly, "Don't just settle for anybody who comes along. It's a matter of using common sense and good judgment."

"YOU HAVE TO LEARN TO BE CREATIVE ON YOUR DATES ... THERE IS PLENTY TO DO IN STATESBORO."

creative date. There is plenty to do in Statesboro, you just have to try different things."

Some of "the rules" included: Never call a man because it takes away the challenge. Women should get off the phone first. Women should rarely call a guy. If a guy leaves a message on your answering machine, wait a while and decide whether to call him back.

Kappa Sigma and local businesses work together to wipe out cancer

By Kelley McGonnell
Features Editor

Last Monday, GSU's finest hit the stage and showed off their best. Kappa Sigma held the 3rd Annual Miss Southern's Finest contest in the Russell Union Ballroom.

All proceeds went to benefit the American Cancer Society.

Several local establishments sponsored the event, with ticket sales bringing in more money.

"Last year we cut the American Cancer Society a check for $500," Richard Toms, Kappa Sigma president, said. "We expect to do the same this year."

The contest drew in nine contestants sponsored by different sororities and fraternities.

The contestants were cheered on by members of many Greek organizations.

"Kappa Sigma wants to thank everyone for their support," Toms said.

The event is just one of many philanthropies the Greek organizations at GSU support.

Zeta Tau Alpha, in addition to other philanthropies, works with the Association for Retarded Citizens. Alpha Omicron Pi raises money for the Arthritis Foundation.

Any of the Greek philanthropies are a great way to support the community, the university and national philanthropies.

Next week marks Greek Philanthropy Week at GSU.

Throughout the week, the sororities and fraternities at GSU will be focusing even more energy on helping the community and aiding national organizations.

Sigma Gamma Rho step show to be held on Saturday

By Kelley McGonnell
Features Editor

Sigma Gamma Rho sorority will be holding a step show Friday, April 26. The proceeds will benefit one of the sorority's many philanthropies, but it has not been determined which organization will receive the profits.

The event will take place at Hanner Fieldhouse from 8 p.m. to 11 p.m. Tickets are $3 in advance and $5 at the door. Tickets will be $2 for all Greeks.

The event is for GSU students and their guests only. All students must have their IDs, and they must sign in their guest.

The Sigma Gamma Rho sorority will step, as will the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity. Kappa Alpha Psi, a new addition to GSU, will perform. Another chapter of the same fraternity from Fort Valley, Ga will also perform that night.

The white sorority, Zeta Tau Alpha, will again perform.

"I'm really hoping that we get a lot of people to come," Renée Hurston, Sigma Gamma Rho vice president, said. "I hope they come to see the Zetas perform."

The show will also include a performance by elementary school children from the Terence Mainor High Steppers from Augusta, Ga.

"The girls have worked really hard all year long to get this together," Hurston said. "They have put in a lot of time and dedication and I hope the event is a success."

For more information, contact Renée Hurston at 871-7632.

If you are interested in seeing your Greek organization's events covered in the Greek Corner, contact Kelley McGonnell at 681-5246. Any calendars or other information you can provide would be greatly appreciated.

KELLEY MCGONNELL

As long as one heart still holds on, hope is never really gone

Happy Earth Day! No, I'm not an environmental nerd. I only know it's Earth Day because it's also my parents' anniversary. So, Happy Anniversary Mom and Dad.

But there was another anniversary this week. April 19 was the second anniversary of the Oklahoma City bombing. I am reminded of where I was when I heard about it.

I was in biology class at the University of Georgia and my best friend came in late. He was upset and I asked what was wrong. He told me someone had blown up a federal building in Oklahoma City. Then he told me the building housed a day care center.

There is something about the murder of children that hurts me even worse than the murder of adults. Children are our innocence. When they are killed, we lose that innocence. We never seem to recover.

Garth Brooks, my little sister's favorite guy, dedicated a beautiful song and video to Oklahoma City. The song is called "The Change" and the video is mostly footage from the bombing. The video always makes me cry. For a while, I felt I didn't have the right to cry. I didn't lose anyone and I didn't have to witness the disaster first-hand. I felt guilty.

But this week I realized something new. Oklahoma City affected us all. Killing innocent people murdered our innocence. And Garth and his song touch me, not because they remind me of our loss but because they remind me of all we have.

The video shows the rescue workers and their tears. It shows the fence around the site and all the flowers and presents that have been left there. It shows hope and love.

People who did not have loved ones in the building and who were not part of the rescue efforts were still there in all the misery to bring comfort to friends and strangers. Rescue workers, EMTs and firefighters, broke down in tears because they, of all people, felt useless against the destruction.

This says something about the human spirit. We empathize. We want to help. Unfortunately, it took tragedies to bring this to light.

I don't care about Timothy McVeigh and his trial. If he did it, he will pay when the roll is called up yonder. I know this may not help the victims' families, but God will take care of the people who did this. I will always have faith in this.

I want to focus on how a country heals. In the wake of all the plane crashes, mail bombings and natural disasters, the American people still find time to hope. We can pull together to cheer on our Olympic gymnastic team and to celebrate with Tiger Woods when he breaks golf records.

Through the good and the bad, the American people have always made it through on top. For every gang member that kills an innocent by-stander, there is man who donates his life savings to an orphanage. For every prostitute on the corner, there is a woman who feeds the homeless left-over bagels.

I think America's heroes would most likely agree with Garth Brooks. In "The Change" he says: "And I hear them saying, you'll never change things and no matter what you do it's still the same thing. But it's not the world that I am changing. I do this so, this world will know that it will not change me."

The candidates, the issues and everything in between The Elkins Ticket

This week's SGA election is more than just Chad Elkins running against Derek Burns for the position of president. There are four other members on the Elkins ticket seeking to take seats on the SGA executive board.

While the members of the Elkins ticket may lack SGA experience, they don't lack leadership, Elkins says. The Elkins ticket, including Elkins, has two juniors, two sophomores and a freshman. Elkins said his ticket will bring in fresh ideas.

Here is a look at the other four members of the Elkins ticket.

Stacy Ganter
Candidate for Executive Vice President
Sophomore
Public Relations major
Experience: Has served on SGA for two years.

Activities: Senior Staff Writer for Southern Reflector, Media Committee and Presidential Committee.

Why is she running?
"Because I've been in it for two years and have seen what has been tried," Ganter said. "I see so many things wrong."

Ganter said that she has been in SGA as a senator and executive assistant and has felt like she was an outsider and now wants to be an insider.

Why do you want this office?
The executive vice president is in charge of overseeing all committee assignments and making sure seats are filled. Ganter said she wants to be executive vice president to make sure that SGA is fulfilling its job as being the voice of the students. "I want it so I can see that we have representation," Ganter said. "We have to have people to go to those meetings."

What do you think you can bring to this office?
"I'm a military girl; I was on ROTC," Ganter said. "I'm big on leadership and discipline."

Clint Murphy
Candidate for Vice President of Academic Affairs
Junior
Political Science major
Experience: Served on SGA for a year (1994-95)
Activities: Sigma Nu fraternity, 1994 Scholarship Committee member, former state youth director of Phil Gramm for President.

Why is he running?
"I'm running because things that should be done are not getting done," Murphy said. "This is not for my resumé."

Why do you want this office?
Murphy said one of his main objectives is to tackle the issue of attendance policies.

"If you can make the grade and not go to class, you should get the grade," Murphy said.

Final note: Clint said that he will never vote for any increase in students fees, not as long as student services are being insufficiently delivered to students.

Alana Weber
Candidate for Vice President of Finance
Freshman
Finance major
Experience: No experience on SGA.
Activities: Phi Mu sorority, Hunter Army Airfield: community services, volunteer and assistant and dance teacher for youths.

Why is she running?
Weber said she believes SGA will be a fun and beneficial experience for her and she is looking forward to working with Chad Elkins.

"Chad has a lot of really good ideas," Weber said.

Why do you want this office?
As VP of finance, Weber said she wants to make sure that the money given out by SGA to various organizations is given in a more equal manner.

Final note:
"I personally understand that (student) fees have to increase," Weber said. "Our school is going to grow and there is no way to fight it, but I don't want to see large increases."

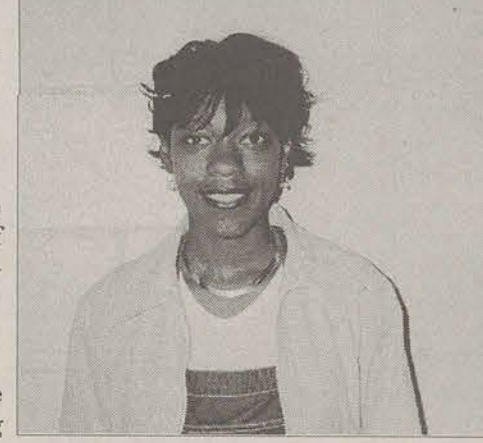

Alicia Haley
Candidate for Vice President of Auxiliary Affairs
Sophomore
Spanish Major
Experience: No experience on SGA.
Activities: Published "Gender Balance on Government-Appointed in the State of Georgia." Member of American Association of University Women

Why is she running?
Alicia said she wants to get into office so she can address the issues of parking and transportation, food services and housing.

Why do you want this office?
"My biggest thing is parking and transportation," Haley said. "Parking here is awful."

Haley proposed to pave or gravel the dirt lot by Forest Drive and possibly put up a small parking deck.

What do you think you can bring to this office?

Haley said she would bring the leadership she developed while doing research on gender balance.

Final note:
Haley has proposed to form a separate on-campus housing senate for those students who live in residence halls to govern themselves. She said this would be separate from the SGA.

Even though two positions on the Burns ticket are empty, there are still two candidates in the running.

The rest of the Burns ticket has more than four years SGA experience as well as outside leadership experience. The ticket is devoted to getting things done, Allison Oasis said.

Take a glimpse at the rest of the ticket.

Charles Carroll
Candidate for Vice President of Acedemics
Senior
Sports Management major
Experience: Has been in SGA for more than a year.
Activities: Southern Ambassador and Member of the Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity.

Why is he running?
Carroll says he was asked to run for this position a year ago but didn't have the time, so he jumped at the chance to run this time. Carroll is running because he feels that he can uphold this position and help the students.

Why do you want this office?
Carroll says he wants this office because he feels that he can help out the students as well as the incoming freshmen with issues such as advisement.

What do you think you can bring to this office? Simply put, Carroll says that he will bring "new blood" to this position.

Final Note:
One of the projects that Carroll will be working on if elected is the SGA emergency loan program. This is a program that loans students money while they wait for financial aid checks.

Carroll would like to see the money in the program be increased in hopes that it will be able to help out more students.

Allison Oasis
Candidate for Vice President of Auxiliary Affairs
Junior
English major
Experience: Has served on SGA for three years.
Activities: Program council of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority, Spanish Club.

Why is she running?
Oasis believes her experience and leadership skills will benefit SGA. She says she wants to make things happen for current and future students.

Why do you want this office?
"This office calls for someone who is assertive and will express their opinions in order to get things done," Oasis said. "I am that person."

Oasis said the Forest Drive lot will soon no longer be a parking lot. The land will be used to expand the Continuing Education Center. She says she will provide pressure to get the permanent parking lot by the rappelling tower built.

What do you think you can bring to this office?

"I can bring a lot of experience to the office because I do know many campus officials and already have good working relations with them," she said.

Final Note:
Oasis also brings a desire to improve parking and to improve the quality of food service on campus.

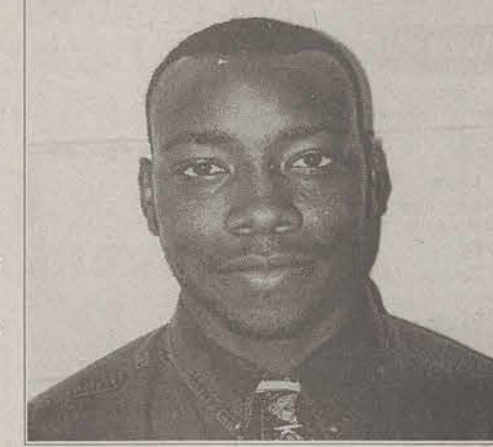

The Independents

Reginald Wade
Candidate for Executive Vice President
Junior
Technical education and Education Administration
Experience: Served on SGA for two years (1994-96)
Activities: International President of TECA, resident assistant for two years, teacher at alternative school, worked for state department of education.

Why is he running?
"There are a lot of things I want to see done," Wade said. "I'd like to give the university back to the students and get students involved."

Wade said he wants to enhance communication on campus and he thinks the renovations of Lewis Hall to house student organizations will aid in this.

Why do you want this office?
"I wanted to run for president and I regret not running for president, but I think being in the executive vice president position it will give me the opportunity to bridge the gap between administrator and students," Wade said.

What do you bring to this office?
"I bring the ability to join people together," Wade said.

He said that his experience of owning his own business and being president of TECA will allow him to bring leadership and teamwork to the SGA.

Final note:
Wade said he wants the students of GSU to realize that the SGA is the voice of the students.

Tawanna Collins
Candidate for Vice President of Finance
Junior
Public Relations major
Experience: Served on SGA this year.
Activities: NAACP, UMOJA and VOICES

Why is she running?
"My sole purpose in running is to be of service to the student body," Collins said. She also stresses that she loves government and the way SGA operates and would like to use SGA as a way to meet the students' needs.

Why do you want this office?

Collins said the office would be a positive venue for her to help students and the job would be new to her but not the area.

What do you think you can bring to the office?

"I can bring a new spirit, a new energy and a new viewpoint," Collins said.

Reminder: SGA elections will be held Wednesday April 23 and Thursday April 24 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Polling sites will be the Russell Union, Lakeside Café and the Business Adminstration Building.

ISSUES

natures. He said that this was an issue that affects students who live in the community.

"SGA has every obligation to serve all students," Elkins said.

Burns differed by saying that he agreed with the city's decision to have such an ordinance in place.

He said he understood that if there are five or six people living in a house that it can be a problem and could be disturbing to the other residents.

"That ordinance was set up for the good of the community," Burns said.

Parking

Both candidates said they would like to do something about the parking problems students are faced with on campus.

Elkins said that even though the dirt parking lot on Forest Drive is temporary, the Parking and Transportation department has more than enough money to at least gravel the parking lot.

Burns suggested putting up parking meters on Georgia Avenue by the Landrum Center. He said installing meters would reduce the number of tickets that had to be given out.

Fees

In fall of 1997, students at GSU will be required to pay a $25 technology fee if it is approved by the Board of Regents. Combined with the health fee, activity fee and athletic fee, the total cost of fees at GSU will be approximately $152. That is in addition to the current $528 that students pay in tuition.

"The fee increases at this campus are getting outrageous and that's one thing we have got to halt," Burns said. "I want to make sure there are no fee increases at this university for the next two to three years."

Burns said that each year he would like to see the professional staff members who are paid out of the Student Activity Budget be rerouted to another pool of money.

In fact, this year two new salaries proposed by Campus Recreation/Intramurals to pay for staff in the new Recreation Activity Center building were cut from the Student Activity Budget.

Burns said these salaries will have to be paid by the state or be paid through another source, but that it would not be paid by the student activity fee.

Elkins said he is trying to be more honest and realistic about the issue of fees increasing.

He said there is no way to completely stop the increase in fees because we have buildings that need staff.

"I'm going to do everything I can to make fees as low as I can and still meet the needs of the departments," Elkins said.

CONTROVERSY

"I respect Collins' and Wade's motives for what they have done, however I strongly feel that we will do well in this election," Burns said.

Carroll, who is running for vice president of academic affairs on the Burns ticket said he was surprised by the decisions.

"It was unfortunate that this happened. The resignations came to me as a total shock," Carroll said. "But Derek, Allison and I are going to continue on."

Chad Elkins, Burns' opponent, said he believes that the situation with the Burns ticket is a reflection on Burns himself.

"This should reflect on whether he should be running or not, reflection on his character and whether he can work with SGA next year," Elkins said.

SGA election officials say they have never heard of anything like this happening before and believe that the tickets will remain the same.

The elections will be held this Wednesday and Thursday from 10:00 a.m. until 3:00 p.m. and students can vote either at the Union, Lakeside Café or the Business Administration Building.

Parents protest evangelical speaker

The Associated Press

LAKELAND, Ga.— Angry parents protested to the Lanier County school board about the founder of an evangelical organization speaking to their children at school.

George Eager, founder of The Mailbox Club, spoke to Lanier Elementary students March 26.

Some parents said Eager reportedly told some students their hearts would turn black if they did not turn to God.

Julie Cole asked board members for a written promise that similar incidents would not happen in the future.

The board will review the situation during its May 12 meeting, Benefield said.

under which the students entered.

The core curriculum has been revised, but will only affect students who enter in fall 1998.

Black said that students do not need to be concerned about credits being lost.

"The faculty is working very hard on this and we will make sure that students are not harmed by the transition," she said.

A semester will be 15 weeks, compared to 10 weeks in a quarter.

Black said that the longer periods will enable students to learn the material better, and that though semesters are longer than quarters, vacations are longer as well.

"There are 30 weeks in the quarter system and 30 weeks in the semester system. They are just arranged differently on the calendar," she said.

Classes will meet twice a week and students will not have the same classes every day.

A full load under the semester system will be 12 hours, but students will need to take 15 hours in order to graduate in four years, or eight semesters.

Black chairs the Undergraduate Counsel, which will meet every week from now until mid-June to work on making the transition go smoothly.

The counsel has completed the new core curriculum and Area F, which is similar to Area IV in the quarter system, and is now working on translating all degree program requirements.
