The Master of Science in Nursing (MSN) degree program in the School of Nursing at Georgia Southern University has been selected as one of the best for 2018 by OnlineMasters.com.

The MSN program, which is offered online, was ranked No. 50 out of more than 850 programs analyzed. Programs were selected based on academic quality, student success and affordability.

"Nursing remains one of the most competitive programs in professional education," said School Chair Catherine Gilbert, Ed.D., RN. "Prospective students have many options to pursue higher education, therefore national rankings assist students in choosing a school that provides the highest level of education. Georgia Southern University is proud to be among these recognized leaders in nursing education."

The School of Nursing is housed in the Waters College of Health Professions and is fully accredited by the Georgia Board of Nursing and the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education.
