SGA president loses District 4 seat in landslide vote

By Vanessa Keber
News Editor

SGA president Aaron Nicely lost his bid for city council to incumbent Joe Brannen, while fellow incumbent Hal Averitt was reelected mayor over Jack Williamson.

Brannen received 127 votes, while Nicely received 51 votes. Averitt received 1,710 votes, while Williamson received 246 votes. Both Nicely and Williamson were unavailable for comment as of press time.

Nicely's campaign faced numerous problems, including a mixup over a financial disclosure statement that Nicely erroneously submitted to the State Ethics Commission rather than to the city of Statesboro. Additionally, several discrepancies, including the number of Brannen, reelected representative for a majority GSU-inhabited District 4, said that he was expecting the win, but admitted that he was concerned.

"I want to thank Aaron—he ran a good, clean campaign," Brannen said. "I didn't hear much out of him, and I want him to know that I'm available for any assistance he may need for GSU and SGA."

Brannen went on to say that he plans to get more involved with the city, county and GSU during his next two years in office.

"I am thankful for the many supporters and contributors to the campaign, and will continue to represent them and all of the city of Statesboro as well as I can," Brannen said.

Averitt was unsurprised by his 87 percent to 12 percent vote victory against Williamson.

"When you run, you expect to win," Averitt said. "I had no idea what the percentages were going to be."

Averitt said that it felt good to be reelected, and

The first thing the council will do, especially with two new city councilmen on board, is to hold a one day planning session before the end of the year to set priorities for the new millenium, Averitt said. The council will then take applications for city manager, Averitt said.

When asked if he wished to make any comments on Williamson's campaign, Averitt simply answered "no."

Web pages are key resources at GSU

By Shawntineal Hughes
Assistant News Editor

A majority of GSU departments have their own websites and home pages, while others are in the process of getting their webpages up and running, according to Steven Bonham, director of the faculty technology development lab.

There is a wide range of use for the departments' web pages.

The home page is designed to tell the mission of each department. It also lists faculty, course descriptions, and may link to faculty personal pages.

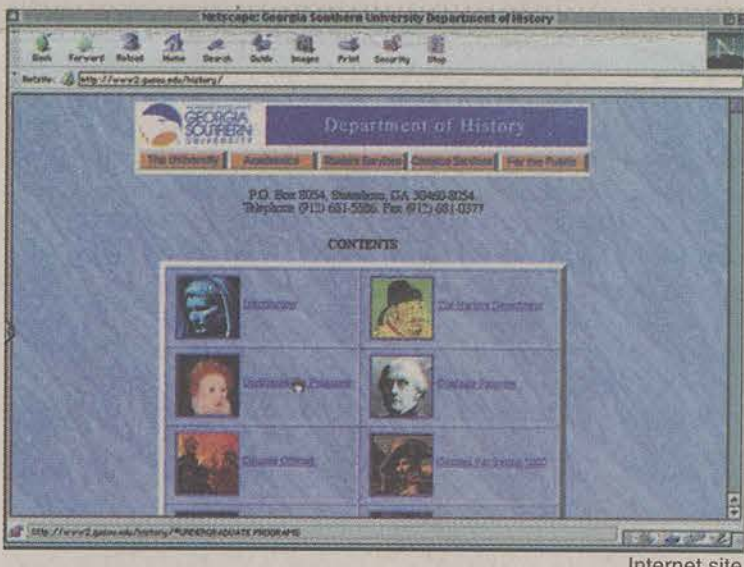

The department of biology and the associate vp for academic affairs, along with other departments, have created and maintained their own web server, which allows faculty to develop and store course material, according to Cheryl Claiborne, a faculty/web coordinator.

James B. Claiborne, professor of biology, uses the biology server for on-line exams, answer keys, lecture outlines, chat boards, and many other activities.

The chat board is a page where students can post questions and comments about the class.

Claiborne usually sets a study session time with his students the day before the test. They communicate on the chat board and have the study session over the web.

"The web has become a great tool for classes and is another way to give students more opportunities to do well," Claiborne said.

Internet site

HISTORY COMES TO LIFE at GSU through the department of history's web page. Many departments on campus are hitting the web for various reasons.

Alan Harvey, professor of biology, uses the biology web server for a dynamic syllabus. He posts study guides, quizzes, homework, research projects and grades on the web. According to Harvey, he gives a test every week and the web makes it easier to get grades to students without having to post them up.

The associate vp for academic affairs website has two functions, according to Ms. Claiborne. The web site provides instructors with information on how to teach the GSU 1210 and 1211 orientation classes. The web also has activities for students.

Ms. Claiborne uses the web for an on-line grade book, where students can view their grades. She also uses it for a course calendar so that students may look at the activities due and can get the instructions.

"The main benefits of the web in this course is that it lets students know right away what their grade is and where they stand in the class," Ms. Claiborne said.

Some departments are doing better than others with their websites due to the different experience levels of their webmasters, according to Bonham.

"Most departments are doing a good job with getting their mission out, but they are not providing a great variety of entertainment between the people accessing the website and their staff," Bonham said. "But we are aiming toward that now."

Human rights activist to speak at GSU

Special to the G-A

Lynn Fredricksson, Washington D.C. representative for the East Timor Action Network, will be speaking in GSU's Russell Union Ballroom at 7 p.m. tonight. Her speech, "East Timor and the Price of Freedom: The Struggle for Full Independence Continues," includes an account of hardships she has witnessed in the region. East Timor was ravaged by pro-Indonesian militia after residents voted overwhelmingly on Aug.30 to separate from Indonesia.

Fredricksson visited East Timor and was arrested, then deported after observing a nonviolent protest there in November 1997. In 1998 she assisted Congressman Lane Evans and journalist Allan Naim in exposing the continuing military buildup in Indonesia.

Fredricksson has worked for the disarmament and human rights in the former Soviet Union, Israel and occupied Palestine, Indonesia and East Timor. She has also served more than a year in prisons in North Carolina and West Virginia for a Plowshares nonviolent disarmament action.

Born in Winchester, Conn., Fredricksson has been an activist, organizer and service provider in Washington D.C., Baltimore and the San Francisco Bay area for the past 12 years. Upon graduation from Williams College, Fredricksson managed a shelter for homeless men and co-directed the Washington office of Women Strike for Peace.

The lecture is sponsored by GSU's Center for International Studies. For more information call (912) 681-0332.

GSU upsets UNCG in shocker, 2-1

G-A News Services

GSU scored twice in a span of four minutes to upset two-time defending champion UNCG in the first round of the Southern Conference women's soccer tournament Tuesday in Greensboro. It was the earliest exit from a conference tournament for the Spartans since 1993.

Janis Milne scored what would prove to be the game-winner when she knocked in a rebound off the crossbar at the 45:56 mark. Melissa Cox shot the ball, which was tipped off the crossbar by Spartan goalie Kathryn Clewley, and Milne was there to collect the rebound.

UNCG's Megan Bynum cut the Eagle lead to one when she connected on a direct kick to the upper right from 20 yards out on the left side. Kate Dylag narrowly missed on a direct kick with five minutes remaining, and another Bynum direct kick from 22 yards sailed just over the crossbar at the 89 minute mark.

GSU scored its first goal on a penalty kick by Tara Chaisson at the 41:53 mark after she was pulled down in the box by Heather Bernard.

The Spartans had a chance to take the lead with just under 11 minutes left in the first half when the ball was rolling along the goal line and Bynum slid past the ball on a diving attempt.

UNCG, which finishes the year with an 8-12 record, suffered its first losing campaign in 12 years of competition. It was the team's earliest exit from a Southern Conference Tournament after it won the first two in which it played. The 1993 squad lost to Campbell 1-0 in the first round of the Big South Tournament and the 1994 and 1995 teams lost in the semifinals. The 1996 squad was the Big South Champion.

NATIONAL NEWS BRIEF

New federal rule will require dropouts to repay a portion of their federal aid

TMS Campus Newspapers

CHICAGO, Ill.— Starting next fall, the Education Department will require college students to repay portions of their Pell Grants and other federally funded financial aid that isn't used to cover the costs of education.

The new rule, published in Monday's "Federal Register," is the result of proposals bantered between college and government officials for months.

The bottom line, college officials say, is that students have gained some new payback options that could help them keep their eligibility for federal aid. But the department insisted — and won — its fight for how much a student should return.

Under a complex new formula, students who withdraw from college will owe a portion of the money they borrowed but never used for classes. The government has agreed to give 50 percent discounts off the amounts students owe.

Students will have about 45 days to repay the money they borrowed or agree to a repayment plan with the college or Education Department.

Higher-education associations fear the new rule will have a particularly negative effect on low-income students, who use the money they receive not only for tuition but for basic living expenses such as food and housing.

Meanwhile, Education Department officials say the new rule will require students to "earn" the aid they're given by remaining in school.

Party near Ball State campus ends in death

TMS Campus Newspapers

MUNCIE, Ind. — A Halloween party near the campus of Ball State University ended with one man dead and five injured when two people denied entry returned and fired bullets into the crowd. Julian Brown, 28, a former Ball State student, was shot in the chest and died 30 minutes later in a local hospital.

Witnesses told The Star Press of Muncie that Brown was guarding the door of the two-story house rented for the festivities and turned the men away, but Muncie Police Chief Joe Winkle said investigators have been unable to confirm that information.

"We've taken over 120 statements from different people and are right now just trying to piece together what happened," Winkle said. "All that's clear is that Brown was near the back door when the shooting started."

Winkle said police have made no arrests in connection with the shooting, which happened around 4 a.m. Sunday.

At least 40 bullets were fired at the house, and investigators are trying to determine whether shots were also fired from within it. More than 100 people were crowded inside when the gunfire started. Many fell on the floor or jumped through open windows to run to safety.

Five people were injured during the chaos, but none seriously enough to require medical attention, Winkle said.

The party attracted members of Ball State's chapter of the Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity.

A member of the fraternity rented the house and invited several people to meet there after a fraternity party at the local YWCA. Sunday's shooting wasn't the first time the chapter has run into trouble with the law, Winkle said.

"I think the reason why we have problems with them is that they call on chapters from other universities to come and party with them," he said. "So, we get people from all over the state, people who may not be from or have any connection to Muncie. And that's when the trouble tends to start."

INTERNATIONAL NEWS BRIEF

Possibility terrorism caused EgyptAir crash

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, D.C. — While lacking hard evidence, investigators Sunday began examining the possibility that terrorism caused the crash of EgyptAir flight 990.

The sudden disappearance of the plane—so fast that the pilot was unable to issue a distress call—as well as both a record of terrorist attacks on tourists in Egypt and a specific threat received by U.S. authorities in September forced consideration of something other than a drastic mechanical failure. Mindful of the rampant speculation regarding possible terrorism that surrounded the 1996 crash of TWA Flight 800 off Long Island, since suspected the result of a fuel tank problem, U.S. officials tip-toed around the subject of terrorism in Sunday's crash.

"We do not know at this point what caused the crash," Hall said. "We are beginning what may be a long investigation."

The probe will involve crime specialists, but the bulk of the massive investigative team will consist of aircraft engineering experts. There has only been one previous fatal accident involving a Boeing 767.

Predicting a deluge of media coverage about possible causes, Hall said that until solid evidence emerges, "All of those reports will be speculative."

On Sept. 24, the Federal Aviation Administration issued an alert to airport and aviation security organizations after several U.S. agencies received a letter warning that someone would bomb a flight originating from Los Angeles or New York. EgyptAir 990 originated in Los Angeles and stopped at Kennedy International Airport before departing for its intended destination of Cairo, Egypt.

At the time, the FAA, which receives many such warnings, said it "has no information to corroborate the statements in the letter and assesses them as lacking credibility." The FAA alert remained in effect until Saturday, the day EgyptAir 990 departed Los Angeles.

You are hereby sentenced to a Vivaldi concert

The Associated Press

LAKELAND—Fifteen young men who violated the city's noise ordinance cruising the streets with car stereos blaring have been sentenced to a three-hour Vivaldi concert.

"You do not have the right to make everyone else listen to what you consider to be good music," County Judge Anne Kaylor told the assembly of defendants.

"You are going to listen to three hours of my kind of music, whether you like it or not," she said as Vivaldi played softly in the background of her courtroom Friday.

The men were there for playing their own brand of music well above the decibel limit of Lakeland's 4-year-old noise ordinance, a violation that carries a $43 fine.

"The fine means nothing to them," Kaylor said as she unleashed her new weapon with the aid of a lavender-colored boom box and a cassette of the classical master's quartet of violin concertos, The Four Seasons.

The sentence included 90 days probation, a $25 court fee and the purchase of a classical CD.

Afterwards, several defendants said they'd rather pay the fine than listen to three hours of Vivaldi.

Cesar Colchado, 21, a welder from Bowling Green, said he'd happily pay $43 to avoid the Nov. 20 concert. "That's just a waste of time," he said. "That's not going to change anyone's taste in music."

Colchado was caught Oct. 10 in his brother's car, cruising near Lakeland police headquarters with the $1,500 sound system at full volume.

Calvin Swain, 28, of Lakeland, said he disconnected his car stereo after receiving a citation. "It's not too bad. It's a little cheaper," he said of the penalty. However, he added: "I'd prefer a fine."

Between January and August, 676 loud noise citations were issued in the city.

The judge set rules for defendants attending the Vivaldi concert at the Lakeland Police Department: "You will not talk to each other, you will have no food or beverage. And hopefully next time ... you'll think about it when you start to turn the volume up."

A second violation of the noise ordinance brings a penalty six hours of classical music, she said.

Women helps those running out of time on the meter

The Associated Press

BEAVER—Karen Matsukas can't believe she doesn't attract more attention. Every other Tuesday morning, the Beaver woman dons a wig made from an old mop, a gold blouse, green tutu and wings made of wire hangars and old lace curtains.

With a wand in one hand and a bag filled with quarters in the other, Matsukas flits along College Avenue in Beaver around 9 a.m., making the little red flags in parking meters "magically" disappear. And for the most part, people just don't seem to notice.

"I can't believe no one is noticing some goofball in wings along College Avenue," Matsukas said. "What's wrong with this world? Life's going by way too fast when people don't notice."

Matsukas is affectionately known as the Beaver meter fairy among her peers at the Mothers of Preschoolers group, which meets every two weeks at the First Presbyterian Church in Beaver.

When the mothers started gathering in September, one of the first things they found was that parking was at a minimum, according to group coordinator Justine Kinnaird.

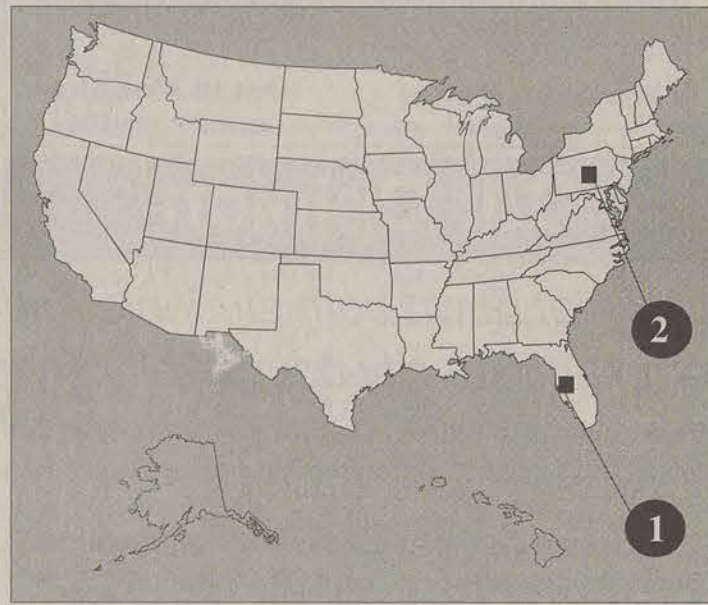

And with mothers juggling children and bags with kiddie supplies and other items, it just was kind of a pain to find a quarter to plunk into a parking meter outside the front of the church.

So Kinnaird came up with the idea of having MOPS pick up the meter tab for the mothers so that there was one less thing for them to worry about in their hectic days.

"We're trying to show God and Christ in the small details," Kinnaird said. "We're trying to show that we care, and so does God, about every small detail in your life."

So the idea of Matsukas dropping quarters into the meters was born.

Now Kinnaird doesn't want people to think the group believes in any way that God would dress like a fairy. The group just decided that if it was going to perform an act of kindness, there was no reason not to have a little fun at the same time, and the meter fairy was born.

"Every time I get into the bathroom to change, it's like 'What am I, nuts? What am I doing?' But once I get out there, it's great. I get a really good feeling doing this," Matsukas said.

On a recent Tuesday morning, Matsukas walked down College Avenue, making sure the meters hadn't expired. She was wandless, because her 2-year-old son, Nicholas, had borrowed it, but her gold bag was still filled with quarters.

She sticks with the meters on College Avenue, though the urge to fill others sometimes takes flight.

"Sometimes it's like 'Let's do the whole town!'" Matsukas said with a laugh.

Matsukas said that when she feeds the meters at a neighboring pediatrician's office, mothers will say, "Oh, bless you," and children may peek at her costume and exclaim, "Ooooh, look, it's an angel." Not exactly an angel, but rather someone doing her part to make it easier.

"This makes me feel really good," Matsukas said. "It's a great feeling when people say thank you."

Pre-game party to be held Thursday

Special to the G-A

Eagle Entertainment is throwing a pre-game party complete with dancers, football players and cheerleaders to get Eagle fans excited about the big game Saturday against Furman tomorrow from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Rotunda.

GSU must win the contest to share part of the Southern Conference title with likely co-winners Furman and Appalachian State.

The pre-game party will include a chance to get autographs from GSU football players, performances from Eagle cheerleaders and Southern Explosion Dance Team and live music from DJ Rob.

The event will also feature free food and Coca-Cola, a chance to have pictures taken with GUS the Eagle and the opportunity to create your own frisbee spin art.

The game will be held at Paulson Stadium at 1 p.m.

Museum of Death moving to Hollywood

The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO—A steady stream of visitors viewed exhibits of bloody deaths, artwork by serial killers and other morbid memorabilia in the final hours of the Museum of Death.

The museum, housed in what owners say is the site of the city's first mortuary, closed its doors on Halloween due to a lease disagreement with the building owner. But the museum's death is only temporary. Owners already may have found a new home in ... where else? Hollywood.

Cathee Shultz, who co-owns the museum with her husband, J.D. Healy, said Los Angeles was a natural fit.

"With all the redevelopment going on there, the landlords were very interested in getting a new, interesting and unique museum in the area," Shultz said.

Sally Chateau, a first-time visitor from Los Angeles, couldn't decide whether she would visit again at the new location.

"No, once is enough," Chateau said, barely taking her eyes off a letter written by serial killer Richard Ramirez. "Well, it's a lot to read. I might need to come back to finish reading."

A posted notice warns that some exhibits are "of extreme graphic nature," and they have indeed been too much for some people, who have thrown up or fainted at the sight of them.

For a $5 admission fee, visitors to the original museum sat in a small room to watch a television placed inside a casket that served as an armoire. It showed them such grisly images as a man being scalped.

Five other small rooms contained a life-size guillotine, the blood-stained T-shirt worn by a man who was executed in an electric chair, displays devoted to notorious criminals such as Charles Manson and crime scene photos of dismembered bodies.

Janet Shearer, who is majoring in forensic science at a local college, said she was visiting the museum a second time before it shut down because it helps her better understand the motivations of serial killers.

"In a lot of ways, it's grotesque, but I think there's a fascination with serial killers," said Shearer, whose father is a police officer. "This helps us take a look into their minds and be more aware of what kind of psychopaths are out there."

The museum, which opened in 1995, began as a hobby for the owners, who wrote to serial killers because they were interested in finding out more about them. Soon, they had acquired a collection of art work created by their pen pals and displayed it at a gallery they used to run.

Finally, they decided to open a museum devoted exclusively to deathful way."

Nicely let down both students and community in city council election

The city council elections have finally come to a close with absolutely no surprises in either the mayoral race or district 4 turnouts.

Who in their right mind would elect a mayor who compares an SGA president to the stately Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.? Apparently not too many people—246 voters, to be exact. At least Williamson made a visible effort to promote his campaign, though. We saw "Back Jack" stickers, yard signs and other paraphernalia from Williamson.

What did we see from Nicely? Blue pencils on the afternoon of the election. No thanks—those are provided, sharpened and ready to mark the ballot at the voting booths. About the most publicity Nicely got was from the combined articles published in this newspaper and The Statesboro Herald, and while they say that no press is bad press, Nicely really pushed the envelope this election season.

And what about Nicely's position as SGA president? If this city council election was really something that Nicely cared deeply about, wouldn't he have resigned his position as SGA president to put that effort into the District 4 elections?

It should make people wonder what Nicely's true motivations were for this campaign. If there was some point to be made, Nicely certainly didn't make it by wasting both the city's and the community's time.

If Nicely's intent was to prove that students care about the city enough to run for city council positions, and that having a student run for such a position would promote student involvement in local elections, then he certainly let down both students of GSU and the community.

Nicely's council loss was not a surprise

The results are in and Aaron Nicely is not. Despite the opinion of many student leaders on campus, the town of Statesboro, or should I say District 4?, did not vote Nicely into the city councilman position.

And that is a very good thing.

Nicely did not campaign for the position. The only campaign materials I ever saw for him were some pencils given out yesterday and an ill-conceived letter from Jack Williamson. Not exactly what you would expect from a guy who gave out pizza during the SGA elections.

Where was that drive this fall? Where were the T-shirts and lollipops? While I don't believe that goodies should win people elections, it worked for Nicely last year against his SGA opponents. Why didn't he put forth that much effort this year?

Last spring Nicely managed to convince 703 people on this campus to vote for him. Couldn't he have managed half of that for city council?

It is a much more important position. It has long term ramifications, and it looks like Nicely didn't really want it.

KELLEY MCGONNELL

EDITOR

Maybe he did want it. Maybe he didn't have time to run a campaign

Nicely went to class. While Brannen advertised in campus and town publications, Nicely did his homework. On top of the efforts of Brannen, and run SGA. Maybe somebody pointed that out to him.

But Nicely proved to be an unworthy opponent for the polished and organized efforts of Joe Brannen.

While Brannen littered District 4 with campaign signs, Nicely shook hands on campus. While Brannen had staffers call potential voters, Nicely lost because he couldn't get his facts straight.

Just how long has he lived in District 4? He told the G-A two-and-a-half years; he signed an affidavit claiming four years of residence.

If Nicely had been so concerned about the liquor referendum in March of 1997, why didn't he register to vote until September of 1999?

It is a great idea to get involved in city politics. Everyone should do it on some level. But look before you leap.

I would love to have a student represent District 4 on the city council. I think it would definitely benefit GSU and the city of Statesboro. After all, Cory Andrews wasn't half bad.

But that student needs to put the race for city council first. He or she needs to appeal to GSU students and the other residents of the district. He or she needs to hold forums, attend debates, give out campaign literature and, in general, try.

Oh yeah, telling the truth wouldn't hurt.

As usual students did not vote. Unofficial polls on campus showed that many students supported Aaron Nicely for city council. There were definitely enough students here that like him to have at least given Brannen a run for his money. But they didn't vote and Brannen's supporters did.

Reach for the branches, not the blossoms

Why do we put on masks? Why do we "perform" acts we know we cannot perform? And why do we allow people to mold us?

Three questions we, as people, repeatedly ask ourselves as we glance before our mirrors. I've consulted with a group of friends, evaluated the issue, and came up with the following conclusions.

You see, the reason we allow these things to happen is because we have yet to evaluate who "we are." We know that we are "somebody" and that we stand for "something," but we haven't had the chance to question what exactly that is.

We have been pretending to be someone we're totally opposite of to please the individuals that surround us. We have allowed their opinion of us to become our own, pushing our "real"

We must be comfortable enough to stand up for our beliefs, of who we are, and not be afraid of not being accepted. It's always better to be a leader vs. a follower, because only you and Him control the path you will eventually follow. We are also better off being ourselves then masquerading for others.

At the point where we realize that we are all individuals and gain self confidence about ourselves, is the point where we begin to unmask ourselves. Hopefully this article will help spark our unmasking.

But we must wear our masks first—they guide us through our learning periods. By learning from our mistakes and experiences, we mature and identify who we really are. And when we know who we are, we can get rid of our masks. So...are you still wearing a mask?

Swimmer wants more and better coverage of GSU swim meets

Editor:

I would like to begin by commending the efforts of all the editors and staff members of The George Anne. The articles have always been concise and accurate. It takes a lot of cooperation and hard work from many talented people to put together a newspaper. Yet, your staff does it with a great deal of eloquence and dignity and this is reflected in the commendable paper that is distributed throughout Georgia Southern and Statesboro three times a week.

Over the last month or so, I have been extremely concerned with the articles, or should I say lack there of, that have been dedicated to the swimming and diving team. As a member of the swim team for the Lady Eagles, I am appalled, and I vehemently object to the minute amount of coverage that your paper has given us.

So far, we have had six meets and only two have had articles printed. That's only if you consider a two line long paragraph in the margin an article. I don't want the swim team to be an inconvenience to anyone, but I think that we deserve the credit that is rightfully due. We put in just as much time and practice as all of the other teams at this school, and we work just as hard. I do believe that we should be accredited with more than two lines, no matter what the outcome of the meet.

Yes, we did lose to Virginia Tech, however, several of our swimmers had personal best times and placed extremely well against a fast Division I team. We are just asking for the support of the students, faculty, and staff. By printing articles, you are giving us the recognition and acknowledgment that we are even a team at GSU.

Just because we don't bring in as much money as any of the other teams, it does not mean that we don't exist and should be ignored. I'm not asking for everyone to rush out to Hanner and come watch a swim meet. Yet, I would just like to know that our blood, sweat, and tears are meaningful and our hard work is appreciated by the school that we work so hard to represent.

Thank you for your time, and I hope that this small discrepancy can be corrected in future issues of The George Anne.

Syracuse football player in critical condition after bar stabbing

TMS Campus

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — A senior starter on Syracuse University's football team remained in critical condition Monday after being stabbed during a melee that resulted in several arrests and sent at least four people — including two other players — to area hospitals.

University and city officials are still trying to make sense of the brawl, which erupted early Sunday and involved as many as 75 people hanging out at "Sadie's Place," a bar whose troubled past has prompted many SU students to dub it "Shady's."

"This is not a good establishment, and it's not a regular, college-student hangout," said Syracuse spokesman Kevin Morrow. "We know our athletes shouldn't have been there, but right now, we're focused on our hope for David Byrd's recovery."

Byrd, 21, a senior defensive back, from Schenectady, N.Y., was rushed into surgery at University Hospital with chest wounds near his heart. Also hurt were junior defensive tackle Duke Pettijohn, 22, of Mattapan, Miss., and sophomore offensive tackle Giovanni DeLoatch, 20, of Teaneck, N.J. Pettijohn and DeLoatch were treated in area hospitals for cuts on their bodies and heads and released.

Two other men, who are not SU students but are friends of the players, also were injured during the fight. One remained hospitalized in critical condition Monday, while the other was treated and released.

Syracuse police found two knives at the scene and charged two men in connection with the fight: Cheiron Thomas and Trequill Stackhouse, both 22. Thomas is charged with first-degree gang assault and second-degree assault, and Stackhouse is charged with first-degree gang assault and first-degree assault. More arrests are expected, police said.

Investigators spent much of Monday trying to determine what started the fight. Police at the scene said bouncers tried to clear the bar after smelling marijuana. As the crowd outside grew thicker, some of the suspects and victims exchanged words. Soon, the five unarmed victims were overpowered by more than a half-dozen attackers, many of whom had weapons, police said. The players and their friends did not appear to have been targeted because of their athlete status, police said.

Syracuse head coach Paul Pasqualoni, who spent Sunday at the hospital, said he was "shocked and saddened that such an incident could occur."

"Our program discourages student-athletes from going to a place like this," he said in a prepared statement. "The notion of staying out of this kind of establishment will be reinforced by both the football program and athletics department."

Sadie's Place, owned by the wife of an Onondaga County sheriff's deputy, has seen its fair share of trouble in the past few years. In February, a Syracuse man was stabbed there after trying to break up a fight. Last November, former Syracuse University football player Antwaune Ponds started a fight with a woman outside the bar and held a 6-inch knife to her throat. He was later charged with menacing and criminal possession of a weapon. Police have also reported at least two other serious assaults just outside the bar.

Despite the bar's bad reputation, Syracuse players told police they often go there because it's off campus and gives them some privacy from students and fans.

That allure may have prompted the players' visit to Sadie's on Saturday night. The fight broke out only hours after Syracuse's 24-23 loss to Boston College, a decided underdog, in the Carrier Dome.

"It's a terrible tragedy that no SU athlete nor student should go through," said Adam Schweizer, a junior education major. "And it is a big loss for the team and the school if none of them play again."

A VIEW FROM THE CHEAP SEATS

JOHN BRYSON

Furman stands in our way once again

Well, here it is. It all comes down to one game, a fight for survival if you will, between GSU and Furman to determine the fate of the Southern Conference. Even after the loss at Appalachian State, we still have the ability to at least gain a share of the conference crown.

Personally, I wouldn't have it any other way. This is why we play football here in the Boro. I mean, it could be 1-8 VMI (who happens to be playing Appalachian this week, how's that for a tight one) we take on this week, assuring us of another win. Yet, the football gods have shone favorably on us, and granted us Furman and with it this one last opportunity to redeem ourselves after our disappointing performance at Appalachian.

Any number of questions come to mind when considering the story behind this weekend's game. Can we beat Furman, a team that just last weekend whipped I-A North Carolina in Chapel Hill to the tune of 28-3? How will our team respond to the pressure of being put on the spot in front of the home crowd?

Can the GSU defense keep a Furman offense that racked up 461 yards of total offense against UNC in check?

Will Greg Hill and Adrian Peterson have error-free games, which are sure to be required this weekend and have cost us in the past (i.e. Massachusetts)? Will the mystique of Paulson Stadium send yet another team packing with a loss? And last, but certainly not least, will the sometimes fickle fans of GSU show up, cheer loudly and remain in the stands for more than the first half?

I tend to believe that we will pull it out this weekend. I think we went through our struggles against App St. and The Citadel, hitting stride for the road to Chattanooga against ETSU.

While Furman may appear to be riding a wave of euphoria coming in, they may be setting themselves up for a big let-down. They have to keep their heads from swelling up if they expect to come in here and beat us.

Also, I think it's nice to know that all the games that came before this one now seem small in comparison to the importance of this weekend's game. Check your manners at the door, because this is gonna be one gigantic clash of the titans. GSU vs. Furman. Greg Hill vs. Justin Hill. Adrian Peterson vs. Stuart Rentz. Paul Johnson vs. Bobby Johnson.

This game will set the tone for the postseason and I'm sure the football team realizes that. This team is one that is strong on talent and discipline, but this weekend they will show us if they have the will and heart necessary to make a run at the national title.

Allen named Burger King scholar athlete

• $10,000 will be placed in the general scholarship fund for his achievements

Special to the G-A

Burger King corporation has named Voncellies Allen of GSU a Division I-AA College Football Scholar Athlete. In honor of his outstanding athletic and academic achievements and his commitment to mentoring the community's youth, Burger King Corporation has donated $10,000 to the GSU general scholarship fund in his name. The award will be presented by Burger King franchisee, John Kohn, along with GSU Athletic Director Sam Baker, faculty athletics representative Richard Rogers, and director of student-athlete services, Keith Roughton during halftime of the Furman game this Saturday at 1 p.m.

Voncellies Allen is a senior who has maintained a 3.62 GPA as a chemistry major, while starting as a defensive lineman for the GSU Eagles football team. In addition to his academic and athletic endeavors, Allen feeds the less fortunate in his community at Thanksgiving and Christmas, is a regular drug education speaker, and a volunteer for cleanup of the Statesboro Bulloch County Parks. Allen is also a three-year Walk America participant.

"These athletes serve as outstanding role models of achievement in the classroom, on the football field and in their communities," says Richard Taylor, vice president, Marketing Services, Burger King corporation. "We are proud to honor these young people who have truly applied themselves in school and still found the time to remain actively involved with helping others."

Developed to foster the pursuit of athletic and academic excellence while encouraging social awareness and community service, the Burger King College Football Scholarship Program is the single largest corporate commitment of its kind to the sport of college football. The awarding of these scholarships is based on academic achievement, dedication to community service and athletic ability.

Now in its fifth year, the program has already donated a total of $4.3 million in college scholarship funds to 211 colleges and universities nationwide. The 1999 program will raise the overall Burger King contribution to $5.3 million.

SoCon tourney begins this weekend for men's soccer

• McClure and other seniors prepare for what will be their final games in a GSU uniform

Luke Renfro

FINAL DAYS: All-time GSU scoring leader Jeremy McClure prepares to end his career.

G-A News Service

The No. 6 seed GSU men's soccer team will play No. 3 seed Davidson in Friday's opening round of the 1999 Southern Conference Tournament at Blackbaud Stadium in Charleston, S.C. The Wildcats secured the No. 3 slot with a 3-0 win over Wofford last night to end their regular season.

Furman will enter the tournament as the top team after finishing with a perfect 8-0 conference record. Friday's opening round matches will begin with the Paladins taking on 8th seed The Citadel at 11:30 a.m., followed by a 2 p.m. match pitting 2nd seed UNC-Greensboro (11-6-1, 7-1-0) against 7th seed Wofford (4-12-0, 2-6-0). The bout with GSU (5-11-1, 3-5-0) and Davidson (9-10-1, 5-3-0) will start at 4:30 p.m., followed by 4th seed Appalachian State (8-9-0, 5-3-0) battling 5th seed College of Charleston (5-13-1, 4-4-0) at 7 p.m.

A GSU win in the first round would pit the Eagles against the winner of the UNCG/Wofford match in Saturday's semifinal round at 7 p.m. The survivors from each of the semifinal games will play for the Southern Conference Tournament Championship on Sunday at 3 p.m.

In the Oct. 1 regular season match, Davidson claimed a 3-1 win over GSU after outshooting the Eagles 25-11. Junior Tony Brown scored the lone goal for the Eagles in the 48th minute off an assist from senior Matt Colaluca. GSU senior keeper John Miglarese recorded eight saves in the losing cause.

GSU will bring into Friday's match the number two scorer in the conference, senior Jeremy McClure, who has scored 12 goals and recorded five assists for 29 points this season. McClure is also second in the league in top point averages (1.71 ppg) and top goal averages (0.71 gpg). Davidson will rely on the play of sophomore Chris Norbet, who is right behind McClure in the SoCon's scoring category (27 points off 12 goals and three assists) and top goal averages category (0.63 gpg). Norbet sits fourth on the top point averages chart (1.42 ppg).

GSU swimming loses to Emory, Davidson

Staff reports

The GSU swimming and diving team competed against both Emory University and Davidson this past weekend in Atlanta. Davidson won both of its head to head matchups (144-99 vs. Emory, 161-82 vs. GSU), while Emory was able to garner a split by beating GSU (164-77).

High finishers for GSU included Jennifer Martin, who finished first in both the 50-yard freestyle event (25.10) and 100-yard freestyle event (55.33). Also, Hannah Goddard and Holly Schumacher were able to place second in their respective events, the 1,000-yard freestyle (10:49.62) and the 200-yard individual medley (2:14.10).

Two Tar Heels suspended after fight

Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. - North Carolina star point guard Ed Cota and backup Terrence Newby were suspended indefinitely from the basketball team after several people were involved in a fight early Monday.

Cota and Newby, the only seniors on the roster, turned themselves in to campus police Monday afternoon after warrants were issued for their arrest on three counts of assault inflicting serious injury and two counts of simple assault. All the charges are misdemeanors.

Cota and Newby denied they were involved in the fight near a residence hall, which was a carryover from a Halloween celebration on Franklin Street, the main street in Chapel Hill adjoining the campus.

"I support them and I love them to death, but we have a policy that if there is a fight you run the other way because this is what happens, there were others involved and they were the ones recognized," coach Bill Guthridge said Monday at a news conference.

Guthridge said the two players told him they were defending friends and trying to break up the fight.

"If what they told me is true then they will be back (soon)," Guthridge said. "I don't have any reason not to believe them, but I want to get all the facts. It's one of those 'he said, she said' things. Sometimes you don't get all the facts."

Guthridge and athletic director Dick Baddour have spoken with police, who are still investigating the incident.

"Keep in mind this is the first day, so we need some time to understand all the dynamics of this," Baddour said.

Cota, a second-team all-Atlantic Coast Conference performer last season, is regarded as one of the best point guards in the country. He averaged 7.4 assists last season, fourth in the nation.

Newby, who has played little in his career at North Carolina, was slated to be Cota's backup at point guard. The Tar Heels are also without point guard Ronald Curry, who ruptured his right Achilles' tendon while playing quarterback for the football team.

The Tar Heels practiced Monday without the two suspended guards, who won't practice with the team until the incident is resolved.

"It's pretty hard to play without a point guard," said Guthridge, who has only freshman Jon Holmes and a walk-on left to fill the position.

North Carolina, expected to be ranked in the pre-season Top 10, opens its season Nov. 22 in the Maui Tournament in Hawaii.

The players were taken to the Orange County magistrate's office and released under $1,000 unsecured bonds. Their court date was set for Dec. 6.

Three other students involved in the fight told police they were injured.

"Halloween night has gotten a little bit rambunctious," Guthridge said. "A few years ago it used to be fun."

David Spaulding, 20, was listed in good condition at UNC Hospitals, school officials said. The other two students were treated and released from the school's Student Health Service.

UNC Police Maj. Jeff McCracken said additional arrests were possible.

Guthridge said he wasn't overly concerned that the players were out at 2:50 a.m.

"Back in my era, many years ago, everybody went to bed before midnight," the 62-year-old Guthridge said. "Now, the college students go out at midnight. They didn't break any team rules as far as being out late."

G-A News Service

The GSU women's soccer team recorded a 2-1 win over Middle Tennessee State on Saturday at the Jacksonville State Invitational in Jacksonville, Ala. The win followed a 0-0 tie against the host team on Friday, putting the Lady Eagles at 9-8-1 overall at the end of the regular season slate.

In Saturday's match, the Lady Eagles received a pair of first-half goals, the first from Melissa Cox at the 14:12 mark and the second from Tara Chaisson at the 17:00 mark. Chaisson assisted the first goal, and Amanda Bernard and Andrea Pheiffer collected the double assist on the second goal.

GSU keeper Vanessa Bales collected three saves and allowed only one goal in the full 90:00 in goal. Southern outshot MTSU 12-8 in the match.

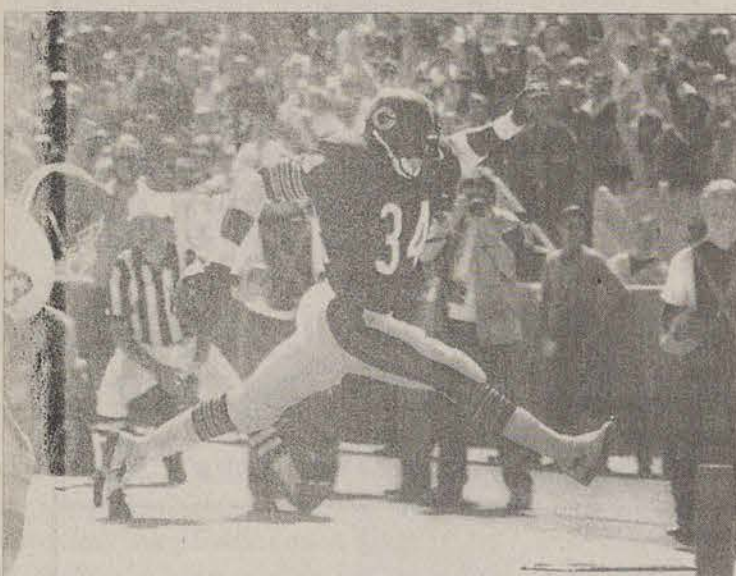

Chaisson joined Jaclyn Flock and Stephanie Todd in representing GSU on the all-tournament team.

NFL legend Walter "Sweetness" Payton dead at the age of 45

Walter Payton

TMS Campus

Associated Press

CHICAGO, IL - Walter Payton, the elusive running back who was the NFL's all-time leading rusher and took the Chicago Bears to their only Super Bowl championship, died Monday after battling a rare liver disease. He was 45.

Payton rushed for 16,726 yards in his 13-year career, one of the most awesome records in sports. He missed only one game, and that was when he had an ankle injury during his rookie season.

"It's grossly unfair to judge Walter Payton solely on the yards he gains," former Bears general manager Jim Finks said when Payton was elected to the Hall of Fame in 1993. "He is a complete football player, better than Jim Brown, better than O.J. Simpson."

Though his nickname was "Sweetness,"

Payton's running style was bruising. He vaulted over goal lines. He stiff-armed and barreled over tacklers in the open field almost as often as he dodged them. He was a dependable receiver and could throw the ball well, too.

Against the Buffalo Bills in 1979, he took off from the 2-yard line and landed a yard deep in the end zone on his head. In one of his more famous runs, he bounced off every defender on the Kansas City Chiefs.

"There were guys who ran with the ball better, faster. But I don't think anyone ever ran with more determination than Walter," said Mike Ditka, who coached Payton for six years, including Chicago's 1985 Super Bowl season. "He's the best football player I've ever seen."

Payton was difficult to stop at every stage of his career. His 3,563 yards rushing at Jackson State University was one of nine school records he set, and he scored 66 touchdowns. He once scored 46 points in one game.

He led the nation in scoring in 1973 with 160 points, and his 464 career points was an NCAA record.

Because Jackson State was a Division I-AA school, however, Payton didn't get the same attention as players at bigger colleges. He was a two-time All-American, but he finished fourth in voting for the Heisman Trophy in 1974.

In 1977, just his third year in the NFL, Payton won the first of two MVP awards with the most productive season of his career. He rushed for 1,852 yards, including 275 in one game a record that still stands.

In 1984, he broke Brown's long-standing rushing record of 12,312 yards and kept going. "I want to set the record so high that the next person who tries for it, it's going to bust his heart," Payton said.

Payton carried mediocre Chicago teams for most of his career, but the Bears finally made it to the Super Bowl in 1985. Payton rushed for 1,551 yards and nine touchdowns as the Bears went 15-1 in the regular season.

Chicago beat New England 46-10 in the Super Bowl, but Payton didn't score in the game. He was so upset, Ditka later apologized to him.

Payton retired after the 1987 season, and the Bears immediately retired his No. 34.

Payton was widely celebrated in Chicago, the city's highest-profile athlete in the years after Cubs' Hall of Famer Ernie Banks retired and before Bulls' superstar Michael Jordan emerged.

Georgia Southern University Health Services is available to students for consultation, examination, diagnosis, and treatment to illnesses and injuries.

Location: The Health Center is located on Forest Drive across from Watson Hall and near the Lakeside Cafe.

Operating Hours: 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday - Friday during the semester with limited services and hours during semester breaks.

Eligibility & Costs: All GSU students are eligible to use the Health Center. Students enrolled in four or more semester hours prepay the health fee (currently $66.00 for fall & spring and $30.00 for summer) at the beginning of each semester while students taking less than 4 semester hours may choose to prepay the health fee. Although the health fee allows students unlimited visits throughout the semester, there are usually additional costs incurred each visit for prescriptions, x-rays, lab tests, and immunizations. Payment for these services is due at the time of the visit.

A valid Georgia Southern University identification card is required to access services at the Health Center

Staff: The highly-qualified staff of Health Services include a physician, nurse practitioners, nurses, clerical staff, a radiologic technologist, a laboratory technologist, and a health educator. The relationship between patients and our staff is strictly confidential. Please contact us any time for more information.

Graduate school 101

By Hannah Helton
Staff Writer

Aaah...college.

After these four years are over, school will be done forever!

No more tests, no more long and tedious lectures, no more homework due...freedom.

Yeah, only if your head is stuck in a hole in the ground.

For those of you who haven't already realized it, college has now become a stepping stone for even higher education.

Graduate school is right around the corner.

Graduate school usually has two purposes: to prepare a person for a professional career and to remain in academia for a few more years while still preparing for the "real world."

According to George Lynch, director of testing, a Master's degree has almost replaced the Bachelor's degree.

Many professions now require a Master's degree and even a Doctorate. Those professions that do not require them certainly favor them, however, during the hiring process.

The higher your level of education, the more opportunities that are available.

"Students who are thinking of

• GRE-- Required by most graduate schools.

• MCAT-- Required for entrance to medical schools.

• LSAT--Required for admittance to law schools.

• GMAT--Required for most Masters in business.

attending graduate school should already be planning which schools to apply to and the appropriate tests to take by the beginning of their senior year," Lynch said.

Students should plan ahead in case they must take a test again, he said.

"Most students have difficulty with the tests that are required to get into graduate school, and have to take them more than one time," he said. "Students need to plan ahead so that they have all of the information, including test scores, that the schools they are looking at require turned in on time."

Some academic clubs on campus are making things a little easier for students considering graduate school.

One such club is the Psychology Coalition who held a meeting in September for students thinking about attending graduate school.

Three graduate school students were present to discuss graduate school requirements and the difference between graduate and undergraduate schools.

Kelli Taylor, a graduate student studying experimental psychology, was one of the speakers.

"There is more reading and you are expected to have read and to contribute your original responses to class discussions," Taylor said.

"You will have at least one paper and presentation in every class, possibly more. If you aren't good with public speaking..well, maybe this [graduate school] isn't the best thing for you."

Jennifer Warkentin, president of the Psi Chi Honorary Society, was one of the coordinators for the meeting.

"It is so important that people know that in order to pursue their careers, they are going to have to go to graduate school," Warkentin said. "They also need to know how to get in and what to expect. It is a lot different and much, much harder."

Helpful hints when preparing for graduate school:

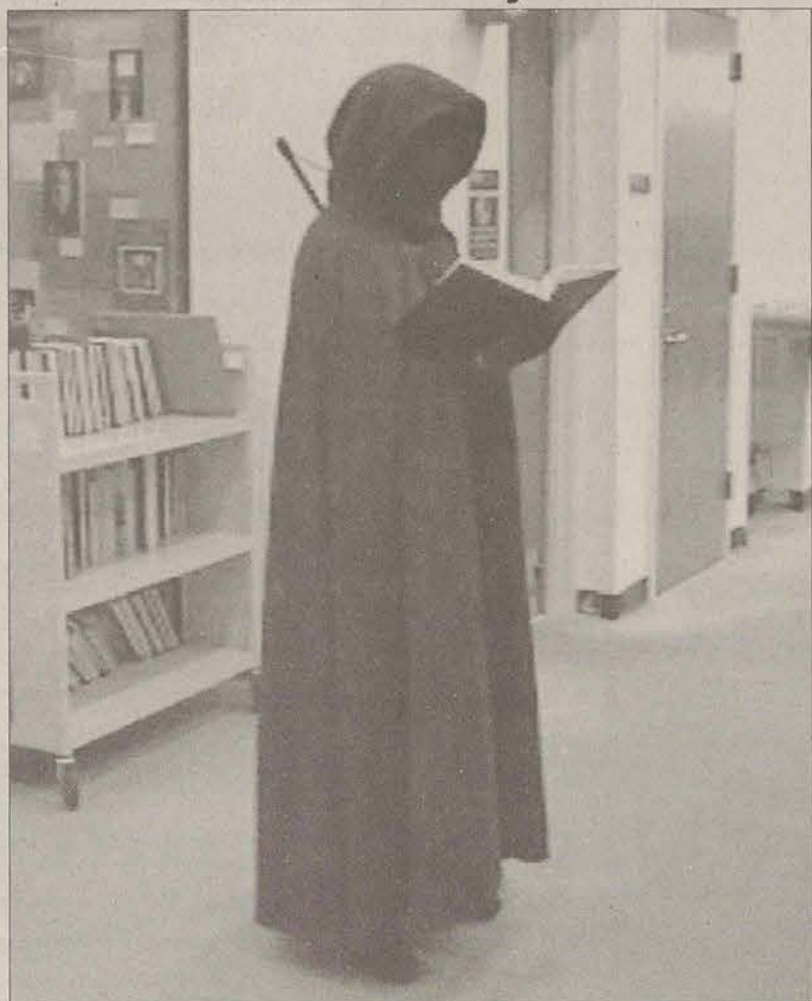

1. Beginning at the end of your junior year, decide what schools you would like to apply to.
2. Begin studying for the Graduate Record Exam (GRE) and any other tests that are required for the schools that you are interested in.
3. Begin applying to the schools that interest you, being mindful of deadlines for scores. Normally, the GRE and other tests begin in October, so keep in mind that it takes a few weeks to get scores back.
4. After scores come back, double check with your prospective schools to make sure that your file is updated.

What choices will WWF entertainment make next?

By Michael Russo
Staff Writer

The World Wrestling Federation has made some interesting choices in last few weeks. Some of these choices are for the better, while others are for the worse.

I was glad to both hear and see, this past Monday night, that Chyna has her own entrance music and video. A lot of wrestling fans were confused with Chyna and Triple H sharing the same music due to the fact that Triple H has remained a heel while Chyna has turned face. Good choice by the men and women in Stamford, Conn.

While I'm on the subject of Triple H, let me express my views on D-Generation X. There are a lot of people who see this reunion as a positive thing, while I see it as a negative one for a number of reasons.

For one, I thought Triple H was doing fine on his own. Putting him back with DX will only limit how far this young man will be able to go. In addition, the DX we have seen on Smackdown and RAW in the last week is not the DX I remember. Instead of me laughing at what the boys in neon green and black have to say or do, I'm laughing at what the other Superstars say and do in retaliation to DX's antics. But one of my biggest criticisms of this reunion is the fact that the characters that make up DX have evolved over the last year, and are not the same. To have the Road Dogg, X-Pac, Mr. Ass, and Triple H pull off childlike pranks like they used to is no longer in their character. With this being the case, I can clearly see why the creative team would choose to make them more thuggish then funny. But the bottom line is that the WWF should have left DX alone. DX was funny and very entertaining in the past. If they can't be the way we all remember, then DX should have been a faction left in the past.

The WWF is always adding to its roster, and this is definitely a "good" thing. With two more hours of programming a week, I can't help but feel that a lot of Superstars have been overexposed. I am truly looking forward to Kurt Angle's arrival on WWF programming, as well as Taz's debut in January. The WWF has very high expectations on both individuals.

The showdown between Chyna and Chris Jericho at the Survivor Series for the Intercontinental Title is going to be an exciting match-up. Both Superstars have a lot of potential and would make great champions. It'll be very interesting to see what choice the creative team decides to make.

This whole editorial is about good choices and bad choices, so let me state that if the WWF has decided to drop the whole Mae Young and Moolah promo, then I'm sure everyone will agree that that would be a "good" choice.

Finally, let me congratulate the WWF's creative team for utilizing Scott Taylor and Brian Christopher. Both of these athletes will go very far if they continue to get more television time. It is evident that this young team has a strong desire to entertain as well as perform in the ring.

That's all for now. Until next week, keep watching.

Gallery 303 honors the late Bernie Solomon

Special to the G-A

During the month of November, GSU's Gallery 303 will present its third exhibition of the year. The show will feature artwork from previous students of the late Bernie Solomon. At noon tomorrow Gallery 303 will host an opening reception in honor of the creative efforts of Solomon's accomplishments as a teacher.

Between 1971 and 1995, Solomon worked as a faculty member at GSU. Throughout this time period, he was a passionate artist and motivational print making teacher. In the most ideal sense of a true teacher / artist, his creative work such as the two series "Song of Songs" and "Faust," served to inspire his students.

The media range of featured student prints includes intaglio, lithograph, wood cut, silver point etching, embossing, silk screen, monoprint and other combinations. Because Solomon was the type of teacher who encouraged students to look inward and pull images from their own emotions and experiences, it is no surprise that the works in this exhibition include humble illustrations intermixed with complex abstract forms. The youthful joys presented in "Honey, Are You Sure You Can Drive?" are contrasted with a maturing relationship in "Baby, We've Had Our Ups and Downs But We're Still Together." "Darkened Room" presents deep insecurities, while "Masquerade" creates a whimsical mood.

Spending many hours in the studio with his students, Bernie became sensitive to his students' mistakes. When it came down to perfection, he always stressed that "hard work" is the best way to create a great print. The work shown in the gallery is often many generations away from the first proof or attempt of the student. It is obvious when looking at the images that the students mastered the techniques in order to tell their stories through the prints.

Gallery 303 is located on the third floor of the Foy Fine Arts Building on the campus of GSU.

Rip Us Off.

That's right - you heard right. Rip us off. Get something for nothing. Say hello to a friend. Find a roommate. Get a job. Find a home for a litter of kittens. Buy a wombat. Or sell your Beamer (right, like you expect us to believe that you - and not your folks - actually have the title to that BMW). Regardless of your purpose (or even if you are a congenital liar like the Beamer owner), Georgia's liveliest classified ad section is for you. Students, faculty and staff can have their 20-word action ads published for nothing (non-commercial listings only, please). Fill out the little rectangles below, and send your ad to G-A Action Ads, POB 8001, GSU or drop them by our offices in the Williams Center, Room 2023. You MUST include your name and P.O. Box number to qualify for a freebie. Remember, keep it short: students, faculty and staff must pay 20¢ per words for those which exceed the 20-word limit. And, please - no telephone calls... at this price we don't take dictation.

Joyce Estrada: master of all trades

By Jerel Watkins
Staff Writer

In case you have had your ears plugged and your eyes blindfolded in the past few years, Hispanic culture has strongly permeated into American culture and fortunately for the Ricky Martins, Salma Hayeks, and Jennifer Lopezes of the world, the American public cannot get enough of it.

Unfortunately for us, those people will probably never be even remotely close to the GSU campus. We do, however, have our very own Wonder Woman of Spanish culture: Joyce Estrada!

Who is Joyce Estrada? Don't expect to find her on MTV or on the cover of Rolling Stone anytime soon, but you can find her in the SGA office upstairs in the Russell Union.

Estrada is a renaissance woman in SGA where she resides as executive vice president. She heads elections, works on GSU constitutional updates, interviews new senators, holds seats on both the Honors and Career Services Committees, has worked over the summer as a SOAR leader, has recently participated in chartering the Hispanic Student Association and is now finishing her senior year at GSU, majoring in public relations, all at the age of 21!

To anyone at any age that is an incredible amount of responsibility, but given the rather glib manner in which she mentions these involvements, Estrada does not in the least seem daunted by the myriad of responsibilities that she holds.

Estrada was born on July 4, 1978 in New Brunswick, N.J. to Honduran immigrant parents. She was the third born of two boys and two girls and the first of the four to be born in America. For the past 14 years she has called Norcross, Ga. home and began attending GSU in 1996 and has been the SGA's executive vice president since April 1999.

Her main co-worker, Aaron

Tricia Hall

Joyce Estrada

Nicely called her "super sharp" and said that one could not find a better employee for any position.

Over the summer of 1999 Estrada worked as a member of the SOAR team, a job that she said was a "great experience" because not only does one become familiar with the faculty and staff, but there was also a diverse array of team members involved. She said she plans to graduate in December of 2000 and hopes to work with the Peace Corps and/or work in broadcasting, the family business. Her father is a radio program director.

Estrada speaks avidly of the Hispanic culture from which she hails. She said she credits it as "the one thing I hold dearest to my heart." Estrada has put her love for the culture to work by helping to establish GSU's first Hispanic Student Association along with other students in the spring of 1999.

She said that she and other Hispanics in Statesboro realized the need for such an organization when Honduras, the country from which her parents immigrated, was left ravaged in the wake of Hurricane Mitch in October, 1998.

Hondurans on campus sent aid to the Central American country in the form of clothing and food. Now exists a formal organization to handle situations like that one and any other Hispanic interests on campus.

Estrada said that her culture has made her who she is today and instilled in her a sense of family, determination and pride.

Her intended goal, she said, in working with the Hispanic Student Association is to "educate about the culture." One of the most unique qualities about the culture that Estrada acknowledges is what she called the "unity of the language."

This provides a common bond among Hispanics from all Spanish-speaking countries instead of racial and ethnic dissent as present in America. While the club comprises mainly American and international Hispanics, all nationalities are welcome to join.

So while she is not a pop-media sensation, Estrada is a hard-working and socially aware young woman.

LATIN DANCING: During a Spanish Club meeting in the Forest Drive Building, Danisa Bonacic, a Spanish professor, teaches students Latin dancing for a future excursion to the Conga Dance Club in Savannah

Spanish club shares Hispanic culture

By Jeremy Nix
Staff Writer

There is a growing concern on the campus of GSU for more awareness of the Hispanic culture. For some GSU students, a trip to El Sombrero and a shot of Jose Cuervo is their only exposure to Hispanic culture.

There are some professors on campus that want that to change.

According to Mark Tubbeh of the multicultural affairs and international students center, there are approximately 50 students at GSU from Spanish-speaking countries. With this many diverse students on GSU's campus, there is a need for more awareness of their culture.

One organization that helps with informing students of Hispanic culture is the Spanish Club. Juan Antonio Serna, a GSU Spanish professor from Monterrey, Mexico, is a co-advisor for the club.

"The purpose of the Spanish club is to promote Hispanic culture in general," Serna said.

Social activities are a big part of informing students on another culture.

"We like to use social activities to bridge the cultural gap between the Hispanic students and the rest of the GSU community," Serna said.

These social activities include meals at El Sombrero, trips to the Conga Dance Club in Savannah and speakers from Latin American countries.

Brandy McCrary, a non-Hispanic GSU student, attended the Latin dance clinic sponsored by the Spanish Club.

"I had a great time learning to Latin dance," McCrary said. "The hands on experience is much more fun than studying the culture in a classroom."

According to Serna, the main problem with not understanding Hispanic culture is the lack of correct information.

"People don't understand that each Spanish-speaking country is different," Serna said.

Professor Danisa Bonacic is teaching Spanish for a year at GSU. She is from Santiago, de Chile. She suggests that students travel to Spanish-speaking countries in order to learn more about the culture.

"I encourage students to travel to different countries and use hands-on learning," Bonacic said. "We need to get rid of the stereotypes of big hats and tequila."
