• Citing a violation of team rules, GSU baseball releases four

By John Bryson
News Editor

Four GSU baseball players have been removed from the team and nobody's saying why other than they violated team rules again. In addition, 12 other players were suspended for four games to be served during the course of the season and announced on a per-series basis.

Senior second baseman Jody Pollock, senior third baseman Ryan Petersen, junior outfielder Scott Burks and sophomore pitcher Rhett Roberts have all been notified of their dismissal effective immediately.

GSU Athletic Director Sam Baker and GSU athletic media relations director Tom McClellan said not confirm or deny that hazing played a prominent role in the decision to release the players. Baker reiterated the release was for a violation of team rules while McClellan said "I'm not in a position to confirm or deny [possible hazing]."

"We regret situations like this require extreme action," first-year baseball coach Rodney Hennon said. "However, for the benefit and future goals of the team and program, this was a very serious issue which needed to be promptly addressed."

The four students will remain in school under scholarship and will not be subject to disciplinary action by Judicial Affairs according to Baker. "This is being handled as an internal team issue," Baker said.

Jody Pollock, considered by many to be the team's best position player, hit .387 last season with 11 homers and 80 RBI. Ryan Petersen hit .284 with 1 homer and 29 RBI. Scott Burks had only four plate appearances last year, none resulting in a hit. Rhett Roberts pitched 3.2 innings last season, posting a 12.24 ERA by giving up 5 runs on 6 hits.

None of the players could be contacted as of press time.

VP SA candidate stresses importance of student recruiting

By John Bryson
News Editor

Institutions must recruit qualified and motivated students, Dr. Lee E. Bird, the third of four finalists for the position of vice president of student affairs, said on Monday.

"Each institution must define what makes it special and what they have to offer that another school does not," Bird, current vice president for student life and development at St. Cloud State University, said. She went on to say that a school must "tell its story" to prospective students in order to convince them to attend.

Secondly, Bird said she feels GSU must be able to retain the students it recruits.

"We need to be able to provide our students with a sense that they belong," Bird said. "Students need to be involved in as many facets of campus life as is possible."

Bird also stated her desire to break down artificial barriers between student affairs and academic affairs and focus on the "whole" student with multiple dimensions and needs.

"Job one is creating an environment that produces employable graduates," Bird said. "Not only should they be employable, but they should be good human beings as well."

Bird gave an example of how academic affairs and student affairs

LaVene Bell

can work together. She advocated employing a plan that is used at her current institution, St. Cloud State, where some classes would be taught in the residence halls and professors would go there to teach.

Bird did also take her lecture one step further by discussing the effects of the alcohol culture on college campuses. "If someone knows that you have a degree from a 'party school,' that is going to color their perception of your degree," Bird said. "It [alcohol] is related to sexual violence, relationship violence, vandalism and student motivation."

Bird, while citing the extreme importance of Greek organizations on campus, also pointed out that Greeks must lead by example.

"If Greek life would realize their values and their potential, it would be a great thing," Bird said. "Academic excellence, brotherhood or sisterhood and leadership are all keys to their system. Yet, nationally there are the issues of drinking, violence and hazing."

Bird is the third of four candidates who have been visiting GSU over the past two weeks. The final candidate, Dr. Douglas K. Lange of the South Dakota School of Mines and Technology will visit today at 1:30 p.m. in Russell Union room 2084.

Appeals court rules LSU violated female athletes' rights

TMS Campus

NEW ORLEANS— A federal court of appeals said Louisiana State University intentionally discriminated against female athletes by having "archaic attitudes" against women.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit issued a biting opinion last Thursday that faulted the university and its athletics director, R. Joe Dean Sr., for creating a "grossly discriminatory athletics system." Judges faulted the university for moving painfully slowly to add women's soccer and softball teams and even singled out Dean for making crude comments about women. Dean, judges noted, said women's soccer deserved consideration as a varsity sport because the players "would look cute running around in their soccer shorts."

The ruling is the latest twist in a case brought against LSU by two groups of athletes who alleged the university violated Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 because it failed to offer women's softball and soccer teams. The federal law prohibits discrimination on the basis of gender at institutions receiving federal funds.

The university claimed it intended to form the teams when the suit was filed and that it also had evidence that relatively few women were interested in playing the sports.

In 1996, a federal district court judge, Rebecca Doherty, ruled that LSU had refused to adequately consider the abilities of women on campus and that its failure to establish the women's teams indeed violated Title IX. However, she said the university had not intentionally discriminated against the women. In her ruling, Doherty said LSU's actions were the result of "arrogant ignorance, the adherence to outdated attitudes and assumptions and the confusion surrounding Title IX and its true intent."

As a result, Doherty dismissed the athletes' claims for monetary damages and the plaintiffs' request to certify the lawsuit as a class action for all female athletes at LSU. The appeals court ruled that the university's "ignorant arrogance" was no excuse for discrimination.

Judges there decided to send the case back to Doherty, who will decide again whether the case should be a class action.

If it receives that status, all current and former LSU athletes since 1993 could be eligible for monetary damages.

Fire safety stressed after slew of residence hall fires across country

By Zane Thomas
Staff Writer

In the past two weeks, there have been several fires in residence halls on college campuses all over the country. On January 19 at 4:30 a.m. a fire started on the third floor of Boland Hall, a residence hall at Seyton Hall University in New Jersey. Three residents were killed in the fire and around 60 were injured.

Later that day here at GSU, fire started in Watson Hall on the third floor of the commons building. The fire was reportedly caused by a toaster. Fortunately, it was contained within the kitchen area and no one was injured.

Fire hazards can be found on any college campus, and students should be aware of these hazards in order to prevent potentially deadly situations.

Kitchen fires are rather normal occurrence at GSU. Vicki Hawkins, director of GSU's department of housing, said that people will often cook pizzas in ovens without pans, which is potentially dangerous. Carelessness is another cause of kitchen fires.

Early Tuesday morning a plastic cover from a snack pack was left on a lit kitchen oven burner in Hendricks Hall. It was quickly extinguished, but the smell and some smoke lingered in the hall. This is just one example of how easily these fires can get started.

In the past few years, the Pines Apartments and Oxford Hall were both closed due to fire hazards. Many of the local offices around Sweetheart Circle, such as Deal Hall and Anderson Hall, which once housed students, had to be closed down too because of these hazards.

The housing department has taken many precautions to secure fire safety in residence halls. At one time, all residence halls were smoking halls, but now Cone and Stratford Hall are the only halls where residents are allowed to smoke in their rooms.

Fire extinguishers are equally dispersed throughout every residence hall on campus. Even though housing staff members are trained how to use them, Hawkins said that everyone should know how to use them.

Smoke detectors are located in all rooms on campus, and the department of housing has also restricted certain materials from being in the residence halls. Candles, incense, halogen lamps, black lights, extension cords and open coil burners are just some of the items not allowed because of their hazards. If a resident is found with one of these items, it will be taken and the resident will be sent to a disciplinary hearing.

Many students are used to fire alarms being false alarms or drills, and some tend to not want to leave their building. That was the case in the Seyton Hall tragedy. Many of the residents thought it was a false alarm and didn't leave their rooms. Here at GSU, failure to evacuate a building during a fire alarm is a major violation of the Georgia Criminal Code. Students who are caught in violation will receive disciplinary action and can be suspended from school for one semester.

"We treat fire safety very, very seriously," Hawkins said.

However, she said that the major concern is not punishing the students, but trying help them.

Residential Advisors inform their residents about fire alarms and what to do the event of an emergency. The contraband on illegal materials in rooms is one major way to help students.

"It's not to punish, it's there to protect," Hawkins said.

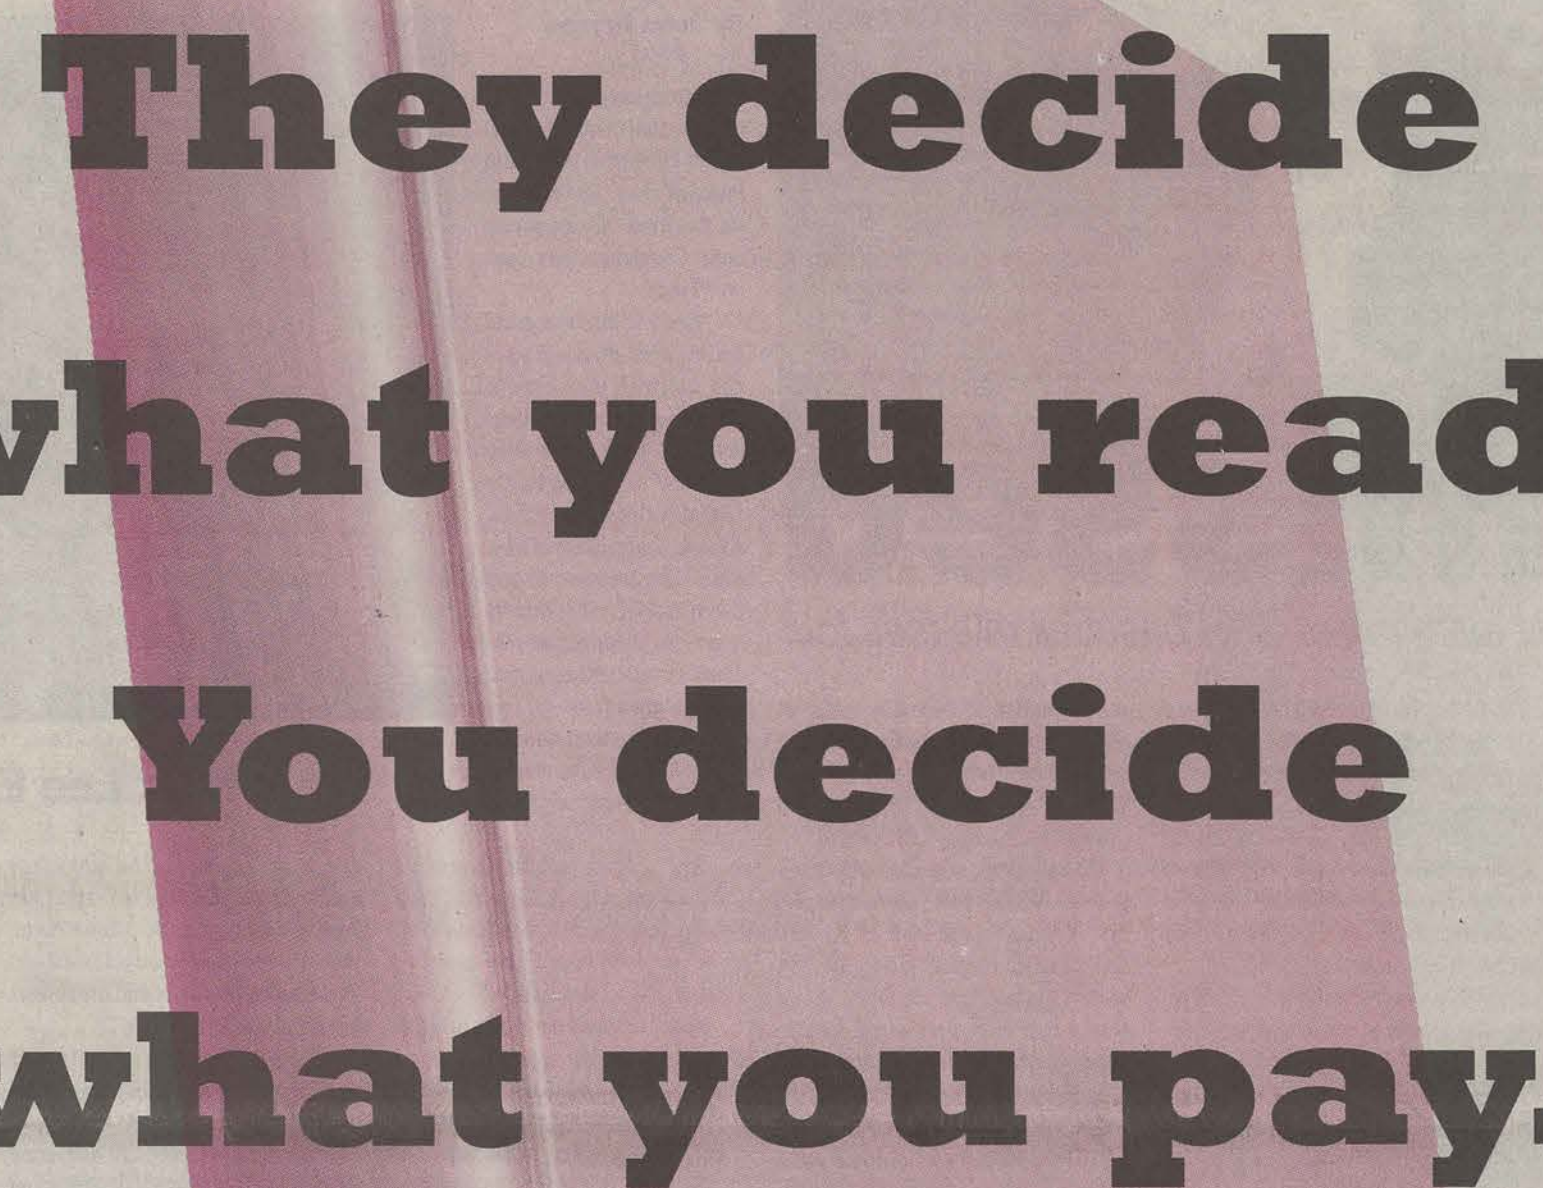

When asked about the recent incidents that have happened, Hawkins said that they were calling attention to the need for fire safety on campus.

"It's a wake-up call," she said. "Something can occur."

INTERNATIONAL NEWS BRIEF

Navy opponents vow to continue civil disobedience

The Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Many Puerto Ricans reacted with shock Monday at news that their governor had agreed to allow the U.S. Navy to resume limited military training on Vieques island.

But Gov. Pedro Rossello called the deal a "just and reasonable solution of this complex and long-standing problem" and insisted that he had achieved what most Puerto Ricans have longed for: allowing Vieques residents to decide whether, after more than 50 years, the Navy should leave the eastern island.

"The people of Vieques will decide on their own future, as it should be," Rossello said in his annual state of Puerto Rico address at the Capitol building. In protest, two pro-independence legislators walked out during Rossello's speech.

Protesters have occupied the Vieques range since a civilian security guard was killed in an accidental bombing on the base in April.

Monday's agreement calls for a referendum giving Vieques residents two choices: let the Navy resume use of the range on its own terms — including the use of live bombs — or require the Navy to cease all training by May 1, 2003.

Meanwhile, however, the Navy can resume exercises using inert bombs, something Rossello and other island leaders had vowed would never occur.

The Puerto Rican Independence Party, which has been at the forefront of the protests, vowed to oppose any renewed military exercises.

Officials need to be honest about baseball violations

GSU baseball is making headlines before the season even starts. Not only have four players been removed from the team, but twelve others face four-game suspensions during the course of the season.

While "violating university and team rules" is not something to take lightly, people still must be wondering what rules were important enough that 16 baseball players violated them and are being punished this severely.

With rumors of hazing floating around, it would seem that university officials would want to clear up any misconceptions the campus may have.

Four upperclassmen have been removed from the roster. This is not an every day occurrence. If there was ever a time to be up front with the public, this is it.

According to earlier rosters, the Eagles only had 25 players on the team. With 16 people involved in this situation, only nine players seem to have followed the rules.

Our Opinion

What happened to Eagle baseball that 64 percent of the team is in trouble? Why aren't the powers-that-be telling us more than the usual party line?

We guess it's up to the players themselves to tell the truth.

—Numerous attempts were made to contact the players involved, but no one could be reached as of press time.

Ten basic steps to good car etiquette

Well, we knew that sooner or later someone was going to write an article about driving here on campus. I'm going to try to not complain too much, but basically just point out some things that I'm sure that you are already well aware of, or maybe just give you a few pointers on some basic driving procedures.

Rule 1: Even though it is a road, the person walking in the crosswalk does have the right of way.

I am a commuter on this campus, and I tend to think that about 98 percent of us slow down for pedestrians. I also know that some of us do not. It turns out that I also have to cross a few crosswalks on my way to class and I have been a victim of the 2 percent of people who do not slow down. Nothing is more terrifying than knowing you are in the right of way, yet you see the car in front of you accelerating towards you at speeds you know shouldn't exist in the designated 25 mph speed zone.

Rule 1a: Even though you see someone crossing the street and they are not on a crosswalk, you, the driver, do not have the right away.

This is kind of like that "the customer is always right" sign in a store. Sometimes the employee recognizes it, and sometimes it seems to disappear off the wall. I am not saying that I'm going to run you over, but just keep in mind that 2 percent of the student population we have already deemed untrustworthy. You might want to look for those crosswalks.

Rule 2: Although you were in the one mile radius of that empty parking space on the front row, the person already there with their blinker on gets the space.

Sorry y'all. I know this is a tough one. However, put yourself in the same situation. You'll tend to sympathize.

Rule 3: Convenient as it may be, pulling to the side of the road and parking outside the post office, even if you're only going to be in there a minute and you did, after all, put on your caution light, is just not cool.

I am looking out for you on this one. It really isn't fair to other drivers who have to play dodge-the-car to get around you. The Parking and Transportation Department is issuing tickets for such an offense. Hey, I'm trying to save you $25, or even your door being ripped off by a car trying to get around you.

Rule 4: Stalking someone walking to their car so that you can get their parking place is dirty, yet effective.

I am split on this one. I feel rather uneasy when I am walking to my car and I sense a presence behind me. As I turn around, there they are, the parking place stalker. They are always there, going 5 mph behind you praying that you get into a nearby car so they can score a great place to park. You stop and turn around, and they stop and pretend to play with the radio. You know what I'm talking about. The reason I'm split is because I am guilty of this one. I sometimes have to stalk to get the good parking place.

Rule 5: If you drive a Honda Accord or Chevy Z71, under no circumstances is it appropriate to take up three parking places.

No matter how many parking places GSU says it has, you will always feel like there is only one place for every four cars. If you commit this offense, not only will you make people mad, you might even get nasty notes tucked under your windshield wiper, especially if that person had to walk a few extra miles due to your inability to park.

Rule 6: There is a car fastly approaching your intersection only 10 yards away. You do not have time to pull out, don't even try it.

This is my biggest pet peeve. Statesboro, in my opinion ranks number two, falling closely behind Atlanta in the number of times an individual is cut off in a day. Sometimes I'm really thankful that I learned how to effectively use the break pad in driver's ed.

Rule 7: Even though there appears to be three lanes, the middle one is for turning ONLY, not driving.

Now, sure this lane appears empty. It is not a lane meant to be driven in, or for the sole purpose of bike usage. It's only for turning, trust me.

Rule 8: Red means stop. Green means go.

Simply put, you're approaching a light and it's red, so stop. When it turns green, you can go. Also, if you are a mile in front of the stop light when it turns yellow, it also means stop. It really doesn't mean accelerate so that you can pretend you couldn't stop in time. You could get hurt.

Rule 9: Bike lanes are for bikes. Don't drive or park in bike lanes.

We complain enough about bikers, let's let them have their one little lane. They were designed for bikes, what a concept.

Rule 10: Putting on your blinker when turning only as you begin to turn, or not putting on your blinker is infuriating.

I know that you may have forgotten to turn it on, but as my body flies into the dashboard trying to prevent myself from hitting you, I tend to forget about giving you the benefit of the doubt. Simply put, use your blinker.

Perhaps you've forgotten all about these rules, maybe you purposely break them, or maybe you don't know what a rule is to begin with, but maybe you should remember what they are.

Drive like you want others to drive. Speed limits are there for a reason, I promise. Be courteous, and never hurt, maim, or repeatedly stalk pedestrians with your vehicle. If you think it's wrong, or you could get in trouble for it, trust me. Don't do it!

Presidents just need a brand name

Regardless of who wins in our upcoming Presidential race, I think we are all wise enough to know that it will have absolutely nothing to do with his ability to run the country. In fact, of the myriad of advisors (on everything from fashion to fiscal budgeting), the winning candidate's "right-hand" man will be his top marketer (a.k.a. press agent).

And that is the face of American politics: marketing. Everything is a marketing tool. Newspapers, magazines, television, athletics and, of course the giant of them all – the Internet – are all vehicles for selling "stuff."

Actually, even your textbook is a marketing tool. Of course some aren't as obvious as the PriceWaterhouse Cooper Technology Forecast, but look at what your textbooks highlight and promote. For some it might actually be a product (why do you think your Business Calculus book has "how to" sections for Casio calculators, and your Quant Methods book uses T.I. calculators?). But oftentimes it's an idea—can we say "relativism versus revisionism?"

Does it work? You bet your catalogs it does. I got two words for you: tuxedo pants. Sure you liked them. It had nothing to do with

J.Crew's "my boxers double as wrapping paper" commercials that made you fall in love with their brand. But therein lies the genius of marketing, "branding."

And that is exactly what every politician is trying to do: turn himself into the brand you can't resist.

This is also why campaign finance reform is such a big issue in this election. Deep pockets translate into more promotional opportunities. Every candidate besides Bush is going to be broke after the primaries. If he gets the Republican nod, the race is over, and all the other candidates know it.

Personally, my brand is McCain. He is the presidential equivalent of roll-your-own cigarettes and straight whiskey. The guy had his legs broken while his testicles were being crushed. Inhale? This guy drank the bong water.

Meanwhile, Bush's great "made-me-the-man-I-am" moment was no different than any other Ivy Leaguers nightmare: loose cocaine in the shag carpet.

On the democratic side of the ball is, well, an ex-baller in Bill Bradley, and everybody's favorite cadaver, Al Gore. Neither have had much to say about the issues except what they don't like about the other candidate's take on the issues. Not that the issues are important, but Bradley won't win the primaries, and Gore's fate was sealed before the stains dried on Monica Lewinsky's dress.

The bottom line is that Bush is the brand you know—only now it's new and improved. Besides, "compassionate conservatism" is a millennial catch phrase with "marketing legs." After all, the president is our spokesman, not a statesman.

Want to study our elections in political science class? Try Marketing 101. Meanwhile, as you save the environment and boycott South Carolina's outlet malls, the wheel will keep on turning.

Not that the 15 percent of us who vote care. I'm sure five years from now the only thing we'll say about outgoing President Bush's term will be, "Hablamos Espanol!"

There comes a time in every student's academic career when one is forced to oneself: "What exactly am I suppose to be learning here? Am I here only to hit the books and graduate, or is there more to learning than simply what were read in books?"

The reason for bringing this up is easily explained. I am a nontraditional student at GSU, meaning I have already been in the corporate environment and traveled to four different continents. And you know what I have found? John Rucker is not the only one who feels the way he does about so-called "foreigners".

When I see the international students congregating together, I wonder, sometimes aloud, why on earth they always appear to be congregating alone. There are usually several nations represented in their group, but usually few if any of us "locals". Why?

After discussing my dilemma with Dr. Harry Wright, College of Business Administration, he suggested I attend one of the International Coffees in the Russell Union Building. I did just that.

Guess what happened? Nothing. I stayed there for approximately 45 minutes and not one single international student spoke to me. I was disappointed ... until it hit me: THIS is exactly what happens to them!

I searched my memory for times when I was in Iran, Iraq, Turkey, Jordan and Ethiopia as a child. I remembered the people of those nations being extremely courteous, open, and ACCEPTING of us "outsiders".

Ask anyone who has done some serious traveling. I am almost one hundred percent positive they will tell you the same stories of warm hospitality and a willingness to learn about the United States. They were actually sincere when learning about the rest of the world.

I have a good friend, Steve Witherspoon, who earned his M.B.A. here last August. He is now with the Peace Corps teaching economics at the Urals State University of Railway Transportation in Ekaterinburg, Russia. He has written me several e-mails telling me the most wonderful stories about the people over there and how they accepted him and his fellow Peace Corps volunteers almost immediately. And though he is the teacher, he also states how much he is learning from them as well. How many of you knew that Gifts are exchanged in Russia on New Year's and not Christmas.

Listen, folks, a vast majority of the people I choose to be around here at GSU are international students. Why? Because they are real. That is not to say that I do not hang around "Americans" (people from Central and South American countries also consider themselves Americans), only that there is so much to learn from everyone here on campus, not just our "American" friends.

We, as United States citizens, are suppose to be their hosts, instead of being so ethnocentric. Two of my best friends will be married this coming July ... in Romania. I am told that on arrival in Romania I should expect a warm and gracious welcome. I wonder, in reality, if I could tell her family that if they came to Statesboro, I would like to think so. Wouldn't you?

Four year-old mistakenly served whiskey

The Associated Press

MARLBORO—Four-year-old Amanda Gustafson knew immediately there was something "yucky" about her apple juice.

She was right: It wasn't juice. It was whiskey.

A waitress at TGI Friday's served the girl the booze during a recent family dinner. Ron Gustafson claims his daughter began "acting silly" and later complained of a headache after sipping the drink.

"This tastes yucky, daddy," the girl told him after taking a swig.

Friday's spokeswoman Amy Freshwater said a waitress mistakenly picked up a cup of what she thought was apple juice. The restaurant chain now is reviewing its policies to ensure such a mistake never happens again.

"It was a very unfortunate mistake," Freshwater said.

Gustafson, who reported the incident to the state's Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission, said he was not satisfied with the store's apology.

"They blamed it on the waitress," he said, "but what is whiskey doing in a plastic cup with a straw?"

KENT—When his students couldn't grasp a math concept, a Kent State University instructor lost his temper and started throwing erasers around the classroom, school officials said.

Ludvik Janos, 77, has been removed from his basic probability and statistics class and Kent State spokeswoman Margaret Garmon said Wednesday it hasn't been decided when he will be allowed to return.

The course is the only one Janos is teaching at Kent State this semester.

Janos has no home phone listing and could not be reached for comment.

"I apologize," Janos told The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer for a story published Tuesday. "I apologize for what I told them."

He said he was put on edge before the class met Monday night when it appeared a consumer credit problem that he thought had been cleared up might have been revived.

Starting in 1991, he said, someone began piling up debts in the United States on his VISA card. Janos said he thought he got the matter straightened out, until a mailing this week indicated it may not be over.

"Just when I needed to concentrate on mathematics, the address of the criminal reappeared on my record," Janos said. "When the students were repeating several times not very intelligent questions, I lost my temper and started to scream at them."

Gas tank so full of marijuana woman ran out of gas

The Associated Press

CARLSBAD—The officer who stopped to help two Texas women who'd run out of gas smelled something fishy.

It turns out their gas tank was packed so full of marijuana there was little room for gasoline.

"This is the first one like this we've had in a while, but it happens," said William Robert Sullivan, drug task force supervisor. "It's just poor planning."

Eddy County sheriff's deputy Richard Sillas was patrolling last Friday when he saw two women standing beside their car on U.S. 62-180 south of Carlsbad.

He stopped, and the women told him they'd run out of gas. He offered to help with some fuel.

But something smelled fishy, so Sillas asked for and received permission to search the car. He called for backup, and members of the drug task force who took apart the car's gas tank found about 80 pounds of marijuana in packages.

Man slices stomach

The Associated Press

PONTIAC—A man desperate not to go to jail, broke his handcuffs and used them as a knife to cut a hole in his stomach. Then, he sprayed his own blood and tried to throw his internal organs at police and rescue workers.

"I have been doing this for 26 years, but I have never seen anything like this," Sgt. Matt Norman of the Oakland County Sheriff's Department told The Oakland Press last Wednesday. "Have- seen people take their own lives in unique ways. But what that guy did was bizarre. Reaching in and then tugging on stuff, and I mean tugging."

Police said they were called Dec. 30 to an Oakland Township apartment, about 35 miles north of Detroit, on a loud-stereo complaint. The man was questioned and then was taken into custody when he said he was wanted on a warrant for drunken driving in center line.

Sexual harassment policy enforcer fired for sexual harassment

The Associated Press

FALMOUTH, Mass.—A man hired to enforce the town's sexual harassment policy was fired for sexually harassing a town employee.

Jayne Dias was fired following a female employee's complaint that she endured six years of his unwanted sexual advances. The woman's name was not made public.

Dias was hired by the town in November 1990 as an affirmative action officer, with duties including promoting and enforcing fairness in hiring and employment practices.

Theophilus Nix, the woman's attorney, said, "This is an important validation of all the charges she made against Dias, and also important to the many, many women who suffer in silence from this kind of abuse."

Dias' attorney, Edward F. O'Brien, said his client is "obviously very disappointed by the decision."

He said Dias hasn't had a chance to review his options at this time, and doesn't know if he will take further action to retain his job.

The woman, who is married, said the harassment began when Dias, who is also married, asked her for dates shortly after she was hired in 1994. He then allegedly called her at home, and allegedly once followed her outside to a parking lot and began fondling and kissing her.

The employee filed a sexual harassment complaint in July. Falmouth's personnel director, Christine Callahan issued a letter of caution to Dias in November. The woman next filed an appeal heard in a closed hearing Jan. 13.

"From the evidence presented at the hearing, I have concluded that Mr. Dias has engaged in conduct in conflict with his responsibilities as an officer responsible for the implementation and enforcement of the town's policy against sexual harassment," Town Administrator Peter Boyer said in a statement this week.

A second woman who was allegedly harassed by Dias corroborated the woman's testimony through a statement that was read at the hearing, Nix told the Cape Cod Times of Hyannis.

The second woman, also not named, had not filed a complaint, but told town officials she stopped working for the town several years ago because Dias had been sexually harassing her.

Family under psychiatric watch after talking about leaving Earth

The Associated Press

CORONA, Calif.—A family of six was under psychiatric observation after telling neighbors they planned to leave Earth, and then piling trash and their belongings in the center of their living room, authorities said.

Police were called to the apartment Friday about 5:50 p.m. after a passerby saw the family members and worried about their safety, police Sgt. John Rasso said.

"One of the neighbors was concerned," he said. "She saw them all sitting in the living room floor. ... There was a big pile of trash and personal belongings in the center of the room."

The neighbor told police the family had made doomsday predictions, believing the end of the world was coming, Rasso said.

"They said they would leave this Earth at midnight and as soon as God took them, their goods that were piled up would catch on fire," Rasso said.

After police arrived, the father, 38-year-old Charles Brown, awoke from a trance-like state, Rasso said.

Brown and his wife, Manya,

38, and their four children, an 18-year-old woman, an 11-year-old girl and two 14-year-old boys, were taken to the Riverside Emergency Treatment Services facility Friday for a 72-hour psychiatric observation and evaluation.

The case also was referred to Child Protective Services.

Police said neighbors and a relative indicated the family belonged to a cult, but it was not clear what group they claimed to be affiliated with.

GSU off to best start since '93-'94, squeaks by VMI 69-67

G-A News Services

Kashien Latham blocked Virginia Military Institute's game-tying attempt with one second remaining to seal a 69-67 Southern Conference win Monday night at Hanner Fieldhouse.

The win was GSU's fourth straight as it improves to 12-8 overall and 6-3 in the SoCon. The 12 wins this season are the most for the Eagles since the 1993-

-JULIUS JENKINS

'94 season.

VMI falls to 5-16 overall and 0-9 in league play.

"We didn't overlook VMI tonight," said freshman guard Julius Jenkins. "We knew they were going to play hard because they didn't have anything to lose."

VMI had three chances to tie the game but fell short each time. With :31 remaining and the score at 69-66, Richard Bruce was awarded three foul shots after being hacked on a three-point attempt. He hit the first but misfired on the second and third; however, Nick Richardson grabbed the rebound and put up the game-tying attempt from five feet out but missed.

GSU's Hamp Jones had an opportunity to put the game out of reach with :28 remaining but couldn't convert the front end of a one-and-one, giving the Keydets one last chance when Richardson pulled down the missed shot.

Still down by two, the Keydets settled for the final shot of the game, but Richardson's jumper was blocked by Latham, sealing the game for the Eagles.

Three players scored in double figures for GSU led by Jenkins' 16 points. Hamp Jones recorded his third double-double in a row, and fourth in the last five games, by scoring 15 points and grabbing 11 rebounds.

Latham added 10 points and six boards for the winners.

Richardson poured in a game-high 19 points to lead the Keydets, while Aaron Demory added 13 points.

In the first half, the Eagles held the advantage through the first nine minutes before Richardson connected on a three-pointer that put VMI up 16-14.

Nearly four minutes later, an Adam Trombley layup at the 7:24 mark would give the Keydets their biggest lead of the game—a 30-22 advantage.

Hans Knoepfel

ON A HOT STREAK: The Eagles are on fire. GSU has a four game winning streak, and is looking to make it five this weekend against ETSU. GSU currently has the best record in Georgia.

The Eagles clawed back and retook the lead with 1:56 remaining in the half on two Jones free throws, making the score 36-35.

The Eagles would eventually take a 42-39 lead into the locker room at halftime.

GSU forced 23 turnovers, the most in a Southern Conference game this season, while committing 17 of its own.

For the second game in a row, the Eagles lost the battle on the boards as they were out rebounded 41-35.

GSU will travel to East Tennessee State on Saturday for a 7:30 tipoff.

"If we didn't have a guy playing like Hamp, we'd really be struggling."

• Coach Jeff Price looking for four-year starter to lead GSU in season's final month.

By Doug Kidd
Co-Sports Editor

When Jeff Price arrived to GSU last spring as the new head basketball coach, he knew he had to immediately find players from the previous squad whom he could rely on for leadership during the upcoming season.

Luckily for Price and GSU basketball, Hamp Jones was around to help pull together a team basically starting from scratch.

"It was real important to have Hamp already on the team," said Price after GSU's last-second victory Monday over VMI.

"There's no question he's key. He's a four-year guy, a senior, started every game. It was a great plus to have someone like him already entrenched in the program that the other guys knew and respected."

"Yeah," echoed freshman phenom Julius Jenkins. "Hamp leads on offense, defense, he plays in front of the press...He hustles and does all the little things, and that makes us play hard."

Jones, a 6'7" forward from Millen, Ga., has been one of the most consistent performers for GSU this season, averaging nearly 13 points, seven rebounds, and two steals per outing.

Against Western Carolina last Saturday, Jones made his 100th career game a memorable one as he logged his eighth career double-double with a season high 22 points and 12 rebounds.

Versus the Keydets Monday, Jones again shined, recording another double-double while scoring 15 and grabbing 11 boards.

But the statistics aspect of the game isn't what concerns Jones. Being a leader and getting his teammates into the game is what the senior forward expects to do during each contest. "A little bit of spirit will pick up the whole team," Jones stated. "That's my job to step up as a leader and lead this team. I just come out and play hard and try to be a leader for this team and help us to some wins."

Jones has been doing his part throughout his career in other areas as well. Currently third all-time in GSU history for career blocks and field goal percentage, at 55 and 55.5 percent respectively, Jones also holds fifth and eleventh place in the GSU record books for career steals and rebounds.

His productivity on the court can be traced to his consistency in getting there: the former walk-on has missed only three games in his four year career.

Starting 76 straight games dating back to the beginning of the '97-'98 season, Jones has started a total of 87 times in his career, including 11 during a freshman campaign that saw Jones earn Southern Conference all-freshman team honors.

So with the GSU men's basketball team enjoying one of its finest seasons in years, how does Jones feel about the future of the team?

"I see that our team chemistry is starting come together, as you can see with our four game winning streak. At first we started off well but went down a little bit, but now the team's starting to play well, the chemistry is beginning to get there, we're learning the entire system... It's starting to come together. But we have to play each game one-by-one like Coach says."

As Coach Price and the GSU basketball squad prepares for the regular season's final month and the Southern conference tournament, Hamp Jones will be looked at for guidance for a relatively inexperienced team.

"Hamp shows out with his senior leadership and his intensity, and when he plays hard, the other guys feed off that. I think right now, at this stage of the season, he's the guy that has got to carry this team."

QUOTABLE:

"I FEEL THAT WE'RE PLAYING REAL WELL NOW. WE'RE STARTING TO EXECUTE ON OFFENSE AND DEFENSE. I FEEL THAT WE'RE GOING TO WIN THE CONFERENCE TITLE COME MARCH."

-JULIUS JENKINS

"COACH PRICE HAS TOLD ME TO BE A LEADER.

SOMETIMES I HAVE TO PUT THE GUYS ON MY BACK AND HELPOUT AS MUCH AS POSSIBLE."

-HAMP JONES

Ravens' linebacker Ray Lewis arraigned on two counts of felony murder

The Sports Network

ATLANTA -- Baltimore Ravens linebacker Ray Lewis was arraigned on Tuesday morning on two counts of felony murder in Atlanta Municipal Court.

Lewis was charged with murder on Monday in the stabbing deaths of two people outside an Atlanta-area nightclub hours after Super Bowl XXXIV concluded.

Two men were stabbed during a fight that broke out just as a party was ending at the Cobalt Lounge in the Buckhead section of Atlanta at about 4 a.m.

One man died at the scene and the other died at Grady Memorial Hospital.

The 24-year-old Lewis, who was scheduled to head to the Pro Bowl in Hawaii on Monday, instead became the second NFL player charged with murder recently.

Carolina Panthers wide receiver Rae Carruth was charged on January 4 with first-degree murder in the shooting death of Cherica Adams, who was pregnant with their son. Carruth was released by the Panthers after being charged.

G-A News Service

Tallahassee, FL.—The Georgia Southern women's tennis team lost in its first dual meet of the season Saturday, falling to 19th ranked Florida State 8-1.

The young Eagle squad, unable to post a win during singles play, finally broke through at number one doubles when junior Isabella Kling and sophomore Martha Barrett claimed an 8-4 decision over Ali Weber and Jessica Balbuena of FSU for GSU's only victory.

Kling was the closest to victory in singles play for the Eagles when she dropped a 6-2, 6-4 match to Alida Gallovits, the nation's 32nd ranked player.

GSU was also scheduled to play Georgia State on Saturday but because of the wintry weather in Atlanta, the Lady Panthers were unable to make the trip. A makeup date between the two schools has yet to be determined. The lady Eagles will be back in action on February 16 when they travel to Macon to play Mercer.

Track and Field

By Nicole Smith

Johnson City, TN.—The GSU Track and Field team lit up Johnson City, Tennessee this past weekend, bringing home five new school records in only the squad's second meet ever against a field of 25 teams.

Freshman Jacqueline Allan set a record in the 60 meter dash (7.76) and the 200 meter dash (25.59). Also setting records for the team was freshman Dominique LeBeaud in the 60 meter hurdles (9.94).

Whitney Nelson, a sophomore transfer from Samford University, also posted a record in the 800 meter, finishing 20th in 2:20. Four freshman—Pearl Griggs, Nuwana Waters, Ebonie Ogletree, and Shawnee Allen—combined in the 4x400 meter relay to set another record in a finishing time of 4:08, placing them 15th.

Other outstanding performances were done by Kelia Thomas in the 60 meter hurdles with a time of 10.01. Freshman Javone Blackley competed in the 200 (26.05) and the 400 meter (58.93). Blackley was followed by Griggs (1:02.14), Allan (1:04.32), and Waters (1:04.41) in the 400 meter dash.

Although this is the inaugural season for the GSU track and field team, Nelson holds high hopes for the Lady Eagles. "Being such a young team, I felt really competitive with the other teams. I was impressed with some of the performances." The GSU Lady Eagles will have another chance to show off their young talent this weekend in Winston Salem, NC in the Clemmons Invitational.

Lady Eagles dominate, 97-57

BLOW OUT: The Lady Eagles, seen here at the Cory Brooks last home game, had their biggest win since 1996.

G-A News Services

Spartanburg, S.C.—GSU's women's basketball team played one of its best games of the year as it downed Wofford 97-57 in a game played at Johnson Arena.

Five Lady Eagles scored in double figures led by sophomore guard Danna Simpson with a career high 28 points, with 20 coming on 6-6 shooting in the first half of action. Sarah McCary and Amy Krach added 11 points each while Mimi Lindsey and Sarah Davis added 10 apiece. Lindsey's 10 points matched a career high. McCary led the team in rebounding with a game high eight.

GSU (7-13, 6-5) never trailed in the game as it connected on 13 of its first 18 shots, including five of six three-pointers in route to a 36-14 lead ten minutes into the game. The Lady Eagles were so dominant that they didn't score in the final three and a half minutes of the first half and still held a 53-27 lead heading into the intermission. Georgia Southern connected on 59.4 percent of its shots during the period for its best shooting half of the season.

The second half featured more of the same for Wofford (7-12, 3-9) as the Lady Eagles remained hot from the floor. McCary, who did not score in the first half, stepped into Simpson's shoes as she connected on all four shots she took during the second half. As a team, the Lady Eagles connected on 53.6% of its shots during the half and saw its lead grow to 41 points. Georgia Southern going to its bench didn't even help the Lady Terriers on this night as the Lady Eagles benched Simpson, Krach, senior Tondra Warren, and senior Nikita Whatley with 6:41 remaining.

Georgia Southern out-rebounded the Lady Terriers 36-28 in the game while forcing Wofford into 29 turnovers. Meanwhile, the Lady Eagles had an impressive 25 assists on 34 made shots on the evening.

The Lady Eagles return home to host conference foe Chattanooga, who is undefeated in Southern Conference action with a record of 11-0, on Sunday, February 6. That game is scheduled to begin at 3 p.m.
