Address to make good on bad year

In fifth State of the Union address, Bush seeks to rescue presidency from a bad year

AP
President Bush will deliver his State of the Union address tonight at 9 p.m.

By Jennifer Loven
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush, in his State of the Union speech Tuesday, will offer ideas for dealing with domestic problems like high energy prices and health care and international troubles like Iran's suspected nuclear ambitions.

The unspoken agenda underpinning the address, Bush's fifth, is the rescue of his presidency from arguably its worst year.

His poll numbers fell to the lowest point of his presidency under the weight of missteps following Hurricane Katrina, soaring energy costs, the withdrawal of a Supreme Court nominee, the failure of his high-profile effort to drive a Social Security overhaul, and increasing scrutiny from the public and Congress of the unpopular Iraq war.

While Bush's approval rating has recovered slightly, it remains in the still-anemic low 40s. It is a matter of concern for Republicans as they worry about maintaining control of Congress in this fall's midterm elections.

"I can't tell you how upbeat I am about our future, so long as we're willing to lead," Bush said at a photo opportunity Monday with his Cabinet. Referring to the bitter political tone in Washington, Bush said, "I'll do my best to elevate the tone here in Washington, D.C., so we can work together to achieve big things for the American people."

Airlines get along despite finances

Delta, Northwest get along in bankruptcy as United nears exit

By Harry R. Weber
Associated Press

ATLANTA — While United Airlines is about to emerge from more than three years of bankruptcy reorganization, two of its biggest rivals, Delta and Northwest, are still in the early stages of restructuring their own finances under Chapter 11.

Airline experts don't expect Atlanta-based Delta Air Lines Inc. and Eagan, Minn.-based Northwest Airlines Corp. to take as long to reorganize as United did. But the carriers do face some of the same issues that helped extend United's case, including the fate of their employee pension plans, and they're expected to take their time to try to get themselves on a secure financial footing.

"An intelligent airline these days is not going to be in a rush to get out of Chapter 11," said William Rochelle, an airline bankruptcy lawyer in New York.

UAL Corp., the parent of Elk Grove Village, Ill.-based United, spent 38 months on a Chapter 11 case that is scheduled to end with its emergence Wednesday. The company's stay in bankruptcy was complicated by soaring fuel prices, difficulties in obtaining two rounds of cost concessions from its unions and its failure to secure a federal loan guarantee, among other issues.

Delta and Northwest both filed for bankruptcy on Sept. 14.

Eagles hang on against Wofford

Lady Eagles win in against last-ranked Terriers, 80-73

By Bryan Metcalff
Staff writer

Nicole Newton matched her career high with 24 points on Monday night as the Lady Eagles followed up their Saturday night win with a very physical 80-73 win against the Terriers of Wofford (6-14, 2-9) at Hanner Fieldhouse.

After the Terriers jumped out to an early four point lead, GSU responded with eight unanswered points. The run was ended by a three-pointer from Wofford's Liz Miller, but Newton answered for the Lady Eagles with a short jumper to make it 16-13 GSU.

Another string of six unanswered points forced Wofford to take a time out with just under eight minutes remaining in the first half, trailing 28-22.

Then came Wofford's first serious run. A 14-3 sprint swung momentum back to Wofford and gave them a 36-31 lead with just under four minutes left in the half.

Chequilla Jessie made a lay-up and converted a three-point play to spark a Lady Eagles 12-3 run that covered the last 2:42 of the half and gave GSU a 44-41 halftime lead.

the half with 12 points each. Mary Jo Yee led the Terriers with 10 points on four-of-six shooting. The Sophomore forward Jessie led both squads with seven rebounds for the Lady Eagles.

GSU could not manage to open the lead any more than four points in the first seven minutes of the half, but after Kelsi Koenig hit a three-pointer that pulled Wofford to within one, the Lady Eagles managed a small 6-2 scoring stretch that put them up 59-53.

Yee sparked an 11-1 Wofford run with a long three, and the Terriers took their first lead of the second half 69-66 with 5:31 remaining. They would score only four points the rest of the game, while GSU would finish on a 9-0 run led by Ashley Rivens' four-of-four fouls shooting in the final three minutes to win 80-73.

"The very thing that got us in the hole, a poor free throw shooting night," said coach Rusty Cram. "I

Lecture series on race and the American South comes to GSU

Series to feature prominent speakers on race

By Robert Greene II
Staff writer

Beginning Feb. 1, a lecture series full of experts on the American South is coming to Georgia Southern.

Called "Race and the American South," the lecture series will consist of four parts and two months to complete. The professors featured are among the biggest members of the field of history in the American South.

"All have written on the South and race," said Peggy Hargis, a professor of sociology at GSU. "All of these professors have books either coming out or are out that deal with the topic."

The professors come from varied institutions. Melton A. McLaurin, who is a professor emeritus of history at the University of North Carolina, Wilmington, will provide a lecture on the first African American Marines on Feb. 1.

William Falk is a professor of sociology from the University of Maryland, and will speak about the Low Country on Feb. 8. Erskine Clarke, a professor of American religious history at Columbia Theological Seminary, will speak on March 22 about the Midway Community exhibit within the museum. Lastly, on March 29 Mark Smith, a distinguished professor of history at the University of South Carolina, will speak about sensing racial differences through stereotypes.

The Campus Life Enrichment Committee, or CLEC provided funding to get both William Falk and Erskine Clarke, while UNC Press covered Mark Smith. According to Hargis, the guest speakers were also persuaded to come to GSU through a massive process that involved the departments of history, sociology and anthropology, as well as the Center for Africana Studies and the College of Liberal Arts and Social Sciences. The lecture on the Midway Community was put together by the GSU Museum and will be presented there as well.

Hargis believes many people will be interested in going to these lectures.

"There will be some faculty with a vested interest in going to the event," said Hargis. "I'm also hoping folks that are not academics will come. Their works are not strictly academic."

The variety of the speakers, Hargis said, will offer variations on the theme of the American South and race.

Each lecture will take place at 4 p.m. in the IT building, except for the lecture on the Midway Community, and there will be a short question and answer session after each one.

Sell textbooks on Pick-a-Prof

By Wesley Huffmaster
Staff writer

As registration approaches, murmurs and whispers of boring teachers and unfair workloads take to the wind and students scramble to select the best or easiest instructors to ensure a crisp column of A's on future transcripts. In such circumstances, rumors and hearsay don't always make par. Students often check the Pick-a-Prof Web site for the grading histories and background information of resident professors.

At $5 per semester, Pick-A-Prof is a necessity for Georgia Southern junior Josh Mikulecky, who uses Pick-A-Prof to compare his potential professor's grade history before making his selection.

"Seeing the stats helps give a better understanding of the professor, and the way that he/she grades," said Mikulecky.

Another area of the site allows students to read and write reviews about their professors. "Opinions lie within reviews, making them less objective," said Mikulecky. Pick-A-Prof upholds their guidelines by not posting reviews with personal attacks on teachers.

This semester, Pick-a-Prof has added new tools for students to use when semesters change. Students can now use the "Book Exchange," a forum for finding textbooks, comparing prices, and/or selling to other GSU students. With the bookstore profit eliminated, students can potentially save themselves hundreds of dollars on used books.

One of the most daring new features of the Web site is CourseCasting. This function will allow professors to record their lectures and make them available for students to download and listen on their iPod or computer.

Jason Dittmer, GSU geology professor, doesn't plan on using Pick-A-Prof, saying he does not like the idea of the site using his lectures as a tool for profit. He does, however, support the technology.

Dittmer applauds the fact that implementing CourseCasting would "require some actual commitment on the student's part to sit and listen on their own time." Some students have expressed their intent to use CourseCasting as a study supplement, using the recordings as a review in addition to attending class.

With tools like professor reviews, grade history reports, message boards, book exchange, course casts and a schedule planner, Pick-A-Prof is a worthy tool. Check it out at www.pickaprof.com.

McNair students selected

GSU News Service

Ten students at Georgia Southern have been selected to participate in the 2006 Ronald E. McNair Post-Baccalaureate Program.

Created in memory of the African American astronaut who perished in the Challenger space shuttle disaster, the McNair Program is a national initiative that seeks to increase the number of students from under-represented segments of society who earn graduate degrees.

The McNair Program prepares selected juniors and seniors for doctoral studies through involvement in research and other scholarly activities. The program features a Summer Research Institute in which the students receive mentoring from faculty, attend seminars, participate in internships and receive academic counseling and assistance in securing financial aid for enrolling in graduate programs.

The students will present their research at an on-campus symposium as well as the annual Southeastern Association of Educational Opportunity Program Personnel McNair Scholars Research Conference at the University of Tennessee.

GSU students selected to participate in the 2006 McNair Program include Candice E. Carr, psychology major from Atlanta, Amber L. Fennell, education major from Rome, Christopher J. Ford, marketing major from Suwanee, Javoris V. Hillingsworth, chemistry major from Jeffersonville, Harry E. Maze II, psychology major from Jesup, Tawny D. Mullins, psychology major from Griffin, Tata N. Nanje, English major from Smyrna, Jenna N. Pinkston, community health major from Smyrna, Jesseca E. Short, political science major from Columbus, Margarita Viera, a chemistry major from Ludowici, Ga.

THE BIG STORY

North Carolina sues TVA, citing air pollution as nuisance

By Emery P. Dalesio
Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — North Carolina's attorney general sued the Tennessee Valley Authority on Monday, accusing the nation's largest federal utility of causing a "public nuisance" in his state by failing to reduce pollution from its coal-fired power plants.

"What we're asking for in this case is to stop a particular utility company from sending specific pollution into our state and harming our people and our economy," Attorney General Roy Cooper said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Cooper, who had threatened such action for years, said in his lawsuit that TVA has not taken enough steps to reduce the sulfur dioxide, nitrogen oxides, mercury and soot that has wafted into North Carolina from 11 coal-burning plants in Tennessee, Kentucky and Alabama.

The lawsuit said TVA was creating a "common law public nuisance," because the pollution damaged public health and obstructed public rights.

But TVA Chairman Bill Baxter said the utility already complies with all federal clean-air laws and has done more than North Carolina utilities to install scrubbers to capture harmful pollutants.

"TVA is actually a regional leader in investing money and achieving results," Baxter said. He noted that TVA raised its rates in 2003 as part of a program to spend $5.6 billion on pollution controls, and has since cut nitrogen oxide emissions by 70 percent and is on schedule to cut sulfur emissions by 85 percent by 2010.

Sulfur dioxide leads to acid rain that kills plants and the regional haze that reduces scenic views in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, 30 miles away on the Tennessee-North Carolina border.

Cooper's action was praised by the Sierra Club, Environmental Defense, and the Southern Environmental Law Center.

"We commend his aggressive efforts to protect the health of North Carolina's citizens and the state's economy," said Sierra Club national president Lisa Renstrom of Charlotte.

North Carolina's lawsuit is the second public nuisance case against the TVA, which supplies electricity to about 8.5 million people in most of Tennessee and parts of North Carolina, Kentucky, Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, and Virginia.

In 2004, eight states and New York City sued the TVA and four more of the country's largest power producers to demand they cut carbon dioxide emissions, which are believed to be linked to global warming. That federal case was dismissed in September.

In the past two years, North Carolina has twice tried to force the Environmental Protection Agency to crack down on out-of-state utilities that produce pollution that blows into North Carolina by prevailing west-to-east winds.

In July, Cooper filed a legal challenge asking the EPA to reconsider portions of its Clean Air Interstate Rule, or CAIR, which offers credits to polluters for emission reductions made before 2010 and allows them to trade pollution allowances. The credits would allow power plants to continue polluting at existing levels beyond the EPA deadline of 2015, North Carolina claimed.

"We don't believe that rule goes far enough, fast enough," Cooper said Monday. "It's important that we get the courts to take this step to reduce pollution in North Carolina."

Mannequin used by driver in HOV lane

1 WESTMINSTER, Colo. — A motorist was arrested Thursday for driving in a high-occupancy vehicle lane with a mannequin dressed to look like a passenger, police said.

Investigators said Greg Allen Pringle, 53, was the only human in the car. HOV lanes are open only to buses, motorcycles, vehicles carrying two or more people or hybrid vehicles.

Officer Mark Watters said Pringle was southbound on U.S. 36 between Boulder and Denver. Watters said the mannequin was dressed in a gray sweat shirt and a baseball cap.

Crack dealer uses business cards

2 LEAVENWORTH, Kan. — The business cards got a response, but surely not what their owner had in mind when he had them printed up.

They came to the attention of Leavenworth police, who used them to make a drug arrest last week.

Sylvester J. Williams, 21, of Leavenworth, was charged Monday with possessing crack cocaine with the intent to sell it, Maj. Patrick Kitchens of the Leavenworth Police Department said.

Kitchens said Williams remained in custody Wednesday on $75,000 bond.

He said police had heard for some time that Williams had been selling drugs in the area. "Then we heard that he was handing out business cards," the officer said. "In the course of our investigation we were fortunate to come up with one, and we gave him a call."

Kitchens said the business card had an image of what appeared to be an alarm clock being hit by a boxing glove and said: "For a quick hit on time call the boss."

Woman drives bloodmobile drunk

3 JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — The driver of a bloodmobile ran a red light on her way to a blood drive and has been charged with drunken driving, police said.

Sharon Renea Dunlap, 46, told police she quit drinking about 3 a.m. Wednesday, and took some pain pills. She was pulled over about 14 hours later after a Jacksonville police officer saw the Florida Georgia Blood Alliance bloodmobile run a red light, police said.

Police said Dunlap failed a field sobriety test and was charged with driving under the influence and running a red light.

Recycling workers find loaded gun

4 CHARLESTON, S.C. — You may recycle cans and bottles, but Charleston County has a request for its residents: Please don't recycle your old guns and ammunition.

The county is making the plea after dangerous items, including a loaded gun, were found earlier this month at the county recycling plant.

The plant has an assembly line where recycled items are sorted by hand, said Gregg Vainer, director of the county Solid Waste and Recycling Department.

Five women were working on the line on Jan. 17 when one found a torn paper bag containing bullets coming down the line.

Workers stopped to remove the bullets but shortly a second bag with another box of bullets came down the line. Then workers found a box with bullets and three guns — one of which was loaded.

Police were called to pick up the guns and ammunition.

no sense
Cuz he signed the contract
But it's the only way that he gets pub any more (it's ridiculous)
It's been months
And for some reason he just (won't shut up)
And he should be bigger than this (enough is enough)
No more wastin' time
With this moron clown
I'm so sick of listenin' to
An average Number three
And I'm so sick of Ron Artest
So tired of Paqman
So done with listenin' to all his
(edit)
Said I'm so sick of Ron Artest so catty and dull
So why can't 91 just re-tire?
Gotta fix that roster I have
On the video game
Because since he keeps tryin' to veto trades
He's on all thirty NBA teams
I'm so angry that they talk 'bout you
And how you play D
And how you could have just manned up
And let that cup of ice be
That's the reason I'm so sick of Ron Artest
So tired of Paqman
So done with listenin' to all his
(edit)
Said I'm so sick of Ron Artest so catty and dull
So why can't 91 just re-tire?
(Leave me alone)
Leave me alone
(Stupid Ron Artest)
Dont make me think in Sacramento
Maybe you'll turn it 'round
Let it go
Turning off the Ron Artest
Cuz I'm so sick of Ron Artest
So tired of Paqman
So done with listenin' to all his

Southern knocks off Elon

Eagles out score
Phoenix 36-12 in 2nd half en route to 2nd straight SoCon win

GSU News Service

Georgia Southern allowed just 12 points in the second half to easily defeat SoCon leading Elon 63-45 Monday night at Hanner Fieldhouse. The 12 points scored by the Phoenix ties a GSU (14-7, 5-3 SoCon) school record for fewest points allowed in a half.

The Eagles held Elon (10-11, 6-2 SoCon) scoreless for the first two and a half minutes of the game, forcing three quick Phoenix turnovers.

The game went back and forth over the next four minutes. A Will Dunn put back at the 7:25 mark put the Eagles back on top 20-19.

Brian Waters gave the Phoenix a three point lead, but a Nesbitt trey at the 5:40 mark tied the game for the fifth time at 23-23. A fast break layup by LeVonn Jordan gave Elon the 33-27 lead with less than a minute to play.

Nesbitt got things started for the Eagles in the second half, swiping a pass from the Phoenix and finishing with an easy layup, cutting the Phoenix lead to 33-29.

A Sean Olivier three point play at the 15:24 mark tied the game for the sixth time at 36-36. Nesbitt's second chance jumper with 14:11 on the clock gave the Eagles the 38-36 lead.

A Nesbitt steal led to a Gennie dunk with 13:13 to play, putting the Eagles up by four at 40-36. GSU outscored Elon 24-5 over the first 11 minutes of the second half, holding the Phoenix without a field goal for over four minutes.

Elon cut the GSU lead to 15 on a three point play by Wyatt, but the Eagles cruised on to the 63-45 win.

Nesbitt led all scorers with 15, while Gennie added 11 and Tobias chipped in 10. Graham grabbed 11 rebounds and was a point shy of his second consecutive double-double with nine points.

With his two blocks tonight, Graham is now third all-time in career blocks with 88.

Wyatt led the Phoenix with 10 points and seven rebounds. The Eagles travel this weekend to face North Division foe Chattanooga. Tip-off is set for 2 p.m. and will be broadcast on Fox Sports Net South.

Curry Honored

Jared Siri/STAFF

Former Eagle Michael Curry, who had his jersey retired on Saturday enjoyed a level of success at Georgia Southern that hasn't been matched since his playing days ended at Hanner Field House.

"I think more than anything for me personally is that it shows what type of support group I had. I'm talking about my family, coaches and my teammates. You can't get anywhere by yourself, and I was able to accomplish some things mainly because of this support group," said Curry following the ceremony.

Curry played for the Eagles from 1986-1990, then spent 14 years in the professional ranks. Curry played in the NBA for Milwaukee, Washington and Detroit.

Curry was also named President of the NBA's Player's Association in 2000.

The Tiger effect affects Olazabal

By Jim Litke
Associated Press

Everybody expected Jose Maria Olazabal to make the putt.

Tiger Woods certainly did. CBS had a camera trained on Woods as Olazabal settled over a 4-footer in the fast-fading afternoon light.

Olazabal expected to make it, too, and with good reason. The 39-year-old Spaniard is one of the nerviest putters around.

But not this time, and not against Woods, because ... well, because nobody ever hangs on long enough to beat him.

Some guys peel off early, some in the middle of a round, and a tough few, like Olazabal, only when their fingernails are pulled all the way back. But they all let go of Tiger's tail, eventually.

"I had to make it," Olazabal began, "so I decided that I was going to put less break on it and just hit it a little firmer. But I didn't hit it firm enough."

Other than the number of concession speeches, there's no single measure that quantifies the effect Woods has on other golfers playing head-to-head.

Maybe it wasn't a surprise that Woods played fearfully at Torrey Pines. He won the Junior World there at 15, has now won four times there and never finished out of the top 10 in nine appearances.

Then again, he was coming off the longest self-imposed break of his career.

Woods turned 30 at the end of December and did some serious celebrating. He didn't even look into his golf bag for 24 days.

"It was nice to put the clubs away," Woods said, "and just chill."

His putter, though, was still chilling through most of the tournament.

He made a tough 8-footer for birdie at the 18th to get into a three-way playoff, then missed a birdie putt of the same length at the same hole a few minutes later to end it.

"I shouldn't have even been in the playoff," Woods said. "Of all the things that happened today, I kept saying, 'At least you have a chance.'"

Women's Rugby falls to Shamrocks

Special to the G-A

This past weekend, the GSU Women's Rugby Team played the Lady Shamrocks of Savannah at Forsyth Park in Savannah.

The fast-paced match saw the Lady Shamrocks emerge as victors 24-5.

All of the Shamrocks' points were a result of Eagle turnovers.

For the Eagles, Brittany Winston made many decisive runs, while Rachel Christensen tackled strongly and made numerous powerful runs through the opposition.

Her efforts were rewarded when she scored the Eagles' only try. Lena Hudson, in her first rugby match, played very well, making numerous decisive tackles and supporting teammates intelligently.

GSU Women's Rugby Club Spring Schedule:

(* Indicates Matrix Games)

- Feb. 4 - vs. College of Charleston *
- Feb. 11-12 - Black Rose Tournament (HOME)
- Feb. 18 - vs. South Carolina *
- Feb. 25 - vs. South Florida* (HOME)
- Mar. 4 - vs. Clemson

Abbey Lennon and Melissa Mazany played strongly in the forwards, while Carby Powers and Jamie Faulkner tackled well in the backs.

Improved communication, as well as better commitment to rucks and mauls will best pressure the College of Charleston next weekend.

For those interested in playing rugby, the team practices at the intramural fields on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays from 5-6:30 p.m.

Baseball to receive promotions boost

Special to the G-A

a focal point as GSM has plans for fan interactive events that enable spectators to compete for a chance to win cash and prizes between innings.

In addition, GSM will also operate a new fan store at the stadium.

The store will carry over 20 baseball specific items ranging from t-shirts and hats to custom game jerseys.

The store will be located on the concourse inside of the stadium along with the new information booth that will handle the sign-up sheets for all of the in-game activities, raffles and events.

GSM is operated by over 20 sport management students led by their faculty advisor Dr. Lachowetz.

The group gives students a real world experience while offering fans more entertainment and a higher energy atmosphere.

"We feel that once the fans come to the park and experience the atmosphere for themselves, they will want to come back time and time again," said Dr. Lachowetz.

Cram added that the team relaxed when Rivens made her final two shots from the foul line where she was six-for-six on the night and allowed GSU to finish the game under control.

Newton added a game-high six steals to her 24 points, and Shawnda Atwood finished with her first career double-double (11 points, 10 rebounds). The Lady Eagles out-rebounded Wofford 47-36 and grabbed twice as many offensive rebounds as the rival Terriers. Rivens, who guaranteed victory after the Furman game, finished with eight points and five rebounds.

After the game, Atwood said it felt great to get a double-double against a tough Wofford team. She added that it was a total team effort, and gave thanks to her teammates in the process.

"I'm glad they're (Atwood and Newton) on our team," said Cram after the game.

The Lady Eagles next game is this Saturday at Elon at 2 p.m.

Eagles take Spartans

By Courtney Murphy
Staff writer

The Georgia Southern Eagles basketball team took on UNC-Greensboro (10-10, 3-3 SoCon) on Saturday, Jan. 28, at Hanner Fieldhouse.

GSU was looking to get back on track after losing three in a row: two on the road, Davidson's Wildcats and Appalachian State's Mountaineers and Furman's Paladins at home.

Elton Nesbitt, who had a season high 36 points, scored the first point for GSU with a three point shot. UNCG went the first four minutes scoreless, but a shot by Dwayne Johnson cut the GSU lead down to five and forced GSU to take a timeout.

GSU battled back and extended the lead to 9 points ahead with a dunk by Jimmy Tobias, which forced UNCG to take a timeout with 3:40 left to play in the half.

UNCG returned to the game and took the lead with less than a minute left to play in the half with a three point shot by Ricky Hickman, who had 26 points in the game. At the half GSU fell behind 39-35.

Eagles made a come back in the second half outscoring the Spartans and taking the lead 43-42 with 17:05 left to play.

Louis Graham extended the lead to 46-42 with point play after nailing his free throw shot. GSU continued to play tough defense and forced the Spartans to take a time out with the Eagles in the lead 59-50.

Although the Spartans fought back and cut the lead 62-58, the Eagles refused to lose and made a defensive stop holding the Spartans to win the game.

GSU's Jimmy Tobias puts up a runner in Saturday's action against UNC Greensboro. The Eagles won 86-78.

Lady Eagles defense leads to win over Furman Saturday

By Bryan Metcalf
Staff writer

Great defense and a 22-point effort from senior forward Nicole Newton were the keys to victory Saturday night at Hanner Fieldhouse as the Georgia Southern Lady Eagles (8-11, 5-5) beat their archrivals the Furman Lady Paladins (7-13, 3-7).

Furman didn't take long to get started as Sarah Baker nailed a trey from the wing to give the Lady Paladins a 3-0 lead. Lee DuBose responded with the Lady Eagles' only three of the half to tie the game less than a minute in. Furman responded to a Shawnda Atwood lay-up with back-to-back baskets from Baker and center Jessica Lange to take a three point lead that would be the Lady Paladins' last of the half.

DuBose made a pair of free throws to bring GSU within one, and Leslie Spoon and Ashley Melson followed with baskets of their own to put the Lady Eagles up by three. Chrissy Phelps pulled Furman back to within one with a pair of foul shots, but Ashley Rivens answered with a lay-up that sparked a 9-0 run and put GSU up by ten with 6:40 remaining in the half. Furman managed to close the gap to three twice, but a jumper by Spoon and a Newton lay-up kept the Lady Paladins from getting any closer as GSU took a 27-23 lead into the break.

Baker and Newton led all scorers with six points each in the first half for their respective squads. Rivens snagged eight rebounds to lead the Lady Eagles in the first half.

"Tonight we came out and we just refused to lose," said Rivens after the game.

The second half was back and forth until a Baker jumper tied the game at 39 with 10:31 left. The Lady Eagles responded with six unanswered points and held on from there to win 65-48.

Newton, who said after the gamethat

she felt the team really came together, added nine rebounds.

GSU head coach Rusty Cram said he could talk all night about his star forward. "Nicole is one of those (players) when she gets on the bus, I can take a nap because I know we're going to be okay. She set the tempo for this basketball team."

Melson added 10 points and four assists, and Rivens finished just three points shy of a double-double with seven points and 10 rebounds for GSU. The Lady Eagles finished with 10 steals and produced 17 points off turnovers.

Furman didn't have a single player reach double digits in scoring. Despite being one-for-ten from the field, Lady Paladins freshman guard Melissa Lieb-schwager grabbed 10 rebounds and six points in her first career start.

After the game, Cram praised the team's defensive effort saying, "Those nine people who played tonight absolutely played together as a team."

Today's newest trend: blogging

By Steve Johnson
Knight Ridder

By the time you finish reading this, another 367 blogs will have been created. Everybody, their cousin and, quite possibly, your mother, now blogs. With more than 25 million of these online journals by one count, it's the hottest DIY trend since dipping a sponge in paint and making your walls look like they've got a rash.

It's also proven more powerful, lasting and important than early naysayers thought. People, it turns out, have been just aching to publish, and a whole lot of them are willing to do it regularly for little or no compensation. In the process, they're influencing products, policing the press and attempting, at least, to shake up this country's ossified political traditions. Starting a blog is a snap.

STEP 1: Find a host: You can go through a pay service like TypePad (www.typepad.com), which'll cost you a minimum of about $50 a year. Pay services tend to include more features, such as design flexibility and extra storage space. Or you can go through a free service like Blogger (www.blogger.com). Most provide a choice of designs and easy formatting for headlines, blog items, comments and more.

STEP 2: Name your blog: I just started a new blog called "Infinite Monkey Theorem." Make sure to check your blog's name. After I created my title, I found that someone else had one called "The Infinite Monkey Theorem." Too close for comfort, so I switched mine.

STEP 3: Blog: In about four minutes, I had my first posting up. By answering the questions the Blogger site asked me, I even had an ad account set up that will allow me to share with Google the revenue from all the ad clicks my new blog generates. This won't be much, of course, unless you get a whole lot of visitors. The easiest way to do that is to write about celebrities or post pictures of them naked. If you're going to try the latter, you'd best be a lawyer or a lawyer's spouse.

STEP 4: Do not let your blog take over your life: Say what you have to say, publish it, and hope for response. Do not get discouraged when the world doesn't beat a path to your URL. There are many well-established bloggers who did it for years before they were discovered. Use the time to hone your craft. To generate interest, send your postings around to those you think might be interested.

'Razzies' awarded to the worst

By David Germain
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Bad sequels and remakes tortured movie audiences last year, and they provided a smorgasbord for the Razzies, an Academy Awards spoof that pays heed to the worst in Hollywood.

Four of the five worst-picture nominees for the Razzies were sequels or remakes, led by "Son of the Mask," which had eight nominations Monday, including worst actor for Jamie Kennedy and supporting actor for Alan Cumming and Bob Hoskins.

The other worst-picture contenders were Rob Schneider's sequel "Deuce Bigalow: European Gigolo," Jenny McCarthy's raunchy romance "Dirty Love," the TV update "The Dukes of Hazzard" and the horror remake "House of Wax."

Razzies will be announced March 4, the day before the Oscars.

Tom Cruise earned three Razzie nominations, as worst actor for "War of the Worlds" and two of the five slots in a new Razzies category for most tiresome tabloid targets. Cruise was nominated there for his anti-psychiatry rant and for his very public romance with Katie Holmes.

"He had been a very private person up until this past year," said Razzies founder John Wilson. "It certainly was a bizarre turn in terms of how he handles his personal life and the access that he gave the media to himself. The endless posing on the red carpet and just smooching like they were on the couch at home."

whose son is born with the shape-shifting powers showcased in Jim Carrey's original 1994 movie, was an early Razzies favorite when it came out nearly a year ago. As Wilson was preparing for last year's Razzies ceremony, his family went to see "Son of the Mask."

"I was working on the script for last year's show, and they got home and my son stuck his head in the door and said, 'Dad, we've got one for next year,'" Wilson said.

Besides Cruise and Kennedy, worst-actor nominees were Will Ferrell for "Bewitched" and "Kicking & Screaming," The Rock for "Doom" and Schneider for "Deuce Bigalow."

McCarthy earned three nominations for "Dirty Love," for worst actress, screenplay and screen couple

(she and "anyone dumb enough to befriend or date her").

Her worst-actress competitors: Jessica Alba for "Fantastic Four" and "Into the Blue," Hilary Duff for "Cheaper by the Dozen 2" and "The Perfect Man," Jennifer Lopez for "Monster-in-Law" and Tara Reid for "Alone in the Dark."

Paris Hilton received two nominations, worst supporting actress for "House of Wax" and most tiresome tabloid target.

Holmes also was nominated for worst supporting actress for "Batman Begins," along with Carmen Electra for "Dirty Love" and the
