WOMEN'S BASKETBALL PREVIEW 2007

Our sports staff gives you the stats you need for the upcoming season

Election day arrives in Statesboro

By Jessica Martin and Charles Minshew

G-A Daily staff

Today, the much debated Statesboro City Council elections will be held.

Three districts are on the ballot, district 2, 3, and 5 (Districts 1 and 4 are not voting at this time) and voting will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

In district two, the choice is between incumbent Gary Lewis and challenger Nathan Queen. Lewis entered the city council in 1998 and was re-elected in 2003. Queen is a Georgia Southern graduate and currently works at Retrievers bar.

Voting for district two will be held at the William James Education Complex on Williams Road.

In district three, incumbent Will Britt is being challenged by Harry "Bubba" Propes. The much debated Britt has been in office since being elected in 2003. Propes is a GSU graduate and a pharmaceutical representative for Pfizer.

In district five, incumbent John T. Morris is challenged by Travis Chance. Morris was elected in 2001 and re-elected in 2003. Chance is also a GSU graduate and currently an insurance agent.

Voting for districts three and five will be held at the Bulloch County Parks and Recreation Senior Citizens Center, near El Sombrero Restaurant.

A pep rally was held last night at the Rotunda by the Student Government Association for the upcoming voting.

Olliff Hall is just one of three residence halls that will be demolished to make room for the new Centennial Place complex.

New info surfaces on Centennial Place construction

By Charles Minshew

Assistant features editor

The Centennial Place complex will sit on the area where Olliff, Johnson, and Winburn Halls, the ROTC building and Building 805, which houses the library's government documents, currently are.

The architect for Centennial Place is Niles Bolton Associates (NBA), based out of Atlanta. The actual construction work will be completed by Hardin, also based out of Atlanta. Valdosta-based Ambling University Development Group (AUDG) presented the winning design to University Housing.

NBA and AUDG have collaborated on student housing projects at other college campuses in the state including University Village at Georgia State University and East Campus Village at the University of Georgia.

Floor plans have been determined, but Vickie Hawkins, director of University Housing advised that plans are still changing, sometimes on a daily basis. "Some of it just changed last night. That's just how fluid this project is," Hawkins said. Centennial Place will be approved by the Board of Regents at the January '08 meeting, with the deal being closed in February '08.

The demolition of the ROTC Building and Building 805 will occur between the middle part of Spring '08. Once students move out of Olliff, Johnson, and Winburn Halls in May '08, University Housing officials will take furniture out of the buildings and then close them.

Once all of these steps have been completed in June, Olliff, Johnson, and Winburn Halls will be demolished and major construction on Centennial Place will begin soon afterward.

The George-Anne goes to D.C.

On October 23, The George-Anne Daily and 91.9 the Buzz members attended the four-day 86th annual National College Media Convention in Washington D.C. where they were exposed to various national and collegiate media professionals.

Between conference classes, students ventured out into the city to explore our Nation's capitol city. From the Natural History Museum to the Vietnam Memorial, the Washington Monument to the White House, the experience broadened their abilities as rising journalists.

Housing

Living Spaces

According to Hawkins, Centennial Place will be the largest residence hall at GSU. With 1,001 beds in 263,477 square feet of unit space (square footage of living spaces only), the complex will be bigger than Eagle Village, which has 796 beds and Southern Pines, which has 630 beds.

The complex will be comprised of four buildings. Two of the buildings will house public spaces on the first floor. Some of these public spaces, like the computer lab, will only be open to residents. The retail space will be open to the entire campus community.

The Department of University Housing will be offering four types of rooms in Centennial Place, all at different prices.

In the shared suites, two students will share one bedroom, bathroom area and kitchenette. In the private suites, there will be two students in separate bedrooms, but they will share a bathroom area and kitchenette.

In the super suite, like a majority of suites in Eagle Village are, there will be four students in separate bedrooms, along with two bathroom areas, and a kitchenette. The apartments will offer a full kitchen, bathroom area, and their own laundry area.

The different types of rooms offered will offer different price ranges for the building. Hawkins said "We want to be able to have different price points in this complex where every student can live."

Retail Spaces

According to Wendy Hagins, director of Auxiliary Services, the spaces in Centennial Place will be in the buildings that border Georgia Avenue. Hagins also added that each of the spaces will be around 800-900 square feet, with seating on the outside as well as the inside.

In comparison, Starbucks and Chick-Fil-A have spaces of around 2,000 square feet. There will be no restaurants with fryers, or places with "back of the house operations."

Hagins acknowledged that there are some limitations to having the retail space in the complex. "We won't do anything that would require hood systems," said Hagins. "The back of the retail space of Building 200 is courtyard and you don't want hood systems and grease there."

He also added that Landrum will be right across the street offering foods that have to be cooked in hood systems. Hagins was not able to tell what restaurants and retail would be there exactly, but mentioned that chains like Subway or Quizno's, which offer fresh foods, would be appealing.

Hagins also spoke about students' concerns of having a place to eat late at night. "One of the things we do think that we will need to do in these locations, to make these locations prosper, is that we would like to open them up in the evenings," Hagins said.

are in place today and they have not changed," said Hall.

"I encourage you that once you confirm your registration, once you've researched your candidates, go out tomorrow and exercise your god given constitutional right to vote in the city of Statesboro," said Hall, receiving loud applause from the audience.

"I am very proud of how our students have handled themselves. I think they understand the concept of the forum and I think they've done a great job handling themselves very progressively and professionally. I am very proud of them," said Teresa Thompson, Vice President of Student Affairs and Enrollment Management.

"Stand up and be counted. Our voices are as good as anybody else's. We do have the right to vote in the city of Statesboro and we will tomorrow," said Bryan Toles, SGA Executive Vice President.

SUPPORT

The G-A is funded primarily through revenue from advertisements placed in the paper and receives additional support, in part, from the Student Activities Budget Committee.

STUDENTS BEWARE

The G-A screens all advertisements prior to publication. The newspaper strives to accept ads for legitimate products and services only. Students are urged to exercise caution when replying to ads-particularly those which require a credit card number, other personal information, or money in advance of the delivery of a product or service. Students are also urged to report to the newspaper any suspicious offers which they might see in an ad. Remember, if an offer seems too good to be true, it probably is.

FREEBIE INFO

ALL FREE student and faculty ads to be run in the G-A must have a NAME, P.O. BOX and PHONE NUMBER. Ads will be rejected if they do not have this information. NO EXCEPTIONS.

ADVERTISING

The G-A reserves the right to refuse any advertisement.

DISPLAY AD DEADLINE: The deadline for reserving space and submitting advertising copy is Noon, one week prior to the intended publication date. For more information, rate cards, sample publications, contact the advertising manager or student media advisor.

PROOFING/ERRORS/OMISSIONS: The newspaper makes every reasonable effort to correct and complete information in advertisements. However the advertiser is responsible for any errors in advertisements and its liability for adjustments is limited to the amount of space the error occupied in the ad. Further, the newspaper is not responsible for any damages caused due to an ad's omission from a particular edition and its responsibility solely is to reschedule the ad in the next regular edition at the regular advertising rates.

CLASSIFIED ADS: Free classified ads from students, faculty and staff must be non-commercial in nature and submitted in writing with the name of the sender, local address and phone number. No free ads taken via telephone - at this price we don't take dictation. One free ad per person per week. Commercial classified are available only from our online site at www.gsuads.com. The price of commercial ads is $7 for 200 characters for line ads. Ads must be paid for using a major credit card. For classified display ads, contact gaclass@georgiasouthern.edu.

CIRCULATION INFORMATION: Mail subscriptions are not available at this time. However, readers may visit our Web site for free access to current and past issues. Visit www.gadaily.com to view online issues. The G-A is distributed free of charge on the Georgia Southern campus through delivery sites located in campus buildings, at off-campus sites, and in residence halls.

NOTICE

Readers may pick up one free copy, and a second for a roommate or acquaintance, at distribution sites. Additional copies are 50 cents each and are available at the Williams Center. However, unauthorized removal of additional copies from a distribution site constitutes theft under Georgia law, a misdemeanor offense punishable by a fine and/or jail time. Editors will seek to have any person(s) who removes more than the authorized number of copies from distribution sites prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

NOTE

We gratefully acknowledge the theft of one of our slogans- "Liked by Many, Cussed by Some, Read by them All"- from Robert Williams of the Blackshear Times. Credit for the other slogan- "Covering Campus like a Swarm of Gnats"- goes to G-A alum Mike Mills.

Election

"We want to vote and we want to vote in Statesboro where we live, volunteer, shop and go to school," said SGA President Jon Simpson at the rally.

Around fifty students stood, listened, and at points cheered, while listening to speakers getting ready to head to the polls.

James Hall, a graduate student senator for SGA, spoke about voting as a student in the 2004 presidential and 2006 congressional elections, in which there were no challenges to student voting. He said he posed the question to the Statesboro Citizens for Good Government, to which he said the reply was that it was a controversial city council race.

"I have news for them and I have news for you. The laws that were in place then are the laws that

Pakistan arrests hundreds in attempt to ward off protests

By Laurie Goering and Kim Barker

Pakistan President Pervez Musharraf declared a national state of emergency on Saturday.

Pakistani police arrested hundreds of lawyers, human-rights activists and opposition politicians Sunday in an apparent bid to ward off protests over President Pervez Musharraf's weekend declaration of a national state of emergency and firing of the country's Supreme Court chief.

Pakistan's lawyers, who have become leading players in the country's pro-democracy movement this year, said they are planning rallies at Islamabad's Supreme Court and at district courts nationwide Monday to protest Musharraf's suspension of the constitution and what they called his coup against the country's high court, which had been expected to rule next week on whether the president's recent election to another term was constitutional.

Opponents had challenged whether Musharraf, who seized power in a bloodless military coup, was allowed to run for president while serving as army chief.

The situation has resonance outside the nation. Musharraf is considered a key ally in the U.S.-led war on terrorism. Islamic militants have gained strength in recent months as he has been engulfed in a political crisis.

"If the nation does not rise against the blunder of this general, then the very existence of the country is at stake, and democracy and human rights will be gone," Rana Sana Ullah Khan, an opposition politician and lawyer in Faisalabad, Pakistan's third-largest city, said in a telephone interview Sunday.

He said police carried out at least 150 overnight raids in Faisalabad, arresting nearly 100 lawyers and opposition figures, but those like him who had so far evaded the sweep were planning to travel to Islamabad on Monday, or to protest at district courts if they could not reach the capital.

The deposed chief justice, Iftikhar Mohammed Chaudhry, who earlier defied Musharraf's efforts to fire him, was confined to his cordoned-off home in the capital, with no one allowed to approach, according to wire reports.

Arrests were reported in Islamabad, Lahore, Karachi and other major cities, aimed primarily at prominent lawyers. Among those detained were national and regional leaders of Pakistan's bar association and the president of the Lahore High Court, said Asma Jahangir, a human-rights activist and lawyer who was put under house arrest for three months.

"We believe that Musharraf has to be taken out of the equation and a government of national reconciliation put in place," she said in a statement that warned that in coming days "the scene is likely to get uglier" in Pakistan.

In suspending the country's constitution Saturday, Musharraf cited "interference" by the country's judiciary and growing violence by Islamic extremists as national threats. U.S. and other Western officials quickly condemned the move as a step backward in Pakistan's faltering progress toward ending eight years of military rule and restoring civilian democracy.

Tariq Azim, the country's deputy minister of information, confirmed Sunday that parliamentary elections planned for January probably would be pushed back.

Pakistani opposition figures said Sunday that besides arresting scores of lawyers, the government had asked national and district judges to take new oaths of office over the weekend in an apparent effort to sweep out opposition figures. Judges who refused to sign the oath were removed from office, said Syed Kamran Zafar, an official of the Pakistan People's Party, an opposition party led by former Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto.

Over the weekend the government also passed tough new media laws that provide for a jail sentence of up to three years for anyone who "defames and brings into ridicule or disrepute the head of state."

Delays may slow library progress

By Cristy Smith
Staff writer

The construction continues at Henderson Library; even if you do not pass the building, you can hear the construction from afar.

The nearly $23 million project is estimated to be complete by June 2008, but could possibly be delayed due to the extensive construction and changes that could arise along the way, according to Ann Hamilton, Associate Dean of Henderson Library.

"We still had workman with hammers and drills running around when we opened the new addition and we don't want to have that this time around," said Bede Mitchell, Dean of Henderson Library.

If the library is ready next year, students will have access to new software, study rooms, presentation rooms, and furnishings they didn't have access to before. Fellow Georgia Southern University students will have also contributed to the décor and have input in the multimedia software that will be available.

"Seniors in professor Diane Phillips' interior design classes have proposed designs for furnishings that may be used in the learning commons," said Hamilton.

The new expansion will include 31 study rooms compared to the original 8, and learning commons that will have the newest and latest multimedia software at students' and faculty members' disposal.

"The learning commons is still being finalized and we're asking the students what computer software to purchase," said Mitchell.

This new and improved library will also contain presentation rooms for students to practice with their visual and multimedia abstracts, which will help reveal how their presentations will be viewed in the classroom.

The expanded library will offer more seating due to the Automated Retrieval System, which stores books and other publications out of the way and is already in use Hamilton explained.

"We're the only library in the southeast to offer the Automated Retrieval System," said Hamilton. "The original building had 1,000 seats and the new building will have room for 3,300 seats."

Most are eagerly anticipating the opening of the new facility and all that it will offer. The construction process is long, but the library staff is optimistic about the results and student satisfaction.

"I'm quite confident that students will be happy with the results," said Mitchell.

For more information on the construction process and the most current updates, go to <http://library.georgiasouthern.edu/building/>.

The pieces come together in Saw IV

Special photo

By Elliot S. Volkman

News editor

In the latest edition of the Saw films, director Darren Bousman and a new set of writers have managed to keep suspense and unpredictability that all comes together in the final moments of the films. The film picking up where it had last left off pulls a new cast of individuals into Jigsaw's world.

The lesser known actors did a great job in portraying each roll, with the exception of the cheesy 80s cop persona played by Scott Paterson. Even though this was supposed to be a sequel it ended up being a mixture of a prequel as well. The true story of why Jigsaw became the serial killer will be answered, but there is room for a possible fifth film.

The smooth transitions helped move the story along to a fast paced momentum only slowing to cause suspense causing the watcher to try predicting what would happen next. Although I was not fond of the previous film, the fourth film has redeemed itself with new tools which Jigsaw has creatively found ways to "help" people with.

Most thriller films that I have recently seen usually involve lots of jerky camera motions that usually give you more seasickness than a scare. There may have been a few moments like this but the way Bousman puts the film together always pans out to be very suspenseful, causing the audience to jump back in their seats.

One of the ways I feel a movie has done well is by the physical reaction of the audience, and when most of them jump back in their seats it usually means something was done right.

Saw IV's story lines still constantly find new ways to peek my interest even if they are just a continuation from the previous story. The only problem I have with the whole concept is that everything Jigsaw plans out has to go exactly according to plan, or the pieces end up not fitting. Though this may be the point, the possibility to have every single little step fall into place is pretty unrealistic, but still very cool to watch anyways.

Out of the other horror/suspense films that have come out for this Halloween season, I would have to say this is the must see flick. It's a bit gorier than needed but who doesn't love cheesy blood sprays? Aside from the first film this is probably my favorite out of the four and I suggest its worth the watch if you liked the previous ones.

Women's Basketball 2007-2008

By Katherine Cox / Staff writer

On the sidelines for another year will be Georgia Southern's distinguished all-time winningest head coach Rusty Cram, joining the Lady Eagles for his 12th season as their leader.

Coach Cram is a two-time Southern Conference "Coach of the Year" for his success in grabbing a pair of SoCon regular season titles and multiple appearances to the tournament finals.

Returning with Cram will be assistant coach Lee DuBose, who will be coaching the Lady Eagles for her second season. She played from 2003-2006 and remains not only as a coach, but also imprinted into the school record book in several shooting categories.

New to this year's coaching staff, and rejoining her Alma matter, will be Marry Perry, the four-year letter winner for the Lady Eagles 1995-1999. Perry served as assistant coach for USC Aiken prior to joining Georgia Southern for the 2007-2008 season.

The Georgia Southern women's basketball team was voted by the Southern Conference coaches to finish fifth in the league's preseason poll, and features the thing that is "most unique" - depth - as described by Coach Cram. The 2007-2008 Women's basketball team yields a roster that returns 10 letter winners, an All-Conference and All-Tournament team member, and a "Freshman of the Year" award winner.

"I am more than ready for this team to settle into the success that they are more than capable of having," said Coach Cram.

Coming off a year of being the 19th ranked top free throw shooter will be returning sophomore Carolyn Whitney who averaged 9.5 points, 3.1 rebounds, and a team-best 3.4 assists each game. She is expected to be the majority ball handler for the upcoming season.

"Carolyn will certainly be key and we feel very comfortable," said Cram. "I can guarantee you that nobody else on the team has worked harder than she has. I'm very pleased and proud of what she has accomplished to this point."

Senior Tiffany Brown is expected to be the top scorer for the team. Brown was part of the All-Conference and All-Tournament team prior to her success from last season. She finished last season first on the team in scoring and third on the team for rebounds. She was ranked fourth best in the conference for her scoring abilities and ninth in free throw shooting percentage. Brown is a key returnee for the Lady Eagles and will lead the team in a successful season.

All five starters from last year's team are returning and only 3 new freshmen are being introduced to the Lady Eagle team.

"I think the underclassmen are adjusting very well so far. We were very young last year and that forced a lot of experience fast for the younger ones. I feel like now we have the depth and experience to do really well this season and I am very excited to see what happens," said senior Christa Waterman. With the leaders waiting to step up and drive on to another successful season, everyone has set their goals for the upcoming games.

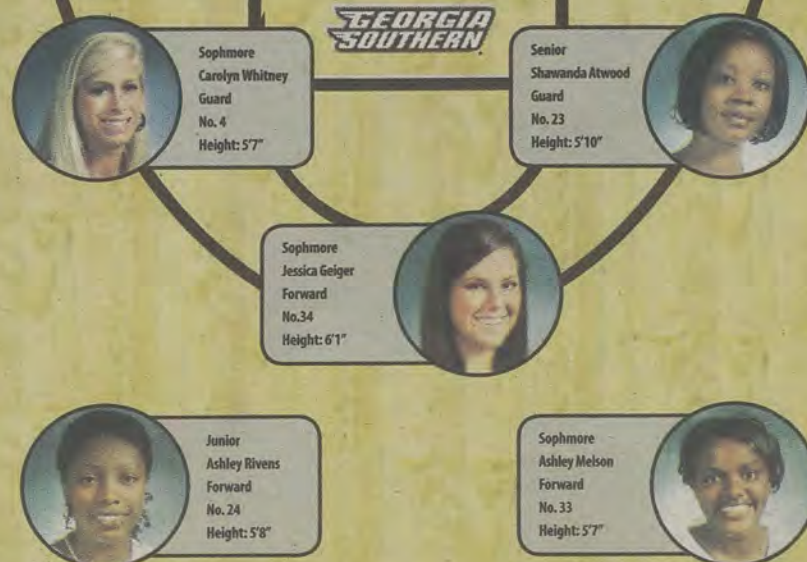

"Our biggest goal is for us to come together as a team and for everybody to understand their role on this basketball team - that they hold each other accountable for their role and that they all blend, come together as one with the same common purpose," said Cram.

The Lady Eagles have their season opener Friday, November 9 at Jacksonville.
