Amber London’s
Fall Lookbook and Fashion Guide

BY ALEXANDRIA RICHBOURG

Little Details Matter
The button down skirt is hot this fall and you should spice it up. “This is probably one of the most pinpointing trends this fall,” London said. Make it pop with a Band tee and some fishnets.

Oh and don’t forget the accessories. A thin gold chain, choker and a Newsboy Cap can make this look super edgy.

The Oversized lace up Sweater
The lace up trend isn’t dead yet and oversized sweaters are a must. “The lace up trend has been so prominent within this last year. Now that we’re transitioning into cooler weather, it works,” London said.

Layer it over a denim dress, button up shirt or even wear it with your favorite jeans.

Edge up your Satin
Who said you can’t layer with your cute satin top? Amber does it extremely well and so can you. Take something dainty to the next level by adding a white tee and a statement belt.

Journalism is publishing what others won’t

DEVIN CONWAY

Conway is a journalism major from Manchester, New Hampshire.

An Introduction to Wikileaks

Wikileaks is a non-profit media organization that publishes leaked documents and secret information that it receives from a number of anonymous sources.

Founded in 2006, Wikileaks has since published over 10 million secret documents, which is actually more than the rest of the world’s media combined.

Having recently celebrated their tenth birthday, Wikileaks came out with a list of what they consider to be their ten most important leaks.

This list includes, but is not limited to:

- The Guantánamo Bay files, which exposed the gross mistreatment of U.S. military prisoners at Guantanamo Bay in Cuba

- The famous ‘Collateral Murder’ video, which showed American Apache helicopter pilots killing 18 Iraqis, including two journalists, and then laughing about it

- The NSA files, which exposed the National Security Agency for illegally spying on world leaders

- The DNC leaks, which showed that the Democratic National Committee colluded with the Hillary Clinton campaign in order to undermine Bernie Sanders’ chances at winning the Democratic nomination

- The Iraq and Afghanistan war logs, which exposed an unprecedented number of civilian deaths at the hands of the U.S. military, and were the biggest leak of information in American military history

We Open Governments

These leaked documents have allowed us to better understand the way the world’s power structures work and the way our political, military and corporate leaders operate.

Wikileaks is a firm believer in the democratization of information, hence their slogan, ‘We open governments’, and the subsequent impact that this forced transparency has on the people to which that information is relevant.

For as much as they emphasize transparency for those who are in positions of power, they actually operate in a very clandestine manner.

There are only a few figures within the organization that are known to the public, and they always maintain a sense of anonymity regarding their sources.

Their main argument for this secrecy is because of the nature of their work; without their protection, their sources will be exposed, and their identity ultimate destroyed.

Unlike any other media organization, they offer no interpretation or analysis of the information that they publish.

They don’t have reporters who decide what is newsworthy or anchors to try and help people understand what they’ve seen.

In a sense, they are the only true journalistic enterprise left in a world of increasingly partisan journalists and media outlets.

Podesta Emails

If you’ve been tuned in to the U.S. presidential election, you’ve more than likely seen Wikileaks in the news once again.

They recently began releasing the ‘The Podesta Emails’, which is a series of correspondences between John Podesta, the current Chairman of the Hillary Clinton campaign and former Chief of Staff of Bill Clinton, Counselor to Barack Obama and former president of the Center For American Progress, and a number of powerful political operatives, journalists and corporate representatives.

These e-mails have exposed Hillary Clinton and her associates in a series of unbelievable corruption and deception.

Here are just a few examples of the conflicts of interest and sketchy-dealings involving Hillary Clinton, which have all been confirmed by The Podesta Emails:

- Hillary Clinton intentionally kept 55,000 emails from Congress after being subpoenaed for maintaining a private e-mail server, potentially compromising classified information and putting our national security at risk.

- A number of private Hillary Clinton speeches that made such proclamations as ‘We are going to ring China with missile defense’ and ‘One must have a public position and a private one’.

- Donna Brazile, a former CNN employee, and current DNC chair, sent Hillary Clinton debate questions prior to a debate with Bernie Sanders.

Julian Assange

The founder and editor-in-chief of Wikileaks, Julian Assange, has been stranded in the Ecuadorian embassy in London since 2012.

He applied for political asylum to Ecuador after the U.S. began to investigate Wikileaks and Assange for their activities, and many American officials openly called for his assassination.

Ecuador granted him asylum, but he has been unable to leave their embassy because of a legitimate fear that he will be immediately arrested after stepping foot outside of the building.

Assange has lived in constant fear for his life for those four years inside the embassy, and given Wikileaks’ most recent endeavors, perhaps he has seen that fear come to its highest point in 2016.

He recently cancelled an appearance for a press conference on a balcony at the embassy because he was worried that he might be shot in the process.

According to Wikileaks, multiple sources state that U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry asked Ecuador to prevent Assange from publishing documents relating to Hillary Clinton because he and Wikileaks were actually effecting the U.S. presidential election.

Ecuador has been pressured into restricting Assange’s internet access, and finally caved to that pressure a few days ago.
GS’ CAREER FAIRS PROMOTE FUTURE JOB OPPORTUNITIES

BY TANDRA SMITH
The George-Anne Staff

Georgia Southern students take advantage of many things on campus every year, but one of the largest opportunities for students would likely be the numerous career fairs that attempt to recruit students for their companies.

The stats
According to a survey conducted by the National Association of Colleges and Employers (NACE), 88.4 percent of students surveyed said they use job fairs as a method of searching for jobs, co-ops and internships.

Sixty two percent of students believe that career/job fairs are effective in getting them a job.

GS hosts a variety of fairs, ranging from STEM related to a career fair for graduate students. The Eagle Expo is GS’ largest career fair and typically has over 100 companies set up in the RAC each September and February, according to the Career Services’ website.

Upperclassman’s opinion
Calvin Irby, junior mechanical engineering major, likes the career fairs GS offers and went to a lot of them his freshman year.

“Career fairs are a great way to talk to different companies because a lot of them offer co-ops and internships,” Irby said. Irby got an internship at a career fair on campus and will now have a job upon graduation. He believes that more students should take advantage of fairs because it’ll cut down the stress on finding a job or internship once they’re upperclassmen.

“A lot of freshmen don’t think it’s necessary, but I think it helps get your name out there,” Irby said.

Employers are often eager to meet with college students. In fact, according to glassdoor.com, in 2013, college graduates accounted for 57 percent of all entry level hires and that number has only grown in the past three years.

Career Services’ turn
Mary Lu Adams, coordinator of career programs and events for the Career Services, says that they offer the opportunity for employers to hold interviews with various students that they’ve met at the fairs held here on campus.

“We usually have 20 to 30 employers take us up on that offer each time, and for each fair, there are anywhere from 200-300 interviews that takes place on campus,” Adams said. “Out of those interviews, usually about 35-50 offers for internships, co-ops and full time positions are made.”

Students and faculty are the biggest resource when it comes to determining what kinds of job fairs will come to campus.

Adams urges students to talk to their Career Development Specialist if they have an idea about what types of companies or industries the university should try and arrange to invite.

“Our staff also keeps a close eye on nationwide and regional employment trends. If there’s a certain industry that is experiencing a hiring boom, we make it a priority to seek out those employers and bring them to campus, or at the very least get their jobs posted to Eagle Career Net,” Adams said.

In the next couple of semesters, Career Services is looking to bring even more fields to GS, including multimedia journalism, which was initiated by student request.

Adams said, “It’s still in the early stages, but we’ve been discussing the potential with various interested staff and faculty on campus and hoping to make it happen in the next couple semesters.”

GS to host collegiate level Model Arab League conferences

BY TAISHA WHITE
The Georgia-Anne Staff

Georgia Southern University received a new title early this month at the first regional high school level Model Arab League conference: the official host for collegiate level League conferences.

The debate team hosted their conference on Oct. 1, which featured three high schools, Frederica Academy, Statesboro STEAM Academy and Brunswick High School. GS’ debate team received so much positive praise, the university was named the new official host for the conferences.

The Model Arab League, which started back in 2014, is an academic debate team that allows university and high school level students to debate on worldly issues in the Arab world.

Each debate team picks a country, in which they study cultural, economic and other issues within their countries. In a two to three day competition period, delegates from the teams debate their issues against collegiate level and/or secondary level teams.

Arabic lecturer and advisor Youssef Salhi speaks on how the Model Arab League practices for competitions.

“We have meetings every Friday from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. in the Carroll Building and we discuss the different issues concerning the country that we are studying and go over debate procedures,” Salhi said. “Sometimes it can be a challenge because we want to make sure we know everything we are discussing and make sure that we are prepared, but we make it work.”

Tony Hudson, senior international studies major, and vice president of communications for the Model Arab League explains why the debate team is bigger than just debating.

“We are breaking down barriers and stereotypes of the Arab world,” Hudson said. “Our main goal is to provide a better understanding, not just to us, but to everyone else as well.”

Students involved in the Model Arab League are said to gain pivotal leadership in debating and critical thinking, but are also eligible for many travel and academic opportunities.

Amber Thompson, sophomore biology major, is excited that the Model Arab League is bringing awareness to issues in different countries.

“I think it’s important, for not just as college students, but as future leaders to be mindful of the different issues going on in the world,” Thompson said. “It’s pretty cool to see that they are debating on world issues.”

Kevin Corr, graduate student, believes that the Model Arab League allows students to open their minds to the outside world.

“I think that the League is something different than what most people are use to in their everyday life,” Corr said. “I think it would be beneficial for others to know about the League because it allows students to see what else is going on in the world besides what’s right in front of us.”

GS was named the official Model Arab League conference host early October. They recently hosted three high schools in the Carroll Building.

Jean Bartels plans to retire next summer

Jean Bartels, provost and vice president of academic affairs, plans to retire next summer after serving Georgia Southern University for over 17 years.

Bartels will retire on June 30, 2017, according to a message to the university community by President Jaimie Hebert.

Before arriving at GS, Bartels worked as a staff nurse in the Intensive Care Unit at Columbia Hospital in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, according to her biography on the GS website.

Bartels began her career at GS as a professor of nursing and the chair of the School of Nursing from 1990-2010. Later, she became the Dean of the College of Health and Human Sciences, and finally the provost and vice president of academic affairs.

In 2015, Bartels served as the interim president, making history at GS as the first female president at the University.

Throughout her career, Bartels served on a number of national nursing boards, conducted research in several nursing practice and higher education areas and held workshops and presentations on the local, state, national and international levels.

She received the American Association of Colleges of Nursing 2009 Sr. Bernadette Armiger Award in recognition of her significant contributions to nursing education and advancement of the nursing profession, according to the GS website.

"Dr. Bartels was such a welcoming presence to me as I assumed my role at Georgia Southern," Hebert said in a message to the university community. "I hope you will join me in congratulating Dr. Bartels on her outstanding academic career and her upcoming retirement."

GS sorority partners with brother fraternity to host breast cancer 5K

In honor of breast cancer awareness month, Zeta Phi Beta is partnering with Phi Beta Sigma to host "StrideZ in Pink," a 5K run dedicated to raise awareness for breast cancer and bring people together.

StrideZ in Pink coordinator, Sydeii Turner, calls the 5K a "fun run" because it’s not competitive and there is no trophy at the end. Participants can choose to walk or run.

"I'm very excited," Turner said. "I have really high hopes, and I know that we’re going to make connections with the businesses and with the people of the community."

Several vendors, including apartment complexes and local restaurants, will have stations at the event.

The sorority will have a table for registration between the Russell Union and the University Bookstore Monday and Thursday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., but runners can also register (http://www.stridezinpink.eventbrite.com)

Registration for the 5K is $15 prior to the event and $20 on the day of the run. Runners will receive a t-shirt at check-in on the day of the race. The 5K will be on Saturday, Oct. 22 from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and will begin at the Recreational Activity Center (RAC) pavilion.

To volunteer for the event or to request more information, contact Sydeii Turner at sydeii015@gmail.com or Stanley Heard at stanleyheard@gmail.com.
FATAL SHOOTING IN CAMPUS CROSSING

BY MEG ELWOOD
The Georgia-Anne staff

According to the Bulloch County police scanner, seven to eight gun shots were fired at Campus Crossing on Lanier Drive at approximately 12:30 a.m. Wednesday morning.

Two suspects fled towards Paulson Stadium on foot after shots were fired. Police arrived at the scene, taped off building eight in the property and investigated a vehicle. Officials then dispersed to scope the surrounding area for the possible suspects.

The university sent out an Eagle Alert to students, faculty and staff at 1:15 a.m. As of this morning, one death has been confirmed by police. When officials first arrived at the scene, a male was found with a gun shot wound and was transported to East Georgia Regional Medical Center, where he died from his injuries.

According to a notification email from Campus Crossing management, the victim and suspects are not residents of the property. Specific information on the suspects has yet to be released.

According to a press release from the Statesboro Department of Public Safety, this case is still under investigation by the detectives of Statesboro Police Department’s Criminal Investigations Bureau.

Police were called after midnight to the scene. Bulloch County deputies and GS officers helped respond to the incident.

Seven to eight gun shots were fired Wednesday morning at the Campus Crossing apartment complex. The incident is still under investigation.

Get ready to jam, Statesboro. The Eagle Creek Brewing Company and Airbound Entertainment are back again to host their second outdoor music festival for the Statesboro community, called ROCKtoberfest, and they have high expectations for the event and its lineup.

The two businesses first partnered up back in July to host Eagle Creek Music Fest, in conjunction with the brewery’s third anniversary. According to Airbound owner William Bridwell, July’s event was one of the hottest days of the summer followed by the sky falling out and pouring on the crowd, and it still didn’t kill the vibes.

420 tickets were sold for the last event, and they’ve already reached that number in early bird sales for this one. Bridwell hopes to reach the capacity for the venue.

Bridwell started conjuring up the idea for ROCKtoberfest the week before Eagle Creek Music Festival, and community support and engagement provided enough for a second go-round.

“It means nothing if people aren’t coming out and enjoying themselves. We want people to see these things can happen in Statesboro and more than once and it takes the whole community,” Bridwell said.

ROCKtoberfest scheduled four bands, all who have played in the Statesboro area before. The gates open at 4 p.m. on Saturday, with the first performance by The Orange Constant at 5 p.m. Following them is The Bama Gamblers, then co-headliners The Vegabonds and CBDB, who will close out the festival.

These bands can usually be found performing at Dingus McGee’s or Gnats Landing, but this event is sure to bring more than just the usual college student out for typical night of partying. The music and atmosphere Saturday night is one to bring out a crowd looking for good music and a groovy time.

Opening the festival is home-’Boro’-grown, The Orange Constant. Starting out in August 2012, they went from a storage shed to a Copper Beech Apartment and are now stationed out of Athens.

Band members are vocalist/guitarist/keyboardist Andrew Brantley, vocalist/guitarist Nickalous Benson, drummer Lee Guentert, and bassist/vocalist Tyler Walker. They produce a vintage, progressive rock sound with pop sensibility, while holding a large focus on songwriting.

“We’re trying to be a band that jams but not a jam band. We want to jam with more serious tone and more song writer focus than some other jam bands,” Guentert explained in a phone interview.

They are all writers in the band, and they will never limit their capabilities to produce lyrics with real meaning. They have a unified understanding of what they want to get across to the listener.

“You’ll never hear us talking about getting drunk, but more of ways of seeing the world or a particular situation. It’s more metaphorical,” Guentert said.

“We’re trying to say something that we think means something for people to hear and connect with, as cliché as that sounds.”

Guentert and the band are currently working on their second full-length album. They’re recording out of Athens with producer Drew Vandenberg, who Guentert says likes to focus more on guitar tones and the sound of the song.

“Time to Go”. “It’s more spacey and instrumental, and the first one was like, here’s some songs and what we sound like live and perfected. We’ve added to the character of the album,” Guentert said.

Gavin Donati, from the band Backup Planet, played guitar and sang vocals at Eagle Creek’s music festival in July. Other bands at that festival included Statesboro scene regulars The Band Piano and the Tall Paul Band.

Although they plan to leave right after the show, they are more than happy to stop and perform in the bands’ birth towns.

“Statesboro is a simpler life, and it brings back a lot of nostalgic memories,” Guentert said.

Following The Orange Constant is a rock-n-roll outfit out of Auburn, Ala., The Bama Gamblers. Bo Flynn is the lead vocalist and bass guitar, Matt Alemany is on guitar and vocals, Eric Baath is on piano and organ, and Hunter Jackson is on drums. They’ve played at Dungus MaCee’s and other schools and venues in the Southeast.

Closing out the festival

Co-headlining the show is the harmonious, southern rock band known as The Vegabonds. They’ve traveled from Georgia, Florida, and the rest of the Southeast, to Texas and Chicago, to two completed European tours.

The band members are Daniel Allen on lead vocals, Richard Foeband on guitar and vocals, Paul Bruens on the bass, Beau Cooper on keys and vocals, and Bryan Harris on the drums.

ROCKtoberfest will end with a performance from the other headliner, CBDB.

Their packed band includes Cy Simonton on vocals and guitar, Kris Gottlieb on lead guitar, Josh Rutherford on the bass, Glenn Dillard playing the saxophone and synthesizer, Donald DeLoach on percussion, and Paul Oliver back on the drums.

This Tuscaloosa, Ala. band formed back in June 2010, and have gotten up to New York, Philadelphia and Colorado. This week alone they’ve visited Knoxville, Athens and now Statesboro on Saturday.

The sound they produce is one they like to call “joyfunk.” Simonton described their music as “a balance between heavy progressive rock and pop culture.” It’s ever-evolving and holds many diverse influences coming together to create one tight show.

CBDB is in the process of intense writing for new material. They’re recording currently out of Nashville and plan to release a sample EP by the end of this year. New songs include She’s Mobile and Old Dog.

“Old Dog is more straight towards rock and roll, and She’s Mobile is more of a jammy-party tune,” Simonton said.

The band is known for having an ever-changing meaning for their band name, CBDB. For them, it just worked, and the “meaning” of it is never the same.

“Currently, it’s probably Cinnamon Benson Discount Burlesque. It doesn’t mean anything, it’s just crazy stuff. It’s more fun that way,” Simonton said.

A lasting impression

With a full, interesting lineup like this one, ROCKtoberfest is sure to impress. This is the beginning of great music shows for the Statesboro area, and Bridwell plans for much more in the future.

There’s so much more culture that goes on in Statesboro, and people just don’t take the effort to seek it out or they just don’t know about it,” Bridwell said. “Slowly these things will be revealed to people and people will see there’s a lot to do by staying in town and supporting local businesses. Keep it in the family.”

Eagle Creek and Airbound are expecting a jam-packed, high energy event. So switch up your usual Statesboro weekend night and join the fun this Saturday.

Tickets may be purchased through the Xorbia linked shared on the ROCKtoberfest Facebook page. General admission tickets will also be sold at the door for $15. Tour and tasting packages will be available at the brewery for those looking to participate in the Oktoberfest aspect of the event.

At the beginning of this year, two Georgia Southern students gave life to an idea they had in high school. That idea was to create an original concept for an anime cartoon and make it a reality. By dedicating themselves and networking, sophomore business management major Jordan Walker and freshman information technology major Alex Knapp have collaborated with two clubs on campus to establish a team of around 30 creative minds to help complete GS’ first-ever student produced anime series.

The series, titled "Doppelganger", contains many elements of an anime including fantasy, drama, action and comedy and its season one premiere is expected to be available for the public around August of next year.

As of now, Walker and Knapp, along with their assistant director, sophomore biology major Lieu Nguyen, have organized their impressive crew into a network of artistic collaboration where designers and artists of all kinds are able to communicate and share their ideas for different aspects of the series. “Communication is such a big key in this project,” Nguyen said.

During the project, those participating in it choose one or more of several different groups, such as voice acting, art, writing, design, and so on. Each of these groups has a group leader who collects the ideas and designs form their group and sent them to Walker and Knapp for approval. “[It’s amazing] to see that people of different artistic backgrounds come together to be able to learn and work together,” Nguyen said.

One member of the project is senior studio arts major Kala Akins, who has participated in multiple aspects of the project such as artwork and script writing. “Everyone has their own ideas, and we all come together to make one big idea,” Akins said.

The project team currently has concepts for main character designs as well scripts for a couple episodes of season one established and is getting ready to record voice actors for the characters. Although their project is well underway and they have created a large multi-talented crew, Walker and Knapp are still encouraging any and all animators or artists to join the project. Walker, Knapp and Nguyen have created multiple outlets for anyone interested to get in contact with them in order to join. They have a Facebook page titled “Doppelganger" which is run by Nguyen who provides any information for fans or those looking to get involved.

Walker and Jordan are currently in the process of establishing a club at GS solely for the intention to allow interested students to listen to the details of their project and how to get involved.

If you are interested in participating in this project, contact Walker for details via jw11301@georgiasouthern.edu. Otherwise, just keep an ear out for updates about the completion of the series.

How Do You Make an Anime?

Step 1: Plan
The GS anime crew and film club created a plot for "Doppelganger", as well as profiles for the characters. They began recruiting people for the project and are still doing so.

Step 2: Gather Artwork
Walker and Knapp are getting feedback from others about their work and then applying it. The artists, Walker and Knapp are collaborating to determine the characters’ looks.

Step 3: Record
The voice actors will view the anime scripts. After recording those, the actors will meet with the voice acting leader to improve their skills.

Step 4: Animate
The animators will make storyboards for the cartoon. At that point, the animation leader will have a more prominent role.
#TBT TRUE BLUE THURSDAY
GEORGIA SOUTHERN VS. NEW MEXICO STATE

THE GAMEDAY PREVIEW
SATURDAY, OCTOBER 22 - 8:00 P.M. ET
AGGIES MEMORIAL STADIUM, LAS CRUCES, N.M.
BROADCASTED ON ESPN3

GEORGIA SOUTHERN
BY CHRIS SMITH

This Saturday, Georgia Southern will need to dominantly enforce their running game against New Mexico State if they’re looking to get back in the win column. The Eagles (3-3, 2-1 Sun Belt) have a chance to gather themselves together and break their three-game losing streak. GS has not played a game at home in over a month, so they will be looking to end their four-game road trip with a win at Aggie Memorial Stadium.

GS leads the Sun Belt in rushing yards by a mile, but their traditionally great option attack has been average. The 14-point deficit the Eagles found themselves in last week against Georgia Tech proved to be too much to overcome. The scoring drives the Eagles managed to put together later in that game took too long to develop and the Eagles were churning up clock while trailing.

Southern has gained 1,600 yards on the ground as opposed to 932 yards in the passing game. None of the ground as opposed to 932 yards in the passing game. None of the GS must slow down the Aggies All-American running back Larry Rose III also. The defense for the Eagles have been average this season. There are moments when the defense looks to be top 10 caliber, but there are other moments when they tend to fall asleep and give up the big play.

The matchup to watch this game will be Rose III against GS linebacker Ironhead Gallon. Rose is a running back that has the talent to start for a power five conference team. He has missed the beginning of the season due to injuries, but he is starting to get his groove back. He will be facing off against Southern’s leading tackler consistently.

Gallon is small in stature, but he packs a big punch. He is arguably one of the hardest hitting defenders on the team and probably the surest tacklers. His speed gives him an edge when playing and helps him move from sideline to sideline.

The game on Saturday kicks off at 8 p.m. on ESPN3. Georgia Southern leads the all-time series 2-0 since joining the Sun Belt in 2014. Southern won last year’s meeting 56-26 at Paulson Stadium.

NEW MEXICO STATE
BY ROBERT GEORGE

The New Mexico State (NMSU) Aggies roll into the matchup this weekend 0-2 in Sun Belt play. They’re desperate for a conference win and looking to add on to Georgia Southern’s recent road struggles.

Like the Eagles, the Aggies have struggled to start fast and have fallen behind in games early, digging a hole too deep to climb out of.

“We are a good second half team but we have to do that to start the ballgame,” Tyler Rogers, NMSU quarterback, told the Las Cruces Sun-News.

Defensively, the Aggies are led by their stalwart linebacker Rodney Butler, who has a whopping 89 tackles in just six games, averaging out to about 15 a game. In the secondary, Jaden Wright has a pair of interceptions to go along with 33 tackles, and will be tasked with matching up with GS’s wideouts on the edges.

“‘They’re gonna try to load the box and make sure that you can’t run it. They’re certainly a heavy-pressure team,’” Summers said.

Both teams are in desperate need of a win this weekend, which should make for a good matchup. The last time GS played out there, the Eagles came away with a 36-28 win in a hard fought game. Expect this one to be more of the same.
GEORGIA SOUTHERN VOLLEYBALL RECAP

BY DAKOTA FLAKE
The George-Anne contributor

The Georgia Southern Women’s volleyball team 11-10 overall (4-2 Sun Belt) hit the road to play Troy and South Alabama last weekend.

The Eagles have experienced a constant of highs and lows this season, but the one constant has been their spectacular play at home. An outstanding 8-2 record at home leads the Sun Belt Conference. However a 3-0 sweep to Troy 6-18 overall (0-7 Sun Belt) Saturday night saw the Eagles record.

Sophomore Lauren Reichard led the Eagles individualistically, shooting shooting four aces and two digs. With 13 kills, eight blocks and overall at 10-13 overall (4-2 Sun Belt) Friday night and a sweep of Troy 6-18 overall (0-7 Sun Belt) Saturday night.

The Eagles return to Hanner Fieldhouse, where they are 8-2. She has made big plays in key moments again and again. She has those intangible things that you can’t coach. She’s a gamer,” Dustin Wood, head coach, said. The great play at home could be a key component as the Eagles look towards wrapping up their season as seven of their final 11 games are scheduled to be played in Hanner. The continued home success throughout this stretch could serve as a great boost and help catapult the Eagles to a deep run in the Sun Belt Conference tournament.

The Eagles return to Hanner this weekend as they face UT Arlington 10-12 overall (4-3 Sun Belt) Friday night and Texas State 13-9 overall (6-1 Sun Belt) Saturday night. Both games begin at 6:30 p.m. and will be vital games to win as the Eagles look to win in the top two of the East Division.

After a 12-day break as a result of Hurricane Matthew hitting Statesboro, the Georgia Southern women’s volleyball team 11-10 overall (4-2 Sun Belt) hit the road to play Troy and South Alabama last weekend.

The Eagles have experienced a constant of highs and lows this season, but the one constant has been their spectacular play at home. An outstanding 8-2 record at home leads the Sun Belt Conference. However a 3-0 sweep to Troy 6-18 overall (0-7 Sun Belt) Saturday night saw the Eagles record away from Hanner Fieldhouse shift to 3-8.

Sophomore Lauren Reichard led the Eagles Friday night with 13 kills, eight blocks and two digs. “Lauren Reichard put the entire team on her shoulders tonight. She was amazing. She made big plays in key moments again and again. She has those intangible things that you can’t coach. She’s a gamer,” Dustin Wood, head coach, said. The Georgia Southern Men’s golf team placed seventh out of 13 schools at this week’s AutoTrader.com Collegiate Classic in Duluth, GA with four Eagles having carded an even par 72 or better in the second round Tuesday for a strong team finish. Sophomore Steven Fick led the eagles individually, shooting five under for the tournament and finishing tied for seventh place overall. Archer Price, Lukas Alakuppi and Jake Storey all cracked the top 50 individuals as well.

The Eagles will pack their bags for Kauai, Hawaii on Oct. 30 for the Warrior Princeville Invitational hosted by the University of Hawaii. That will be their last competition until after winter break.
