I Will Walk Again

There was a time when I could walk among the sights I see and feel the grass beneath my feet, and run among the trees but fates of time have changed my life, I am no longer free.
I cannot walk among the grass, or run among the trees.

My world is now a pane of glass that frames the loves I knew,
and I can only sit and dream of joys I would renew.
But God is there beside my chair and dries the tears I cry.
He tells me I will walk again through the kingdoms in the sky.
