Welcome

After weeks and months of planning and packing, you are finally here. You are now faced with unfamiliar procedures, rules, and faces. For a while, you will wonder if the person you just passed was a member of the faculty, and if he was, you will wish that you had spoken to him. You will become accustomed to the routine of standing in line. And, at times, you may even wonder what ever made you decide to come here in the first place. But all of these feelings and experiences are a part of the adjustment which every college freshman makes.

But you are here and you will soon become a vital part of campus life. You may create class spirit which will be unequalled. Georgia Southern College welcomes you to the Sweetheart Campus, you will soon become a part of the traditions, activities, and memories which are made here.

"SO GLAD TO MEET 'CHA..."

One of the most anticipated events in the life of a freshman is the time when he will meet that person he is to live with for the next quarter, the roommate. Prior to coming to college, roommates may write and visit each other. But nothing takes the place of the actual adjustment period.

Immediately after entering the room, each roommate sizes the other up to decide if swapping clothes is possible. Then there are the times when one secretly breathes a sign of relief when he finds that he and his roommate could never combine their wardrobes. Some of the funniest times occur when the roommates find their habits differ. One roommate gargles, while the other buzzes away with an electric toothbrush. And one person loves Bach, while the other can't study five minutes without the Supremes. One roommate may snore, talk in his sleep or even walk in his sleep, while the other roommate lies awake and wonders if sleep would be easier in the Los Angeles Freeway.

But roommates aren't always weird, nor are they always dreadful characters that you will be forced to contend with. A roommate is someone who will share your dirty socks, laugh at your pajamas and swear that you snore. Many new experiences await you as you open the door to your room and meet your cellmate or roommate.

WELCOME, FROSH!

In the rush of orientation, many freshmen feel that they will never learn all that they are to know in order to merely register. In short, many newcomers feel insignificant.

Even though freshmen sometimes feel unimportant, they play a very important role in campus activities. Each freshman class brings new faces, new leaders, and new challenges to the established campus life. Freshmen add to many events, merely by showing interest. Freshmen are excited with the idea of college, and their enthusiasm and energy spread to other students and faculty. Freshmen are a very necessary part of Georgia Southern College. They compose the need for growth, new buildings, added classes, and numerous challenges. The "George-Anne" joins others in welcoming the freshman class. Your class can give much to the campus, and we are anxious for you to become part of the spirit of Georgia Southern College.

A SCORE TO BE PROUD OF

Saturday, September 16, marks twenty years that Dr. Zach S. Henderson has been president of Georgia Southern College. Under Dr. Henderson's guidance, the college has grown from Georgia Teacher's College into Georgia Southern College, and has changed from a two-year college to a multiple purpose general college offering may degrees and 5 and 6 year programs.

Dr. Henderson has seen the college expand from three buildings to well over 30.

But his years at the college are not measured only in terms of the physical growth of the college. Perhaps the most outstanding trait which Dr. Henderson possesses is his friendliness. He can be seen often on his strolls about the campus. Freshman girls are frequently thrilled when they realize that the nice man who just held the door for them was none other than the president of the college. Dr. Henderson makes newcomers and former students feel comfortable; in doing this, he retains the small college atmosphere which is part of the charm of Georgia Southern.

We all salute Dr. Henderson on his score . . . twenty years to be proud of.

LITTLE MAN ON CAMPUS

Freshmen Come to College, Entering Via Own Two Feet

By ELAINE THOMAS
Editor

Every college freshman arrives on campus with at least two suitcases of items that he will never need, fears of instructors, explicit instructions to stub all cashier checks, and 15 minutes of advice from everyone the freshman knows. To add to a freshman's worries are registration, wild tales which are told about house directors, the even wilder tales told by upper-classmen, and the depressing feeling that one is getting nowhere in a hurry, and is even having to pay to do so!

At the same time that a freshman may feel frustrated and lost, he can also become increasingly aware of the opportunities which greet him. No longer are parents present to give a nod of approval for date choice, nor is there anyone to tell the freshman exactly how he must spend his time. Many choices belong to the freshman. He may choose to modify his personality; he may strengthen the character he already has. Or he may simply do little other than remain undecided about everything. The decisions belong to the individual.

The freshman year at college can be the beginning of a rewarding education in many aspects. Most of all, the year is a great opportunity to get to know one's self. This is a feat which many persons never achieve.

A successful and happy freshman comes to know himself, and he is glad to meet others who are different from him. He finds his individual interests and pursues them. He learns to laugh and enjoy living, even when all goes badly. And the freshman learns that the frustration, misery, and loneliness which can plague newcomers to campus all vanish when one becomes interested, involved, and an individual.

Registration Day Mixes Comedy With Confusion

By ROBERT SESSIONS
Managing Editor

Take about one thousand average, run-of-the-mill maniacs, fifty champions of higher education and twenty-eight million green, orange and white IBM cards and dump them into the W. S. Hanner Building. This concoction of comedy, confusion and cynicism constitutes registration.

As one enters the doorway to registration he is confronted with a barrage of tables piled high with confusing forms to complete. Guarding over these precariously constructed surfaces is the inevitable upper classman who delights in confusing an already confused frosh.

From this vantage point, the entire registration area can be seen in all its seething glory. Everything from the wide-eyed tennie bopper to Mr. Cool himself stands gaping in bewildered amazement.

Then comes the moment of truth. The moment when the victim, or rather the student, must face the waiting inferno. Step by step he slowly descends the stairway leading to the gymnasium floor, holding in his hand a bundle of perplexing, petrifying papers.

On the floor there is a line of what appears to be second hand orange crates especially designed to collapse when a human being, or a reasonable facsimile thereof, comes within 3 feet of them. These are to be used as tables to fill out the maze of information cards. Also in abundant supply are vast quantities of Bic pens designed to write first time every time. But since they have been in continuous use since the establishment of the Administration Building in 1200 B.C., the ink supply leaves much to be desired.

Finally, after piercing a vein and filling out a card in blood, one often finds that he neglected to remove the divider between the original sheet and the carbon copy. Now if one is anemic, he has no problems. He has already expired. But if one happens to be a healthy specimen of man or womanhood, he must repeat the procedure, remembering to make a carbon copy.

After completing this task, or at least attempting to do so, the fun begins. It's out to the playing field now. Out to the middle of the gym where the faculty (the enemy) is holding up behind heavy barricades of more tables, more cards and miles of barbed wire and mine fields. To gain ones objective, that of seeing the teacher who has that magic little class card, one must first go through a round of attempted murders, assaults and muggings from fellow students.

If ones luck holds out, he reaches the sought after teacher only to be greeted over horn-rimmed glasses and a sneering smile with, "Sorry, this class is closed out. Move on." After issuing forth a few garbled epithets, one moves on to try his luck in happier hunting grounds. After about six hours of facing a fate worse than the black plague, most students manage to end up with at least three five hour courses.

Director Tells Plans For Year's Events

By MRS. ADYLE HUDGINS
Director of Student Activities

One of the first questions students arriving to a new campus ask is "What's going on? Where? When?" We at Georgia Southern have been working very hard to coordinate all of the varied activities in an effort to offer you, the students, a complete program from which to choose. Our objective is, to some the impossible, for we want to please everyone.

Hudgins

This year we have big hopes of coming very close to reaching our goal. We have been very fortunate in securing a new and substantial budget for the activities program and are now in a position to broaden last year's program in every field.

The entire year will be highlighted with the old traditional events such as the Starlight Ball, the Christmas Tree lighting, Homecoming Week and Spring Swing Week. This year brings the second annual occurrence of the Folk Festival, Twirp Week and Christmas Caroling which are fast becoming traditions on our campus.

In addition, there will be many dances, concerts and plays sponsored by your Student Congress and various on-campus organizations. The Campus Life Enrichment Series offers an even more exciting program of cultural events than last year's which, incidentally, drew capacity audiences on every occasion.

Another phase of the activities spectrum brings various lecture series sponsored by the Student Congress, campus organizations and academic divisions in an effort to provide a well-rounded activity schedule for the students. In this phase, you will have the opportunity of hearing some of the elite of the various academic fields accentuated by speakers such as Henry Morgan, who is to appear in October.

There are many varied organizations on-campus offering a wide choice of co-curricular activities presently open to students.

As your director of student activities, I am looking forward to a profitable year, possible only through your cooperation and interest. Together, let's make it a reality.

DR. ZACH S. HENDERSON
Georgia Southern College President

Freshmen Must Prepare For Progressive Future

The opening of the fall quarter of the college year is a thrilling experience for many people. It is an opportunity for the upperclassmen to meet with college friends of the past years and re-live old college experiences as well as the experiences of the summer vacation. It is also a new experience for the freshmen. There is a possibility that moving from high school to college now is not as abrupt as in years past, but there is still a feeling of uncertainty as well as elation over having the opportunity to attend college.

tisfactory way to live in a modern complex world. It is good to have you as a new student or a former student for the 1967-68 school year.

College's Growth Hits New Peak

Approximately 4,300 students are expected this fall, according to Lloyd Joyner, registrar.

Teaching positions now total 215, with the addition of 20 this quarter.

Other expansions for the new year include three new buildings. A temporary classroom and the Foy Fine Arts Building have been completed over the summer. The Blanche E. Landrum Dining Hall is nearing completion.

Games to Climax Orientation Week

Games, olympic style, starting at 8:30 Saturday morning, will give one thousand freshmen, an exhausting and competitive climax for a week of orientation activities.

The football, volleyball, and softball games will be held at 8:30 behind Hanner Gymnasium. The Tug of War will begin at the College Pond at 2:00 p.m.

House directors and dorm assistants will be responsible for organizing their residence halls into the appropriate teams. An individual may participate in only one team sport and on only one tug of war team.

The games have been planned by and will be under the supervision of Don Kit and John Boje, student personnel graduate assistants. Freshmen men may participate on football, volleyball, softball and tug of war teams. The women will compete in volleyball.

The freshmen women's residence halls will form cheering squads to support the men's games. Sanford Hall will be supported by Veazy and Deal Halls; Cone is to be supported by Hendricks and Cooper Halls; and, Morgan will be cheered by girls from Lewis and Anderson.

Nationwide there is more emphasis placed on college training than at any time in our history. The reason for this is the continued growth and knowledge, which in part has been a result of the enormous amount of research which has been done in the past twenty years. It is how much has taken place in so many aspects of life such as communications, transportation, medicine, space travel, and many other areas of living. When we realize that all of this has been taking place it is not difficult to understand that each mature adult must have at his command much more information than at any other period in our history.

It is my hope that your being a student at Georgia Southern College will help you to continue to build an interest in learning and challenge you to find a sa-

New Type Meal Tickets Available To Students

Effective at the beginning of fall quarter, all students living in college housing will be given a choice of four types of meal tickets.

The first type will be a seven day ticket, providing three meals per day at a cost of $125. The second is also a seven day ticket providing for two meals daily at a cost of $115. A five day ticket providing three meals per day will be available for $110 and a five day ticket providing for two meals daily will cost $100.

A punch card may also be purchased by day students at a cost of $25 plus tax.

The change in meal ticket requirements came about following a study of the food service plan in the college dining hall.

Merchants Sponsor Activities

Merchants of the University Plaza Shopping Center will sponsor a "Get Acquainted Dance" and a fashion show Friday, Sept. 22 from 8-11 p.m. at the University Plaza. The dance will be held in the plaza parking lot; music will be provided by the "Younger Brothers."

Mrs. Jane Lightcap Brown, English instructor, and Ric Mandes, director of public relations, will emcee a fashion show held during the intermission of the dance at 9-9:30 p.m. The fashion show will feature 25 women and 10 men, who will model current campus fashion trends.

Drawings for prizes donated by the member merchants will be held during the dance. Cold drinks will also be served.
