Faculty Senate looks at Greek GPA

By ELIZABETH HIGHSMITH
Staff Writer

The academic quality of GSC Greek organizations has been under review by the Faculty Senate, according to James Orr, associate dean of students.

Orr said the purpose of fraternities and sororities is to make a person well-rounded by developing his or her leadership, social, and scholarship potential.

Since Greek organizations have such a major influence on a person, Orr said, "It is up to the college to make sure they uphold their standards."

In order to encourage quality scholastic performance, the faculty senate is in the process of setting up academic standards for Greeks by fall quarter. The average grade point average of each organization should equal that of the independents.

If the Greeks fail to meet the average standard requirement in a given quarter, they will be put on probation and lose some of their privileges. Social events will have to be moved to the weekend and intramural privilege will be suspended for the following quarter.

DEAN ORR

However, Orr said, "When the GPA standard is met, they will regain their privileges."

Orr said the reasons for these actions are not anti-Greek.

The faculty senate committee conducting the review was composed of three Greeks and one independent.

According to Orr, the committee felt that as leaders on campus, the Greeks should set high academic standards.

"The action is intended to strengthen and not chastise the Greek organizations," Orr said.

Orr believes most chapters probably won't have to worry about probation and if they do meet these academic standards, more students may realize their grades won't be hurt by joining a fraternity or sorority.

Orr said, "Independents may realize and take advantage of what the Greek organizations have to offer."

Stadium construction is moving along

By AMY SWANN
News Writer

The stadium is moving right along, according to Director of Athletics, Bucky Wagner.

Unfavorable weather conditions delayed construction on the seats. However, the crew was able to work on the concession stands and the top of the stadium, which put them ahead of schedule, during the bout of bad weather. Last quarter they began pouring the cement for the seats.

The biggest problem at this point is getting the field cleared so that the grass can be planted. Southern Turf, out of Tifton, has been contracted to do the field.

According to Wagner, Southern Turf is also employed by the Atlanta Falcons and the University of Georgia.

Stadium construction was halted temporarily due to unfavorable weather conditions.

If everything proceeds as planned, the stadium will open September 1 with GSC pitted against Florida A&M.

If everything proceeds as planned, the stadium will open September 1 with GSC pitted against Florida A&M.

The stadium will seat 17,000 with at least 4,000 of those seats being reserved for the student section.

"I'm very excited because this will be a first class facility," says Wagner.

Landrum gets inspected

By MAJORIE DYKES
News Writer

"Never in my eight years here at GSC has Landrum failed a health inspection," said Bill May, director of Food Services, in response to a recent editorial in the George-Anne.

May said that Bill Thmas quoted him exactly in his letter.

"It upset me because he went to the Environmental Protection Agency and my boss, Larry Davis, before he even spoke with me," said May.

"The finding of the earwig in the lettuce was the first incident, to my knowledge, of a foreign substance in the food," he said.

He said the earwig, which is a paper-eating insect, must have come in boxes that contain the lettuce.

"How the earwig got into the lettuce is still a puzzle," said May. "Each head of lettuce is cored, washed, spun dry, and put into a crisper. We have a problem with bugs, especially roaches, but every home, business, and eating establishment in south Georgia has the same problem," he said.

A team health inspection was performed April 16, the Monday after the incident.

"We will do whatever we can to control the situation within the guidelines outlined by the health department," said May.

Lick announces budget increase for next year

By DONNA BREWTON
News Editor

GSC's budget was increased by $2 million for next year, according to President Dale Lick.

"It's the best boost we've had since I've been here," said Lick to a group of reporters at a luncheon held last Thursday.

Lick said half of the money will go toward salary increases and fringe benefits. The other half will make up for inflation and will go toward a new computer to help out the accounting system of the school. "The budget is beginning to reflect the role we've wanted to play," said Lick.

The total budget includes everything: money collected from fees, dorms, and outside grants and contracts.

GSC has a $36 million budget for next year. The state appropriation is just over $18 million, according to Lick.

Lick also announced the four-day work week for faculty and staff beginning June 18. He said this move will help save money on energy costs.

GSC to look for new business officer

SPECIAL TO THE GEORGE-ANNE

GSC will conduct a national search for a new chief business officer to succeed Vice president for Business and Finance William Cook who will retire June 30.

An 18-member search committee, headed by Auxiliary Services Director Larry Davis, has been appointed by college President Dale W. Lick to seek and screen candidates for the position.

"Considering the tight financial situation educational institutions are facing at the same time that they are trying to raise quality, the chief business officer figures prominently in the academic as well as operational success of the college," Lick said. "Georgia Southern's funding history makes this an especially crucial position here."

The search committee includes representatives from both academic and support services on the campus, plus two members of the business community in Statesboro and Savannah, O.B. Bell of Statesboro, retired president of First Bulloch Bank and Trust, and H. Ted Hewitt of Savannah, retired IBM district manager. Campus members are: Shelton Evans, director of financial aid; Harold Howell, chief of campus security; Donna Johnson, landscape architect; Steve Roberts, internal auditor; Harry Starling, budget, grants and contract manager; Glenn Stewart, personnel director; Sharon Fell, public relations director; Beth Brigdon, computer science programmer; Hank Schomber, athletic department business manager; Cindy Legin-Bucell, assistant to the vice president for academic affairs; Larry Price, head of the department of finance and law; Linda Hook, assistant professor of recreation and leisure services; Johnny Temble, principal of Marvin Pittman Laboratory School; and Denise Jordan, student.

Apply early to get cleared

By CASS MUNROE
News Writer

College graduation is the ultimate goal of each student at GSC, but clearing for graduation seems to cause a lot of students problems.

According to Kate Pate, assistant registrar, it is basically the students' responsibility to get cleared for graduation.

"First of all the student must set up an appointment to get cleared and pick up all the necessary papers. Then he must go see his advisor," she said.

"It is important that the student applies at least three quarters before the expected graduation date so that if there is a problem with taking extra classes, the student will have time to take them," she added.

Overall, there are not any major problems that students have with clearing for graduation. Applying early can save some headaches.

GSC raising money to receive $100,000 Humanities Grant

SPECIAL TO THE GEORGE-ANNE

Announcing that more than a third of their goal is already met, GSC officials opened a campaign to raise $300,000 for humanities teaching and resource endowments which will be matched by a $100,000 National Endowment for the Humanities Challenge Grant.

The NEH Challenge program awards one dollar in federal money for every three dollars in private contributions, and Arts and Sciences Dean Warren Jones urged the humanities faculty to take an active role in seeking donors through personal appeals for alumni support.

Noting that it is "especially difficult" to raise money for the humanities, Jones called the NEH Challenge "the best chance we have had in years for a special surge forward in support of these programs which we know are absolutely central to the sound education of our students."

Meanwhile, a newly inaugurated fundraising program in the Division of Institutional Development is already paying off in private contributions to the Challenge campaign. "Deferred gifts"—usually insurance policies naming the college as beneficiary—in excess of $100,000 have been designated by donors for the Challenge match.

Development director Ric Mandes, whose division is spearheading the humanities campaign, said the NEH Challenge "coincided with the new challenge our community and alumni development offices have taken on in the area of deferred giving."

"We are doubly gratified that our early success with deferred gifts is also contributing so significantly to the success of the Challenge program," Mandes said. He added, however, that the campaign "must be strengthened through cash contributions which will create active, interest bearing endowments."

...the campaign "must be strengthened through cash contributions which will create active, interest bearing endowments." —Mandes

As the NEH campaign unfolds over the coming months, special appeals will be fanning to the campus community, humanities alumni, college supporters throughout the state and private foundations which fund humanities projects.

The campaign will create separate endowments for library holdings and faculty development and research. The endowments will generate $30,000 to $40,000 a year in perpetuity.

Graduate Dean Leslie Thompson, Challenge Grant project director, cited the "special significance that such a prestigious award was granted in an area integral to quality education for all majors on our campus."

"The National Endowment's recognition of Georgia Southern's efforts in strengthening these programs comes at a time when our information society is demanding the background of a humanities education in business and the professions as well as academic fields," Thompson said.

The humanities include history, languages, literature, philosophy, anthropology, and selected courses in sociology and political science.

Faculty and staff to have four-day week in summer

The GSC faculty and staff will be working a 10-hour day, four-day work week from June 18 to Sept. 6.

The summer schedule will close the campus on Fridays, allowing the college to shut down airconditioning units over three-day weekends at an estimated savings of $60,000 to $70,000 in energy costs, according to Vice President for Business and Finance William Cook.

When faculty and staff were polled earlier this year on schedule options, a majority preferred to work from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. with a half hour for lunch, Cook said, and new hours have been set accordingly.

A number of colleges in the university system which have tried the summer conservation measure report favorable reactions from their employees "once they got used to it," Cook said.

Campus facilities will honor commitments for events which have already been scheduled, as well as seven-day student meal plans, while security officers and some plant operations units will maintain their regular schedules.

GSC hosts annual science meeting

SPECIAL TO THE GEORGE-ANNE

Some 300 scientists from across the state will assemble in Statesboro May 4-5 for the 61st annual meeting of the Georgia Academy of Science hosted by GSC.

Open to professionals from all sciences—from biology, chemistry and physics to geology, history and philosophy—the meeting will begin at 2 p.m. May 4 with a series of lectures in the GSC Museum followed by a President's Reception and an evening symposium on "Coastal Georgia" in the Biology Building lecture hall.

The agenda for Saturday includes morning and afternoon demonstrations of the college's electron microscope and planetarium and a luncheon keyed by Georgia Tech Cooperative Division Director Dr. William H. Hitch, who will discuss "Coop-Academic-Industrial Interface."

Four GSC scientists will present the first round of lectures beginning at 2 p.m. May 4 including "A Tale of Three Skeletons: Tylosaurus, Rodney and Smelly Dave" by Richard M. Petkewich, "Fossil Cretaceous Crabs of North America" by Gale A. Bishop, "Archeological Excavations at the Hilton Site" by Sue M. More and "Hematophagous Diptera: Those Bloodsucking Flies" by Frank E. French.

The "Coastal Georgia" Symposium will feature three different views of the topic including "Geological Development and Associated Processes of Coastal Georgia" by Vernon J. Henry of the Georgia State University geology department, "Tidal Marsh Functions and Boundaries" by Fred Marland of the Georgia Department of Natural Resources and "Dynamics of Barrier Island Vegetation" by John R. Bozeman of the Georgia Department of Natural Resources.

GSC's electron microscope will be one of the demonstrations presented at the meeting of the Georgia Academy of Science.

Thomas appointed as director of resource development office

SPECIAL TO THE GEORGE-ANNE

Melinda Thomas has been appointed to head GSC's fundraising office as director of resource development, College Development Director Ric Mandes announced.

An accountant experienced in public accounting and auditing, Thomas will assist in directing the college's fundraising programs. Her appointment is effective May 1.

Mandes said the new director's appointment coincides with a recent reorganization of responsibilities in the resource development office which will result in "greater efficiency and accountability for our total fundraising effort."

Thomas holds a bachelor of business administration from the University of Georgia, where she was elected to Phi Kappa Phi National Honor Society, Beta Alpha Psi business honor fraternity, and Beta Gamma Sigma honorary accounting organization.

The new director's professional experience included accounting and auditing positions in CPA firms in Savannah and Waycross.

She is married to First District Congressman Lindsay Thomas. They have two boys, ages 12 and 10, and a daughter, 20 months.

Stop polluting Landrum

Why do students continually scribble trivial messages on the windows on the front of the Landrum Center? Others don't care if Susie just became a legal adult, or if Sammy loves Jane. Please keep your shoe polish at home. Let's try to keep our mail center and cafeteria looking clean.

Those attempts at "humor" are unsuccessful, and only embarrass the people who write the trash, the people they are making fun of, and the people who have to look at the garbage almost daily. Please show a little consideration to everyone else, and develop your writing skills in composition classes or term papers.

What a good feeling it is to live and work in an environment that is clean and free of unappealing annoyances.

Beach Bash '84 great

The George-Anne would like to thank S.U.B. for putting on "Beach Bash '84" last Thursday at Oxford Field. It was a big success—the bands were great, the sun was out, and an excellent time was had by all. We appreciate all of S.U.B.'s hard work in order to be able to bring us two bands, the Shakers and the Voltage Brothers, free of charge. Thanks also to the cheerleaders for providing some spur of the moment entertainment.

Beach Bash '84 was a great way to start the weekend—how about having one every Thursday?

Congratulations golf team

Last weekend, GSC hosted the 14th annual Chris Schenkel Invitational Golf Tournament at Forest Heights Country Club.

This year's tournament was a huge success. A field of 18 teams participated in the Schenkel, which is regarded as one of the most prestigious tournaments in college golf. GSC should feel honored to be able to host such an event, and everyone involved in the tournament should be commended.

We at the George-Anne would like to thank everyone involved for a successful and quite enjoyable weekend of golf.

From the GSC Athletic Department, GSC golfers and the Sports Information Department to the visiting schools, the Schenkel sponsors and the members of Forest Heights Country Club, the George-Anne says thank you on behalf of the GSC student body.

Life in black and white

Segregation is an issue most of us don't think much about these days. The common misconception is that segregation was dealt with years ago and that it simply doesn't exist any more. By law, our schools are now desegregated. Or are they?

Here at GSC, we have many people of different races who are all granted equal opportunities to attend this school. We all receive the same education from the same teachers and are treated pretty equal.

But what about extracurricular activities? In this respect, segregation is alive and well at GSC. This is evident in the racial barriers for fraternities and sororities.

Since I am not a participant in the aforesaid organizations, I am unable to tell their side of the story. However, I sincerely welcome a response. At any rate, anyone can plainly see that there is definitely not a racial mix within the greek society. Why is this? I can only guess. Since the constitutions of the organizations do not call for racial segregation, I have deduced that the problems are based on social perceptions.

Yes, even in 1984, many of us are still thinking along the closed-minded, old-fashioned lines of our fathers and grandfathers. We claim to be the "new generation"—more open to new fashions, lifestyles, and ways of thinking. Yet many of us are not quite ready to accept desegregation on all levels, especially on the personal and social level.

I have heard comments from a few brave souls who have expressed an interest in joining a fraternity or sorority composed of members of a different race. One girl in particular was even discouraged from going through sorority rush. According to her, it wasn't that she wasn't qualified to be in a sorority. She was simply the wrong color.

Another incident involves a white male who pledged a traditionally black fraternity. Overall, he was well-received by the fraternity brothers, but the ridicule he received from his peers was more than he could stand. He deplored.

These examples are not to say that fraternities and sororities at GSC, both black and white, have never extended an invitation to pledge to members of another race. As can be seen in my second example, there have been attempts to break down the barriers. But this is the exception, not the rule.

Some of you may respond that the majority of fraternities and sororities are racially divided throughout the nation and it has always been that way. That may be true, but my response is, "Just because everyone else is doing it, does that make it right?" I'll let you answer that question for yourselves.

I personally do not know exactly where the problem lies. There are two distinct possibilities. Either discrimination exists in the process of deciding who will or will not pledge a fraternity or sorority, or the problem lies in the ridicule of society against a person's joining an organization composed of members of a different race. Either way, the undenyng problem is old-line thinking.

Again since I am not a member of a greek organization, I can have no direct input in the matter. I would like to see some changes and I know many others would too. However, I am not calling for drastic reform. All I am asking is for all of you to think about the issue I have presented and determine where you stand in relation to the issue of segregation at GSC.

'Eaglets' Rebuttal

DEAR EDITOR:

After reading last week's editorial concerning name calling at baseball games, I felt obligated to write in behalf of my "eaglets." I can see the point your writer has raised, but I would like to explain the bellers of my fellow name-calling ruffians. What we do at baseball games is simple—verbal abuse to amuse ourselves, show school spirit, give our players an uplift, and treat our fellow fans to some good laughs. It is also a weapon against the opposing team. Try concentrating against Mr. Phil Dale while some "sick boys" are reminding you that you struck out twice before. I'm truly sorry if the "straightlaced" boys and girls of GSC are offended by our comments, but to them I suggest taking in a badminton match at Ga. Tech! One comment in your editorial suggested that the "abuse" is an insult to players and fans. Quite the opposite. I'm very good friends with both the players and coaches and more than once I, along with my eaglets have been congratulated and told our "awesome calls" were the only thing that got them through a particular losing effort. And just come to a game and hear the laughter from fellow fans. Come on now...the art of heckling goes back to the days of cavemen grunting their abuse at their friends' poorly lit fires! I proud to be Eagleman—the leader of all who are Eaglets and the day I stop telling Ga. Bulldog and South Carolina Cocks' pitchers that I've seen better arms on an amputee is the day my mouth is taped and I'm chained to the bottom of the Pines swimming pool.

Long live the third base maniacs!!!

SUB needs fill-ins

DEAR EDITOR:

It sure is nice to have so many good movies to go to each quarter, thanks to the Student Union Board.

It is really frustrating though, when you plan your whole evening around the movie (i.e., cancel a date with Brooke Shields to go figure skating) and the projectionist does not show. This happened Friday and Saturday nights and it has happened many times before now.

Something needs to be done to stop this. The SUB needs fill-ins to show the film if the scheduled person cannot show up. Also, if the scheduled person does not show up he/she should be fired or at least put on suspension.

Hopefully, this problem will be corrected in the future. If the SUB wants to keep the students' support it will have to be. I am writing this on behalf of many irate students.

Bible is a story of love and peace

DEAR EDITOR:

I would like to join the others who have written in by saying that, yes, the Bible is the proper standard for living. The Bible is a story of love, of wars, of peace, of struggles and of victories—and every word of it is truth. That has been proven over and over. It deals with every aspect of life, and gives us direction for day to day living. Its principles are just as applicable today as they were 2000 years ago.

The Bible gives us direction, and shows us the way to salvation. It comes natural to Christians to be devoted to spreading God's word. We who know Christ as our Savior are so excited we want everyone else to know Him too. We know that Jesus is Lord of all.

Coping with the depression death leaves

I was about eight years old, my sister was 11 and my brother six and as usual it was me, the mischievous one, being spanked by my father behind a closed bedroom door. LeeAnn and Ted joined in when I started crying—they always did.

I suppose we thought that if we all cried when one of us was hurting the pain of the less fortunate one wouldn't be quite as bad. Amazing isn't it? Siblings can conjure up all sorts of secret little pacts and rituals.

Thirteen years later my sister and I cry again, this time for my brother. What's so unusual is that Ted isn't feeling any pain, but we are.

The scene is different, too. Instead of a bedroom there is an emergency room and instead of a spank from my father there is the incredible sharpness of words spoken by a coroner.

Around 4 a.m. on Dec. 22, 1983 my brother was killed in a freak accident. All of the love and pacts and rituals couldn't help us now. Confusion hit

SGA and PEACH pits

DEAR EDITOR:

What has happened to P.E.A.C.H. week this year? The answer is the lack of leadership. Nothing was done on time and there was little advertisement on the program.

Mike Wallace coordinated this project and all he seemed to do was sit back and watch everyone else. I guess he thought he could take it on as an SGA project, sit back, then fly to New York the week of P.E.A.C.H. week. Why take on a project when you don't plan to be there to help out?

Do we, the student body, want someone like Mike as SGA president? No telling what projects he'll take on and then leave them, hoping to catch all the glory. Also, remember the losing someone they care for, or don't care for for that matter, but one factor remains constant. Only time heals wounds and most likely this wound never totally heals. So what can you do as a friend?

1. Give them room to talk, listening is the best therapy you can offer.

Corsetti holds karate classes with something for everyone

By KARLA REDDINGS
Features Writer

There are many men who are masters of the Martial Arts. Take the late Bruce Lee or Chuck Norris for example. But, are there not any women to participate in these classic arts? There are few women who have been able to succeed in the Martial Arts. However, GSC graduate Karen Corsetti is one of the few women who has expertly and successfully trained for 10 years in the field of karate.

Corsetti, a second degree black belt, teaches beginners' and advanced classes on Tuesday and Thursday evenings in the old gym. On Saturdays, she coaches children. At present, she has a total of 42 students. "I wanted to teach people the arts of self-defense because being able to defend yourself is important," Corsetti said.

It is understandable why she is willing to teach others what she knows. Corsetti was born in a rough section of Rhode Island, and had to learn to protect herself while still doing something to better herself. So, at the age of 15, she entered Fred Villaire's Self-Defense Studio. And after two years, she had become an outstanding black belt in the unique style of karate called Shaolin Kempo. From there she entered contests in New England, and often placed highly.

The form of Kung Fu (which means 'accomplishment' and 'effort' consecutively) fighting taught by Corsetti focuses mainly on the use of the feet and height. Some Chinese consider this complex art type to be the "grandfather of present day Kung Fu." "This particular technique teaches people to have a good strong foundation," Corsetti stated, "You must have discipline and control to gain the sport of Shaolin Kempo."

Karen Corsetti shows her black belt karate form. She has competed in the Kung Fu style of Shaolin Kempo, and is presently teaching all levels of classes of GSC in hopes of motivating more people to learn self-defense.

Corsetti, who is also employed as a lab technician in the Biology department, works hard to ensure that her students learn every possible style of Shaolin Kempo. She noted that some of her classes can rapidly move from beginners to advanced depending on how fast they learn. Most of her students are men, but she hopes to gain more women students. She presently has eight women enrolled. "I have trouble getting women to take the class. But, I wish they would see the importance of self-defense, especially on a college campus," she said.

However, Corsetti isn't going to stop trying to get more women interested in the Martial Arts. Corsetti said that her most important goal is to open a school in which she will teach handicapped people her defense techniques. "The handicapped have a lot of will power and strength. Even though they may be blind or have no legs, they have determination, and those are the type of people I want to get involved with."

Corsetti says that there is something in Karate for everyone. Whether it be for mental or physical purposes, the Martial Arts bring out the qualities of the inner and the outer self.

For more information on Karate classes, contact Karen Corsetti at 681-5565.

Foreign students provide perspective

By KELLEY DANIEL
Features Writer

Each year many foreign students come to GSC to learn the American language as well as its customs. According to James Orr, associate dean of students, there are 85 foreign students studying here this quarter. The majority of the students who come here to study take classes that pertain to their careers rather than English classes. Orr said that out of an average number of 105 foreign students who come here each quarter, 85-90 students are regular students while 10-15 students are just English students. Out of the students who are just English students, 65 percent will stay here to further their education in a certain field, he said.

The business, technology, and education schools draw the greatest number of foreign students, Orr noted. Athletic programs, such as baseball, also draw many foreign students.

There are many difficulties foreign student must overcome in order to be able to study in the United States. The major problem is where the funds will come from to finance their education. With scholarship funds receiving such drastic cuts recently, it is basically the parents' responsibility to finance student education. Another drawback is that foreign students cannot work off campus unless they get special permission from the U.S. Immigration Department. If they work with school programs, they can only work a maximum of 15 hours, Orr said.

The majority of foreign students at GSC are very friendly, Orr said. "The fact that these student left their home country to study abroad shows a genuine sense of adventure. We need more foreign student here to provide more opportunities to get differing views on topics discussed in the classrooms, so American students can see things from a different perspective," he added.

"I find it interesting and rewarding to study a different culture." —Har

Some student find that coming to GSC is a very rewarding experience. Nancy Hernandez from Venezuela said, "I'm glad to be here. I like to study here in the U.S. and I find the American people very friendly." Maz Har of Israel said, "I wanted to see what America was like and I find it interesting and rewarding to study a different culture." Other students do not find it as rewarding. As one foreign student put it, "American students are not aware that so many foreign students are here and it is difficult for us to integrate."

It is important that each of us extend some friendship to these foreign students. We may learn some valuable things about their cultures and make good friends as a result.

Padgett sets outstanding example

By KATHY KENNEY
Assistant News Editor

"At first I did it for adventure but then I realized it was right up my alley, so I took it and ran," said Randy Padgett of his decision to join the ROTC program here at GSC.

Now in his fourth year in the Reserve Officers Training Corps., as well as his fourth year at GSC, Padgett will be the first to complete the full ROTC program when he graduates in June.

Padgett said there have been difficulties being in ROTC and being a student at the same time. There is a fine line drawn between when to be military and when to be a student, he said.

He said many people at GSC know he is in the ROTC program because he kept his head shaved for two years. He said he was referred to as "sarge" by many.

The four year veteran said ROTC is the best way to go if you can take and give orders and if you don't mind the military structure. "The hardest thing is not being in a total military atmosphere," said Padgett.

He added that there are benefits however. Those in the advanced course get paid $600 for six weeks of the summer between their junior and senior years. Then they receive $100 a month during their junior and senior years.

Padgett said members of ROTC attend physical training sessions, a two hour lab weekly plus about one weekend of field exercise a quarter.

Padgett sets an example for ROTC cadets.

According to Padgett, the time involved takes away from regular classes but not enough to be a factor in grades. He added, "It is a short term loss for a long term gain."

In terms of future plans, Padgett plans to continue in the army after graduation in June. "I want to see the world doing things I enjoy and the army is what I enjoy," said Padgett. "I'd like to look back after 20 years and be able to say I enjoyed everything I did and learned from it."

Looking back now, Padgett is able to say he has seen the growth of ROTC at GSC in the last four years. He remembered in the beginning there were 20 cadets in the advanced course. Today there are 50 advanced course cadets and nine cadre, or faculty members. At first there were only two cadre and the ROTC office was in a classroom, behind some bookcases, in the Carruth Building, said Padgett. Today the Military Science Department is in the basement of the Math, Physics and Psychology Building.

Besides changes within the program Padgett said he has experienced some change within himself. "I think it made me grow up to the point that I now structure my life. For instance, I can't leave in the morning without making my bed," said Padgett. "It definitely made me an organizer."

Padgett is very involved in ROTC and hopes he shows other cadets the importance of taking the program seriously.

Major Scott, a cadre here since the beginning, said Padgett has developed over the course into an outstanding example of what the ROTC program is about. He also said the reputation of the program is only as good as the people associated with it and that Randy epitomizes the good.

According to Scott, Padgett was selected for the George C. Marshall award and attended a conference at the Virginia Military Institute where he met several influential people.

Besides the Marshall award Padgett is recognized for other achievements in ROTC. He is battalion commander and a marauder one of the elite group of ROTC Padgett said marauders do extra curricular training and control the MS1 and MS2 fieldtrips. He was selected for Scabbard and Blade, the National Military Honor Society and as a Distinguished Military Student for overall performance in advanced camp, cumulative grade point average and ROTC g.p.a. and physical training scores.

Padgett is also a member of the officers Christian Fellowship and the Color Guard. In addition, he is airborne qualified, having attended airborne school at Ft. Bragg in North Carolina after advanced camp this summer.

This coming summer Padgett has been branched to Ft. Belvoir, Virginia, for an officers' basic course to become an engineering platoon leader. He will be there 17 weeks and then he has been assigned as an engineer platoon leader at Ft. Carson, Colorado.

Recalling the past, Padgett remembers an incident when he was a cadet in advanced camp. He said he was left on an observation post alone in the rain. The aggressors were all around throwing simulators on the position. Rather than try to get back to his platoon, he said he covered up with his poncho and went to sleep.

"I didn't get into trouble because no one knew until now," said Padgett with a smile.

How to help hair survive summer

By ALYSON BENNETT
Features Writer

Are you sick and tired of the humidity we have every spring and summer in Statesboro? Does it make your hair dull and lifeless? Does your hair get the frizzies, greasies or limpies?

This weather can really give your hair a beating. Proper hair care will not only make your hair healthier and more manageable, but also will make you feel fresh and look better.

Too much humidity can turn hair dry and frizzy. Because water can penetrate easily into colored, permed, or damaged hair, it swells up and frizzies when there is excess humidity.

To fight the frizzies, use a protein and oil conditioner to smooth follicles and make hair less water retentive. An egg can do wonders for dry, frizzy hair. Just wash one egg into your hair and then shampoo. The egg helps control the frizzies and makes your hair feel silky and look shiny. You can also try using a tablespoon of mayonnaise instead of an egg and get the same results.

For those of you who play tennis, frisbee, softball, and other outdoor sports, you may find excessive oil build up in your scalp. Perspiration combined with scalp oils results in a bad case of the greasies. To keep your hair fresh and shiny, wash it everyday with a mild shampoo. Gillette's "For Oily Hair Only" products will clean and condition without leaving a greasy residue. An acidic rinse (one tablespoon of apple cider vinegar and a cup of water) will also help combat the problem. To help control oil buildup, rinse this recipe through your hair once every two weeks.

These products are beneficial to help summer-dried hair get back in top shape.

Chlorine and salt water can zap the moisture right out of your hair. Use a conditioner every time you wash your hair. And try to rinse or shampoo chlorine and salt from your hair as soon as possible. Don't blow dry your hair every time you shampoo. Let it dry naturally. If you have to use a dryer, use the lowest airflow setting to help prevent your hair from becoming dry and brittle.

If your hair is bleached, tinted, streaked, permed, or straightened, it is particularly vulnerable to the damaging effects of chlorine. Give it a hot oil treatment once a month to build its strength and bring out its shine.

If your lovely blonde locks have taken on a greenish cast from chlorine buildup and copper based chemicals, rinse them with vinegar or lemon juice.

Brushing your hair while it's wet will stretch it, causing breakage. Instead, use a wide-toothed comb and gently untangle it. Comb at the ends first and carefully work your way up. Or try applying a little conditioner to help untangle windblown hair.

Enjoy the fun activities this summer, but remember these hair care tips to keep your hair in its best condition for the months ahead.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

New artist exhibit opens

SPECIAL TO THE GEORGE-ANNE

GSC's Gallery 303 is presenting a true grand finale for the 1984 Georgia Artists Exhibition season. The creations of four artists, including Barry Rhodes and Barbara Archer from Atlanta, Eugenia Simmons of Macon, and Savannahian David Kaminsky are being introduced to area residents during the month of May. Award-winning ceramics, exquisite watercolors, and an outstanding series of large-format, color, architectural photographs will fill Gallery 303 from May 4, 7 until 9 p.m. Each of the four artists will attend the premier to offer guests a unique opportunity to discuss the artworks with the creators.

Local painters will be delighted to welcome Macon native Eugenia Simmons. A master of realism, her paintings have been shown at all major southeastern states' Watercolor Society exhibitions as well as in other juried regional and national shows. Choosing richly patterned fabrics and objects with lustrous or highly-textured surfaces as subjects for her intimate still-life water-colors, Simmons transforms ordinary interiors into extraordinary treasure troves.

David Kaminsky's career choices offer evidence of this renowned photographer's versatility. From positions at the Georgia Department of Natural Resources and the U.S. Department of the Interior, to college teaching, to becoming the president of Savannah Color Separations, Inc., this artist's photographs merge his interests in historical subjects with his equally strong mastery of contemporary photographic technology. Using the bold, colorful facades of Miami Beach's art deco hotels as his foci, Kaminsky presents viewers with a stunning glimpse of a past era. His flawless technical skills make this photographic series a visual treat for the discerning eye.

Also on exhibition are ceramic works by Barbara Archer and Barry Rhodes. Though both of these artists work within traditional basic forms of the jar and the bowl, respectively, each interprets the vessel idea in a startlingly different manner. Archer's involvements with the Atlanta High Museum contribute to her preference for subtle, classically defined shapes and glazes. Her pots are reminiscent of earthen water jugs from many historical cultures with their traditional forms and sensitive raku coloring. In contrast, Rhodes' bowls burst open with jagged, organic edges and rich, desert tones of applied color. The sophistication of the glaze treatments alludes to his alternate career as a physicist. The juxtaposition of these strikingly contrasting interpretations creates a vibrant energy that is an appropriate complement to the two-dimensional artwork being displayed.

The exhibition is being shown in Gallery 303, third floor of GSC's Foy Fine Arts Building. Viewing hours are 8 to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The Architecture and Design of Old Miami Beach. Laura Cerwinske. Photographs by David Kaminsky. (Rizzoli, $14.95).

The recent destruction of Miami Beach's New Yorker, a hotel designed by Henry Hohausen in 1939 (see June '81, p. 18), caused consternation among preservationists who wanted to save the unusual structure, using it as a centerpiece in a complex of hotel rooms, apartments, shops and restaurants. The hotel is depicted as still standing in this exploration of Miami Beach's art deco district. The one-square-mile area, developed in the 1930s, contains more than 400 beautiful examples of the art deco style in architecture. Laura Cerwinske approaches her subject with verve—and respect. A design journalist who is a native of Miami, she explains the evolution of art deco and then devotes the remainder of the book to how it was adapted to a tropical climate, discussing the expression of art deco in facades, moldings and friezes, doorways, windows, hotels and apartment buildings, materials, lettering, interior details and murals. Each section, in clear and readable prose, is accompanied by photographic samples. A great deal of the credit for this successful insight into art deco is due to the stunning photographs by David Kaminsky, also a native Miamian and a freelance architectural photographer. His photographs, especially to be cherished if other architecture meets the fate of the New Yorker, are a delight and well worth the modest price of this paperback book.

Record Reviews

By SANDRA BOYKIN
Record Critic

Being a female musician, it can be extremely frustrating trying to find good music written by and/or performed by women.

But, it's there: particularly in New Music.

Crissy Hynde (my heroine) pops into mind. Then the Go-Go's. At first, I discounted these women. The music was too light. Too adolescent.

But "Talk Show" is a good album. It shows that the Go-Go's have potential as a rock band that goes beyond any of their previous work. The musicianship has improved. The drumming has always been good. The bass lines are more sophisticated than one would expect from this "type" of music. The guitar work is enjoyable but could still stand some improvement.

And these chicks are getting a little angry. I like that.

This is a good album. All the cuts rock out and there's not an inch of vinyl wasted. Enjoy.

Prof. Gernant donates piano

Special to the George-Anne

Retired GSC Professor Frieda Gernant recently placed the keys to possible success into the hands of many of the college's music majors with the gift of a Mehlin Grand Piano.

The six-foot piano, donated through the GSC Foundation, replaces a worn-out model used in a studio by students majoring in applied music.

Gernant is Professor Emeritus and former head of the GSC art department.

er Gary Meanchos

A winner on and off the court

By CLIFF PROCTOR

With the revitalization of football at GSC, some of the school's so-called minor sports have inevitably taken a back seat.

However, Eagle tennis player Gary Meanchos is doing all he can to change that. Meanchos, a sophomore from Toronto, Ontario, is Southern's number singles player.

"We don't like not receiving the recognition we deserve," said Meanchos. "So we figure that if we play well enough and have an outstanding season, we will be able to get ourselves some attention."

And having an outstanding season is exactly what the team is doing. After 26 matches so far in 1984, the team has won 20.

This winning attitude is a good example of the leadership qualities that Gary Meanchos brings to Southern. After playing at the number four singles position for GSC last year, Meanchos made the jump to number one for the 1984 campaign. So far this year, he has been equal to the task of playing number one, with an individual record of 19 wins and only 10 losses.

"Playing in the top slot is really very tough," said Meanchos. "No matter whom we play or how bad they are, the number one player is always going to be good."

According to Southern's men's tennis coach Joe Blankenbaker, Meanchos has handled this responsibility very well. "Gary is an excellent athlete and a great competitor. I've never seen him on the tennis court when he wasn't giving 100 percent."

Meanchos is also half of the Eagles' number on doubles team. Along with number four singles player Mike Imbornone, Meanchos has compiled an outstanding 19-8 record in doubles. Blankenbaker says that the reason for their success is their compatability. "Gary and Mike get along great on and off the court," he said. "Gary is really a team-oriented tennis player."

Meanchos also stresses the importance of being a close-knit group. "We all feel good about having each other on the team. We get along great and have a good time together," he said. "The team is only six guys, so we have a better chance to get to know each other than football or baseball do," he added.

Another reason for the team's success, according to Meanchos, is the coach. "He is a super leader. He is easy to get along with, and we all respect him a great deal," said Meanchos. "He wants us to think of him as a friend as well as a coach."

As a youngster, Meanchos was an excellent athlete, playing any and all sports that he was exposed to. "Tennis, soccer, hockey, baseball, basketball, I tried them all," chuckled Meanchos. But when it came down to choosing one sport to emphasize, he chose tennis.

"There were some courts in the apartment complexes right behind my house, so there was always somewhere to play," Meanchos recalled. "They had a guy there who taught lessons every day for free, so I had a great opportunity to learn the game," he added. And learn the game he did. From the time he began to play at age 9, everyone knew that he was going to be good. He won junior tournaments and was nationally-ranked all through school. At age 18, Meanchos was ranked in the top five junior tennis players in Canada. "There are some great players in Canada," he said. "The reason tennis isn't as popular up there is because of the climate. We had to play indoors for most of the year, and that can run into some money."

As he reached his senior year in high school, Meanchos' thoughts turned to college. He was approached by numerous colleges and universities, but was mainly attracted to Southern schools because of the warm weather.

"I was on my way back from visiting Florida State, and my dad told me on the phone that he has received a call from Georgia Southern. So I came here and met with Coach Blankenbaker, and everything really fell into place for me," Meanchos said. "I really like the college and the town."

As long as Meanchos plays tennis for GSC, the team will be guaranteed a 100 percent effort from him. And if the tennis team can continue to win led by Meanchos' play at number one, they will definitely receive the recognition they seek.

Lady Eagles win four of five to clinch state slow-pitch title

Outstanding defensive play led the Georgia Southern softball team to the state slow-pitch championship in Atlanta this past weekend.

"It was a very good tournament," said Assistant Coach Karen Melancon. "We didn't hit very well, but our defense was so good that our opponents went 31 innings without scoring. The one run was scored in the game we lost was unearned."

In the tournament the Lady Eagles bested TruetMcConnell 10-3, Georgia Southwestern 9-0 and Columbus College 3-0. Next they lost to North Georgia 1-0, but defeated them 3-2 in the championship round.

The tournament victory gave the Lady Eagles a good start on their preparation for the national slow-pitch tournament to be held in Tampa, Fla. May 3-5.

The Sports Page

Okay sports fans, when was the last time you saw GSC play baseball at Eagle field? Well, now's your chance. If you haven't noticed, the Eagles are playing pretty well now and they're odds on favorite to win the Eastern Division of the TAAC.

Remember last quarter when the Mercer Bears came to Statesboro and took the basketball Eagles out of the post-season tournament? Now that same school is sending their baseball team to Statesboro, and the results are not going to be the same.

Last weekend the Eagles took two of three from the Bears on their own turf, and tomorrow night those same Bears will be in Eagle field. The Friday night game is scheduled at a post happy hour time of 7 p.m. The two Mercer games will be the last regular season games played in Statesboro so come on out and enjoy the fun.

In the two victories in Macon the much maligned pitching staff of the Eagles played a big part. Phil Dale, a big Australian right hander, pitched 11 innings to lead GSC to victory in the first half of a doubleheader.

Dale's pitching is not something new to the coaches or fans, however. Since beginning the season at 0-4, Dale has won nine of his last 10 decisions. Although his earned run average is at 5.28, Dale is leading the conference in three categories: innings pitched, strike outs (with over 85) and wins with nine. Four of GSC's pitchers now have .500 or better records, and alot of this is due to some consistant hitting by the Eagles.

There are six Eagle batters with better than .300 batting averages. Jeff Geer is leading everybody in the TAAC with an incredible .405, and he's just a freshman. Senior Dave Pregon is right behind him at .376 and he's leading the conference in both homeruns and RBI's. As a team the Eagles are hitting at a .220 clip.

Phil Dale has a couple of unique individual accomplishments to go along with his team contributions. It's not too often that a junior can boast about beating a nationally ranked team. Not only can Phil say that, he can also say he's done it twice. Dale has collected two convincing wins against both Florida State and South Carolina in Columbia. On April 15 Dale did what is seemingly impossible, he won two games in one day. Against the Samford Bulldogs, Dale pitched a shut out in the first half of a doubleheader, and turned right around and pitched the first five innings of the second half and got the decision in a 19-1 route.

In the last two or three seasons the Eagles have seen a drop in the average attendance due almost entirely to the lack of good weather during the home games. Hopefully this won't be the case this Friday night, and there will be a stadium full of screaming Eagles to greet the Bears from Macon. Come on out and support those Eagles. See ya there!

The GSC Basketball Eagles are looking ahead to the 1984-85 season. The Eagles have six returning players who were starters at one time during last season. The Eagles will be playing without their leading scorer of a year ago, Senior Eric Hightower, but Coach Frank Kerns feels that the team will withstand. "With the experience of the people returning, plus the talent and abilities of the signees, we will have a successful season." The Eagles have already signed forwards Charles Earls and Ben Bailey. They have also signed Allen Sims, a 6-4 guard, Caradio Murphy. Murphy was Class-A Player of the Year for Metter in 1981. Murphy who will start as a freshman has just concluded three years of service in the Army.

Coach Kerns hopes that the returning players will improve upon their basketball skills as well as their attitude toward the game.

The 1984-85 Eagles Basketball schedule will be released in a few weeks.

Blue and White set for May 5th

By ROSA REESE

The GSC football Eagles have been plagued with injuries. There are at least 20 players on the injury list including quarterback Tracy Ham and back-up quarterback Doug Saffles. The injury of Ham and Saffles leaves the Eagles with only two other back-up quarterbacks. Coach Erk Russell said, "At this time in spring practice we expect the injury list to be quite long, but this year's list is a little longer than normal."

Coach Russell said that practice has been moving ahead. "The effort and attitude of our players have been outstanding and we feel that it has been a most productive practice session."

The spring game will be played May 5th at 3:00, on Womack Field.

Coach Russell takes the team through spring drill.

OSU golfers extend Schenkel streak to five

By JONATHAN DUKES

Sports Writer

The streak continues.

After coming close to seeing its streak of four straight titles at the Chris Schenkel Invitational come to an end, the Oklahoma State Cowboys did it again.

Behind the play of tournament medalist Scott Verplank, coach Mike Holder's Cowboys rode a final-day 281 (seven-under-par) to victory at the 14th Annual Schenkel last weekend. The win gave State its fifth consecutive Schenkel Championship.

Going into Sunday's final round, the four-time defending champions were in a tie for fifth with Mississippi State. However, the cowpokes found themselves only three strokes back of second-round leader Georgia.

At the nine-hole turn of the final 18 holes, Georgia had faltered and the Ole Miss Rebels had taken hold of the lead behind All-American candidates Dave Peege and Darren Cole.

The last nine holes proved to be just what the Cowboys needed. No, really all Oklahoma State needed was the last hole. With Ole waiting in the group behind them, the Cowboys got birdies from Jeff Maggert and Verplank, who holed a 25-foot putt after an incredible recovery on his third shot. State also got an eagle on the final hole from senior Andy Dillard.

That four-under final hole ended up being the Cowboys' saving grace.

Sophomore Verplank shot 70-68-70 to end the tournament at eight-under par 208. Four other golfers tied for second, three shots back at 211.

"I hit the ball pretty good off the tee," said Verplank. "Today (Sunday) I was just scrambling all day long to stay up."

For Ole Miss, the loss was disappointing. Before the Schenkel the Rebels have won three of their last four tournaments and are gearing up the SEC Tournament in two weeks.

"I was upset with the way we finished," said Rebel head coach Ernest Ross. We played very poorly on the back side. It's bad for us because we were in a position to win it and didn't."

The Rebels played the last hole in two under and the final totlas gave O.K. State the victory by two strokes.

"Good fortune smiled on us," said Holder. "It looks like we were just destined to win. We got every break we needed."

this year's Schenkel field included eight of the Top 20 teams in the country. Behind State and Ole Miss, the teams came in like this: Georgia, Mississippi State, South Carolina, Florida, LSU, Clemson, Wake Forest, Miami, Auburn, host Georgia Southern, Tennessee, Alabama, William and Mary, South Florida, Georgia Tech, and North Carolina State.

GSC finishes a disappointing 12th

By JONATHAN DUKES

Sports Writer

For the Georgia Southern Eagles, last year's Chris Schenkel Invitational turned their season around and kept their NCAA hopes alive. This year's Schenkel will not bring the same results.

Posting its second worst round of the year on Sunday's final day, GSC dropped to a disappointing twelfth place finish in the 1984 Schenkel. The Eagles of head coach Doug Gordin had rounds of 291-290-306 to finish at 887 in the 14th annual event.

"We just happened to have all five guys play badly today," said Gordin Sunday. "It's like having all nine guys on a baseball team play badly the same day."

The bright spot in an otherwise dismal weekend for the Eagles was the play of sophomore Marion Dantzler. He posted rounds of 74-71-74 to finish with a 219. Dantzler ended the tournament on a high note when he eagled the 18th hole on Sunday with a perfect chip from off the green.

Following Dantzler was captain Rusty Strawn at 73-72-77-222. Senior Tripp Kuhlke had his first poor tournament of the year as he posted 71-75-78 to finish at 224. Billy Booe also finished at 224 with 75-72-77. Scott Munroe had a strong first round but couldn't follow it up as he finished 73-81-79-233.

Now the Eagles will look ahead to the Trans America Athletic Conference Tournament coming up May 14-15. GSC, the two-time defending TAAC champion, will see its only competition come from Houston Baptist.

"It's going to be difficult," said Gordin. "Houston Baptist has been playing against many of the top teams in the country. Hopefully we'll bounce back and come through in the tournament."

Eagle Marion Dantzler tallies his first round 74 at Schenkel.

THE GEORGE-ANNE SPORTS

TENNIS

The Georgia Southern men's tennis team won its 22nd match of the season against six defeats by defeating Emory 8-1. The Eagles led Georgia State 4-0 but had the rest of that match rained out as well as a scheduled contest against Georgia Tech.

The Eagles have two more matches before traveling to Shreveport, La., for the conference championships. Georgia Southern plays Flagler College and Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College in the next few days.

Earlier in the week, Southern defeated Armstrong State 5-1 using mostly second string players. Mike Barker was the lone loser for the Eagles. Gary Meanchos was the only regular to play against Armstrong State winning at number one singles.

BASEBALL

Abner shatters homerun record

All-America Ben Abner shattered the career homerun record this past week. The junior from Mechanicsburg, Penn. now has 20 homeruns on the season and 52 in his career, eclipsing the old mark of 48 set by Steve Peruso. Dave Pregon tied Peruso's record. The senior first baseman has 19 homeruns this season and 48 in his career.

* * * * *

Pregon closes in on another record

Dave Pregon has 65 RBI's this season, giving him 191 in his career, just three short of that career mark. Steve Peruso currently holds the record of 194. Pregon should break the record this week during a seven game home stand.

Playoff spot is clinched

GSC has assured itself of a spot in the Trans America Athletic Conference playoffs with conference wins this week over Georgia State and Mercer. The Eagles have three conference games left with Mercer this weekend in Statesboro. Those three games will decide first place in the TAAC's Eastern Division. GSC currently has a one game lead over the Bears.

Man at work

Phil Dale turned in another beauty of a pitching performance this week. The junior Australian fired a two-hit shutout against Mercer in a seven-inning game on Saturday. Dale returned the first 13 batters he faced in the game before allowing back-to-back hits. He walked only one and struck out three in the game. Dale leads the team now in wins (9), innings pitched (111) and strikeouts (88).
