2. Yard. telee. Statesboro, partir

...
Mrs. Georgia Clydes was graduated from North Carolina College of Agriculture and Technology in 1956. It is important to note that having an accomplished background in agriculture is crucial for modern farmers.

They planted a hedge of corn in the back yard of their house. This is a common practice among American farmers to improve the soil and increase crop yields. The corn grew very well, and the family harvested a good amount.

For the Thanksgiving meal, the family decided to prepare a huge feast. They ordered a large turkey from Winn Dixie, which they knew would be a delicious choice. Mrs. Clydes was in charge of preparing the dinner, and she worked hard to make sure it was perfect.

The family celebrated by gathering around the table, sharing stories and enjoying delicious food. After dinner, they went for a walk in the beautiful Georgia countryside, appreciating the peacefulness of rural life.

The local newspaper reported on the local events, including the annual Bulloch County Rural Telephone Co-op meeting to expand and improve service. The meeting was held on November 21, and it was an important occasion for the community.

The Bulloch County High School Eagles opened their season on Saturday night, and the local Rotary Club sponsored the event. The game was a close one, with the Eagles coming out on top.

The Stateboro Baptist College was also featured in the paper, with news of the annual "Man of the Year in Soil" award to be announced on November 29. This event is a significant part of the college's activities, and it recognizes outstanding contributions to soil science.

The local banks and credit unions were also featured, with advertisements for the Chicken Gizzard and Roasting Potatoes special. The community was busy preparing for the upcoming Christmas season, with gift ideas and festive events being advertised.

The local newspaper also highlighted the importance of community involvement, with news of the Bulloch County Council of Churches and the Methodist Men's Club meeting that evening. These groups play a vital role in the community, providing support and services to those in need.

In summary, the local community was busy with various events and activities, from agricultural advancements to community gatherings. The newspaper provided a snapshot of the community's life, highlighting the importance of local events and the spirit of togetherness.