Miss Jessie Lou Clark is named Brooklet Farm Bureau Queen

Miss Jessie Lou Clark was named Brooklet Farm Bureau Queen Wednesday night and the quartet of Belchers won the talent show.

Miss Clark is the daughter of Mrs. and Mrs. Rupert Clarke and will compete for county honors and the right to represent Bulloch County at the state Farm Bureau convention in November.

Mary Alice Belcher was at the piano and her sisters Sue and Helen, brother Aaron, sang "Hot Diggity" to win the talent contest. They are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Belcher's children.

Miss Helen Gibbs was the runner up in the queen contest. Miss Mary Alice Belcher teamed with Miss Sarah Lynn Brown in an accordion duet with Mrs. Amelia Sue Waters at the piano to take second place in the talent show.

Miss Sue Belcher and Miss Nancy Parrish did an accordion duet with Mrs. Carolyn Lee at the piano. Misses Jane Lanier, Patsy Ross, Jacquita Jones and Nancy McCall formed a quartet on xylophones with Mrs. Lee at the piano.

Judges of the show were Miss Elizabeth Sorrier, Mrs. Percy Bland and Leodel Coleman. Mrs. Hamp Smith was in charge of the talent contest and Mrs. Lee and Mrs. Clark arranged the talent show.

Prior to the show J. H. Wyatt discussed with the men the poundage-acreage control program now proposed for tobacco.

The group went on record as being 100 per cent opposed to it and asked President John N. Rushing Jr., to register this proposal with Congressman Prince H. Preston and Senator Herman Talmadge.

William Cronley urged everyone to return their telephone books so that the board of directors for the Bulloch County Rural Telephone Cooperatives would know exactly what they desired the board to do on the proposed extended scope service.

Mr. J. R. Kelly, a cooperator of the Ogeechee River Soil Conservation District has recently installed a parallel terracing system on his farm in the Clito Community. Mr. Kelly did what most people find hard to do—that is he planted his waterways before he built the terraces. Pensacola Bahia grass was planted last spring and a soil about half knee deep is now ready to receive water from the terraces without any damage.

Mr. Arthur James Riggs is installing a nice parallel terracing system on his newly acquired farm south of Statesboro. His land was on the borderline between not needing any terraces and needing a few. However, the parallel terrace system, making for longer rows, better water conservation, and less sheet erosion will increase his crop yields without interference from short rows which normally accompany regular terracing systems.

Mr. J. C. Hardy is endeavoring to construct a good parallel terracing system on his farm at the Lakeview. When the terraces and waterways are completely installed and sodded, his land will be secure from the elements.

CARD OF THANKS

We want to take this opportunity to thank our many friends for their kindness and comforting words during the recent illness and death of our father, George Hodges. We especially thank Dr. Barksdale and the nurses at Bulloch County Hospital for their untiring efforts.

May God bless each and every one of you.

Children and Grandchildren.

Rabies poses serious threat

During the past five months, Emanuel County has been experiencing an outbreak of rabies in animals. This outbreak has been predominantly in the fox population. During the last months of 1956, some six animals were found to have rabies on laboratory examination of the heads. During the first three months of 1957, some 14-15 animals, mostly foxes, have been found to have rabies. Emanuel County has been conducting a fox-trapping program for about two and a half months in an effort to combat the spread of this disease. Between 450 and 500 foxes have been trapped and killed which will materially reduce the danger in Emanuel County.

However, the danger remains to Bulloch. Immediate steps must be taken to prevent widespread entry of this devastating disease into our county. The Bulloch County Board of Health has appointed Dr. John Cobb rabies inspector and Dr. Hugh Arundel, D. L. Davis, and T. W. Powell as assistant rabies inspectors.

Rabies poses serious threat

When there is a highly susceptible dog population—due to lack of inoculations—then the disease spreads to the dog which has even more opportunity to bite other animals and human beings. Thus, the danger increases manifold.

Until county-wide measures are instituted, all residents of the county are asked to report to the health department any animals—especially foxes—who show suspicious signs which might indicate rabies. Normally, foxes are shy and will run if approached by dogs or people.

Some 25,000 to 35,000 plants per acre should be left when the cotton is chopped, but a pre-emergence spray is used the seed should be dropped six to eight per hill 12 to 14 inches apart.

Cultivation should be shallow and often enough to control weeds and grass and insects controlled from the start on through the making stage. Early applications of insect control materials will be needed this year more than during recent years because the trash examined near old cotton fields this spring showed there were an average of 1,036 live weevils that came through the winter as compared with only 370 in 1956.

Cotton grown in the area shown in the map is the largest number of weevils surviving the winter since 1953. Cotton growers know they are here, waiting for the crop to get started, so they have got to be ready to fight them this year.

Four-H Club members in 73 counties took part in the 1956 contest and 222 of them produced more than 100 bushels of corn per acre, according to W. H. Gurey, agronomist, Agricultural Extension Service.

High Blood Pressure

By DR. K. R. HERRING

The body controls the blood pressure by a number of nerves leading to the muscular layers of the blood vessels. Worry, excitement, and faulty diet are all factors contributing to high blood pressure. The underlying cause is pressure on nerve fibers causing irritation with the result that messages from the brain to the blood vessels are wrongly interpreted so that they do not coordinate as they should with the rest of the body. Consequently various forms of degeneration take place, most commonly hardening of the arteries.

Through chiropractic treatment, the irritation is removed so that normal function can be restored.

Mr. Coleman is a graduate of Georgia Teachers College and holds a master's degree in administration from Peabody College in Tennessee. He is a native of Fitzgerald Georgia and is the principal of the Sallie Zetterover Elementary School in the Bulloch County school system.

HOW DO YOU VOLUNTEER FOR CIVIL DEFENSE?

Your newspapers, radio or local civil defense organization will be glad to tell you. Also you can watch for announcements from your local civil defense director. Or you can phone or visit your local civil defense headquarters.

Right now your Red Cross chapter is ready to train you in first aid. This training will be required of all civil defense volunteers. But whether or not you are able to volunteer, you should take the latest Red Cross first aid course. Home nursing and nurses' aide courses are given by the Red Cross. These courses may save a life in your family some day, war or no war.

In addition, the Red Cross needs blood donors. Thousands of pints of blood and plasma would be needed after an enemy attack. The Red Cross is in charge of this part of the civil defense program.

'House Without Windows' is a psycho drama

"House Without Windows," the spring presentation of the Statesboro Little Theatre promises to be a real thrill according to members of the theatre group.

The play is a psychological drama of unusual consequences. Edgar Marr, played by Henry McCormack; his wife, Ann Marr, played by Frida Gerant; and their son, Arthur, played by Parrah Biltch; are financially dependent upon Edgar's sister, Estelle Marr, played by Mrs. Ivey Franklin. Estelle Marr is a bitter, dominating old lady who never ceases to remind the Marrs of their dependence upon her. The action reaches a height of intensity of the Hitchcock variety over the matter of Estelle's will.

The play, directed by Bobby Smith, is scheduled for production May 1 and will be presented in the arena style where the plot action takes place in a circular area with the audience looking down into it from all sides.

Mr. Smith explained that due to the limited seating capacity of the Masonic Hall, those planning to see the show should arrive to buy reserve seats. These may be purchased in advance from any Little Theatre Member or from Al Sutherland at the Statesboro Litho Printing Co., East Main Street. Tickets not sold in advance will be on sale at the door the night of the performance at one dollar for adults and 50 cents for students.
