PLANETARIUM SHOWING ECLIPSE PRESENTATION WITH SOLAR ECLIPSE GLASSES FOR SALE

BY BRETT DANIEL
The George-Anne staff

The Georgia Southern Planetarium will host a solar and lunar eclipse show this Friday, where students can exchange $1 for a pair of solar eclipse glasses.

The presentation, entitled Totality, will teach students about the importance of solar and lunar eclipses, what happens when they occur and how to be safe when they do.

The show comes just three days before the highly anticipated Great American Solar Eclipse on August 21, which will be visible across the entire mainland United States, the first total solar eclipse to do so since 1918.

Dillon Marcy, planetarium coordinator, said the 6 p.m. show is sold out, however, students still have four other opportunities to see the show at 7 p.m., 8 p.m., 9 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Marcy added that depending on how many tickets are sold, the Planetarium may add more shows before 6 p.m.

Students can reserve tickets by emailing their full name, desired number of tickets and show time they wish to attend to Planetarium@GeorgiaSouthern.edu. The email must have "Tickets" in the subject line.

Tickets will be available for pickup at 5:30 p.m. in the planetarium lobby on Friday, August 18, and will be forfeited if not picked up at least five minutes before show time. Seating is general admission and the Planetarium recommends that students arrive early if they want to be seated next to their friends.

Operation Move-in is the annual event in which most of the students who live in residence halls come to campus for the beginning of the Fall semester. Volunteers help the new or returning students unpack and make the transition into their new home easier. Volunteers range from different student organizations on campus to athletic teams, and even President Hebert got in on the fun.

RUSSELL UNION COMPLETES DINING FACILITY EXPANSIONS

BY BRETT DANIEL
The George-Anne staff

The changes

Over the summer, GS commissioned massive renovations in the Russell Union for both Chick-Fil-A and Starbucks. Chick-Fil-A was remodeled and is now called “Chick-Fil-A Express,” and Starbucks has been expanded with more seating and standing space, new tables and chairs, and a lengthy bar. Bob Hisey, assistant director of University Housing and Auxiliary Facilities, said Chick-Fil-A was “rebuilt, replaced and refurbished” to meet Chick-Fil-A’s current franchise standards. “We did an entire gut-out of the kitchen, the customer service area and the dining area,” he said. This “gut-out” includes changes to Chick-Fil-A’s menu as well as new flooring, kitchen equipment and point-of-sale systems. Jamie Ellis, Chick-Fil-A’s assistant manager, said the new menu includes Chick-n-Minis, cookies and yogurt parfaits. Some menu items were removed, however, including chicken soup, gravy, chicken salad sandwiches and biscuits containing eggs. Starbucks was also updated to meet new franchise standards. Similar to Chick-Fil-A, the restaurant was also “completely gutted out,” according to Hisey. “Everything you see in there is new,” he said. “We knocked down walls and increased seating space.” Students socialize and enjoy their beverages in the newly renovated Starbucks, which includes more seating and standing space, new interior design modifications, chairs, tables and a bar. In addition to more seating and standing space, Hisey said the renovated Starbucks also includes more preparation and customer service space, as well as new wall art and flooring. Hisey added that the renovations were done completely by staff from University Housing and Auxiliary Services. He said doing it this way saved GS “quite a bit of money” because the university didn’t have to hire outside contractors.

Student responses

Ashlinn Watford, senior mechanical engineering major, said Chick-Fil-A’s lines are still long, but that she understands why because they get so busy. Despite this, Watford seemed to enjoy the visual changes made to the restaurant. “It looks nice,” Watford said. “It looks a little bit more organized.” Students wait for their food in the dining area of Chick-Fil-A. Madison Teaster, a junior writing and linguistics major who frequents Starbucks, is a transfer student from Valdosta State University, where she says the Starbucks there is tiny compared to the new Starbucks in the Union. “I walked in and I was like, ‘What happened?’” Teaster said. “They opened it up a lot more. It’s really nice.”

Other changes

Aside from Chick-Fil-A and Starbucks, GS also commissioned two other changes to the Union over the summer. Sandi Wilkinson, who oversaw the renovations project, said new air-conditioning units have been installed. In addition, the ATMs that used to be located across from Starbucks have been moved to Landrum Dining Commons.

The consolidation came as a surprise to many members of the GS and ASU communities. The Georgia Board of Regents cited many economic and economic benefits.

BY IAN LEONARD & MATTHEW ENFINGER
The George-Anne staff

The University System of Georgia announced the recommendation for a consolidation between Georgia Southern University (GS) and Armstrong State University (ASU) in January 2017. The new consolidated institution will be called Georgia Southern University.

The following month the Consolidation Implementation Committee (CIC) was formed to begin making recommendations for how the new university will operate. The CIC is comprised of 41 members including administrators, faculty members and student representatives from both ASU and GS (20 each) as well as one member from Savannah State University.

The CIC was tasked with sorting out the fine details of the merger, which were separated into 93 categories that are managed by individual teams named Operational Working Groups (OWGs), according to consolidation. georgiasouthern.edu. These decisions impact how the new organizational structure of the university will impact everything from college names, student organizations and even technical support.

“The Consolidation Implementation Committee this summer approved over 500 recommendations from some 90 different working groups composed of faculty, staff and students from both institutions,” President Hebert said in his Fall convocation speech last Wednesday.

The implications of these decisions are far reaching and have already begun to affect GS and ASU students. So for those of you who haven’t had the opportunity to keep up, here’s a quick guide on what recommendations have passed, what recommendations are coming and how you can get involved in the process.

STRUCTURE AND ACADEMICS

One of the first questions addressed by the CIC was the organizational structure of the new university and the chain of command. Many of the positions used in the current GS organizational chart will be returning, but one new addition is the Campus Leader for Armstrong/Liberty* (*pending name confirmation) Another landmark recommendation was brought to the floor on May 10, that proposed a restructuring of the current colleges into the following organizational chart. The organizational structure was first postponed to a later date after the original structure sparked an avid online discussion online between students. However, a new structure was finally approved during the May 24 CIC meeting with minor changes. On July 25 it was announced that the police departments of both campuses would consolidate by July 29, with current GS Chief of Police Laura McCullough leading the new department and Armstrong’s interim Chief taking a leadership role within the organization as well.

“The early integration of University Police Departments will allow for upgraded equipment and aligned training standards,” McCullough said in a press release posted by the university on the consolidation website. “We will be fully integrated well before the start of the fall 2017 semester.”

ATHLETICS AND STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS

Another topic on the list of OWGs is Athletics. This was one of the first topics brought into question by many students and student-athletes from both universities. Athletics was addressed at the very first official CIC meeting on March 3, and recommendations were both made and approved that meeting, the first being to honor the original athletic scholarships, now known as University Grants, made to all ASU student-athletes. However it was announced shortly afterwards on March 7 that ASU would cease all NCAA competition at the conclusion of the 2016-2017 season.

“This was a very difficult decision, but it is in the best interest of our student-athletes,” Lisa Sweany, Armstrong’s athletic director, said in a press release released on the consolidation website on March 7.

The press release state that due to the change in the athletics operations many teams have been left with less than players than necessary to form a full team, which could put the remaining student athletes in “potentially harmful playing situations” according to the statement released on the consolidation website. After the announcement of the consolidation, many student athletes were given the opportunity to transfer without penalty to other schools and begin competing immediately. The CIC also passed recommendations allowing ASU students access to GS sporting events starting this Fall 2017 as well as limited transportation options to selected events, yet to be determined. The fate of student organizations has also been called into question. A number of recommendations have already been passed by the CIC concerning Greek life, campus recreation programs, Student Government Organization (SGA) and others. The CIC has passed recommendations that both campuses adopt the BANNER tracking system for fraternities and sororities and combining the current operating and procedures policies of both universities, while “maintaining the integrity of chapters on each campus” according to OWG 17-2 on the consolidation website. A recommendation was passed that will combine the governing bodies of both campuses into one SGA. Both the Statesboro and Armstrong campuses will be represented by their own executive officers and governing bodies, however they will both report to one SGA president. The same recommendation also called for the merging of both constitutions into one constitution, however each governing body “will maintain their individual by-laws.” according to OWG 17-5 on the consolidation website.

“There has been extensive communication between our Student Governments. The President of the Armstrong SGA and myself are in constant communication about matters relating to our student bodies and also the overall consolidation process,” Dylan John, GS SGA President, said.

Other recommendations made under this OWG include allowing students to access and utilize recreational services at both campuses regardless of the student’s campus affiliation, and OWG 17-3 calls for the creation of videos, presentations and displays to “to keep history alive regarding the consolidation of the two units.”

Many ASU students expressed their distaste for the consolidation. The CIC approved a recommendation to name the ASU campus Liberty Campus.

WHAT'S TO COME AND HOW TO GET INVOLVED

The consolidation is to be implemented, in full, starting in the Fall semester of 2018. The timeline on the consolidation website has laid out many key tasks that are to be completed in between now and then, but most notably, CIC meetings are to continue until all 93 OWG tasks are completed and approved.

The administration consolidation is set to take effect in January of 2018, as well as the newly integrated procedures for the Fall 2018 class registration.

For more information, updates and to give feedback you can visit the consolidation website at consolidation.georgiasouthern.edu

Major Recommendations

ASU students will be permitted into GS sporting events beginning this semester. The university has also recommended that some sporting events that have yet to be determined, be played on ASU campus.

The ASU and GS campus police departments officially consolidated on July 29. GS’ current Chief of Police Laura McCullough will be heading the new department, while ASU’s current interim Chief of Police Tiffany Land will continue to serve in a leadership role during the transition.

The SGAs of both school will consolidate into one overall organization, however each campus will have a individual governing body that will report to the SGA President.

The CIC also approved a new academic structure, effectively renaming and reorganizing many of the current schools within certain colleges at GS. The full structure can be found at consolidation.georgiasouthern.edu.

The administrations of both universities are set to officially consolidate in January of 2018, with the full consolidation of both colleges to take place beginning with the Fall 2018 semester

A large audience gathered in the Performing Arts Center to hear President Jaimie Hebert give the Fall 2017 convocation speech last Wednesday where he spoke of Georgia Southern University's new additions, accomplishments and the consolidation process.

The address was titled "Setting the Pace for the Future" paying homage to one of the president's favorite pass times, jogging.

Hebert believes that institutions of higher education should pace themselves much like jogging.

"Running is really about pace," Hebert said.

"You really can't sprint a 5K. If you did, you'd either seriously injure yourself or worse, fail to finish."

The speech continued, stating gratitude of numerous achievements GS accomplished throughout the past year.

HEBERT SETS UNIVERSITY'S PACE WITH FALL 2017 CONVOCATION SPEECH

New

Additions

Hebert spoke of the new Military Science Building that completed construction on Jan. 9. It now houses GS's ROTC programs. The university's city campus is now home to the veterans business outreach center, which provides support to veteran entrepreneurs.

Hebert gave an update on the progress of the new Interdisciplinary Academic Building located off the pedestrian saying that construction is "moving along very quickly and very nicely." The building is scheduled to complete construction on April 2018 and open the following May.

GS also placed a new commemorative marker on Sweetheart Circle honoring the university's first African American students.

"They are truly, truly, representatives of the tenacity that has existed in every person that has pushed this institution forward over the years," Hebert said.

Accomplishments

Hebert showed gratitude toward several online programs and traditional programs that were ranked among the nation's best in US News and World Review this year.

GS's school of nursing received a 1.3 million dollar grant, according to Hebert. This grant will go towards training nurse practitioners to provide health care at facilities in underserved and rural areas in and around Bulloch county.

Consolidation

Hebert referred to the consolidation between GS and Armstrong State University as a "pivotal point". Since the consolidation began on Jan. 11, the Consolidation Implementation Committee has approved over five hundred recommendations. "We have been moving this consolidation process forward, strategically and deliberately," Hebert said.

The fully consolidated universities are said to have an economic impact of over 1 billion dollars. Hebert believes that this increase will lead to working "more closely with regional businesses and industry."

Hebert foresees that GS is "headed for change," but encourages everyone to "focus on our principles and embrace the opportunities that lie ahead."

Hebert concluded the speech saying, "We're going to set it [the bar] very high and we're going to set a brisk pace and a steady pace for our university as we move into this next phase of our history."

Letter from the Editor

JOZSEF PAPP

Jozsef is a senior journalism major from Cumming, Ga.

The beginning of the academic year presents new experiences, challenges and exciting new adventures for students to enjoy. From having your first college class to (hopefully) starting your final year at Georgia Southern, college is the perfect time to get involved and make a meaningful impact in your community. At The George-Anne, we strive to do just that. We want to be part of the conversations happening on our campus. We want to be able to provide content that will make a difference in the student's life. We want to be your primary source for news on this campus. I have the honor of leading The George-Anne as Editor-in-Chief for the 2017-2018 academic year. It is a responsibility I do not take lightly. I have been lucky enough to be involved in Student Media for the past three years and have seen it grow and change exponentially. If you have been following along for the past couple of years, you have noticed that we have made some changes to our newspaper, but our quality has remained constant throughout those years. Although we are starting to move away from our traditional print product, you will still see us every Tuesday and Thursday on your newsstands around campus, and everyday online on our website and social media platforms. We want to be your go to source for breaking news, athletics, arts and entertainment and anything that could have an impact on your life here at Georgia Southern. We want to be a platform for you to be able to express your views on different topics affecting your daily lives.

Get Involved

For our new Eagles, it's important to feel part of our community at Georgia Southern. I know it might seem scary to step out of your comfort zone, I highly recommend all of you to try to and become a member of the community. We want Georgia Southern to become your home for the next four years. Getting involved is a big part of doing that. There are more than 100 organizations on this campus that will surely satisfy any of your interest and will make you feel connected to Georgia Southern and start building relationships that hopefully last a lifetime.

Looking Ahead

Our university is currently in the process of a consolidating with Armstrong State University. We can expect a lot of changes in the coming months that will impact both campuses and we'll make sure you will be informed on anything that might affect you. I wish you all the luck in the world this year and let's make this year the best year of our lives.

Go Eagles!

Georgia Southern offers many opportunities for students to get involved through over a hundred student organizations and clubs.

Tom Kleinlein speaks at Paulson Stadium. He is entering his sixth season as the Georgia Souther athletic director, and this summer he was named a direct report to President Jaimie Hebert.

By Thomas Jilk
The George-Anne staff

After signing a four-year contract extension in May, Georgia Southern athletic director Tom Kleinlein sat down with The George-Anne to discuss the consolidation with Armstrong State, his recent hires and the upcoming football season.

athletic events. Selected, Kleinlein said, starts with football games.

"Hopefully those football games and being around that environment carries over to them coming to basketball games and some of our other events on campus as well."

NEW FACES IN TOWN

This summer, Kleinlein has hired four newcomers from the Armstrong State athletic things internally," Kleinlein said.

The coaches hired had successful resumes at Armstrong State as well. Dean, for example, led the Pirates softball program to the NCAA Division II National Championship last season. Seven of her batters hit over .300, all four starting pitchers had an ERA under 4.0 (two under 2.0) and their final record was 38-14.

In addition, McCaffrey won multiple national championships with Armstrong's women's tennis program.

ON FOOTBALL

Kleinlein didn't dance around the fact that the football team had a down year in 2016.

"I'm really excited to see how our kids react to having to come back and prove to some people that the brand of Georgia Southern football coach, the entire staff changes that were made were a shift to get back to where we all had the same identity. We were all thinking the same thing and talking the same language."

The new strength and conditioning coach, Dwayne Chandler, and the return to a run-oriented option offense go hand-in-hand. Eagle football wants to go back to overpowering people, wearing down defenses and running the ball down opponents' throats. And then, when the time is right, the quarterback might drop back and hit an Eagle receiver over top of the daydreaming defense. This is the brand of football to which Kleinlein spoke about returning.

FRESHLY INKED EXTENSION

Kleinlein expressed gratitude to President Jaimie Hebert for his new contract extension, which the Savannah Morning News reported as having an annual base salary of $265,000.

"You have very few opportunities in life to sit down with your boss and say, 'tell me how you really feel about what's going on,'" Kleinlein said.

"When your boss offers you a contract extension and is committed to having you here long-term, that gives you a sense that you're going down the right path and what we've been trying to create here in this athletic department is the right direction in the eyes of the president, in the eyes of the athletic foundation and all the people that are involved in putting that contract together."

Kleinlein, and much of the Georgia Southern community, will see a growing, changing athletic department as the consolidation progresses and the Sun Belt Conference gains media exposure.

With that in mind, Kleinlein said, "We need to keep focusing on our three main mantras, which are rings, diplomas and leaders."

that we saw last year is not typical of what we expect at Georgia Southern," Kleinlein said. "We're here to get back to doing what we used to do."

He added, "success in FBS football is not defined by one season. It's defined by consistency of being relevant in terms of national status."

After going 5-7 and missing a bowl game, he said that the program has necessarily undergone a kind of mentality overhaul.

"It's an understanding from our head football coach of getting back to the culture of Georgia Southern football, which is a run-oriented offense," he said. "I would look at it as the three coaches that came in, the addition of the strength department. His new deputy athletic director will be Lisa Sweany, who was the athletic director at Armstrong. He also hired Sean McCaffrey as women's tennis head coach, Kim Dean as softball head coach and her assistant, Megan Conner.

Kleinlein stressed that none of them were hired strictly because of the consolidation, but rather that Georgia Southern "had openings within [our] athletic department" and Armstrong State, having just ended its athletic program, offered some talented and qualified candidates.

"The Armstrong athletic department was one that functioned at a very high level," Kleinlein said. "The misnomer that's out there is they were hired because of the consolidation."

As for Sweany, Kleinlein said her duties - which began on July 1 - will allow him to travel more to represent and grow the athletic department in Savannah and elsewhere.

"Having somebody of Lisa's skill set ... allows me the flexibility to do some other things externally while she's here running

CONSOLIDATION: WHAT'S NEXT?

Kleinlein said the athletic department is waiting for approval from the Board of Regents on the organizational chart for the new athletic department.

Recommendations have already been approved by the Board that included ending Armstrong State athletics after the Spring 2017 season, honoring Armstrong student-athletes' scholarships and offering them immediate open-transfer status (so they don't lose any eligibility).

"We needed to start with the student-athletes because they were the ones that were affected immediately," Kleinlein said. "Next was the staff, which is the process we're in now. Moving forward it's going to be 'what are we going to do with the facilities?'"

Kleinlein added that as it stands now, the new Georgia Southern would have two facilities for basically any sport that Armstrong State offered.

"Once this organizational chart gets passed, the next thing is 'how do we utilize the facilities and combine the two campuses with the facilities that we have?'" Kleinlein said.

Another idea that Kleinlein hopes will draw Armstrong State students to the Statesboro campus by Fall 2017 is giving them access to Georgia Southern athletic events.

Additionally, transport will be provided to these students for "selected"
