Preston lambasts Benson for 'shabby' treatment of farmers on Soil Bank

Snow turns city-county into Preston area winter wonderland for kids to study

A motorized bandwagon pulled children and their parents to study the weather and snow at the Soil Bank during the week. The bandwagon was pulled by a truck and was equipped with a weather station and a display of snow and ice.

It was a great celebration

It was a great weekend in the history of Georgia Tech, as the 135th class of graduates took their places in the gathered throngs to receive the diplomas that are the result of years of hard work and dedication.

The celebration began on Thursday night with a reception for the graduates and their families. The auditorium was packed with friends and family members, all looking forward to the day when their loved ones would take to the stage to receive their diplomas.

On Friday, the graduates were given a tour of the campus, stopping at various landmarks and sites that hold special meaning for them. The tour ended with a ceremony in which the students were given the opportunity to say goodbye to the campus and to each other.

On Saturday, the main event was the commencement ceremony, which was held in the stadium. The graduates were joined by family and friends, as well as faculty and staff members, to celebrate the completion of their academic careers and to look forward to the next chapter in their lives.

The ceremony included speeches by various dignitaries, as well as a keynote address by a distinguished guest. The students were also given the opportunity to speak, sharing their thoughts and feelings about their time at Georgia Tech.

The day ended with a reception for the graduates and their families, allowing everyone to come together to share in the joy of this special occasion.

It was a day of celebration, a day of honor, and a day of pride for all those involved. Georgia Tech is proud of its students, and its students are proud of Georgia Tech. This is a day that will be remembered for many years to come.
This Is the Story of Bulloch County

Chapter VII - Installation

The week we celebrated "World's Main Event" from October 12 to 19, 1961, was also the 100th year of the Centennial of Georgia's (now Statesboro). The occasion was marked by a series of events and activities that celebrated the history and achievements of the county.

The week began on October 12 with a parade through the streets of Statesboro, featuring floats, music, and local dignitaries. The highlight of the parade was a large float built to commemorate the history of Bulloch County, which included images of its early days, the Civil War, and the growth of the area.

The following day, October 13, was dedicated to educational events, with workshops and lectures held throughout the county. These events focused on the importance of education and the role it played in shaping the future of Bulloch County.

Throughout the week, numerous events were held to commemorate the 100th year of the Centennial of Georgia. These included concerts, plays, and a variety of other cultural events, all aimed at celebrating the rich history of the county.

The week culminated in a grand banquet held on October 19, which featured keynote speakers, honoring local leaders, and a variety of performances. The banquet was a fitting finale to a week of celebration and remembrance.

In conclusion, the week-long celebration of "World's Main Event" was a resounding success, bringing together residents of Bulloch County to celebrate their history and look forward to a bright future.
