Cities in a planned meeting of the Georgia-Mississippi-Oklahoma association of state highway officials will be here soon.

The city has been planning for the conference for several months, and the officials are looking forward to a successful meeting.

The Georgia-Mississippi-Oklahoma association of state highway officials is a group of officials from the three states who meet annually to discuss issues and strategies related to highways.

The meeting will include discussions on various topics such as road design, maintenance, and funding.

It is expected that the meeting will bring together officials from different areas of the state to share ideas and best practices.

The city is making arrangements for the officials to have a comfortable stay during the meeting.

The city is proud to host this important event as it demonstrates the city's commitment to improving its infrastructure and supporting the efforts of the association.

Overall, the meeting promises to be a valuable opportunity for officials to network and learn from each other, ultimately improving the quality of roadways across the region.

The city wishes the officials a productive and enjoyable stay during their visit.
Editorials

Will there ever be a letup? E. P. Childs, Judge of Probate and County Executive's Office in Orangeburg, pointed out the tragic aspect of one piece of paper, that is, 1877. This year, 1897, is the 100th anniversary of the founding of the County Hospital for mental treatment. It is hoped this week that there will be a letup in the overcrowding of the buildings, for Orangeburg citizens have always given generously of their means to help other people. The Orangeburg County Hospital was founded in 1897 on the idea of meeting the need for the care of the mentally ill. The need has been as great in 1997 as it was in 1897.

In the Revolutionary War, Independence was an important military stronghold. John Brooklet, a native of Independence County, was a significant figure in the fight for freedom. He was a member of the Continental Army and played a crucial role in several battles, including the Battle of Savannah. After the war, he returned to his hometown and became a respected leader in the community. The town continues to honor its Revolutionary War heritage and celebrates John Brooklet's memory every year with a July 4th parade and ceremony.
