Building a Border Wall Won't Solve Jack

Opinions

Andrew DePietro, finance writer for GOBankingRates, stated on Feb. 15, 2019, “Trump claims that the cost would only amount to $12 billion. But even that amount isn’t that low when compared with the $23.3 billion spent on physical barriers for the entire period between fiscal years 2007 to 2015. Additionally, an internal report by the Department of Homeland Security estimated the cost of the wall to be much higher at about $21.6 billion, and even that could be an underestimation, according to the Brookings Institution.

The cost of a border wall

Should the U.S. build a wall along the southern border? On Feb. 15, Donald Trump declared a national emergency to free up billions of dollars to build a wall along the U.S.-Mexico border. As of Feb. 19, 16 U.S. states have sued Trump in an effort to stop his recent attempt of declaring a national emergency along the southern border? To answer this question, I am going to discuss a few aspects of Trump’s promised border wall.

The effectiveness of a border wall

There are many factors regarding the effectiveness of a border wall that are often overlooked.

Andrew DePietro, finance writer for GOBankingRates, stated on Feb. 15, 2019, “Trump claims that the cost would only amount to $12 billion. As researched by U-T San Diego, more than 180 tunnel attempts have been identified by law enforcement officials since the first cross-border tunnel was documented in Arizona on May 17, 1990. Also, another problem with the effectiveness of a border wall is the fact it can be climbed over or dug underneath.

As a percentage of their respective populations, there were 56 percent fewer criminal convictions of illegal immigrants than of native-born Americans in Texas in 2015, Alex Nowrasteh, author of Does Immigration Increase Violent Crime found. Also, on a nationwide scale, states with larger numbers of undocumented immigrants tended to have lower crime rates than states with lower numbers of undocumented immigrants, Michael T. Light and Ty Miller, authors of Does Immigration Capacity Matter? Immigration Statistics and native-born rate.

Additionally, many people, myself included, believe a wall is not the most effective barrier. As stated by Dianne Feinstein in the San Francisco Chronicle, “It’s a fact that nearly half of all undocumented immigrants come to the United States legally but then overstay their visas.”

Also, another problem with the effectiveness of a border wall is the fact it can be climbed over or dug underneath. As researched by U-T San Diego, more than 180 tunnel attempts have been identified by law enforcement officials since the first cross-border tunnel was documented in Arizona on May 17, 1990. COMMENCEMENT REVERSAL
Student Government Association convention passes legislation calling for reversal of commencement changes

BY NATHAN WEAVER
The George-Anne Staff
A resolution calling for the recent changes to Georgia Southern University’s commencement ceremonies to be immediately reverted has been passed at a Student Government Association convention March 2.

SGA members from all three GS campuses gathered at a joint session in order to vote on pieces of university-wide legislation. One of these proposals was a resolution initially authored by Armstrong SGA Speaker Tyler Tyack.

The resolution was passed by the Armstrong SGA senate and then recently voted down by the Statesboro SGA senate on Feb. 20.

Along with calling for the president’s cabinet to immediately revert the changes which have been recently made to the commencement process, Tyack’s resolution calls for a new plan for commencement to be created by a committee made of up students and faculty from all three GS campuses.

“I think that we as the SGA have done our job,” Tyack said. “We have represented the students to the administration. We can finally say together as three campuses and 21,000 students, ‘We want things changed.’”

The final tally of votes cast by SGA representatives on the resolution was 31 yes votes, two no votes and five abstentions.

One proponent of Tyack’s resolution during the debate leading up to the final vote was Statesboro senator-at-large Keyshawn Housey, who was absent from the Statesboro SGA senate meeting where the resolution has previously been voted down.

“We can tell them that we did try,” Housey said. “Personally I do not believe that any changes will be made to this semester’s commencement, but for the future I hope we can have a say.”

JARVIS STEELE
SGA President

“...I don’t know what I would’ve done if I was able to vote but one thing I will say is if my senators feel like they’re representing their constituency, then that’s all you can really ask them to do, correct?” Steele said. “Their job is to represent the constituents and if they feel like that’s what they’re doing, then I’m on board with whatever they feel like.”

The George-Anne Staff
The Georgia Southern University faculty senate has organized a workload committee composed of faculty from all across the university due to its increased size post-consolidation.

This committee exists to develop university-wide guidelines for teaching, research and service workloads, Dustin Anderson, faculty senate chair said.

Universities of GS’ size have detailed workload policies with clear expectations for the standard university workload.

“We’re trying to move away from one-size-fits-all practices, many that were defaulted to during consolidation, and this committee is part of that effort,” Anderson said.

As the workload committee starts to work and share their findings, more information will become available on the potential changes for the university.

An exact date has not been set, but the committee will propose its policy to the senate later in the semester.

Green Eagle Awards

Georgia Southern’s Center for Sustainability accepting nominations for the fifth Annual Green Eagle Awards

BY SARAH SMITH
George-Anne contributor

Georgia Southern University’s Center for Sustainability is accepting nominations for the fifth annual Green Eagle Awards from Thursday to April 1.

The Green Eagle Awards were created in 2015 and were started to honor individuals who have shown tremendous efforts to promote sustainability on GS’ campus and in their community, Lissa Leege, director of the Center for Sustainability, said.

“The nominees have [to] gone above and beyond when it comes to sustainability for Georgia Southern, such as leading a sustainability effort, serving a role with the Center for Sustainability, working on some aspect of sustainable food or for faculty and staff, incorporating sustainability into their courses and research,” Leege said.

One to two students, faculty or administrators and staff will be chosen based on their roles and activities, contribution and impact of sustainability on GS’ campus. The winners will be chosen by the Sustainability Fee Committee, primarily made of students.

All nominees will be honored and winners will be announced at a ceremony following the closing reception for the Sustainability Showcase on April 22 at 3 p.m. at the Zach S. Henderson Library. The winners will receive a plaque as well as have their name displayed on a plaque in the Biological Sciences Building.

Candidates must be committed to making GS’ campus sustainable and can be nominated by anyone through filling out a form online. For a full list of requirements, visit the Grants and Awards tab on the Center for Sustainability’s website.

Miracle Organization to host dance marathon at Georgia Southern

BY ANTHONY BELIFANTE
The George-Anne staff

Georgia Southern University’s Miracle Organization will host the Children’s Miracle Dance Marathon, a fundraising event to help sick and injured kids, for the second year in a row on March 8.

Starting at 4 p.m. in the Williams Center Multipurpose Room, the fundraising event encourages students to donate money towards the Children’s Miracle Network while participating in games, dancing and more.

Money earned through the fundraiser will also go towards the Children’s Hospital of Georgia in Augusta.

Fifteen-second dance challenges will take place during the event, along with hearing stories from miracle children and food provided by the Miracle Organization.

Attendees can also sign up for a standing challenge, in which they would pledge to stand for the full six hours of the dance marathon.

Miracle hopes to meet their goal of raising $16,500, after successfully passing their goal last year by raising $16,200, Abbey Glaze Miracle vice principal of internal operations said.

“Schools across the country host dance marathons and are able to raise millions of dollars,” Glaze said. “We are hoping to get Georgia Southern to eventually become one of those top fundraising schools.”

The dance marathon has a minimum $10 donation to start off the night at the door.

Marie Lorenz, artist known for using discarded objects as integral pieces of her installations, is coming to Georgia Southern University on March 12. Lorenz is famed for her unique approach to art, incorporating elements like garbage, mud, and natural materials into her installations.

Lorenz has been creating art for over a decade. "We strive to give students all the tools they need to achieve their full potential and meet future academic and career goals," said Sheri Carey, DNP, assistant professor and program director of the RN to BSN program.

Georgia Southern University has attracted New York-based artist, Marie Lorenz, to host a lecture on March 12. Lorenz has been dedicated to creating art since her childhood, and her most recent piece reminds her of making mud sculptures as a child. Lorenz started working with garbage eight years ago, exploring the NYC coast.

"I think as an artwork, the main thing that I am asking with this installation is just to slow down and examine something," Lorenz said.

Lorenz will host her lecture in Arts Building room 2071 in conjunction with the Center for Sustainability's Sustainability Seminar Series from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. "Ash Heap/Landfill" is Lorenz's newest art piece and it is on display at the Center for Art & Theatre from now until March 18.

Nursing Program Ranked No. 27 in the Nation

Georgia Southern’s RN-BSN program ranked No. 27 as one of the most affordable in the nation

BY JOIYA REID
The George-Anne contributor

Georgia Southern University’s School of Nursing RN to BSN program was ranked No. 27 out of 50 schools as one of the most affordable programs in the nation by GreatValueColleges.net.

The RN to BSN program is a fully online program recognized for providing high-quality education at an affordable price, according to a press release. Sheri Carey, DNP, assistant professor and RN to BSN program director, said the program’s flexibility was one of many aspects considered in the ranking process.

"We strive to give students all the tools they need to achieve their full potential and meet future academic and career goals," Carey said.

According to the press release, information from each program’s website and tuition pricing gathered by CollegeNavigator were used to make the list. Tuition information, flexibility, customization within the degree program and unique offers were determining factors for the rankings.

The School of Nursing, located in Waters College of Health Professions, is fully accredited by the Georgia Board of Nursing and the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education. There are four undergraduate nursing programs offered at GS including the RN-BSN program, according to the official School of Nursing webpage.

Registered nurses interested in the program can apply online through the School of Nursing’s website.
Damond Williams, Ph.D., is a national expert on diversity and inclusion who has worked with Georgia Southern University throughout the 2018-2019 academic year by gathering student feedback regarding the campus climate. Williams’ work will help the university develop a comprehensive plan to enhance diversity, equality and inclusion at GS.

Williams sat down with The Georgia-Anne to discuss the work he and his team are doing on Georgia Southern’s campus.

What is your primary role as a diversity and inclusion educator?

“I am an organizational strategist, and I work on helping organizations to improve and to get better in different types of ways, and I do that using a range of different techniques, whether that’s strategy development, research, evaluation and assessment, leadership development or educational experiences and products. So, I don’t really define myself as a diversity and inclusion educator. That’s part of it, but the work we’re doing is far more than diversity and inclusion training or professional development. It’s really a broader set of areas that we’re focused into.”

Based on what you have seen so far, what are your thoughts on Georgia Southern University concerning diversity and inclusion?

“I think there’s a lot of opportunity to really make diversity and inclusion a real power and strength of the university. Georgia Southern has such a strong diversity in the student body. I think it’s a point of strength that makes it [all] very unique. It’s served as a positive asset for the entire university environment, so everybody’s learning from one another, and individuals are building relationships across diverse communities, and students are having experiences where they’re great potential in that regard, and I think the opportunity there is to figure out: how does that come together to become a real strength for the university and inside the classroom and outside the classroom?”

What are some of the schools and incidents you’ve worked with in the past?

“I work with lots of different places. I have visited hundreds of institutions. The places I visit isn’t necessarily because they’re dealing with a crisis, or they’re dealing with a challenge. A lot of times, I’m there working proactively giving a keynote or giving remarks or spending a day in residency with the institution. Most instances, it’s not necessarily in response to an incident. It’s really in response to that institutions are trying to get better, and they believe that some of the work that we’re doing can be helpful in that regard.”

The George-Anne recently reported on the “triggerish” incident and the incidents involving two Georgia Southern professors allegedly saying the N-word. Have you worked with? If so, on others college campuses?

“I think there’s a lot of what do you hope to accomplish during your time here at Georgia Southern?

“We’ve been working with the university now for several weeks, and we’re really trying to support President Nickel, and the Provost Reiber and Vice President Lewis, as they’ve been stewarding the university, with others, around getting the university started on the diversity and inclusion journey, and as a strategic priority, and our job is to help them really launch that work, and I think we’ve done that. We’ve had a chance to be on campus and to speak in front of a number of different audiences. We’ve had a chance to engage in survey work, to gather some insights about the diversity and inclusion at Georgia Southern. Our job is to help support the university’s leadership, and they’re really wanting to strengthen the university’s diversity commitment and the work that’s going on, and I think what’s particularly important is the timing of how this is happening, because there’s a new president that will soon arrive on campus, and he has been very interested in this work and very supportive of this work, and he’s looking forward to playing a key role with the Provost and the VP of student affairs and others to help us toward the future.”
The cast of 'Bug' creates a skin-crawling night tale of addiction, conspiracy and loss.

According to Olson, this is the biggest problem of writing. It's even easier to let your insecurities influence you if you are working alone, but this is something every writer faces.

"Everyone has a story that they get to tell and so there are a lot of reasons you can find not to write," Olson said. "But I think once people get over that initial hump and realize that they do have something to say, then usually that can be a very powerful thing."

Engage with writing somehow

As controversial as it may seem in the writing world, Olson is not an advocate for writing every day. It's a piece of advice that you will often hear," said Olson. "Like just put your butt in the chair and do your thirty minutes of your page or whatever it might be. I think, for some people, that system works and it's really great. I have tried it and I can sustain it for short periods of time, but I can't do it long term, it's not the way I work. And I get to say that because I've tried it and I've been doing it for fifteen to twenty years at this point."

However, if the system of writing every day doesn't work for you, you should be engaging with writing in some way. This can involve reading something every day, even if it's a small poem, or talking about some form of writing with others. Engage with creativity and paint or walk through the park, that way you can be ready to write when you sit down again. Most importantly, don't knock anything before you try it, including the "write every day" rule.

Branch out

It's easy to look at another style of writing and think that a piece or genre or writing isn't worth our time, but we can be surprised by what we find if we just try it out. "I came in as a fiction writer," Olson said. "I thought I was going to be a fiction writer when I was in college and I had a poetry professor say 'You know, your fiction is fine but it's not great. Like your poetry is what's really good' and I was really surprised to hear that. I would not have thought that in a million years that I would have ended up teaching poetry like a profession."

Recommendations

It's good to read other works and get a feel for process and ways to improve your writing. To help with that, Professor Olson made these recommendations:

• "On Writing: A Memoir of the Craft" by Stephen King
• "Ordinary Genius" by Kim Addonizio
• Online literary magazines Brevity and Verse Daily

Meet the writing community

Writing can feel very solitary, but it is important to find a writing community that can encourage you and help you improve. Olson stands by the Department of Writing and Linguistics at GS and says that it is a very supportive community and a cool place to be a writer. People are willing to listen to readings at events like Burning Swamp and share ideas and tips. Finding other, like-minded people to help build you up can be very empowering.

Writing Tips from Christina Olson MFA

BY CHRISTINA MCKINLEY
"The reflector staff"

Professor Christina Olson is a poet and creative nonfiction writer who came to Georgia Southern University in 2011. Before coming to GS, she taught at Grand Valley State University and attended Minnesota State University for graduate school as well as the State University of New York at Fredonia for her undergrad.

Now Olson teaches Intro to Creative Writing, Poetry Writing, Advanced Poetry Writing, Creative Nonfiction writing and Advanced Creative Nonfiction Writing. She has published two full-length collections of poetry, one called "Terminal Human Velocity" and the other "Before I Came Home Naked." She has also published two chapbooks, "Rock and the M.E." and "Weird Science." As a writer, Olson likes seeing how poetry and creative nonfiction work together. When asked what advice she had to give to other writers, this is what she had to say:

Read everything

Read everything, “even if you think it’s old or weird or you don’t like it,” Olson said. “Because there’s always something to learn from other writing.” Other works can teach you what you like or don’t like to include in your own writing and can show you how to improve.

Try

According to Olson, it’s easy for writers to get frustrated and think they can never be good enough or never accomplish the things they want because they haven’t done it before. Trying is the way to start and the only way to get to the place you want to go. Write a draft, even if you think it’s bad, that way you have something to pull from, whether it be a scene, an image or even a sentence. This way, you create your own jumping-off point from there.

Don’t be afraid to tell your story

Many people can feel intimidated by good writing they see elsewhere and get discouraged when it comes to their own writing. It’s hard to feel your voice matters when there are so many others. According to Olson, the downfall of the outside will struggle to understand the downfall of the two protagonists.

The Cast and Crew take a bow for their terrifying performance. With only five cast members, 'Bug' is one of the Theatre department's smallest productions.

R.C., played by student Peyton Rowe, separates fake cocaine for a scene in "Bug." Drug abuse is a primary theme of the show and will play the biggest part in the character's delusional downfall.

Students Peyton Rowe and Paige Oney rehearse an intimate, unsettling scene for "Bug." As the play progresses, both characters will struggle not to lose their sense of self, reality and possibly each other.

GS men’s basketball takes 81-66 win over Little Rock, extends winning streak to five

The Georgia Southern men’s basketball team extended their winning streak to five as they claimed an 81-66 victory over Little Rock in a heated conference game which took place in Jonesboro, Arkansas.

Although the Red Wolves came out strong, junior forward Isaiah Crawley was on fire as he reached a season high on the night with 20 points in the 23 minutes of play. Crawley ended up being a huge contributor to the Eagles’ win. While showing dunk after dunk on the offense, Crawley also continued to be solid on the defense, racking up three rebounds and one steal.

Brown was also on fire as he contributed 19 points to the GS win. The senior played with a high level of intensity after UALR tried to challenge him, and Brown responded by shooting 58.3 percent from the floor as well as collecting two steals.

“It’s clicking now,” Brown said discussing the Eagles’ recent success. “I mean I feel like we still got some more left in us to keep going, to get better.”

The Eagles held the lead for 38 minutes of the total game, allowing UALR to see the lead for only less than a minute. As a team, GS shot 54.5 percent from the floor as well as shooting 62.1 percent on free-throws—a big deal considering 18 of their 81 points came from free-throws. After stealing the win, GS progresses to an overall record of 19-10 and a conference record of 11-5, tying them for second in the Sun Belt.

“I thought that was a typical end of February almost early March hard fought game,” Head Coach Mark Byington said. “I continually think we’re getting better. I’m not worried about a streak or how many games we’ve won, we’re just trying to get better.”

Eagles defeat Arkansas State Redwolves to mark sixth win in a row

The Georgia Southern men’s basketball team defeated the Arkansas State Redwolves 81-70 in a heated conference game Saturday night. This victory marks the sixth win in a row.

Setting a fast pace early on, GS went on a 7-0 run in the first two minutes of the match. ASU had a few turnovers, allowing GS to capitalize 35 points from fast breaks and turnovers alone. These mistakes quickly made the Redwolves lose their rhythm.

In perhaps one of the most aggressive games of the season, GS held Redwolves senior guard Ty Cockfield to 17 points and two rebounds. Cockfield has been known to rise to the occasion. He has been averaging about 23 points per game and he scored a career high 39 points against conference leader Texas State.

“We knew Ty was one of the leading top scorers in the Sun Belt,” senior guard Tookie Brown said. “We put a couple bodies on him, and tonight I think we contained him really well.”

GS was dynamic on offense tonight, led by Brown with 17 points and six rebounds. Junior forward Isaiah Crawley caps off his big week with a 15 point night, along with freshman guard Calvin Wishart contributing 12 points with his second-most season high.

GS was dynamite on offense tonight, with his second-most season high. GS shot 60 percent from the field, with 46 points in the paint, compared to ASU’s 42 percent.

“We’ve been staying in the moment and I think that’s helped us,” Byington said. “All of those guys are talented offensive players and they just found the right opportunities.”

Though GS held the lead the entire match and pulled out the win, it wasn’t the prettiest at times. Head Coach Mark Byington wants the team to rest and recover before hitting a hard week of practice for Georgia State.

“To still win by double-figures and not play our best, I’ll take that,” Byington said. “I look forward to the fact that our guys can get some rest, since we don’t play again until next Saturday. We’ll have a lot more energy.”

GS has been playing at the top of their game defensively since the top of this six game winning streak. The team looks to continue this pattern against Georgia State, who plays in an alternative version of the zone.

“We need to remain focused. Towards the beginning of the season, our focus probably wasn’t where it is right now,” Crawley said. “Our trust and our focus have leveled up to almost the max. We still have a little more in us.”

Eagles fall in Arkansas

Extend losing streak to seven

The Georgia Southern Eagles fell to the Arkansas State Red Wolves in the conference game which took place in Jonesboro, Arkansas.

Although the Red Wolves came out on top, putting their record at 11-16, the Eagles fell down to 7-21.

GS tied the single-game three point record by making 13-16 against ASU. Each of those baskets was assisted by junior guard Amira Amtwater. She achieved a school record, making 14 assists in a single-game.

Junior guard Alexis Brown showed star athleticism in the game, scoring 29 points and playing in the game for a total of 34 minutes.

Going into halftime the Red Wolves only led by four points and there was real potential for the Eagles to come back and fight for the win.

There were many shots that were missed by the eagles from rebounds and on. Missed opportunities really played a factor into the loss.

Although this loss did not help the Eagles improve their record, they are set to take on a new opponent to hopefully still end the season on a high note.

GS will be on the road to finish off the 2018-19 season by competing against the Georgia State Panthers in Atlanta, Georgia Saturday at 2 p.m.
Eagles use insane 6th inning to salvage game against No. 9 Bulldogs

The Georgia Southern baseball team was able to earn a much-needed 10-7 victory against the No. 9 Georgia Bulldogs to cap a three-game series after falling to the Bulldogs 4-2 earlier March 2.

Game two—UGA wins 4-2

In the blink of an eye, the visitors shot out to a two-run lead in the second inning off of freshman LHP Braden Hays. GS cut the lead in half in the second inning with back-to-back walks from upperclassmen junior first baseman Matt Anderson and sophomore second baseman Tyler Martin. Ten pitches later, Anderson career HBP to score Anderson, tying the game at six. Steven Curry took his 52nd career HBP to score Anderson, tying the game at six. With one out and bases loaded, junior second baseman Jack Gowen walked senior leftfielder Tyler Martin to give the Eagles their first lead of the weekend, but the damage wasn’t over yet.

Sophomore first baseman Jason Swan went in to pinch hit and reached on an error at third base to bring three more runs home. A popfly from Anderson ended the bizarre inning. “It was seven runs with no hits and I don’t think I’ve ever seen anything like that before,” Curry said. “I know their bullpen was struggling to score, they don’t always fall for you,” Hennon said. “That was the case in the first game.”

Game three—GS wins 10-7

The series finale featured an inning that may never be recreated again. Facing a 6-3 deficit in the bottom of the sixth inning with one out, junior Matt Anderson stepped up to the plate with bases loaded. UGA’s third pitcher of the game, Christian Ryder, hit Anderson for Anderson’s second HBP of the game. Ten pitches later, Anderson was on third, Tressler was on second, and Thompson was on first, all by wild pitches and a walk.

With one out and bases loaded, junior second baseman Steven Curry took his 52nd career HBP to score Anderson, making it a 6-4 game. “Some people say I stand on the plate, but I don’t think I do,” Curry said. “I kind of dive into the pitch too. I really don’t know [why I get hit so much] though.”

Jack Gowen walked freshman third baseman Blake Evans to make it a one-run game. Another UGA pitching change went for naught as Adam Goodman hit sophomore rightfielder Noah Searcy, tying the game at six. Goodman walked senior leftfielder Tyler Martin to give the Eagles their first lead of the weekend, but the damage wasn’t over yet.

Sophomore first baseman Jason Swan went in to pinch hit and reached on an error at third base to bring three more runs home. A popfly from Anderson ended the bizarre inning. “It was seven runs with no hits and I don’t think I’ve ever seen anything like that before,” Curry said. “I know their bullpen was struggling to score, they don’t always fall for you,” Hennon said. “That was the case in the first game.”

The seven-run sixth inning was what GS needed to give the Eagles their first win of the series. “They helped us a little bit, but we’ll take it,” Hennon said of the sixth inning. “It was definitely a strange inning.” Harris went two and two-thirds innings with one hit and two strikeouts to earn his first save of the season.

“You have to go out get one [win] anyway you can,” Harris said. “We grinded out seven runs without a hit, made them work. I knew if I was coming in, I was just going to have to go to work and find a way to get it done.”

GS ended a 10 run game with just four hits and two errors in a wild, bottom of the six run sixth inning in the series finale against No. 9 Georgia.

As far as winning another game against a ranked SEC team, Curry and the team hopes to use the win to carry them into the last stretch of non-conference play.

“Honestly, I’m not afraid of anybody, me personally” Harris said. “I don’t think we should be afraid of anybody because we’re a good baseball team. Those guys they’re good, but I feel like it’s a little bit of SEC hype.”
