He says thanks

With every newspaper selling $0.10, it is more than fitting that clerks should be stopped for saying the words "Thank you." How many of them realize that when they say the words they are actually saying "Thank you" for a job well done? Many of them have learned the saying only as a catch phrase to their customers, but they probably haven't even thought about the words they were saying. Perhaps they should be encouraged to repeat them often. It is a small gesture, but it makes a big difference.

Don't be a sucker

If you are going to buy something, make sure you know the price before you buy it. A lot of people get taken in by the price and then later find out that they didn't get a good deal. Make sure you compare prices before you make a purchase.

To broken

Two of the county's most valuable farmlands were sold to a private developer last week for $80,000. The sale was made to a developer who promised to build a new enclosure and improve the area. The money will be used to pay for the development of the area, and it is hoped that the area will be improved in the future.

TODAY'S WORD

"Thank you" for a job well done.

The Editor's Uneasy Chair

The editor is feeling uneasy about the current political climate. With so many important issues at stake, he is worried that the politicians won't be able to come to a consensus.

You have to hand it to them. The politicians have been working hard to come up with a solution, but it seems like they're stuck in a rut.

It seems to me...

I think they're doing their best, but it seems like they're stuck in a rut. It's frustrating to see such an important issue go unresolved.

ECONOMIC HISTORY OF DERBY

By The Rev. C. L. Johnson

The economic history of Derby is an interesting one. From its early days as a small farming community, it has grown into a thriving town with a diverse economy.

In 1830, Derby was a small farming community with a population of only a few hundred people. The economy was based on agriculture, with most of the residents working on farms. However, as the town grew, so did its economy. In the 1850s, Derby began to diversify its economy, with many residents starting small businesses.

In the 1900s, Derby continued to grow, with the addition of new industries and a variety of other businesses. Today, Derby is a thriving town with a diverse economy, offering a wide range of opportunities for its residents.
