Student Loan Program Explained.

The Student Loan Program is a federal aid program designed to assist students financially to complete their education. It offers a range of loan types including Direct Subsidized and Unsubsidized Loans, Federal Perkins Loans, and Federal Family Education Loans (FFEL). Each type has its own eligibility criteria and repayment terms.

The program aims to provide loans at low interest rates and make repayment affordable for students. It can be obtained at any authorized lender, which includes banks, credit unions, and school-based lenders.

To qualify for a loan, students must be enrolled at least half-time and must maintain a satisfactory academic progress. The amounts awarded are based on the cost of attendance, minus scholarships and other aid.

For more information on eligibility and application process, students are encouraged to contact their school's financial aid office or visit the U.S. Department of Education's website dedicated to the Student Loan Program.
