Sixty-four traffic deaths during October

According to the State Department of Public Safety, there were 64 traffic deaths in Georgia during the month of October, the highest October death toll in the state's history. October was the deadliest month for traffic deaths in the state since the department began keeping records in 1920.

The report shows that the majority of deaths occurred on rural roads, with the most fatalities occurring in rural counties. The department said that many of the deaths were the result of speed-related factors, such as speeding or driving under the influence.

Governor Jimmy Carter said that the state must do more to promote safety on Georgia's roads. "We need to do a better job of educating people about the dangers of driving too fast," he said. "We must do more to make our roads safer for all Georgians."
