The signs of a stupid breed of drivers

It doesn’t take a State Patrolman or an insurance investigator to recognize the telltale signs of a stupid bre"ed of drivers. We’ve all seen them: the kind who make the wild, luckless, death-defying, dangerous gestures and give us the look that says, “I want to kill you.” This would be the wrong time to try to argue the point, for a stupid driver is a dangerous one.

These drivers know the limits better than most of us, and they surpass them. They cut in the wrong lane, on the wrong side of the road, on the wrong side of a one-way street. They keep up a high speed, and then strike a fragment of debris. They brake suddenly, causing a chain reaction of accidents. These drivers are a threat to the safety of the road, and we should all be doing everything in our power to avoid them.

Turpentine ‘poison’ haloncy! He says

Our weather in the past week has been more like spring than winter. The sun has been shining, the temperatures have been mild, and the weather has been generally pleasant.

The sight of a montgolfier balloon floating above us is a beautiful sight, but we must remember that these balloons are not safe. They are hazardous to the people on the ground, and they can cause accidents. We must always be aware of the dangers of these balloons, and we must take steps to avoid them.

Our hard-working servants need rest

There seems to be a long line of cars waiting to enter the store. It is hard to believe that we have so many customers. It is a wonder that our hard-working servants can keep up with the demand.

But we can be sure that they are working hard. These hard-working servants are doing a great job. They are doing a fine job.

Bulloch County grower reports best insect control ever had with a season-long endrin-methion combination program

John Gardner, Statesboro grower, says, "I stack with insecticides this year and get great yields. I went with endrin-methion combination and was pleased with the results. I got a good stand and have been able to control the cotton weeds and insects with this treatment."

According to Gardner, endrin-methion combination is the best available insecticide for cotton. He recommends its use to other growers who want to control pest populations with a minimum of insecticide residue.
