Supreme Court rules against segregation in public schools

Monday, May 17, the Supreme Court of the United States ruled out public school racial-segregation laws as unconstitutional.

In a historic decision the nine high court justices voted unanimously to enforce segregation of Negro children in public schools violated the Constitution.

The decision was received last week with general calm over the state of Georgia.

BACKGROUND
In the dark days following the War between the States, the North was bent on proving that "all men are created equal" and forcing the South to accept it. A strongly Republican Congress pushed through the "Reconstruction Amendments"—the Thirteenth to abolish slavery; the Fourteenth to give the Negro full citizenship rights and "equal protection of the laws"; and the Fifteenth to give him the right to vote.

The South fought bitterly to halt and then turn back the surge toward full emancipation. During the Reconstruction Era, the Southern states enacted legislation providing that in schools, colleges, hospitals, libraries, restaurants, trains, buses, places of amusement and all other public places, Negroes must be segregated from the whites.

'SEPARATE BUT EQUAL'
Gradually, reluctantly, the rest of the nation accepted the racial wall as the price for bringing the South back into the Union. The culmination of this period of accommodation came in 1896 when the Supreme Court devised the famous "separate but equal" doctrine which had the effect of sanctioning segregation. In a case involving public transportation, the court ruled that segregation did not violate the "equal protection" clause of the Fourteenth Amendment provided equal facilities were made available to both Negroes and whites.

At the time, the "separate but equal" dictum aroused opposition from all sides. Northerners endorsed Justice John Harlan's sharp dissenting words: "Our Constitution is color-blind." Southerners, for their part, bitterly resented what appeared to be a judicial effort to force Negro equality down their throats. Nonetheless, the "separate but equal" doctrine provided a meeting ground for the South and the Constitution, and for this practical reason it survived for half a century.

World War II proved a new era in the battle over the status of the Negro. Industrialization of the South had already given impetus to the demands for better Negro education. The assignment of Negro draftees to racial units in the armed forces sharpened their resentment against segregation. The courts were flooded with suits attacking the validity of various segregation laws. During this period the Supreme Court did not discard the "separate but equal" doctrine, but it interpreted "equality" in increasingly broad terms. Negroes won many decisions—against the all-white primary; against restrictive covenants forbidding the sale of property to Negroes; against segregation in public carriers in interstate commerce; against segregated state university graduate schools on the ground that even if a Negro graduate school had "equal" physical facilities it could not offer its students "equal" professional contacts and prestige.

Georgia Constitution provides for separate schools for races

The provision of an adequate education for the citizens shall be a primary obligation of the State of Georgia, the expense of which shall be provided for by taxation. Separate schools shall be provided for white and colored races.

Section 32-907 of the Georgia Code reads: "FREE TUITION; COLORED AND WHITE CHILDREN SEPARATE.—Admission to all common schools shall be gratuitous to all children between the ages of 6 and 18 years residing in the districts in which the schools are located. Colored and white children shall not attend the same schools, and no teacher receiving or teaching white and colored pupils in the same schools shall be allowed any compensation time of the common school fund."

WARREN READS VERDICT
The nine Justices who heard these arguments included five who were appointed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, three by President Truman, and the Chief Justice, Earl Warren. During the Reconstruction Era, the Southern states enacted legislation providing that in schools, colleges, hospitals, libraries, restaurants, trains, buses, places of amusement and all other public places, Negroes must be segregated from the whites.

In December 1952, came the broadest challenge to racial discrimination. The Supreme Court was asked to outlaw segregation in the field in which it is most widely enforced—public education.

Seventeen states and the District of Columbia require segregation in public elementary and high schools and four states permit it. About 40 per cent of the nation's public elementary and high school children—a total of 8,200,000 whites and 2,530,000 Negroes—are required to attend segregated schools. The specific cases presented the Supreme Court involved four states—South Carolina, Virginia, Delaware and Kansas—and the District of Columbia, but the future of all segregation states hung on those cases.

Observer Corps commended by Air Force general

This week Statesboro and Bulloch county were commended on the patriotic spirit shown by the members of the county Ground Observer Corps under the direction of Mrs. W. W. Edge.

Mayor Bill Bowen received a letter last week from Major Daniel W. Austin, of the 474th Ground Observer Squadron, Detachment 5, Savannah, saying, "I congratulate you for the fine work you have accomplished in the past and an affidavit that you will continue to give your time and effort to help strengthen the defensive system of our country."

Detachment 5 of the Ground Observer Squadron, including the Bulloch county, has been specially cited by Brig. General John B. Cary, commander of the 35th Air Division (defense), Dobbins Air Force Base, Marietta.

It's Great to Lead the Band!

EVERYONE in the country is using more electricity these days, and Georgians are helping to set the pace.

In fact, you're five years ahead of the nation in your use of electricity. Our average residential customer was using more electricity back in 1949 than the average American home uses today.

At the present time you are using 27 per cent more electricity than the national average customer!

OVER THE YEARS the price of electricity everywhere has been generally downward.

But you're 16 years ahead of the nation in the low price you pay for your electric service. Yes, back in 1940 you were paying less for a kilowatt-hour than the nation's average residential customer pays today.

Right now you are paying 22 per cent less than the national average. In Georgia especially, electricity is indeed your biggest bargain!

He learned, much to his delight and amazement, that the lowest-priced Cadillac would actually cost him less than the model of the car he had originally intended to buy.

He discovered, too, that a Cadillac will travel farther on a gallon of gasoline . . . and that its cost of maintenance and upkeep is actually more modest.

And then he found out that a Cadillac traditionally returns a greater share of its original cost at resale than any other automobile built in America.

A year ago, the man you see in the picture above had no idea that he would be taking title to a new Cadillac car in 1954.

He had planned, almost as a matter of habit, to purchase the product of another motor car manufacturer—a make which he had owned and driven for many years.

But then he made a truly wonderful and surprising discovery!

Graduation is June 7; 105 Receive Degrees

The cost of a year of education here at GTC will rise from $508 for this school year to $532 for the 1954-55 year. For boys living in Cone Hall costs will jump to $570 per year.

Of this amount $96 per quarter will go for board. The cost of meals here has fluctuated in the past 12 years, but in 1942 the fee per quarter for board was $60, this year we paid $80 in the fall quarter and $85 for the two remaining quarters, actually less than was charged in '42 in this 12-year period the cost of food is supposed to have risen 125 per cent.

The overall upping of the fees is merely a measure to keep up with rising costs in all fields.

Edward Carruth To Speak At Wesley Banquet

Teachers Ends Season With 10 Wins 8 Losses

The GTC baseball nine wound up the current 1954 baseball season with a record of 10 wins and eight defeats.

The inability of the Profers to win games on the road kept their record from being much better. The team started off great, winning seven of their first eight games. The Profers then lost five straight games on the road.

There were several bright spots during the '54 campaign. The hitting of catcher Farrell Sparks and first baseman Jimmy Ford, and the outstanding pitching of Vondal Hall. Sparks finished the season with a .338 batting average to lead the team in this department, while Ford, just a freshman, hit .315. Hall, also a freshman, led the pitching staff with a five win and two lost record. Hall features a good knuckleball.
