"Hide behind persimmon trees or anything else to prevent these terrible killings," the governor

With that as his authority Col. Jones ordered his patrolmen to arrest all reckless and drunken drivers "without exception" and all who exceed speed limits beyond "reasonable amount."

And to the public Col. Jones said 'we'll make more cases with less warning." He warned that whenever the situation demands, state troopers will hide in off-highway spots in order to catch violators. We have advocated the highway patrol using any and all tactics within their imagination, which come within the Uniform Traffic Code and nowhere does the code make it unlawful for a patrolman to hide behind signboards, persimmon trees, or off-highway spots in order to catch would be killers operating automobiles and trucks on our highways.

The driver obeying our spee limits, observing the rules of highway safety, and courtesy has no reason to object to highway patrolmen hiding.

Only those who are speed-mad power-struck, self-centered, will object. They will contend "it's just not fair" . . . "it's a sneaky way to enforce the law" . . . "it's the sign of a poor patrolman." And only the stupid will see any validity to such reasoning.

We commend Governor Griffin for his action. We hope that Lt. Colonel Jones keeps his patrolmen's feet to the fire and that they use every method they can devise, within the law to protect the careful, law-abiding drivers who have the right and privilege of using their highways.

Let those who are caught scream to high heaven and when prought before the courts we hope the judges make it so rough on them that they'll come to respect the laws and the rights of others who use our highways.

Let them instruct our city police, those who drive the city's police patrol cars, to adopt the same tactics. We even go further than the governor. We would ap prove the city stripping our patrol cars of all identifying marks.

It is only by the use of such tactics, within the law, will we do use them according to the law, are already promoting such a according to the rules of safety and for those who observe all the

Our residential streets are still being used as racetracks by many f our citizens who, in all other things, are perfectly law abiding

Let them scream, but let's make our streets and highways safe!

Basis of fame

In Georgia, Statesboro's fame is based on its fine churches, its tobacco market, its cotton production, its Master Farmers, its outstanding county agent, its outstanding civic clubs, its fine schools, its fine people, together with many other considerations.

The foundation was incorporated on February 26, 1956.
The third of three forums for the Woman Who Works, conducted during Miss Rawalt's administration, took place Tuesday night, July 3. The Honorable Sinclair Weeks, U. S. Secretary of Commerce, addressed the delegation. In his address, secretary Weeks said that "more than 27,000,000 women last year had jobs at one time of working wives increased to a new peak of 17,000,000 in 1955; that some 38 per cent of all government employees, at all levels, are women, and that about one million of these are public school teachers. Secretary Weeks said further that "the Eisenhower Administration has faith in America, and believels are ahead in education, in health, in safety, and business expansion."

He shared the platform with Clem D. Johnson, of Roanoke, Virginia, chairman of the board, U. S. Chamber of Commerce, who advised women to "become more active as citizens" so that America can continue to remain free. Taking part in civic stfairs can help in "fostering sident, Miss Marguerite Rawalt."
