Many peanut growers may have to dig peanuts early due to dryness

The first peanut to be dug in this year's crop was harvested by a group of peanut growers in the Statesboro area. The growers were trying to take advantage of the recent dry weather to get their peanuts out of the ground before the season ends.

"We've been waiting for this weather to dry our peanuts," said one of the growers. "We've been able to get them out of the ground early, which is a good thing."
