It was a low trick

It happened at the National Archives here on the morning of July 18, 1937. A man named John McGargill, a member of the FBI, arrived with a list of the people who had come to the Archives to look at the accurate reproduction of the Declaration of Independence. He phoned the Federal Bureau of Investigation's offices in Washington, D.C., and told them that someone had stolen a copy of the Declaration. The FBI was called in, and it seems likely that the man who took the copy was trying to make a profit from it.

Meditation for This Week

It Seems to Me...

Her expect was during the Labor Day holiday in 1932, when her parents were killed in a car accident. She was only 15 years old at the time.
