Kitchen to, realm they resulted great

"Getting-Out-The-They are the opinions of the editor, not necessarily those of the paper."

A. B. McDowell, president of the organization, spoke of the effort members are making to provide a home for the poor and needy in the community. He said they are working hard to ensure that the home is ready to open within the next few months.

The growth of Industries is evident all over.

And this growth does not exist just in the paper mills and factories. It is evident in the number of new businesses being started each year.

They got the vote

They did it, and they have been working hard since then. They are members of the Industries Association of Savannah, and they are known as the "Spartans." Yesterday they proved themselves worthy of their name by voting for a tax, which added up to a vote for the good of Industries.

These young men were not content to sit back and watch their interests be taken away from them. They went out and voted, making sure that their interests would be protected.

We say thanks

The news was welcome to the entire Savannah area in Savannah for the support they have given the Industries Association. They have shown us that we can be a force for good if we work together.

Back with us

For the past several weeks we have been asking for your support. We have been going door to door, calling on people to come and see us.

This week both are back with us.

We welcome the song of the singing bird.

We don't say that we welcome the dog past which gathers in our yard, but we are happy to see the bird.

Thru the Ps of Virginia Russell

These lines from the "Psalmist" are fittingly prayed at this time: "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want."

Virginia Russell, who has been a member of the Savannah Women's Club for many years, has always been known for her love of music. She is the one who always sings the opening song at the meetings of the club.

It seems to me...

"It seems to me..." is a way of saying that it seems to us. We have not been able to express our thoughts in words, but we have felt them. Now we say them aloud.
