A Verse For This Week

The greatest man is he who chooses the right with invincible resolution, who resists the sorest temptations from within and without who bears the heaviest burdens cheerfully, who is calm in storms and most fearless under menace and frowns, whose reliance on truth, on virtue, on God, is most unflinching, I believe this greatness to be most common among the multitude, whose names are never heard.

Process of Nature

The same condition disturbs the civic-minded folk of all semi-rural cities, but we doubt that disturbed, since he came back from the wars, by observation of the fact that Statesboro is losing city government or chamber of so many of its young people. There is a natural gravitation of the young and ambitious from rural places to larger, front cities outside the state. It has always been so, and it is true in all of Georgia's small cities and towns but Editor Coleman is beginning to worry about it.

'Human Erosion' Bad Too

Editor's Note: In the editorial columns of this week's Herald are reprinting the comments made by the Atlanta Journal on an editorial we published several weeks ago. Here is a letter we received this week from the Dean of Students at the University of Georgia. Athens. It enlarges our theme of making our community more attractive for our young people.

Mr. Leodel Coleman, Editor, Bulloch Herald, Stateboro, Georgia.

Dear Mr. Coleman: In this morning's paper I read with much interest the editorial comment on an earlier editorial in your issue, bemoaning the fact that so many of our younger people are leaving the small towns of Georgia and drifting to the larger cities. As a native Georgian, particularly one who recently in his capacity as Dean of Students has been conscious of youth problems and youth movements, I most thoroughly agree with your comments.

I cannot blame any person for moving to a better location, whether a young person moving to a larger Georgia town or even a graduate of the University leaving this State for employment and opportunities elsewhere. Although we can expect such a person to some extent to stay in his more pleasant surroundings and greater opportunities elsewhere, and to help us build up a locality, still in the long run we must realize that "the builder will attract" and must be prepared to lose some of our people unless we can do many things to make our community more attractive, particularly the smaller towns of Georgia.

I believe that the coping of small industries in Georgia will attract more of our able young people and enable us to keep them at home. During the last few weeks I have made several talks about the State, and I have noted a good many small factories going up, an indication that there will be employment on a higher level for our young people. Also, the use of machinery on farms will eliminate much of

One death resulted from traffic accidents in Bulloch County during 1945. During the war years 1941-45 twenty deaths occurred in Bulloch County as the results of automobile accidents—seven in 1941, one in 1942, eight in 1943, and four during 1944. 606 Georgians died in 1945 on the highways in Georgia. 4,078 were injured to record a 33 per cent increase over 1944. Last week three auto accidents happened in Statesboro. Every night the sheriff's office receives reports of accidents within Bulloch County. And during the week there will be a certain percent of the accidents caused by drunken drivers.

Continuous Quality

There's good news for the "Five O'Clock Club"—that group of Statesboro men who meet at one of the local cafes for an early cup of coffee—With a 10-cent loaf of bread selling for 13 cents, a 15-cent quart of milk bringing 20 cents, and almost everything else up in proportion, there's consolation in the assurance from the OPA that the price of a cup of coffee must stay at a nickel. Let's hope it'll not be just colorful hot water!

nately the existence of a healthy economic and social life for our "smaller" towns. This letter is therefore to encourage you in asking the community for more attention to the problem about which you've spoken, and to say that there are other people conscious of the same situation in other localities and possibly from other viewpoints. Again my expression of sympathy with your viewpoint, and more power to you! Sincerely yours, WILLIAM TATE, Dean of Students, University of Georgia.

Features of FHA Act Explained by State Leader

The newly created Farmers' Home Administration under terms of the Act signed by the President August 14 will provide basic legislation for the lending and supervisory functions of the Farm Security Administration R. L. Vansant, State FSA director, said this week.

Heretofore, he explained, the Farm Security Administration has been operating as an Executive Order Agency and without statutory authority from the Congress although the Congress provided appropriations for the Agency each year and placed certain restrictions in the Appropriation Act.

The principal change, therefore, as it affects the Farm Security Administration will be a change in name, Mr. Vansant said. The Act also abolishes the Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Division of the Farm Credit Administration and transfers its functions to the new Farmers' Home Administration.

Here are the principal features of the new Farmers' Home Administration Act as enumerated by Mr. Vansant: First, the rehabilitation program of the Farm Security Administration in the future will be known as a production and subsistence loan program for the purpose for which loans can be made embracing all farm operating needs, including seed, fertilizer, livestock, and work-stock. These loans will be available only to farmers who are unable to obtain credit upon reasonable terms from other sources.

In the farm ownership program the principal changes were in an increase in the interest rate on farm ownership loans from three to three and one-half percent and the broadening of provisions of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act to fit the needs of veterans.

Farm ownership loans are made for the outright purchase of a farm and for mortgages and improvements for the benefit of veterans, tenants, sharecroppers and laborers. They extend for a maximum of 40 years. Mr. Vansant said the new interest rate would apply to loans made since the new Act became law and it would not affect purchase contracts existing prior to that date.

Under terms of the Act, a veteran may obtain a loan to enlarge or repair or improve a family-size farm. The Act also authorizes loans to disabled veterans for the purchase of small acreage, when it can be shown that the income from the acreage purchased plus the veterans disability pay will be able to repay the loan.

An entirely new feature is the provision for the family and to authorize the insurance of mortgages on family-type farms to be purchased by veterans, tenants, sharecroppers and laborers. Under the terms of this Act, the Government would insure private loans in an amount not to exceed 90 percent of the reasonable value of the farm and necessary repairs and improvements in a manner similar to the insurance features of the Federal Housing Act for the benefit of city residents.

The mortgage insurance section will not take effect until the Congress appropriates funds to activate this section.

Provision is made to continue the liquidation of projects begun by the old Relief Administration and Resettlement Administration, but this section is of minor significance inasmuch as all but projects in this section have been liquidated.

EXTENSION SERVICE RELEASES CIRCULAR ON WINTER GRAZING

The Georgia Agricultural Extension Service this week announced the publication of a new circular on winter grazing.

The circular, prepared by E. D. Alexander, gives information on selecting land, preparing and fertilizing the land, suggested seed mixtures and rates for different areas in the State, top dressing and grazing of winter crops.

Winter grazing on the most important parts of our feed production program. Experiments and farm tests have shown when certain procedure in culture and management is followed, grazing is possible through a great part of the fall, winter and spring months. Every farm with livestock should have winter grazing. Georgia farmers have shown that high-carrying capacity grazing, in most cases better than our summer permanent pastures, is possible for five to seven months in the late fall, winter and spring seasons.

Copies of the publication may be obtained from county agents or by writing the Extension Service in Athens.

FUMIGATING SEEDS URGED TO PREVENT DAMAGE BY WEEVILS

To protect them from damage by weevils, seed beans, corn popcorn, field peas and similar items should be treated as soon after harvesting as possible.

These seeds can be treated easily by fumigating them with carbon disulphide. Various quantities of seed can be placed in suitable containers, such as glass jars, tin cans or buckets, and then placed in a larger container, such as a barrel or oil drum, and fumigated.

Place the containers holding the seed in the tight receptacle with the container open so the seed will be well exposed to the gas place a plate or other shallow container above the seed and pour into this container the liquid carbon disulphide. Use about one teaspoon for each two gallons of seed. Carbon disulphide is inflammable and must be kept away from fire.

Cover the container with paper and place heavy sacks or canvas over the paper. After 24 hours, remove cover and leave containers open to air. The material will be safe from fire when odors have disappeared. After seed has aired thoroughly, cover and store in a suitable place. The use of carbon disulphide on seeds does not make them unsuitable for table use.

SELECT TOBACCO PLANTERS SITES, SPECIALIZES SITES

Pointing out that farmers who grow their own tobacco plants usually have the most successful crop.

In locating the tobacco bed there are several important considerations, these include: picking a southern or southeastern exposure to obtain the earliest and best plants; a well-drained site; an area that will be exposed to sunlight from early morning to late afternoon, and, if possible, a soil close to a water supply.

If the new chemical treatment to kill weeds and disease is used it is possible to use good planted sites year after year. This treatment, using one pound of Cyanamid per square yard of bed or one pound of Uramon and one-half lb. of Cyanamid per square yard, has been found to be effective. The chemical treatment should be made at least 60 to 90 days before the seed is to be sown to prevent damage to the tobacco seeds.

Farmers who plan to use this chemical treatment should obtain the chemicals as soon as possible, since the supplies are limited and there may not be enough to go around.

PREPARE TO ADD WEAR TO CLOTHES ADVISED BY AGENT

"Prepafs" will add to the life of ready-made clothing; and are much smarter than waiting until repairs are needed. Miss Irma Spears, home demonstration agent, told Bulloch County homemakers this week.

"Adding strengthening with a few well-placed stitches will help increase wear from the garments," Miss Spears pointed out.

"Check the new garment along seams for dangling threads, along bindings and hems, at the pocket corners and all fastenings. On an inexpensive garment, restitch a too narrow or loosely-stitched seam. On a better garment, rip out and restitch broken repairs are needed. Miss Spears said. Fasten snaps or hooks and eyes securely, and resew loose buttons.

Underarm shields keep a dress fresh longer and lengthen wear. Collar edges, collar openings, cuffs and sleeve openings can often be strengthened and made more attractive by a row or two of top stitching.

By using both hands as a team in performing many household tasks, setting the table and putting away dishes, homemakers can save much time and energy.
