Don't Shoot the Farmer!

Editor of The Atlanta Constitution

(Editor's Note: By special request we are ting an editorial written by Ralph Mc-Gill, of The Atlanta Constitution. It was read at a recent meeting of the Statesboro Rotary Club. It presents the farmer's angle to farm support, which holds up prices of farm products. We believe that it will be of general interest as well as of specific interest to the farmers, for the prosperity of our community depends directly upon the prosperity of the

"THERE IS NOW A RUSH of cartoons and editorials damning the farm price support bill as the reason why the average person is forced to pay the jewelry prices being charged for pork chops, steak and comestibles in general.

"This is true only to a degree. There have been exaggerated developments, such as the fantastic problem of potatoes, which the government is buying by the millions of bushels to hold up the price, out on the whole the price support plan has its

"Suppose it were abolished. Farm prices would break to depths not known since the dark days of the '30s. With the cotton crop estimated at more than 15,000,000 bales—seventh largest crop in ou history-cotton would be down to 14 cents if it were not for the price support which will not allow

"The farmer is the greatest purchaser in our bemocracy and this week gives wishes of the voters were not extra evidence upon which his work."

"Recently I investigated the economy. A man who works for $3,000 a year the evidence upon which his worspends most of that on his food, rent, clothing ry and fear is based:

"Becently I investigated the purging of negro voters at Dubspends most of that on his food, rent, clothing, recreation, children and doctors. But he spends no more than $3,000. A farmer who makes $3,000 a year spends at least $9,000 to make that much. He buys tons of fertilier and lime. He purchases heavily in insecticides. He buys machinery. He buys either tons of feed or hundreds of gallons of gasoline, depending on whether he uses mules or tractors. He buys lubricants, wagons and the myriad articles needed on a farm, such as fencing, poultry equipment and so on. His wife buys cloth, for portion in the American economy who keeps no person in the American economy who keeps the economy going by purchasing consumer goods at a larger scale than the farmer—and the farmer is a person and but rarely a corporation. When it has not a single vote reported for Gene Talmadge because some stupid election holder forgot to put his total on the consolidated return.

"The Journal's current campaign for clean elections really got its start as a result of the incredible session of the Georgia general assembly last year.

"That legislature was a pretty sorry sight. There were great economic pressures at work. There was bribery. Intellectual dishonesty was the rule rather than the exception. I heard two country preachers make speechs and the former is a person and but rarely a corporation. When it has a person and but rarely a corporation. "Now, it is perfectly true that a more realistic formula for adjusting support prices to allow for thanges in supply of the supported commodity would have brought them down for the farmer only. There is no evidence that slightly lower food prices would have lowered them from competition. There is a floor under wages for labor. The ordinary businessman reduces expenses. When goods don't move, he buys a group of 4-H Club children on a visit to town, and is protectly true that a more realistic formula for adjusting support prices to allow for changes in supply of the supported commodity would have brought down prices.

"The farmer is being shot at because he is the neers target. Food costs are too high and are getting higher. Farmers grow food. Therefore, the guns are aimed at the farmer.

"That isn't sensible. Therefore, it is not helpful to the necessary understanding of the American people.

"That so sure.

"No, I'm not so sure.

From Wood Burner to Diesel ...

The sleek, diesel-powered streamliner which rolls into Macon today is a far cry from the wood burner which puffed into East Macon the night of October 12, 1843.

But October 12, 1843, was a gala occasion. That day the iron horse became a full-fledged citizen of Georgia. That day, the Central had in operation 191 miles of track-the longest railroad in the world under one management! Indeed, this was a day of victory, and a tribute to the Central's founders who foresaw the importance of railroad transportation to the
