We'll Be Better For It

YEAR AFTER year, more and more emphasis is being put on rural and farm youth. Last week members of the Future Farmers of America joined hands and observed F.F.A. Week. Now next week 117,000 members of the 4-H Clubs over the nation join hands and participate in activities emphasizing their work and achievements.

evidence of the great work these young people are doing. There is the annual fat stock show. There is the annual 4-H Club dress revue. There are the 4-H Club poultry courses. There are the 4-H Club corn and cotton contests. There is the 4-H Club Camp. All designed to contribute to "Better Living for a Better World."

Keep Bulloch Green

WE FEEL sure that the Georgia Forestry Association will express no objection to our paraphrasing their slogan, "Keep Georgia Green," making it "Keep Bulloch County Green." Right now Bulloch County is turning green. Trees are putting out all over. Bulloch County's forests are becoming beautiful. And this includes her pine trees as well as her many flowering trees and shrubs.

"If they just have to have it burned off," he cites an example of a tenant who, without the permission of the farm owner, burned off the land. The owner was indignant when he learned that his tenant had set fire to his woods. Records in Bulloch County show that more than 600 acres of land were devastated by fire from July, 1947 to July, 1948. There is no way to figure in dollars and cents what loss this represents to the landowners and to the community and county at large.

Nothing subtle about that bunch. No "Madame, may I have this next promenade?" Not by a long shot. It was a lot more simple. They just turn out the lights and the gal you turned up with was your date for that prom. That's democracy with a capital D. And it takes a bunch of kids to make it work.

FARM BUREAU

P. Martin, Dan Driggers, Willie Shumans, Mrs. W. N. Roberts, Mrs. J. L. Harden, and Mrs. W. A. Groover to serve on the community sanitary committee and to try to place one of these aluminum privies on every farm that did not have indoor toilet facilities.
The Register Farm Bureau donated $30 toward helping to complete the library building here in Statesboro at its meeting on Thursday night.
The some 100 present heard Harry W. Smith discuss the results he got last year from having his soil analyzed and then following the instructions given by the College of Agriculture on the kind and amounts of fertilizer to use. Mr. Smith found that it made him money and is following the procedure again this year. Cecil Kennedy, the community president, then called on Leham Dekle and others that had recently had their soil tested to outline the details of taking the samples and getting them run.

SOCIETY

GOING AWAY PARTY FOR MRS. JANE PROCTOR
A lovely social event of Monday evening was a dinner party at the Rushing Hotel given by Henry Moses, honoring Mrs. Jane Proctor who is leaving soon to make her home in Savannah. Mrs. Proctor was a powder blue Printess dress. The table was centered with a silver bowl of snapdragons flanked by silver candelabra holding white burning candles. Covers were laid for Mrs. Proctor, Mr. Moses, Mrs. W. E. West, Mrs. Bob Akins, Mrs. Roy Parker, Mrs. A. L. Waller, Mrs. Margaret Ludwig, Mrs. Cecil Waters, Mrs. Herman Bland, Miss Georganne Howard and John Groover.
PRIMITIVE BAPTIST LADIES MET WITH MRS. AGAN
The Ladies' Church of the Primitive Baptist Church will meet with Mrs. W. F. Agan Monday March 7. The members will assemble at 12:30 for a covered dish luncheon which will be followed by the regular business session. DECKERS ENTERTAINED BY MRS. BILLY TILLMAN
On Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Billy Tillman was hostess to the Deckers, with Miss Dot Flanders as co-hostess. Spirea and azaleas were used in the decorations, and heavenly hash was served with angel food cake. Cocco-colas were served later.
For high score, Mrs. Tom Smith received a potted plant—a cigarette container went to Miss Virginia Akins for cut. Mrs. Ray Dantley won a china tea set for low. Other players were Mrs. Hal Macon Jr., Mrs. Emerson Brannen, Mrs. Joe Trappell, Mrs. J. G. Altman, Mrs. E. W. Barnes, Misses Ine Stevens, and Lois Stockdale.
MARRIAGE CANVASS
CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY AT KINDERGARTEN
Mrs. Hollis Cannon entertained at Sue's Kindergarten Wednesday afternoon honoring her daughter, Marsha, on her fourth birthday. Story books and candy Easter bunnies were given as favors and about fifty children enjoyed Marsha's lovely birthday cake served with Dixie cups.
SISTERS OBSERVE BIRTHDAYS AT PINK HOUSE
Mrs. Jim Donaldson, Mrs. Linton Lanier and Mrs. Cecil Waters whose birthdays are close enough to warrant joint celebrations, were honor guests at luncheon Thursday at the Pink House in Savannah. Mrs. B. H. Ramsey, Mrs. Dew Groover, and Mrs. Charlie Perry, of Savannah, were the others present. They presented each of the honorees with a box of soap.
BILL SIMMONS SR. HONORED ON BIRTHDAY
Bill H. Simmons Sr. was pleasantly surprised Saturday on his birthday with a lovely party given in the afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Billy Simmons at their country home.
The guests were served birthday cake with ice cream, toasted nuts and mints.
Others invited were Mrs. Bill H. Simmons Sr., Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Simmons.

"Doll" Foy

Still in Switzerland
(Editor's Note—We're still in Switzerland with Doll Foy on our tour of Europe. Last week we visited the glaciers in the Swiss mountains. This week we go to Interlaken with Doll.)
The next stop in Switzerland was Interlaken. It is a little city in a valley between two great mountains. The lakes of Brienz and Thun separate it from the mountains.
The "Jungfrau," a beautiful mountain, all covered with snow, faces the town.
It was here that we visited a casino located in the center of a huge and beautiful park. At the entrance was a great clock made of real flowers... it was a marvel, keeping time as well as the finest Swiss watch.
While in this beautiful city we heard a 75-piece concert orchestra. It was unique, with everybody slipping coffee or tea during the concert.
Here it was that I had the most unusual experience of our trip. I caught a terrific cold and so went to see a doctor. I waited over an hour to see him and then he could not understand hardly anything I said. He spoke little or no English. He got out his American dictionary and tried to explain my condition. It was after much confusion that we finally got together and he gave me a prescription for penicillin tablets. He tried to tell me he was most happy over his plans for his first visit to the United States.
I found a drugstore... what we would call a drugstore—and here I sat one hour while a lady pharmacist fixed my prescription. (Ed's Note—Next week we go to church with Doll.)

ALL'S FAIR

There are days that are unforgettable because of joy or sorrow. Each leaves a definite mark that carries over until the morrow. Joy gives a vibrant lift that has us walking on air; Sorrow touches us deeply, and brings experiences rare. Tasting deeply of its cup we learn to understand. We can share the burden of others and lend a helping hand. If a cloud appears in Our Own particular sky, We remember days of joy until the cloud rolls by.

WHICH RAISES THE QUESTION— and chewing gum that will buy— why should we stop at sharing joys and sorrows? For instance, Jane doesn't have a single azalea, yet she has enjoyed the richness and beauty of almost every plant in town. And if you start out on such an excursion you will really be covering territory. If home owners keep planting at the rate they are doing this year, Statesboro will be attracting visitors from all over the state.

Fannie Mae Smith and Betsy Smith went to Thomsville and Tifton Wednesday and came back with a car full of plants. Betsy handles a shovel as skillfully as she whips up a hat. Fannie Mae combined her plants as artistically as she would collect an ensemble. We found Everett Williams about a quarter of a mile behind his house setting out dogwood along the branch. Here he plans to build an outdoor oven and go rustic right in the heart of town. Nearer the house we found Mary Agnes clad in dangerous waving a pitchfork a bit recklessly as she fed the plants. From where we stood, we saw wisteria budding out, Cherokee roses in full bloom. In all there were twenty-five different kinds of running roses, Paul Scarlett and Lady Banksia, Radiance, etc. . . .

We spied a kitchen garden where garden peas, corn and beans are. I am afraid, shivering a bit this (Monday) morning. I came away with a generous bunch of spring onions. . . . Reveille, Frank Jr's sad-eyed dog, had been chased from his private dog yard which had been converted into a flower bed, and in it were 165 tiny azalea plants.

Plants and shrubbery grow steadily, more profusely and lovely at the L. R. Tyson home. We saw Herbert and Elizabeth Kingery setting out azaleas on the south border of the lot they bought on East Grady street. . . . At Myrtle Cowart's we admired her azalea plants grouped around a tree on her lawn. The hedge between the James Blands and the Arthur Turners were of gorgeous azaleas.

AT DR. BIRD and Dot Daniel's home, it took a bit of walking to take in the entire landscaping picture. There we acquired a liberal education — we met the Taber azalea which we would quite easily mistake for an orchid of some exotic variety. We listen to discussions about the Elegans, the Pride of Mobile, etc. Here, as at the Everett Williams' garden, I found that certain areas were designated as hers and his'n. A pine tree with a rambler rose divided the Williams' gardens. At the Daniels the difference lay in the species of plants. Even Anna claimed a pink Cherokee rose which Miss Susie Hodges had given the doctor. Anna was so interested in the process of planting the bush that her father told her that it was hers. Missing it one day, Bird found that Anna had taken him at his word and had transplanted it three times. Though a bit stunted it still has survived. . . . Dotty Daniel has money problems. Her grandfather, Dr. Wallace Daniel of Clayton, who served in the Legislature, had Dotty as page for the week, for which grueling task she received TWENTY-THREE dollars. Dotty gravely announced to her grandmother, "You know, I am going to tell Mother and Daddy that I have so much money, they'll want to borrow it from me." Wise girl Dotty—just think how much popcorn and candy, picture shows,

Good Sense All You Need

I once knew an exceptionally slow and deliberate boy whose mother jokingly nicknamed him Jonathan Swift. So whenever my glance falls on anything written by Jonathan Swift, I think of years gone by and proceed to peruse the material. In the January "Think" magazine, there was a "Treatise on Manners and Breeding" by this sagacious gentleman with the curly wig and fancy collar who was born at Dublin, Ireland in 1667 and educated at Kilkenny school, Trinity college and Oxford University.

Naturally, I scanned the whole article and it threw some fresh light on a subject that should interest every one. His first paragraph contained a definition which may have heard before, but which was new to me. "Good Manners," said Jonathan Swift, "is the art of making those easy with whom we converse; who ever makes the fewest persons uneasy is the best bred in the company."

When he went on from there and listed the 3 great sources of ill manners: Pride, Ill-nature and Want of Sense. And he maintained that the lack of sense was the chief cause of boorish behavior. In fact, he put it into positive language and declared that "Good sense is the principal foundation of good manners."

Jonathan Swift gave little importance (in this treatise) to the "multiplying ceremonies" and "over-civility" of social perfectionists, and said that wise men were often put more ill at ease by persons practicing extremely formal courtesy than by peasants and mechanics.

When I read the part about peasants and mechanics, I was struck by the fact that Swift probably never made the acquaintance (back there in the 17th and 18th centuries) of the kind of farmer you and I know—and the polite and considerate mechanics who live and work in Statesboro—and I couldn't help thinking that nobody lacking in good sense could make or repair modern machinery or make a living out of the soil we have in many parts of Georgia.

Well, to get back to Jonathan Swift and his theory that good sense assures good manners — there's the viewpoint that punctuality is a mark of good breeding. Swift said, "A necessary part of good manners is a punctual observance of time at our own dwellings, or those of others, or at third places. . . . yet, the greatest trespasser against it; by which all his business doubled upon him and placed him in continual arrears."

How true it is that if today's business isn't dispatched today, tomorrow's can't be dispatched tomorrow and the day after to-morrow will be one terrific rush, with confusion and turmoil dogging our footsteps and making us cheat ourselves of needed leisure and rob others by making them wait while we are late for engagements!

Just about everything Jonathan Swift says in this article is true, and I'm glad that his name intrigues me. Another authority on manners — Emily Post — was once asked for her definition of culture and she replied, "Culture is the essence of education, distilled through an enlightened mind and an educated heart."

Thank You, Statesboro!

On behalf of Mr. J. D. Sharpe the Claussen's representative in Statesboro, the entire Claussen's Organization and myself, I take this occasion to thank everyone in Statesboro and the Statesboro area for the wonderful reception accorded the introduction of Claussen's fine bakery goods.

As most of you know, I am a native of Bulloch County, although I left many years ago to enter the bakery field. And now, in my position as Manager of Claussen's of Savannah, I particularly want to thank my personal friends among the general public as well as among the grocers, who have been so kind in helping make Claussen's entry into this area so pleasant an experience. May I assure you that it will be a pleasure for us to continue serving Statesboro and this area since I will always have a keen personal interest in all of you.

With best wishes,
